Book Review Digest

1928

THE
BOOK REVIEW DIGEST

TWENTY-FOURTH ANNUAL CUMULATION
(MARCH 1928 TO FEBRUARY 1929 INCLUSIVE)

BOOKS OF 1928

EDITED BY
MARION A. KNIGHT, MERTICE M. JAMES,
MATILDA L. BERG

Property of Graduate Theological Union
Return to San Francisco Theological Seminary

NEW YORK
THE H. W. WILSON COMPANY
1929

Printed in the U. S. A.

PREFACE

The twenty-fourth annual cumulation of the Book Review Digest brings together in one alphabet the books entered in monthly issues from March, 1928, to February, 1929, inclusive. No books of 1929 are included, but January reviews of books of 1928 appear, as well as some books re-entered from the 1927 annual, for which additional reviews have accumulated.

Each of the 3125 books included is accompanied by a descriptive note, or summary of contents, with quotations from reviews in the periodicals regularly indexed and some others occasionally drawn upon. Brief reviews or reviews which are descriptive only, without offering criticism of the book, are given an index entry merely.

This year, again, we make grateful acknowledgment to Ellwood H. McClelland, Technology Librarian of the Carnegie Library of Pittsburgh, for checking technical books to be included; to Mary E. Furbeck, editor of Public Affairs Information Service, for her monthly list of public documents for small libraries; and to Lillian Bender, Jean Sacchitiello, Evelyn Smith and Wilma Adams Sendler, for their capable and faithful work in the various processes of publication.

Publications from which Digests of Reviews are Made

An. Anthropol—American Anthropologist. $6. George Banta Publishing Company, 450-454 Ahnaip St., Menasha, Wis.

Am Chem Soc J—Journal of the American Chemical Society. $7.50. Charles L. Parsons, Sec., Mills Building, 1709 G St., N.W., Washington, D.C.

Am Econ R—American Economic Review. $5. American Econ. Assn., Evanston, Ill.

Am Hist R—American Historical Review. $5. Macmillan Company, 60 Fifth Av., New York.

Am J Psychol—American Journal of Psychology. $6.50. Morrill Hall, Cornell University, Ithaca, N.Y.

Am J Pub Health—American Journal of Public Health and Nation's Health. $5. American Public Health Association, 370 Seventh Av., New York

Am J Soc—American Journal of Sociology. $4. University of Chicago Press, Chicago.

Am Pol Sci R—American Political Science Review. Dues $4. American Political Science Association, 450-458 Ahnaip St., Menasha, Wis.

Ann Am Acad—Annals of the American Academy of Political and Social Science. $5. 3622-24 Locust St., Philadelphia.

Atiantic Bookshelf—Atlantic Bookshelf. Atlantic Monthly, 8 Arlington St., Boston.

Booklist—Booklist. $2. American Library Association, 86 East Randolph St., Chicago.

Bookm—Bookman. $4 Bookman Publishing Co., Inc. 386 Fourth Av., New York.

Books (N Y Herald Tribune)—New York Herald Tribune Books. $2. 225 W. 40th St., New York.

Boston Transcript—Boston Evening Transcript. $5.50. (Wednesday and Saturday) Boston Transcript Co., 324 Washington St., Boston.

Canadian Hist R—Canadian Historical Review. $2. University of Toronto Press, Toronto, Ont.

Cath World—Catholic World. $4. Missionary Soc. of St. Paul the Apostle, 411 W. 59th St., New York.

Chem & Met Eng—Chemical and Metallurgical Engineering. $3. McGraw-Hill Co., Inc., 10th Av., at 36th St., New York.

Christian Century—Christian Century. $4. Christian Century Press, Inc., 440 S. Dearborn St., Chicago.

Class Philol—Classical Philology. $4. University of Chicago Press, Chicago.

Dial—Dial. $5. Dial Pub. Co., Inc., 152 West 13th St., New York.

Educ R—Educational Review. $3. Doubleday, Doran & Co., Inc., Garden City, N.Y.

El School J—Elementary School Journal. $2.50. Dept. of Education, Univ. of Chicago, Chicago.

Eng Hist R—English Historical Review. 32s. Longmans, Green & Co., 55 Fifth Av., New York (39 Paternoster Row, London, E.C. 4).

Eng N—Engineering News-Record. $5. McGraw-Hill Co., 10th Av., at 36th St., New York.

Geog R—Geographical Review. $5. American Geog. Soc., Broadway and 156th St., New York.

Harvard Business R—Harvard Business Review. $5. A. W. Shaw Co., Cass, Huron & Erie Sts., Chicago.

Hist Outlook—Historical Outlook. $2. McKinley Publishing Co., 1623 Ranstead St., Philadelphia.

Independent. Merged with Outlook under name Outlook and Independent, October 24, 1928.

Ind & Eng Chem—Industrial and Engineering Chemistry. $7.50. American Chemical Society, Charles L. Parsons, Sec., Mills Building, 1709 G St., N.W., Washington, D.C.

Int J Ethics—International Journal of Ethics. $3. University of Chicago press, Chicago.

J Home Econ—Journal of Home Economics. $2.50. American Home Economics Assn., 101 East 20th St., Baltimore.

J Philos—Journal of Philosophy. $4. 515 W. 116th St., New York.

J Phys Chem—The Journal of Physical Chemistry. $10. Cornell University, Ithaca, N.Y.

J Pol Econ—Journal of Political Economy. $4. University of Chicago Press, Chicago.

J Religion—Journal of Religion. $3. University of Chicago Press, Chicago.

Living Age—Living Age. $4 Living Age Co., 280 Broadway, N.Y.

Manufacturing Ind—Manufacturing Industries. $5. Ahrens Publishing Co., Inc. 222 W. Adams St, Chicago

Mod Philol—Modern Philology. $4. University of Chicago Press, Chicago.

Nation—Nation. $5. Nation, Inc., 20 Vesey St., New York.

Nation and Ath—Nation and Athenæum. £1 10s. Nation, Ltd. 38 Great James St., Holborn, London, W.C. 1.

Nature—Nature. $14. Macmillan Company, 60 5th Av., New York (£2 17s Macmillan & Co., Ltd., St. Martin's St., London, W.C. 2).

New Repub—New Republic. $5. New Republic, Inc., 421 West 21st St., New York.

New Statesman—New Statesman. 30s. New Statesman, 10 Great Queen St., Kingsway, London, W.C. 2.

N Y Evening Post—New York Evening Post. $3. 75 West St., New York.

N Y Times—New York Times Book Review. $1. N.Y. Times Co., Times Square, New York.

N Y World—The World. $4. Pulitzer Building. Park Row, New York.

No Am—North American Review. $4. North American Rev. Corp., 9 East 37th St., New York.

Outlook—Outlook and Independent. $5 Outlook Company, 120 E. 16th St., New York.

Pol Sci Q—Political Science Quarterly. $5. (including Supplements). Academy of Political Science, Columbia University, New York.

R of Rs—American Review of Reviews. $4. Review of Reviews Corp., 55 Fifth Av., New York.

Sat R—Saturday Review. 30s. 9 King St., Covent Garden, London, W.C. 2.

Sat R of Lit—Saturday Review of Literature. $3.50. Saturday Review, Inc., 25 W. 45th St., New York.

School Arts M—School Arts Magazine. $3. Davis Press, Inc., 44 Portland St., Worcester, Mass.

School R—School Review. $2.50. Dept. of Education, Univ. of Chicago, Chicago.

Science—Science. $6. Science Press, Garrison, N.Y.

Spec—Spectator. 30s. 13 York St., Covent Garden, London, W.C. 2.

Springf'd Republican—Springfield Republican. $10. The Republican Pub. Co., Springfield, Mass.

Survey—Survey (also Survey Graphic). $5. Survey Associates, 112 East 19th St., New York.

Theatre Arts Mo—Theatre Arts Monthly. $4. Theatre Arts, Inc., 119 West 57th St., New York.

Times [London] Lit Sup—The Times Literary Supplement. 17s 4d. $4.15. The Times (London), North American Office, 280 Broadway, New York.

World Tomorrow—World Tomorrow. $2. 52 Vanderbilt Av., Room 410, New York.

Yale R n s—Yale Review. $4. Yale University Press, 143 Elm St., New Haven, Conn.

In addition to the above list the Book Review Digest sometimes quotes from the Cleveland Open Shelf; Pittsburgh Monthly Bulletin; Pratt Institute Quarterly Booklist; New York Public Library; New Technical Books; St Louis Library Bulletin; Wisconsin Library Bulletin; and other Bulletins.

EXPLANATIONS

[2] This book is mentioned for the first time in this issue.

Publisher's directory will be found at the end of this number.

The descriptive note is separated from critical notices of a book by a dash.

The plus and minus signs preceding the name of the magazine indicate the degree of favor or disfavor of the entire review.

In the reference to a magazine, the first number refers to the volume, the next to the page, the letters to the date and the last figures to the number of words in the review.

Book Review Digest

Devoted to the Valuation of Current Literature

Cumulation of monthly numbers, March, 1928-February, 1929

ABBOT, EDITH R. Great painters in relation to the European tradition. 478p il $5; text ed $4 Harcourt

759 Painting—History. Paintings 27-27514

The purpose of the book is to focus attention on certain great paintings with the object of illustrating the continuity of the European tradition. The period covered is from the beginning of Christian painting in Italy to the Cubists of today. Illustrated with nearly 300 cuts.

Booklist 24:238 Mr '28

"Miss Abbot's book is a thoroughly workmanlike and documented performance, but nowhere in her pages does the tradition of which she speaks emerge clear and shining, to tie together and illuminate the numerous names and schools which otherwise remain merely names and schools." R. M. Fisk

+ — Bookm 67:328 My '28 180w

"The book is difficult to read and more difficult to condemn. It has thoroughness, scholarship, familiarity with painting and an excellent distribution of materials, yet it is as monotonous and sluggish as a museum catalogue."

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p27 F 26 '28 180w

"Her book is full of sane and solid instruction."

+ Dial 84:345 Ap '28 50w

Outlook 147:408 N 30 '27 70w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:160 Mr '28

"Conducted with knowledge, taste, and discretion. Her literary manner is equitable, for continuous reading too little varied, but in a book that is likely to be parcelled out in lessons or used for reference this can hardly be regarded as a defect. A certain inequality in the estimates of artists is probably due to a long and interrupted preparation under the vicissitudes of active teaching in the Metropolitan Museum."

+ — Sat R of Lit 4:523 Ja 14 '28 220w

Wis Lib Bul 24:53 F '28

ABBOTT, A. A., pseud. See Spewack, S:

ABBOTT, ELEANOR HALLOWELL (MRS FORDYCE COBURN). But once a year. 313p $2 Appleton

Christmas stories 28-21967

A collection of Christmas stories which have previously appeared in various magazines. Contents: "Ye create astonishments"; The jingle-bell look; A New Year's Eve and an Old Year's Adam; The man who didn't know Christmas from the Fourth of July; "Silver night—shining night—azure—jet—and chrysolite"; "Lost: A crate of stars"; The man who collected Christmases; Bright while it lasted.

+ Booklist 25:119 D '28

"Impossible, gay, little stories, whimsical and exuberant, that rush along on a succession of exclamation points. They are unreal with the improbability of the highly imaginative, yet true in the essence of the Christmas feeling that they breathe."

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p22 O 28 '28 220w

"Keen humor, rare bits of dialogue, odd plots, original situations, thrown together in a very hysteria of adjectives, and ill-used words. Mrs. Abbott can set forth some brilliantly charming thoughts; if she would only show a little restraint in framing them, they would be readable." L. H. G.

— + Boston Transcript p6 D 1 '28 320w

"Taken individually, any one of the group of stories which makes 'But Once a Year' is pleasant reading and genial reminder of the proper method of imparting happiness to one another at the holiday season. Taken en bloc, eight Christmas stories are decidedly cloying."

— + N Y Times p9 D 2 '28 230w

ABBOTT, ELEANOR HALLOWELL (MRS FORDYCE COBURN). Love and the ladies. 304p $2 (7s 6d) Appleton

28-9053

Six stories of romantic young love, the first of novelette length, reprinted from the magazines.

"The spirit which moved through 'Molly Make-Believe,' a sense of the human rather than a sense of humour is strong in this."

Boston Transcript p3 Ap 25 '28 300w

"Collection of totally innocuous and exceptionally dull short stories."

— N Y Times p25 Je 3 '28 370w

"Eleanor Abbott's young lovers can surely maintain their balance on the slim edge of a situation, without falling in, longer than any other characters in fiction. Give them the merest suggestion of a plot and they can coquette with it for pages without the slightest sign of effort. 'Thursday's Swan Had a Crumpled Wing' has more substance than any of the other stories."

Sat R of Lit 4:806 Ap 21 '28 250w

"The author of this volume of short stories has a facility and an inventiveness reminiscent of O. Henry. She exhibits the same skill in arousing the reader's interest right from the beginning, and in sustaining that interest by a series of ingeniously contrived climaxes."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p414 My 31 '28 250w

Wis Lib Bul 24:191 Je '28

ABBOTT, GEORGE, and BRIDGERS, ANN PRESTON. Coquette; a play in three acts. 137p $2 Longmans

812 28-12042

Modern flirtatious youth in conflict with the older ideals of the chivalrous South is the theme of this play. The play has had a long successful run on Broadway.

Booklist 24:355 Je '28

ABBOTT, G:, and BRIDGERS, A. P.—Cont.

"Its dialogue, its atmosphere are remarkably veracious. It gives copious opportunity for the actors. It rouses emotion. But its march of events from mid-play on is arbitrary and even illogical. It does not make clear its fundamental and unifying idea and it leaves you unsatisfied. Representing the work of the new South, however, now so conspicuous in our theater, it is one more token of the freshness of inspiration to be found below the Potomac." W. P. Eaton

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p18 Je 10 '28 100w

Cleveland Open Shelf p116 N '28

ABBOTT, JOHNSTON. Seigneurs of La Saulaye; gentlemen adventurers of New France two centuries ago. 379p $2.50 Macmillan

28-18898

The author tells, in the romantic tradition, of the adventures of the penniless young Seigneur Gaston de la Saulaye of Quebec: how he undertook an expedition into the wilds of Ottawa for his cousin the Marquis de la Roux; how the expedition failed and Gaston became his kinsman's heir; and how his suit of the fair Denise prospered and declined, and prospered again.

Booklist 25:70 N '28

"Gracefully set in New France of Colonial days, this romantic novel creates a charming intensity out of very old, platitudinous situations."

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p8 Ag 26 '28 230w

"This is a story told in the grand manner, but embroidered none the less with all the color and lacy prettyness of the old French aristocracy."

Boston Transcript p7 S 8 '28 100w

ABRO, A. D'. Evolution of scientific thought from Newton to Einstein. 544p $5 Boni & Liveright

530.1 Relativity (physics). Science—Methodology 28-11297

"In this book the essential features of Newton's great discoveries, the apparent inevitableness of absolute space and time in classical science, are passed in review. Then we come to Riemann, that great mathematician who wrested the problem of space from the dogmatic slumber where it had rested so long. Finally we see how Einstein succeeded in transporting to the realm of physics the ideas that Riemann had propounded, giving us thereby that supreme achievement of modern thought, the theory of relativity."—Preface

---

Reviewed by E. R. Downing

Ann Am Acad 138:184 Jl '28 200w

"Nothing better has hitherto been done in the way of expounding the doctrine of relativity, even with Einstein himself taken into account, than is now offered by the author of this book." E. N.

+ Boston Transcript p2 F 11 '28 400w

"Here at last we have a book on relativity which is thoroughly good—a comprehensive survey of the special and general theories, accurate to a surprising degree, yet couched in non-technical language, and involving a very minimum of mathematics. The whole book is characterized by an ease of presentation and an unassailable style. The frequent repetitions for which the author finds it necessary to apologize never seem to burden the text; each repetition, in fact, and each new example seems to make its distant contribution to the clarity of the whole." A. C. Benjamin

+ J Philos 25:714 D 20 '28 1600w

Nation 126:544 My 9 '28 70w

"The book is a model of semi-popular exposition. It is written with admirable lucidity and with just enough explanation of the more esoteric technicalities to make the subject comprehensible to the reader who doesn't mind hard going but who is insufficiently schooled in mathematics to attempt the source books on the subject." D. L.

+ New Repub 56:80 S 5 '28 220w

ACOSTA, MERCEDES DE. Until the day break. 314p $2 (7s 6d) Longmans

28-8138

Recognizing the failure of her marriage Victoria decides to go on the stage. Her grandmother had been a famous artist. During the struggles and discouragements of her early career a woman friend does much for Victoria, sending her finally to Raphael who, if anyone can, will develop her talent. Their association results in her artistic success but also in mutual love and renunciation.

Boston Transcript p3 Jl 14 '28 200w

"The book becomes less puerile and ungrammatical and for a few pages becomes literature during Raphael's story of himself. At least, it is pathetically sincere." R. H.

— + N Y Evening Post p12 Mr 31 '28 100w

N Y Times p22 Ap 29 '28 600w

"An absorbing and vivid story and therefore occasional crudities of sentence structure can be forgiven and are forgotten, for the reader's attention is given over to feeling the struggles of the personalities in the book. The plot is highly original."

+ Sat R of Lit 4:807 Ap 21 '28 150w

"Manner and matter are very happily married in this fantastic tale."

Times [London] Lit Sup p360 My 10 '28 210w

ADAM, GEORGE JEFFERYS, and ADAM, MRS PEARL (HUMPHRY). Book about Paris. 192p il $5 Harcourt [12s 6d J. Cape]

914.436 Paris—Description [28-16117]

Mr and Mrs Adam have lived in Paris fifteen years. Prompted by love for the city they have come to know a great deal about it, and their Book about Paris, handsomely made and illustrated with delicate drawings by H. F. Waring of which some are in color, gives more than a surface impression of the history, politics, social and family life of Paris, and the color and sparkle of its streets.

"In endeavoring to share their Paris with the reader, the Adamses have attempted a graciously moderate rather than an overwhelming bestowal. They offer a collation of cunningly prepared dishes for gourmets, rather than wholesale pabulum for Gargantua; and they serve it glistening with literary aspic and studded with verbal truffles." Lawton Mackall

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p18 Ja 20 '29 380w

"This is no guidebook, no directory to historical places, no moralizing essay, but a series of sparkling sketches which show in a vivacious and vivid way the real Paris." T. C. R.

+ Boston Transcript p4 Ag 15 '28 500w

"This is the book of contemporary books that everybody should read who wishes to have his memory refreshed or his appetite whetted on the most fascinating of all travelers' topics." Van Wyck Brooks

+ Ind 121:284 S 22 '28 1350w

"In the great sea of literature about Paris there are few books which combine as neatly charm of description with the informative quality of a guidebook. And the pictures are excellent."

+ Living Age 335:156 O '28 60w

"This volume is sincere and reasonably successful in presenting the 'real Paris' of the writers. It deals with sober and satisfying aspects, and gives an added pleasure through the inclusion of illustrations in color by H. Franks Waring."

+ Nation 127:694 D 19 '28 100w

Nation and Ath 42:sup422 D 10 '27 360w

"Paris glitters, there is a dry sparkle in the streets. Some of this quality is suggested in the narrative; a person with no knowledge of Paris could read through it and form an accurate idea of the place—and incidentally, pick up an amount of miscellaneous history. A Book About Paris is full of experience, and it is happily free of the crotchets which minor essayists are in the habit of offering in place of personality."

+ New Statesman 30:supxviii D 3 '27 140w

"The moral of the book seems to be that if the visitor wishes to know Paris he would do well to get as far outside his own skin as he can. This is good advice for English readers and not bad advice for Americans. The pictures by H. Franks Waring will help. They are the Paris one dreams about and which, after all is said and done, one will continue to believe in." R. L. Duffus

N Y Times p5 Ag 12 '28 1400w

Reviewed by W. R. Brooks

Outlook 149:597 Ag 8 '28 170w

"Here is a kind of super-guidebook of Paris which is at the same time a helpful introduction to an understanding of the French and particularly the Parisian, mind and character."

+ Springf'd Republican p7f S 2 '28 800w

"They know Paris very thoroughly and unearth the most surprising pieces of information. They are very clever in catching the little differences in customs and manners which make even a meal in French company so different to one at home."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p947 D 15 '27 460w

Wis Lib Bul 24:251 O '28

ADAMS, ANDY. Log of a cowboy. (Riverside bookshelf) 324p il $2 Houghton

Cowboys—Fiction 27-20251

First published in 1903, this authentic story of an old time cowboy is re-issued in the Riverside bookshelf series with appropriate drawings in color by R. Farrington Elwell.

"Adams spent twelve years in the saddle in Texas. He began writing when broke, after seeing the ludicrous and false depiction of cattle-range life in Hoyt's farce, 'A Texas Steer.' Patiently he set down cow-country events as he knew them, then sought, and evidently got, competent criticism. 'The Log of a Cowboy' is the work of a realist." J: N: Beffel

New Repub 52:sup364 N 16 '27 300w

ADAMS, EDWARD C. L. Nigger to nigger. 270p $2 Scribner

Negroes—South Carolina. Folklore, Negro 28-24280

Mr Adams has written a second volume of Congaree sketches similar to the first, (Book Review Digest, 1927). In short sketches and bits of dialogue transcribed in his own words, the "Tad" of the earlier book yarns to his friends or chats with them about the swamps, niggers and white folks, ghosts and angels, Bur rabbit, preachers and funerals, and old slavery times.

"Exactly what the more enlightened members of the African race would say about these stories we cannot prophesy. It is folk material beyond question. Students of philology ought to find this collection edited by Mr. Adams of great value. African superstitions and fears are here expressed in terms of the language which these new Afro-Americans admire and struggle to use." D. F. G.

+ Boston Transcript p6 N 10 '28 500w

N Y Times p6 N 25 '28 750w

ADAMS, EVANGELINE SMITH. Astrology; your place in the sun. 343p $3 Dodd [7s 6d Harrap]

133.5 Astrology 28-1729

Each of the chapters of Part I describes one of the signs of the zodiac, and the influences attributed to it on the character of those born under that sign. There follows a section giving the tables of ascendants, and brief chapters on how to use the tables in casting a horoscope.

Reviewed by Raymond Weaver

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p4 F 5 '28 1500w

"Certainly the book will be welcome to thousands of those who are interested, and just as surely, Mrs. Adams was just the one to write it."

+ Boston Transcript p3 Ap 14 '28 130w

Reviewed by C: W. Thompson

— N. Y Times p2 Ja 29 '28 1400w

Reviewed by S. F. Damon

Sat R of Lit 4:881 My 19 '28 650w

ADAMS, FRANKLIN PIERCE. Column book of F. P. A. 317p $2.50 Doubleday, Doran

811 28-29380

This choice selection from the happiest work of F. P. A., widely read columnist of the New York World, contains light verse, parodies, translations from Horace and of familiar poems into journalese.

"The best work ever written by the genial columnist."

+ Boston Transcript p4 D 1 '28 160w

"It may be that F. P. A. would wish to be remembered for his verses, the best known of which are collected in the 'Column Book.' After a lapse of nearly a quarter of a century they still retain some of the sparkle and all of the flawless technique that used to delight the column fans in the old days on the Mail. Some of them seem to have grown slight and trivial with the passing years. The parodies, for instance, that so enchanted us in our youth indicate now an acute ear for superficial verbal effect rather than that critical discernment that is the essence of real parody; but to us who have been ardent disciples of the dean since the beginning, each verse in the book is surrounded by delightful sentimental recollections." Newman Levy

+ Nation 128:21 Ja 2 '29 1000w

ADAMS, HENRY. Tendency of history. 175p $1.50 (6s 6d) Macmillan

901 History—Philosophy 28-26448

The volume is a reprint of three chapters of the "Degradation of the democratic dogma" (Book Review Digest, 1920). Contents: The problem; The solutions; The rule of phase applied to history.

Reviewed by L. P. Edwards

Am J Soc 34:564 N '28 350w

"There is much deep historical philosophy in this book, many challenging statements, many provocative theories. Nothing which this eminent man wrote can be wisely passed by any thinking reader. Those who have not read 'The Degeneration of the Democratic Dogma' will be liable to find themselves reading history from a very different angle after perusing this able treatise."

+ Boston Transcript p2 My 26 '28 180w

"The new volume is a distinct unit and is of interest to all students of historical methodology."

+ J Religion 8:499 Jl '28 30w

St Louis 26:359 N '28

ADAMS, HERBERT. Empty bed. 304p $2 Lippincott [3s 6d Methuen]

28-10396

Old Silas Gurney is killed in his country home during the Christmas holidays while several nephews and a niece are visiting him. One of the nephews was missing after the murder, his bed empty; and the niece was discovered fully dressed at 2 A.M., the time of the crime. Jimmie Haswell, lawyer and amateur detective,

ADAMS, HERBERT—Continued
solves the murder mystery but not until various members of the family have been seriously implicated.

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 My 13 '28 100w
Boston Transcript p2 My 29 '28 210w
N Y Times p17 Je 10 '28 160w
Times [London] Lit Sup p225 Mr 22 '28 60w

ADAMS, HERBERT. Rogues fall out. 315p $2 Lippincott [3s 6d Methuen]
28-25180

Little Bobbie Maitland is kidnapped in London. Jimmie Haswell suspects Bobbie's grandfather who lives in the country. On investigation it turns out that the grandfather's doctor and nurse have suddenly died. There is no trace of the little boy. In spite of Jimmie Haswell's best efforts the kidnapping and the murder might have remained a mystery—but the rogues fell out.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p18 O 7 '28 110w
Boston Transcript p5 O 20 '28 300w

"Rogues Fall Out is by an old and practised hand. It is a purely conventional thriller, but quite exciting."
New Statesman 31:770 S 29 '28 50w

"This tale gets off to a bad start and is rather confused but there's some excitement at the end. Rated a C plus." W. R. Brooks
— + Outlook 150:1044 O 24 '28 120w
Sat R of Lit 5:491 D 8 '28 140w
Times [London] Lit Sup p737 O 11 '28 140w

ADAMS, JAMES TRUSLOW. Provincial society, 1690-1763. (History of Am. life) 374p il $4 (17s) Macmillan
917.3 United States—Social life and customs—Colonial period. United States—Civilization
27-24316

"In 'Provincial Society' we have the structure of society and its economic motive traced with a sure hand, with vivid light on the lives of the 'aristocrats' and the 'common people,' on the intellectual processes and development; and we see the gradual emergence of the two sections, North and South, with their clashing interests pointing to the logical bloody arbitrament of differences to follow long afterward."—Springf'd Republican

"The third of the volumes in this series quite meets the high expectations which scholars have already formed for the series as a whole, and it also maintains the standard set by the author for himself in his earlier volume, The Founding of New England, which was awarded the Pulitzer prize for the best book on the history of the United States published in 1921. The period of Mr. Adams's present book gives ample scope to his splendid equipment, and he has availed himself of this opportunity in a pleasing way." C. A. Herrick
+ Am Hist R 33:665 Ap '28 1000w

"History written as it is written here becomes more than a mere recounted sequence of events—it bcomes a significant and comprehensible current." M. P. Redfield
+ Am J Soc 33:1016 My '28 150w
Booklist 24:244 Mr '28

"Mr. Adams's account of the new racial strains that came to mingle with the earlier stocks, of the development of a native psychology and of the Great Awakening that cut across the rationalism of the century, with its rude emotional outbreak, is admirably done." V. L: Parrington
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p1 Ja 29 '28 480w

"It would be difficult to think of anything that would lay a better foundation for intelligent patriotism than a careful reading of the whole series." W. E. Garrison
+ Christian Century 45:319 Mr 8 '28 70w
Cleveland Open Shelf p101 S '28
J Home Econ 20:679 S '28 60w

"Mr. Adams maintains the same high level of achievement which characterized his earlier writings. Rarely have complete mastery of the relevant facts been so happily combined with intelligent organization of materials and lucidity of expression. The work makes clear the new developments in the age following the era described by Professor Wertenbaker." H. E. Barnes
+ New Repub 54:sup162 Mr 21 '28 300w
Reviewed by Herbert Solow
N Y Evening Post p13 F 25 '28 100w

"Dr. Adams writes with much literary charm. His book is notable in that he covers with rare perception the conditions of society in every one of the original Colonies, instead of adopting the easier way of many historians in concentrating on a few of them. He has gone to the Colonial newspapers, with excellent results, for much of his new material." A. S. Will
+ N Y Times p1 F 19 '28 450w

"This volume is written with the charm with which Mr. Adams imbues all he touches, with the firm grasp and comprehension of realities that have made him one of the most brilliant and authoritative of American historians." C. G. Bowers
+ N Y World p8m D 26 '27 130w
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:302 My '28
Pratt p35 autumn '28
R of Rs 77:22 Mr '28 130w
Reviewed by W: MacDonald
Sat R of Lit 4:664 Mr 10 '28 250w
Reviewed by H. E. Wilson
School R 36:472 Je '28 180w

"Mr. Adams's flair for detail is always employed illuminatingly; he analyzes, compares and makes deductions with significant effect."
+ Springf'd Republican p8 D 10 '27 200w
Reviewed by L: S. Gannett
Survey 60:188 My 1 '28 140w

"Professor Adams devotes a valuable chapter to 'The Economic Basis' of that society, and his chapters on 'The Aristocrats' and 'The Common Man' are almost unbelievably human." D. A.
+ World Tomorrow 11:278 Je '28 70w

"The first four volumes of the series form an admirable contribution to the present state of popular knowledge. They do in a limited way for the whole American story what Mr. Mark Sullivan is doing for a small section of it. . . The path-breaking historian, when he is not frankly a specialist, is always in danger of lapsing into the cataloguer. At times, these able and gifted authors go the way of all flesh in this respect. But it must not be thought that this one reservation interferes with general praise of the undertaking." N. W. Stephenson
+ Yale R n s 18:184 S '28 140w

ADAMS, SIR JOHN. Errors in school; their causes and treatment. 325p $2.50 Houghton [6s Univ. of London press]
371 Teaching
E28-10

"The book is essentially an 'armchair' discussion of the theory and philosophy of error rather than a concrete analysis of specific errors in the various school subjects. This statement is true in spite of the inclusion of fairly numerous and rather diverting illustrations of certain types of errors. The book meets no urgent need among students of education and classroom teachers."—El School J

"The failure of Professor Adams to be sufficiently explicit concerning the types of errors which actually exist in the several school subjects and to suggest concrete remedies for specific situations virtually nullifies the value of the book for classroom teachers." C. V. Good

— El School J 28:632 Ap '28 600w

"In spite of the reputation of the author, one finds this book dull. Why must educationists coin such words as 'Ptaismometry,' or hope for a machine to measure mistakes in class? The general public will never read educational treatises of this character, and the teacher will, even if misguided, refuse to bother about them."

— Spec 139:952 N 26 '27 60w

"The psychological and philosophical background is sketched in where necessary, but always in such an amusing manner that we are carried to the end almost without realizing that we have picked up innumerable useful hints by the way. These apparently casual hints will, perhaps, be of more value to the teacher than the main thesis."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p841 N 17 '27 150w

ADAMS, JOHN, and WATERHOUSE, BENJAMIN. Statesman and friend; correspondence of John Adams with Benjamin Waterhouse, 1784-1822; ed. by Worthington Chauncey Ford. 178p $3 Little

B or 92 27-23962

"Only recently brought to light, these letters from the wise, witty, and often choleric old patriot who succeeded Washington in the Presidency are as characteristic as anything from his pen heretofore published. The correspondence was addressed to the Harvard professor of physics and covered a period of nearly forty years, beginning shortly after the Revolution."—R of Rs

Reviewed by D. C. Seitz

Bookm 67:209 Ap '28 110w

"Altogether, a very human little book and one well worth adding to the other volumes of Adams's correspondence. The volume is attractive in format and is an 'Atlantic Monthly' publication."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p18 F 19 '28 380w

"Keen, shrewd comment on and criticism of current political life, humor of a kind, virile and sometimes venomous flaying of his enemies and intimates, and inner revelations of his personal life—these letters add a vivid picture of the life of the times as well as that of a great American politician and patriot." T. C. R.

+ Boston Transcript p3 Ja 7 '28 400w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:216 Ap '28

R of Rs 77:6 Ja '28 110w

ADAMS, KATHLEEN, and ATCHINSON, FRANCES ELIZABETH, comps. Book of princess stories. 223p il $2.50 Dodd

398 Fairy tales 27-21416

A pageant of princesses from many lands, caparisoned in happiness or grief. Among them are old friends and new, all made freshly interesting by the illustrator whose pictures are "action maps" of the story.

"The selection is a happy one. The general make-up of the book is pleasing as are Lois Lenski's illustrations."

+ Booklist 24:165 Ja '28

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:229 Ap '28

"We greet with pleasure this well-thought-out collection. . . It is too bad that Miss Adams and Miss Atchinson did not choose to be clearer in the matter of sources."

+ Sat R of Lit 4:303 N 12 '27 380w

Wis Lib Bul 24:24 Ja '28

ADAMS, PETER. Cork ships and how to make them. 112p il $1.25 Dutton

623.8 Ship models 28-18364

A fascinating little book giving directions and diagrams for making tiny ship models from ordinary bottle corks, matches, pins, thread and paper. All kinds of ships are included, from the early Egyptian and Viking ships to modern racing yachts. There is also a brief account of the history of each type. Illustrated with pen drawings.

Booklist 25:126 D '28

"Whether one makes the models or not one gets the idea that it would be great fun to do it. The pen drawings are very clear and give the effect of cork. It is this quality of reality and ease of producing ships that actually float which distinguishes the little book from more complicated directions for building ship models out of more ambitious materials." A. C. M.

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p6 Ag 12 '28 350w

Cleveland Open Shelf p114 N '28

"It is remarkable how the author contrives to inject the romance of spreading canvas and salt spray into these few pages of elementary instruction. He gives, as well, quite a comprehensive outline of the development of ships from the Egyptian nugger of 600 B.C. to the armored cruiser and racing yacht of the present day—and all this in some hundred and twelve pages, a good part of which is taken up with drawings and minute instructions for fashioning masts and rigging from paper and matches." D: Bone

+ Sat R of Lit 5:342 N 10 '28 600w

ADAMS, RANDOLPH GREENFIELD. Gateway to American history. 176p il $3 Little

973 America—Discovery and exploration. United States—History—Colonial period. United States—History, Juvenile 27-23805

"Using reproductions of the illustrations contained in the rarest old books of the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries as pictures around which to write, Mr. Adams has compiled in this volume [a narrative] of the discovery of the New World and the establishment of colonies in North America by the countries of Western Europe."—N Y Evening Post

Booklist 24:251 Mr '28

"A vivid story of travel, trade and folk-ways, from the caravans of silk and spices, to life among the Indians at the time of Champlain and Hudson. Two things stand out clearly in this book. One, the documents can become as understandable as current affairs; the other, that history, stripped of pretentiousness, emerges as a mosiac of personalities, alive, lovable or despicable, always human." Sydney Greenbie

+ Bookm 67:319 My '28 120w

"The book was primarily intended for young people. Yes, but fortunately youth is not confined to years few in number."

+ Boston Transcript p4 D 17 '27 250w

Reviewed by R. M. Tryon

El School J 28:636 Ap '28 150w

"The descriptive narrative is written in simple language and should delight both the child and the adult. . . There is no index for the volume, and some might wish that a list of the books used, together with descriptive bibliographical data, had been added. However, under each illustration an abbreviated notation of its origin is given. On the whole, this volume is a welcome one and should be widely read by both young and old." A. C. Wilgus

+ Hist Outlook 19:138 Mr '28 380w

Nation 126:129 F 1 '28 50w

"An entertaining and very informative narrative." O. C.

+ N Y Evening Post p10 D 17 '27 60w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:175 Mr '28

R of Rs 77:8 F '28 60w

St Louis 26:82 Mr '28

Wis Lib Bul 24:58 F '28

ADCOCK, ALMEY ST JOHN. Love is master. 293p $2.50 Little

Maris Shatlock is a country child whose untamed spirit captures the admiration of Randle

ADCOCK, A. ST J:—Continued
Quantrill, a young farmer. Loving her from the first, he becomes her unknown benefactor, paying her fees at boarding school. Maris fancies herself in love with Randle's shiftless likeable brother Ned, and returning from school marries him. On her wedding day her eyes are opened to the mistake she has made. With their unacknowledged love between them, and forced to watch over the now helpless Ned, Maris and Randle wait with growing tension the climax.

" 'Love is Master' lacks even the feeble psychological flashes which gave occasional life to 'Winter Wheat.' A trite tale, adrift in a similitudinous sea."
— Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p23 My 27 '28 310w

"The story is done with a breadth of insight and a feeling for character which is marked."
+ Boston Transcript p6 Jl 3 '28 230w

"Though it is very good entertainment the tale searches out no vital depths." F. L. Palmer
N Y Evening Post p12 Mr 24 '28 200w

"The essential element in Miss Adcock's work is the tragic significance with which she manages to invest her characters. They do and say awkward, artificial, and mechanical things, and yet they stand out in heroic size, creatures of fate rather than of the world."
+ — Sat R of Lit 4:991 Je 23 '28 280w

ADCOCK, ARTHUR ST JOHN. Glory that was Grub Street. 340p il $2.50 Stokes [7s 6d Low]
928 Authors, British

Impressions of contemporary authors, mostly British, with a few Americans. Every article but one is accompanied by a portrait, by E. O. Hoppé.

"As a guide to some of the writers most popular to-day, we may cordially commend Mr. St. John Adcock's The Glory that was Grub Street. Thirty-two excellent photographs add to the reader's pleasure in Mr. Adcock's text. No very subtle analysis of literary values is attempted, but there is a deal of common-sense criticism and much information pleasantly conveyed."
+ Spec 141:712 N 10 '28 100w

" 'The Glory that was Grub Street' must be classified as literary gossip primarily because it is not in any sense criticism. Here we have the craft of the amiable commentator, the biographer, the bibliographer; there is no attempt at all to create new meaning, or to deduce principles."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p704 O 4 '28 220w

ADKINS, HOMER BURTON, and MCELVAIN, SAMUEL MARION. Elementary organic chemistry. (Int. chemical ser.) 183p $2.25 McGraw
547 Chemistry, Organic 28-13930

"Textbook for a short course in organic chemistry. Presents fundamentals with only slight attention to applications."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

---

Reviewed by C. S. Marvel
Chem & Met Eng 35:492 Ag '28 230w
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:565 N '28

ADLER, ALFRED. Understanding human nature; tr. by Walter Béran Wolfe. 286p $3.50 Greenberg [12s 6d Allen & U.]
150 Psychology. Characters and characteristics 27-27582

"The work is composed of a series of lectures delivered by Dr. Adler in the People's Institute of Vienna before large audiences of both sexes and varied ages. . . It covers broadly the essential aspects of human life and the relations of the individual to his fellows, but emphasizes especially the importance of the early years in the formation of the behavior pattern."—N Y Times

---

"One is forced to recognize that however amiss his interpretations, Dr. Adler understands human nature in a most intimate way. Probably no other living writer shows a shrewder insight into its character nor a more comprehensive grasp of its elements. His book is replete with keen observations and revealing judgments. The social psychologist who reads this work in a sympathetic mood will garner a rich income." Herbert Blumer
+ Am J Soc 34:391 S '28 700w
Booklist 24:343 Je '28

"Dr. Adler's book is sane and human and impressive and modest." S. D. House
+ Bookm 67:98 Mr '28 280w

" 'Understanding Human Nature' has a certain importance because it is the first popular presentation of a school of thought likely to gain enthusiastic followers here." Margery Mansfield
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p15 F 26 '28 730w

Reviewed by M. M. Colum
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p1 Jl 29 '28 500w

"I doubt if Adler's is the best article on the psychological market. His writings, in themselves exasperatingly vague, are reduced to clear and definite statement for the first time in Mr. Marret's excellent little handbook. Whatever view we may take of the doctrines expounded, there can be no two questions as to the merits of the exposition." C. E. Fayle
Nation and Ath 43:654 Ag 18 '28 450w

"If the reader can glean Dr. Adler's thesis from his poorly organized volume he is unquestionably enriched." Augusta Alpert
+ — New Repub 54:251 Ap 11 '28 320w

"Coming from one of the very fountain heads of the New Psychology, this book would seem to have special authority among all the many recent volumes that seek to enable the individual to apply these newly discovered treasures of knowledge to himself for his own betterment."
+ N Y Times p18 Ap 15 '28 450w
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:141 Mr '28

"It is a pleasure to find a psychologist writing so humanly and thoughtfully, avoiding the technical sterility of the academician on the one hand and the speculative luxuriance of the dogmatic psycho-analyst on the other, about problems that concern all of us so intimately. The translation of a very difficult German into an eminently readable English is the work of Dr. Walter Béran Wolfe, Adler's most important American disciple." S. D. House
+ Sat R of Lit 4:716 Mr 31 '28 580w

"It is not a technical exposition, but a book of counsel for the ordinary man."
Spec 141:112 Jl 21 '28 200w
Springf'd Republican p7f Ag 26 '28 800w

Reviewed by Margarette Simpson
Survey 60:123 Ap 15 '28 480w
Times [London] Lit Sup p566 Ag 2 '28 900w

"This book is not difficult of understanding, but offers very little new material; in general, it may be summed up as an interesting presentation of the problem of the individual—usually the child—and the social and psychological factors entering into his maladjustments." A. H. Ruggles
Yale n s 18:181 S '28 180w

ADLER, MORTIMER JEROME. Dialectic. (Int. lib. of psychology, philosophy and scientific method) 265p $3.50 Harcourt [10s 6d K. Paul]
160 Logic 27-23707

"Dialectic," the author defines as a "convenient technical name for the kind of thinking which takes place when human beings enter into dispute, or when they carry on in reflection the polemical consideration of some theory or idea." His book is an attempt to analyze the conditions which contribute to fruitful discussion and conversation.

Reviewed by Jerome Rosenthal
Bookm 67:440 Je '28 280w

"Though Adler has not completely succeeded in determining the nature of discourse, or the importance of dialectic for philosophy, he has nevertheless pointed to an interesting extension of the logic of systems to other realms than symbolic logic and mathematics, to which it has hitherto been restricted. This work (together with Buchanan's Possibility) is the first to present a detailed description of this method, and should, to that extent, prove of interest to the lay reader." Paul Weiss

+ — J Philos 25:500 Ag 30 '28 700w

"The reviewer has found the most significant part of Mr. Adler's book in what he refers to as 'very much the least important' of its three parts, namely, the empirical description of argumentative dispute. This section is full of shrewd observations and helpful insights; the book was well worth writing for its sake alone. The more formal portion, and that which Mr. Adler seems most to prize, suffers, to my mind, from too much borrowing from mathematical logic." J: Dewey

+ — Nation 126:450 Ap 18 '28 610w

Reviewed by Joseph Ratner
New Repub 55:154 Je 27 '28 320w

AGATE, JAMES EVERSHED. Rachel. (Representative women) 178p $2 Viking press [3s 6d G. Howe]

B or 92 Félix, Elisa Rachel 28-29521

Rachel the woman rather than Rachel the actress is the subject of this biography which gives a lively portrait of the greatest of all tragediennes who was "first a great Jewess, second a great actress, and third a great lover."

"Mr. Agate sets about his task, as usual, with vigour, but without much orderliness; and he somewhat aggressively brushes aside any consideration of Rachel's artistic achievement by referring the reader, not without condescension, to the criticisms of Jules Janin. . . But he appreciates her keenly enough as a Jewess and a grande amoureuse, and, also, as a letter-writer; and this enables him to provide a couple of hours of spirited reading."

+ — New Statesman 31:130 My 5 '28 600w

"The wit and temper of Mr. Agate's style are admirably adapted to Rachel's story. It is a carefully balanced and thoroughly enjoyable narrative and a real contribution to English letters." Margaret Wallace

+ N Y Evening Post p9m D '28 220w

Reviewed by Humbert Wolfe
+ Sat R 145:469 Ap 14 '28 480w

"Mr. Agate's biography is neat and spirited, written with an ease of manner and a bright simplicity of phrase."

+ Spec 140:537 Ap 7 '28 800w

"There is every sign that it amused Mr. Agate to write about Rachel, and his witty little essay in biography amuses us in turn."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p331 My 3 '28 850w

AGE, KHUB DEKHTA. See Khūb Dekhtā Āge, pseud.

AGNEW, GEORGETTE. Let's pretend. 63p il $1.75 Putnam

821 27-20240

These verses for the kindergarten age are less inspired than the decorations by E. H. Shepard which accompany them.

"If verse appeals to the very young at all, Mrs. Agnew's Let's Pretend should be one of the best sellers of the nursery."

+ Spec 138:1024 Je 11 '27 160w

AIKEN, CONRAD POTTER. Costumes by Eros. 266p $2 Scribner

28-21485

"Throughout the book, as might be inferred from the title, love is the dominant theme. Each story presents a different aspect of the relation of the sexes and taken together, they make a formidable case against the blind god. As in his novel, 'Blue Voyage,' Mr. Aiken has depended largely upon the stream of consciousness method and has scrupulously avoided the use of plot, relying for interest upon the skill with which he lays bare the subtlest emotions, the most delicate nuances of feeling."—Sat R of Lit

"'Your Obituary Well Written' is an excellent etching, along lines that are hauntingly familiar. But when we step out of this shadow land to the brisker, hardier stories of the collection the effect is correspondingly disappointing. . . Character remains on the phantom level. Mr. Aiken's creations, inadequately motivated, have too little independent existence to convince us." Eugene Lohrke

— + Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p30 S 30 '28 530w

Boston Transcript p3 O 20 '28 500w

"Mr. Aiken's collection of short stories is slightly inferior to his first, 'Bring, Bring,' but it should be read. Somehow they seem a little literary and worked-over, these tales in which all sorts of delicate changes are rung on the erotic motive. . . The first tale, Your Obituary, Well Written, is a remarkable fictional transmission of the personality of Katherine Mansfield and it catches far more directly than ever did Henry James the peculiar characteristics of a certain type of modern literary temperament." C. P. F.

+ — Nation 127:432 O 24 '28 140w

"Mr. Aiken's characters are almost all intellectualized—or rather, not sufficiently embodied—to the point where they cease to exist the moment their page is turned. When they act, it is with an evident effort; they would much rather be talking, defining their emotional states. And the emotional chaos of Mr. Aiken's people is too often a kind of hay-fever of the brain. His good angel, in the form of Katherine Mansfield at her simplest, visits him infrequently—but then their collaboration is happy." T. S. Matthews

— + New Repub 57:24 N 21 '28 180w

"In their mingling of moods, their shadings, their constant see-saw of resolutions and desires and inhibitions, the stories in 'Costumes by Eros' are modern of the modern. And they are that without sacrificing intelligibility. Conrad Aiken is more natural as a relator of brief bits of modern love than he is as a novelist."

+ N Y Times p6 O 7 '28 580w

Reviewed by Herschel Brickell
No Am 226:adv N '28 50w

Reviewed by Ben Wasson
Outlook 150:1215 N 21 '28 150w

"It is his unquenched zest for experiment that makes Mr. Aiken one of the major figures in the literary scene; this together with a comprehension of the finer shades of character worthy of Henry James; an ability to communicate emotion of spiritual ecstasy and pain, comparable with that of Katherine Mansfield, and a style that is a perfect instrument both of beauty and of precision, and a perpetual reminder that Mr. Aiken is first of all a poet." R. M. Linscott

+ Sat R of Lit 5:212 O 13 '28 830w

Springf'd Republican p7e N 25 '28 250w

AIKEN, MRS EDNAH (ROBINSON). Love and I. 353p $2 Dodd

28-11171

Beginning as a triangle story and a murder mystery with a California setting, the novel ends as an exposition of an optimistic religious philosophy. With her friend, Warren Gaunt, Marcia Robbins enters an apartment prepared, as she thinks, for her, and finds there her husband's dead body and Crystal, the other woman. To disarm public opinion Marcia takes Crystal into her home. The latter adopts the religion of an Italian gardener and begins to spread sweetness and light over the shadowed household, eventually winning Warren's love and Marcia's friendship.

AIKEN, EDNAH—Continued

"It seems hardly fair to judge any one—even the author—by such a book as 'Love and I.' Taken at face value it faintly suggests that Ednah Aiken derived her notions of love and grammar from the tabloids, her conception of literature from Abernethy and her religion from Mr. Morris Fishbein's dictionary of cults."

— Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 Je 3 '28 330w

Boston Transcript p4 Ag 11 '28 230w

N Y Times p25 Je 10 '28 250w

AINSWORTH, JOHN. Story of Saint Christopher. 107p il $1.50 Macmillan

B or 92 Christopher, Saint 28-21922

"Patron saint of bookbinders, gardeners, mariners, ferrymen, travelers, even of certain Governments of ancient days, Saint Christopher has been popular and beloved for more than a thousand years. The body of the book tells the story simply as a story, but in the final chapter the author recounts briefly the things people have thought about Christopher, the variety of the legends about him, the symbols associated with him, the explanations of why so many different groups of people have adopted him as their patron saint." (N Y Times) For boys and girls from ten to fourteen.

"This oft repeated but always new and interesting story of Saint Christopher is presented attractively for the interest of boys and girls from ten to fourteen. Mr. Ainsworth writes comprehensively, yet simply, of all that there is known of Saint Christopher, in so far as that knowledge is adaptable to young and imaginative minds. The illustrations by Robert Joyce add to the merit of the book."

+ Boston Transcript p3 Ag 25 '28 80w

"Mr. Ainsworth has collected the various versions and built them into a connected, homogeneous tale which he tells in simple, direct and interesting fashion, with a naive touch that will appeal to children."

+ N Y Times p20 Ag 19 '28 200w

Wis Lib Bul 24:256 O '28

AKELEY, MRS DELIA J. (DENNING). "J. T., jr." 252p il $2.25 Macmillan

591.5 Monkeys 28-16034

The story of an African monkey that was a constant companion of Mrs Akeley on hunting and exploring expeditions for several years and was treated by her as a loved child.

Booklist 25:56 N '28

Cleveland Open Shelf p139 D '28

"The biography of this African monkey is a lot more interesting than the biographies of some humans we have read. She was a constant companion of Mrs. Akeley on hunting and exploring expeditions for a number of years, and the stories of her exploits are very entertaining. Incidentally, they also give a fairly complete and interesting account of the life of an explorer in elephant country." W. R. Brooks

+ Outlook 149:598 Ag 8 '28 100w

"Not only is this an unusual and vivid story of animal life in the African jungle. It is also a revelation of the daily experiences of explorers and elephant hunters in the Dark Continent."

+ R of Rs 78:18 Ag '28 50w

Wis Lib Bul 24:307 N '28

ALARCON, PEDRO ANTONIO DE. Three-cornered hat; the true history of an affair current in certain tales and ballads and here written down as and how it befel; now tr. out of the Spanish by Martin Armstrong. 129p il $3 Simon & Schuster [12s 6d G. Howe] 28-6761

Translation of a classic of modern Spanish literature, written in 1874. "The story is of a miller and his perfect wife, who understood each other so thoroughly that even the wiles of the evil Corregidor in his crimson robe and gorgeous three-cornered hat did not mar their happiness; although indeed they might have, had not two humble donkeys provided an unexpected twist to this Spanish Canterbury tale." —Ind

Booklist 24:410 Jl '28

"There is something peculiarly droll in the Andalusian setting—something incongruous in the juxtaposition of mediaeval social customs with reports of Napoleonic exploits—something so intimately and bewitchingly Spanish in the carelessly journalistic way in which the author digresses from the story time after time, that the reader is captivated from the start. All his drollery has been perfectly mirrored in the illustrations by Norman Tealby."

+ Bookm 67:xxi My '28 220w

"One would have to search far for a better sustained piece of slyly amusing writing than may be found in Alarcon's account of the misadventures of an Andalusian night. Along with its other virtues, 'The Three-Cornered Hat' is perfectly Spanish. Its native flavor remains in the Armstrong translation, because, in all probability, the translator has been more concerned with the spirit than with the letter of the text." Herschel Brickell

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p5 Mr 11 '28 650w

"It combines the delightful freshness of the folk tale with perfect sophistication; it is at once a model of rustic simplicity and good taste." B. R. Redman

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 D 16 '28 160w

"Deserving perfection in translation, it has never before received anything approaching adequacy. It is a pleasure therefore to report that Martin Armstrong's new English version, though a good deal short of perfect, is a vast improvement on its predecessors." J. F. S.

+ — Boston Transcript p11 Mr 13 '28 430w

"Smoothly translated and delightfully illustrated so that the whole volume twinkles with fun."

+ Ind 120:312 Mr 31 '28 70w

"Far from resembling a French bedroom farce or modern realistic sex novel, The Three-Cornered Hat is gay and clean, containing traces of the ballad from which the story is adapted and some typically picaresque Spanish elements. The story is delightful and amusing, the translation is excellent, and the illustrations are adequate."

+ Living Age 334:750 Ap 15 '28 150w

New Statesman 30:supxviii N 5 '27 150w

"It is as superlative a specimen of story telling as the nineteenth century can boast of. Leisured, mellow, witty, saucily wise, the narrative flows flawlessly from first word to last." Arthur Herman

+ N Y Evening Post p9 My 19 '28 380w

"Mr. Armstrong has translated it with a freshness and gusto distinctly admirable; Norman Tealby has furnished, both in line and color, the most delightful illustrations. The publishers have fittingly clothed the long, thin volume. The story is both witty and endearing." W: R. Benét

+ Sat R of Lit 4:681 Mr 17 '28 350w

"The translation is vigorous and suitably rampant, and its gaiety has been captured in the brightly coloured illustrations."

+ Spec 139:1019 D 3 '27 150w

ALBRIGHT, HORACE MARDEN, and TAYLOR, FRANK J. "Oh, ranger!" A book about the national parks. 178p il $2.50 Stanford univ. press

711 National parks and reserves. United States. National park service. Nature study 28-15180

"Each summer increasing thousands of tourists visit our National Parks. Any one of these can add greatly to the pleasure of his sojourn, however brief, by providing himself with a copy of this book, which is crammed with good stories and authentic facts relating to the parks. Mr Albright is Superintendent of the Yellowstone Park and Mr. Taylor is an experienced writer who has long made the National Parks his hobby."—R of Rs

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p14 O 28 '28 160w

"A fascinating little volume authorized by the director of the National Park Service. It is not only authentic in fact, but it has a delightful touch of real humor throughout."

+ Boston Transcript p3 S 15 '28 100w

"While the volume will be especially interesting to those who contemplate visiting any of the parks it will have hardly less value, for both information and entertainment, for those who must do their traveling by proxy."

+ N Y Times p14 Jl 8 '28 500w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:575 N '28

R of Rs 78:18 Ag '28 60w

Springf'd Republican p10 Ag 9 '28 450w

ALDIS, MRS DOROTHY. Here, there and everywhere. 99p il $2 Minton

811 28-21803

Little verses for and about children. Each poem has its picture in black and white.

"Poems that show, all of them, an extraordinary understanding of children and ability to express their emotions and mental attitudes in simple, charming verse. She does not make the mistake of interpreting them from a mature viewpoint, but lets them look at the world and at themselves with clear, direct, childlike vision. Miss Flack's drawings, one for each poem, strike and keep the note of happy childhood that characterizes the verse."

+ N Y Times p10 S 23 '28 90w

"There is no strain for whimsical or great poetry, but there is an unusual knowledge of the happy vagrancies of a baby mind." Isabelle Houck

+ N Y World p9e O 28 '28 120w

"The language is simple and suitably expresses the children's own emotions and moods. It is a charming little book children will like to own and grown-ups can enjoy for its interpretation of the children's own views."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e D 16 '28 80w

ALDRICH, MRS BESS (STREETER). A lantern in her hand. 307p $2 (7s 6d) Appleton

28-20920

From a log cabin home in Iowa the trail for Abbie Deal led to Nebraska, where she brought up her family with all the true courage of the pioneer mother. And as she lived courageously, so did she die, alone in her pioneer home surrounded by the memories of a long, full life.

Booklist 25:119 D '28

"With quiet force, relying on no verbal pyrotechnics, Mrs. Aldrich has drawn a strong and vigorous picture of pioneer life." H. F. M.

+ Boston Transcript p6 S 29 '28 300w

Cleveland Open Shelf p121 N '28

"Mrs. Aldrich does make the settlement of the West seem an epic accomplishment. That just men and women could have brought it about and borne children and educated them and built cities and so on passes belief. She does make bearing children, and loving them, and teaching them, and cheerfully giving up all the world that they might have it instead, seem worth doing. Novels will go on telling about these things forever, and people will read them, and laugh over them, and cry over them. And it will do people no harm." E. A. Aldrich

+ — Sat of Lit 5:371 N 17 '28 550w

Times [London] Lit Sup p992 D 13 '28 220w

ALDRICH, CHARLES ANDERSON. Cultivating the child's appetite; with a foreword by Clifford G. Grulee. 127p $1.75 Macmillan

613.2 Children—Nutrition. Children—Care and hygiene. Appetite 27-19914

Suggests sensible methods for training children to eat the correct foods. Dr Aldrich takes up the nature of hunger and appetite from both the physiological and the psychological sides. The author is a Chicago pediatrist.

"Dr. Aldrich's book covers a very important subject in a most unusual way. It is simple, straightforward and to the point. I believe every mother would profit greatly by reading it and the children should profit even more." R. E. Humphries

+ Am J Pub Health 18:689 My '28 200w

Booklist 24:270 Ap '28

J Home Econ 19:705 D '27 60w

"Dr. Aldrich gives us the benefit of his own experience in muddled homes. He preaches what he practices and he does us a service in a practical, sane sense. In these days of child study and confusion, it would be a happy sign if more brains and less theories went to our heads." Halle Schaffner

+ Survey 59:655 F 15 '28 300w

ALDRICH, CHILSON D. Real log cabin. 278p $4 (17s) Macmillan

728.7 Log cabins 28-13071

Written by an experienced designer and builder of log cabins and illustrated from examples of his work, the volume offers practical help in choosing site and building materials and in constructing, finishing, and furnishing log cabins of many styles.

Booklist 24:391 Jl '28

"Here one may learn all one needs to know about gable ends, eaves, ridge log, purlins and rafters and receive detailed instructions concerning that indispensable feature—the fireplace. The text is supplemented by many photographs and drawings."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p19 Ag 12 '28 180w

Boston Transcript p5 Ag 25 '28 210w

"Whether you want to build the cabin yourself or have it designed and built for you, we think of nothing you want to know that can't be found in these pages, and there are lots of pictures. Not only is the matter of furnishings gone into, but there are full instructions for building fireplaces." W. R. Brooks

+ Outlook 149:157 My 23 '28 130w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:575 N '28

Sat R of Lit 5:342 N 10 '28 200w

ALEXANDER, JAMES. Thought-control in everyday life. 261p $2 (7s 6d) Funk

150 Control (psychology). Mental discipline. Mental suggestion 28-9563

The book aims to give practical guidance in the matter of controlling one's thoughts, feelings, and emotional states, breaking bad habits and developing will power.

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 Je 3 '28 90w

Boston Transcript p3 Jl 21 '28 180w

"The book is manifestly meant for readers who have little knowledge of psychology and little interest in any but its entirely practical application to the problems of everyday life. And so Mr. Alexander has made it as simple, practical and everydayish as a slice of bread and butter."

+ N Y Times p11 Ag 26 '28 400w

Times [London] Lit Sup p455 Je 14 '28 200w

ALEXANDER, WILFRID BACKHOUSE. Birds of the ocean; a handbook for voyagers; containing descriptions of all the sea-birds of the world; with notes on their habits and guides to their identification. 428p il $3.50 (15s) Putnam

598.2 Water-birds 28-5153

A guide to the identification of all the sea-birds likely to be met with on an ocean voyage to any part of the world. The descriptions of the birds are followed by notes on their habits and range. In the last four chapters, each ocean is dealt with in turn with an enumeration of the birds regularly to be found on these waters and of their breeding areas.

Booklist 24:349 Je '28

"Taken altogether it is a valuable handbook both to the traveler and the naturalist. It would add pleasure and interest to a summer at the seacoast to have such a guide, philosopher and friend with you."

+ Boston Transcript p4 Ap 25 '28 150w

"He has produced a reliable and compact little guide to this very interesting group, and has thus done a service to ornithology."

+ New Statesman 31:302 Je 9 '28 320w

"Perhaps not much of the extensively gathered information will be new to students of encyclopaedic works on ocean birds. But it is quite certain that no other reference book on this subject, at once so well compiled and readable, has as yet been written."

+ Spec 140:539 Ap 7 '28 700w

Times [London] Lit Sup p225 Mr 22 '28 260w

ALLEN, ERIC WILLIAM. Printing for the journalist; a handbook for reporters, editors, and students of journalism. (Borzoi handbooks of journalism) 195p il $2 (7s 6d) Knopf

655.3 Printing, Practical. Newspapers. Journalism

For the reporter who aspires one day to become editor or owner of a newspaper, Dean Allen of the University of Oregon describes briefly and clearly the processes involved in the printing and make-up of a newspaper.

Booklist 25:12 O '28

"While designed primarily for classroom use, it will be found not without value for the practicing newspaper man, particularly the one who aspires to run a paper of his own some day. Such elementary topics as type sizes and proofreading are not omitted, although, sad to relate, not all the corrections have been made on the specimen proof. Professor Allen evidently failed to read his revised proof."

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 Jl 29 '28 130w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:572 N '28

"It is simply and sympathetically written. . . The technical information given seems to be accurate, and so far as possible, complete. . . There is a perennial fascination about 'the newspaper game.' No one who has ever got the rank smell of the pressroom in his nostrils ever quite gets over the lure of seizing the first copies off the press. And Dean Allen's book will sustain and encourage cub and managing editor alike."

+ Sat R of Lit 5:14 Jl 28 '28 600w

ALLEN, G. C. Modern Japan and its problems. 226p $3 Dutton [10s Allen & U.]

915.2 Japan 28-15370

The purpose of the book is to point out the institutions and systems of the West which have been accepted in Japan and the extent to which Japan has modified these to suit her own civilization. The author writes on Japanese modification of Western social, political and educational systems, and in particular, those of industry, commerce and finance.

Booklist 25:23 O '28

"I know no book which hews more resolutely and suggestively at the roots of Japan's national character and policy than this sober study of Mr. Allen." L: Gannett

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p1 Jl 1 '28 1100w

Boston Transcript p6 Je 30 '28 900w

"This is a remarkable study of Japan in economic terms. . . His analysis will help more to an understanding of Japan than a dozen recent picture-books."

+ Nation 127:276 S 19 '28 150w

Reviewed by Edmund Blunden

Nation and Ath 42:758 F 18 '28 230w

New Statesman 31:22 Ap 14 '28 250w

"Mr. Allen is a young Englishman who has been for some years a lecturer in the Nagoya Government College. He writes with the detachment of a man to whom life in Japan is a novel experience, yet with the judgment of a good citizen of the world who finds nothing alien and little that is disparaging in the foundations of life on which the Japanese build their self-esteem. His observation is acute and his book is the rare type of sympathetic narrative that is just as attractive for its intrinsic proof of never having been taken in by the sentimental side of the 'wonderful-little-people' myth." Gardner Harding

+ N Y Times p1 Je 17 '28 1800w

"An important contribution to the right understanding of a country which, by reason of its geographical position, must play a conspicuous part in the reorganization of China and in the general policy of the Pacific."

+ Spec 140:160 F 4 '28 180w

"Understanding and significant study of the greatest Eastern nation today." W. S. C.

+ Springf'd Republican p6 Ag 20 '28 320w

"His observations are free of the sentimentalism which so often impairs the value of books that pretend to depict modern Japan to Western eyes; and they are obviously the result of a first-hand study of the writer's subject. Those who have made any considerable study of the matters with which he is concerned will probably not find very much in the book that is new to them. Others, whose knowledge of Japan is slight, will read it through with interest and find their minds stimulated to go more deeply into the subject elsewhere."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p226 Mr 22 '28 170w

World Tomorrow 12:44 Ja '29 40w

ALLEN, GORDON. Smaller house of to-day. 179p il $3.75 Scribner

728 Architecture, Domestic—Designs and plans 27-21599

Some recent types of the smaller English house are described, with plans, and practical discussion of the selection of sites and economy of design, construction and interior fittings. There are 219 illustrations.

"Just how helpful this book would prove to the American housebuilder, I question. The text does contain, for the architect at least, many helpful thoughts along the broad generalities of design; but in specific matters, such as masonry, carpentry or most particularly plumbing, our own native methods are so different that to attempt to profit by its recommendations would mean for us either costly expenditure of labor, or the relinquishing of many of the mechanical comforts which in even our most modest houses, we have grown to take for granted." Edwin Bonta

N Y Evening Post p14 O 15 '27 250w

St Louis 25:356 N '27

ALLEN, HERBERT STANLEY. Quantum and its interpretation. 274p $4 Macmillan [12s 6d Methuen]

530.1 Quantum theory 28-25285

"Dr. Allen, who is Professor of Natural Philosophy in the University of St. Andrews, confesses that the baffling problem concerning the nature of the quantum is still unsolved. However, he presents our present knowledge of the subject, emphasis being laid on the magnetic aspect. His treatment steers a middle course between the mathematical and the purely descriptive. Includes an account of the new wave mechanics associated with the name of Schrödinger. Selected bibliography."—N Y New Tech Bks

Reviewed by G. P. Thompson
Nature 121:977 Je 23 '28 1300w
N Y New Tech Bks 13:38 Jl '28

ALLEN, MARGARET PRATT, and HUTTON, IDA ORAM. Man-sized meals from the kitchenette; a kitchenette cookbook. 149p $1.60 Vanguard press

641.5 Cookery 28-24341

A time-saver of practical value for the business woman who is also housekeeper. These recipes, all of which have been tested, are for two people, but company meals and menus are also provided for.

Booklist 25:107 D '28

"It is a delight to find a cookbook made especially for limited quarters, and made so entertainingly. 'Man-Sized Meals' is full of really practical help—such as paper baking cups, short cuts to cream sauce, and how to cook steak without oven or broiler."
+ Sat R of Lit 5:255 O 13 '28 250w

ALLEN, PHILIP SCHUYLER. Romanesque lyric; studies in its background and development from Petronius to the Cambridge songs, 50-1050; with renderings into English verse by Howard Mumford Jones. 373p $4.50 Univ. of N.C. press

879.1 Latin poetry. Lyric poetry 28-16407

"The specific theme is the origin and development of the Latin lyric, in the form which, borrowing a term from its parallel use in architecture, the author calls 'Romanesque,' from the second century to the eleventh in Gaul and—after Gaul became France—in France. It involves the question of the sources of French culture, the oriental, Greek, Roman Gothic and Frankish elements that entered into it, and the channels by which our heritage from the ancient world passed through the probate court of medievalism and was transmitted to us rather enriched than diminished."—Christian Century

"There is plenty of solid scholarship in the make-up of this volume, but there is besides a great deal to command the attention of all readers who are intelligently interested in the history of European poetry." Jacob Zeitlin
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p24 O 28 '28 800w

"I have not found a story so exciting among this year's novels. That is partly because Allen can write as well as delve into documents, and because Jones is an immortal genius as a translator of Latin into English verse." W. E. Garrison
+ Christian Century 45:979 Ag 9 '28 350w

"Despite faults, the book will remain a standard and arresting work in its field, with implications that lie far beyond the mere subject matter. It should be read by every student of poetry and certainly by every student of the Middle Ages." C. P. Fadiman
+ Nation 127:229 S 5 '28 1140w

"Though we never lose the theme, it is so broadly treated that the book is an indispensable companion for one who is following the course of Latin poetry in the Empire and the early Middle Ages. The Latin texts assembled at the end of the volume—alas, with too many misprints—constitute an attractive anthology of poetry, interpreted to the reader not only by the author's comments, but by the remarkable renderings into English verse—even better than the originals, at times—by Howard Mumford Jones." E. K. Rand
+ New Repub 57:sup112 D 12 '28 2100w
+ Sat R of Lit 5:173 S 29 '28 280w

"The reader will agree as he reads the Latin texts or the translations which Mr Jones has made with so much fine feeling and poetic craftiness, that the Romanesque lyric is well worth the trouble of its unearthing." C. D'Evelyn
+ Springf'd Republican p7f S 2 '28 1100w

ALLEN, RUTH COLLINS. How to make lampshades; ed. by Curtiss Sprague. 64p il $1 Bridgman [5s Lane]

749 Lampshades 28-8595

"In seven chapters the authors discuss illumination, give suggestions for design and color, describe material for shades, and present detailed information on the making and decoration of silk and parchment shades."—Booklist

Booklist 24:391 Jl '28
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:335 Je '28

ALLEN WILLIAM HARVEY. Al Smith's Tammany hall; champion political vampire. 338p il $2.50 Inst. for public service, 53 Chambers st., N.Y.

363 Tammany Hall. Smith, Alfred Emanuel 28-24236

The author's thesis is that the much talked-of reformation of Tammany Hall since the days of Boss Tweed is a myth. He parallels his story of Tammany with the career of Al Smith, showing that the "reformation" came rather in the political views of the latter after his break with Tammany Hall. Quoting chapter and verse in a long series of indictments against Tammanyism, the record ends with an account of the 1928 sewer scandal in Queens.

"For those who would know of Tammany today, Allen's is the book. Werner ends in 1924. Al Smith's name whether relevant or not is on almost every page. Nevertheless the book is temperate in tone, if indignant. It is really an elaborate, well supported indictment of the multifarious administrative shortcomings of the Walker régime." Joseph McGoldrick
+ Pol Sci Q 43:613 D '28 300w
R of Rs 78:38 O '28 80w

ALSBERG, CARL LUCAS, and TAYLOR, ALONZO ENGLEBERT. Fats and oils; a general view. (Food research inst. Fats and oils studies) 103p $1.50; pa $1 Food research inst.

665.2 Oils and fats 28-11628

A simple, elementary, and nontechnical exposition of the production, the technology, and the interrelations of the various fats and oils.

Am Econ R 18:511 S '28 40w
Booklist 25:107 D '28

"The chapter on trends of consumption is of special interest to students of foods and food economics."
J Home Econ 20:507 Jl '28 70w
Pratt p23 autumn '28

ALVAREZ QUINTERO, SERAFIN, and ALVAREZ QUINTERO, JOAQUIN. Four plays: The women have their way, A hundred years old, Fortunato, The lady from Alfaqueque; in English versions by Helen and Harley Granville-Barker. 260p $2.50 Little [10s 6d Sidgwick & J.]

862 28-8377

The brothers Quintero are leading playwrights in Spain, with a hundred and fifty plays to their credit during many years of collaboration. The four plays here presented in translation by Helen and Harley Granville-Barker are Andalusian idylls, comedies of ALVAREZ QUINTERO, S. and J.,—Continued small-town life in Spain, sunny and lighthearted.

Booklist 24:394 Jl '28

"These pieces display adequately the qualities for which their authors are famous: grace of style, simplicity of action, mastery of characterization, and warmth of sentiment." Glenn Hughes

+ Bookm 67:590 Jl '28 150w

"The Quinteros, though they deal with simple themes, with the quiet life of pleasant Andalusian villagers, do not write folk dramas. There is the utmost art in their simplicities, a deftness and delicacy in their understanding and humor, which is not easily winged in translation. The Granville-Barkers have certainly succeeded in writing English dialogue which is light, idiomatic, graceful, effective and simple without sacrificing the alien flavor." W. P. Eaton

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p18 Je 10 '28 300w

Boston Transcript p8 Je 30 '28 130w

Cleveland Open Shelf p117 N '28

Dial 85:174 Ag '28 130w

"Because in their quiet way the dramatists enjoy and make us feel their enjoyment so much—life becomes its own justification. And if, as Goethe observed, the function of art is to reconcile us to life, here is an admirable example (for which much gratitude is due to the felicitous translators) of that function in process; provided we do not shut our eyes to the fact that what the Quinteros place before us is only a narrow section of life. For it must be owned that in these Andalusian posies there is no deadly nightshade, and one must suppose that flower grows even in Andalusia." Robert Nichols

+ New Statesman 30:564 F 11 '28 630w

Reviewed by Paul Sifton

N Y World p11m Ap 8 '28 500w

"The Quinteros, whose home is in Seville, are a good deal less well known in this country than they deserve to be, and these plays are really excellent reading."

+ No Am 225:adv My '28 70w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:293 My '28

"As pictures of the domestic life of southern Spain the Quintero plays are of intrinsic value. It is a delight to read them." Jane Dransfield

+ Sat R of Lit 5:25 Ag 4 '28 300w

Reviewed by Rosamond Gilder

Theatre Arts Mo 12:369 My '28 300w

"Of all the comedy writers of first rank in Spain, Serafín and Joaquín Álvarez Quintero are the most truly Spanish in the sense of being least subject to foreign style and influence. The life of their plays springs from the genuineness of all their characters and their types." Luis Araujo-Costa

+ Theatre Arts Mo 12:840 N '28 900w

"They are not trivial or cruelly shrill or passionately noisy; they are not what was once called 'strong' and is now described by publicity agents as 'outspoken'; they have borrowed nothing from Russia and nothing from Scandinavia. To read them is to travel in a world at once less sophisticated and more formal than our own, a world full of charming children whose charm is founded in tradition, whose seriousness is discovered in sparkling eyes, whose very farce knows how to be graceful."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p810 N 10 '27 1550w

Wis Lib Bul 24:189 Je '28

AMERICAN caravan, Second; a yearbook of American literature; ed. by Alfred Kreymborg, Lewis Munford, and Paul Rosenfeld. 872p $5 Macaulay

810.8 American literature—Collections. American literature—Yearbooks (27-19157)

The second Caravan carries the work of several established writers along with a number of those who made their first appearance in the first American caravan, and forty-two new contributors.

"The new volume is less indiscriminately representative; the contributions are on the whole less fragmentary, and each writer shows something of his full stature; the miscellaneous character of the previous issue is definitely replaced by a discernible order and direction. It is more skillfully edited." Allen Tate

+ Bookm 68:353 N '28 1800w

"Compared with last year, the average of the average contribution probably is lower. But on the other hand, the best pieces seem far better than anything printed in the former collection—most notably the prose by Jonathan Leonard and Conrad Aiken's narrative poem, 'John Deth.'" Kenneth Burke

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p5 O 21 '28 1350w

Boston Transcript p1 O 13 '28 450w

Reviewed by Gilbert Seldes

Dial 85:513 D '28 1500w

"It is no derogation from the work itself to say that 'The Second American Caravan' derives its chief importance from the first. It puts the seal of success upon the enterprise and bids fair for its continuance. A year ago the experiment was a daring one on the part of the publisher, the editors, and it may be added, the readers. That it should have justified itself to the point of continuance is the important fact. Henceforth we shall look for the annual arrival of the 'Caravan' with the same assurance as towards the monthly appearance of the Century or Scribner's, though possibly with different emotions." R. M. Lovett

+ New Repub 56:331 N 7 '28 1100w

"It seems incredible that in nearly 900 pages of what is offered as serious creative writing by sixty contributors, there should be so little that is memorable, so little to relieve this dull and dismal mass of pretentious writing. The lack is less hard to understand when one perceives how unrepresentative of American letters the American Caravan really is."

— N Y Times p4 O 28 '28 480w

"The average is a little below that of last year's Caravan, but the whole is a treasure of current American literary expression and tendencies, valuable to students and entertaining to general readers."

Outlook 150:1337 D 12 '28 110w

World Tomorrow 12:523 D '28 60w

AMERICAN ENGINEERING COUNCIL. Safety [2] and production. 414p il $5 Harper

614.8 Accidents—Prevention. Accidents—Statistics. Efficiency, Industrial 28-10604

Engineering and statistical study of the relationship between industrial safety and production; a report made by the Committee on safety and production of the American engineering council at the request of the National bureau of casualty and surety underwriters.

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:626 D '28

AMERICAN TRADE UNION DELEGATION TO THE SOVIET UNION. Russia after ten years; report. 96p $1 Int. pub.

330.947 Russia—Economic conditions. Labor and laboring classes—Russia. Russia—Politics and government 27-23482

Each of the five delegates of the American trade union studied during his weeks of travel and observation in Russia his own particular field. This report on Russia after ten years of the Soviet régime is a synthesis of the observations of the five delegates, and touches upon economic progress, trade unions and labor, housing, agriculture, education, etc.

Booklist 25:8 O '28

"Their report is written with a reserve and freedom from propaganda that is highly commendable, when one considers that they started with a sympathetic bias and were probably

'shown the sights.' It is rarely that trade union literature is written so interestingly as these modest ninety-six pages."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p15 Ja 29 '28 250w

"This report is naturally very sympathetic towards the Soviet Government. Without doubt, it overlooks many of the more serious aspects of contemporary Russian life. However, for those who wish to be well informed on the economic and labor side of Russia, it is elucidating."

+ Boston Transcript p2 Ja 14 '28 130w

Survey 59:785 Mr 15 '28 120w

AMERICAN TRADE UNION DELEGATION TO THE SOVIET UNION. Soviet Russia in the second decade; a joint survey by the technical staff of the first American trade union delegation; ed. by Stuart Chase, Robert Dunn, and Rexford Guy Tugwell. 374p $4 Day

330.947 Russia. Russia—Economic conditions
28-20738

The technical staff of the first American trade union delegation to Russia divided among themselves certain departments of the soviet system for concentrated study during an average period of about six weeks. These preliminary reports of their several studies include industry, agriculture, finance, education, and the judicial system, with the emphasis on the economics of all these.

Booklist 25:53 N '28

"As in all symposia the various contributions differ markedly, in fact startlingly, in competence. Probably the best article in this collection is Professor Brebner's introductory essay on 'The Ante-Room of Time,' which is a model of sociological appreciation in the nature of social revolution."

+ — Bookm 68:xxii S '28 120w

"Almost none of it is written with passion, but one chapter—that by Stuart Chase, unenticingly called 'Industry and the Gosplan'—suddenly lifts the reader out of his apathy and gives him a whiff of the new air of Russia. It is crammed with statistics, too, but they take on color and movement and living meaning. In all the dusty pages about Russia that I have pored over in the last ten years, I do not know any 400 that give as vivid yet dispassionate a picture of what is happening in Russia as the forty pages in this volume in which Stuart Chase puts flesh upon his figures." L: Gannett

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 N 11 '28 400w

Boston Transcript p4 Ag 15 '28 800w

"Thirteen delegates who have thoroughly inspected all corners of the U. S. S. R., make an effort, honest in some cases, to look on both sides of every question, and report with unvarying enthusiasm on the economic and social conditions shown them by their Soviet hosts. This should be an important handbook for the students of economy and the foreign concessionaire—if taken with a grain of salt."

Living Age 335:156 O '28 70w

"To say that all its parts have general as well as specialized interest is high tribute to both authors and editors, who in these cases are identical. In no case has a writer forgotten the living body in examining his allotted limb, and we have, therefore, an analysis of enormous value to those interested in the progress of the Russian experiment." Norah Meade

+ Nation 127:249 S 12 '28 1050w

Reviewed by Herschel Brickell

No Am 226:adv O '28 120w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:587 N '28

R of Rs 78:23 Ag '28 130w

St Louis 26:376 D '28

"An interesting series of reasonably unbiased reports. The emphasis naturally falls on the economic situation. The chapters on Industry and the Gosplan, on Russian Agriculture, and on Education in Soviet Russia will be especially valuable to the intelligent layman who wishes to know why the Soviet Union, instead of foundering, has been steadily progressing since 1922." L. L. W. Wilson

+ Survey 61:176 N 1 '28 230w

AMES, JOSEPH BUSHNELL. Chaps and chukkers. 383p $2 Century [7s 6d Hodder & S.]
28-5562

Bill Cavanaugn was a square jawed westerner. Returning to his boyhood home he helped in the foiling of an attempted train hold-up and in the process recognized an irresponsible but charming college friend as one of the bandits. From this beginning came a long train of exciting events with a happy finale for all concerned.

"A deft combination of God's country events and mystery."

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p21 Ap 1 '28 80w

Times [London] Lit Sup p470 Je 21 '28 110w

AMES, JOSEPH BUSHNELL. Flame of the desert. 309p $2 Duffield
28-9840

Adventure, love, and a suggestion of mystery are the mingled elements of this story, the scene of which is laid in a cave region of the Arizona desert. An American engineer rescues a stranger from the bottom of a lava pit. The injured man is a cultured recluse half white, half Indian. He shares with his rescuer his secret treasure of magnificent fire opals—flame of the desert—discovered by him in an ancient burial place. Love and excitement enter and dominate the story when a girl and her brother are kidnapped by Mexican bandits and the engineer rides furiously to the rescue.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 Ap 29 '28 80w

"The narrative is interesting and convincing, and the writer evidently knows the region well. He tells his story, not in the vernacular of the cowboy but in good English."

+ Boston Transcript p4 Je 16 '28 230w

"It is an intriguing and vividly written beginning, with a graphic portrayal of the region, and whoever reads these first chapters, if he has any curiosity whatever, will want to go on and find what happens when Blaze Calhoun carried out his engagement to return and visit the caves with his new friend."

+ N Y Times p7 Jl 1 '28 420w

AMINOFF, CONSTANCE LEONIE CAROLINE (BORGSTROM) friherrinna. Arrogance. (Torchlight ser. of Napoleonic romances) 383p $2.50 Dutton

Napoleon I, emperor of the French—Fiction
28-13489

The eighth in the Torchlight series of Napoleonic romances opens with his Prussian campaign in 1806 and closes two years later, with troubles gathering for Napoleon. Talleyrand figures and Napoleon's Polish love, the Countess Walewska.

"The writing is informal, conversational, intimate; the reader feeling that he is enjoying a long tete-a-tete with the author before a cosy fireplace on a rainy afternoon. Josephine is depicted vividly, and shines well, even in the light of her famous husband."

Boston Transcript p4 Je 16 '28 230w

N Y Times p17 My 27 '28 420w

"It is done not without imagination, but in an insufferably chatty, familiar style, vivacious to the point of agony."

— + Sat R of Lit 5:74 Ag 25 '28 30w

ANDERSON, ARTHUR G. Industrial engineering and factory management. 623p il $5 Ronald
[2]
658 Factory management. Efficiency, Industrial 28-8494

"After a brief history of American manufacturing, the book presents the general principles and technique of the functional organization and physical structure of an industrial plant. This is followed by a treatment of the major phases of operation and the development of the various functions of control. Particular emphasis is given to operation, study and wage payment."—Boston Transcript

---

Am Econ R 18:757 D '28 180w

"A reader unfamiliar with the subject will find in Professor Anderson's book an enlightening view of industrial operation. To the advanced student or the experienced executive there is offered little, if any, material with which he is not already familiar As a textbook, it is limited in its usefulness. The approach is that of the technician rather than that of the philosopher."

— + Boston Transcript p4 Ag 18 '28 300w
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:468 O '28
St Louis 26:280 S '28

ANDERSON, MAXWELL, and HICKERSON, HAROLD. Gods of the lightning; [and] Outside looking in, by Maxwell Anderson. 187p $2.50 Longmans
[2]
812

The title play is a drama which parallels the Sacco-Vanzetti case; "Outside looking in" is a hobo play based on "Beggars of life," by Jim Tully.

"One of the most effective dramas of social protest which it has ever been my privilege to see. Written out of an intense conviction, it never for a moment forgets that it has a purpose, and it hammers unceasingly at the point which it wishes to enforce; but it is too vigorous and too vivid to suffer from this fact as other propaganda plays seem almost inevitably to do." J. W. Krutch

+ Nation 127:528 N 14 '28 850w

"The play is openly based on the Sacco-Vanzetti case; and for those in the audience who consider the picture a true one, the dramatic effect will be all the stronger by reason of this actuality. For those of a contrary view, 'Gods of the Lightning,' unless they are hopelessly obstructed by prejudice against it, must be a play of real and cumulative power, human appeal and often of a sheer writing talent that is rare in the theater." Stark Young

+ New Repub 56:326 N 7 '28 1600w

ANDERSON, ROBERT CHARLES. Rigging of ships in the days of the spritsail topmast, 1600-1720. 278p il $5 Marine research soc.

623.8 Masts and rigging 27-23848

"Detailed study of English, Dutch, and French practice, but with no mention of American methods. Work is beautifully illustrated with halftones and line-drawings."—N Y New Tech Bks

---

Boston Transcript p4 Ja 25 '28 320w
N Y New Tech Bks 13:9 Ja '28

"The period chosen by Mr. Anderson for what his readers will hope to be the first book of a series is the earliest for which anything like complete information is available. Our oldest models belong to it. In it the first English treatises on rigging were written. Their authors would have been as much pleased at Mr. Anderson's clear descriptions of what they stumbled over as they would have been puzzled to understand why he wrote them."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p121 F 23 '28 1050w

ANDERSSON, JOHAN GUNNAR. Dragon and the foreign devils; tr. from the Swedish by Charles Wharton Stork. 341p il $4 Little
*
915.1 China—Civilization 28-24110

Dr Andersson is a Swedish scientist who has given eleven years of service in China as councilor to the government bureau of geological research. His duties have taken him to every part of China and have brought him into direct contact with the Chinese people of every station and class. He therefore discusses China's internal problems and the impact upon China of western industry, with intelligence and authority. The human and humorous side of his experiences has not escaped Dr Andersson, who makes use of incidents illustrating both.

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p33 D 9 '28 300w

"The gain of the reader of this book is a knowledge of another China, one that is 'seething with new spiritual power, eager to adopt all that is valuable in occidental civilization but proudly aware of the noble worth and vitality of her own cultural inheritance.' It is good evidence of the author's eleven years spent in China."

+ Boston Transcript p6 N 7 '28 430w

"The wide sweep of the author's shrewd observation, his disinterested liberal point of view, and his sound Swedish common sense make it an invaluable study for Americans in checking up our alternately idealistic and 'brass tacks' attitude toward China." Gardner Harding

+ N Y Times p8 N 18 '28 1250w

"Dr. Andersson is a Swedish scientist who knows China from long acquaintance and writes with penetration of its problems." Herschel Brickell

+ No Am 226:adv D '28 50w
R of Rs 78:36 N '28 60w

ANDRADE, EDWARD NEVILLE DA COSTA. Engines. 267p il $3 Harcourt [7s 6d Bell]

621 Engines. Mechanical engineering 28-24691

The author of "The structure of the atom" gave these illustrated lectures on engines to Christmas audiences of children and young people at the Royal Institution of Great Britain. Necessarily technical, yet made as simple as possible, the lectures describe engines of all types and the principles by which they operate.

Boston Transcript p2 N 3 '28 540w

"The language is clear, the explanations and diagrams are simple and practical, the plates are many and interesting. Mr. Andrade has forgotten that he was writing to please boys and girls and has merely tried to be explicit. And nothing could please them more.

+ Nation 127:554 N 21 '28 100w

"The book is gratifyingly free from cheap efforts at 'popularization' in the form of flippancy or wise-cracking. It requires genuine attention, and in return it is genuinely explanatory and informative."

+ N Y Times p22 O 21 '28 480w
Pratt p18 autumn '28

"Gives a very clear and comprehensive account of the various types of engines now in use—stationary and locomotive, reciprocating and rotary. Dr. Andrade is not himself a practical engineer, and perhaps for that very reason is better qualified to explain an engineering subject to the young; the practical man too often allows trees to obscure the view of the wood."

+ Sat R 146:213 Ag 18 '28 1500w

"The juvenile audience that the author addressed might include the uninformed minds of several million adults; we can assure such readers, if they are not too proud to learn, that they will find entertainment as well as instruction here."

+ Spec 141:367 S 22 '28 100w

ANDRE, MARIUS. Columbus; tr. from the French by Eloïs Parkhurst Huguenin. 286p (21s) $4 Knopf

B or 92 Columbus, Christopher 28-12050

A French historian presents a view of Columbus which is quite the reverse of the traditional one. Instead of the picturesque hero of the schoolbooks he is exposed as "a braggart and a liar, an unscrupulous adventurer driven by fanatical ambition. In this biography we see the manner in which he duped the court and kingdom of Spain while he was alive, and history after his death."

"With convincing clarity and lack of pretentiousness, M. André re-creates the Christopher Columbus whose whole path of life was one of catastrophe, engendered by his own lack of insight, moral instability, and mental befuddlement. But he brings also to light—and it is sufficient recompense for a shattered idol—a man whose glorious vision and poetic imagination could overcome his incompetence and ordinary worldly failings."

+ Bookm 67:xiii Jl '28 330w

"At his best he is extremely fine. His analysis of the character of Queen Isabella is a penetrating and masterly study. His explanation of much that happened at Court is very likely near the truth. And in spite of the flaws, the book is a wholesome and refreshingly frank discussion of a subject which has become fossilized in our minds by custom and sentiment. It is a brilliant evaluation of a world-figure. That Columbus was carried away by his own undisciplined imagination, which had become swollen by reading ancient authors and biblical prophecies, nobody can doubt. Modern psychoanalysis will of course proceed to finish the decrepit effigy M. André has exposed to our pity and contempt. And we are left with the confusing and humiliating feeling that the New World has no choice but to bear the name of either Amerigo Vespucci or of Christopher Columbus, both of whom were impostors." W: McFee

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p2 My 13 '28 1100w

Boston Transcript p3 Ap 25 '28 680w

Cleveland Open Shelf p117 N '28

Reviewed by Van Wyck Brooks
Ind 120:532 Je 2 '28 1050w

Nation 127:94 Jl 25 '28 100w

Nation and Ath 43:596 Ag 4 '28 420w

"Columbus made mistakes, it is true; he underestimated the size of the world and was wrong about the geography of Asia. But there is no reason to regard him—as this author does—as an arch-knave and charlatan whose discoveries were due to sheer luck which his wilful ignorance and stupidity did not deserve. . . One of the author's methods is that too-prevalent one of writing biography in the manner of fiction. The method has seldom been less justified; for the imaginary scenes ring as false as the interpretation of Columbus's character."

— New Statesman 31:678 S 8 '28 170w

"It is easy to see that M. Andre has thoroughly enjoyed tearing off the discoverer's nice school-history costume to show him a figure hideously tattoed with base designs. Perhaps it is weakly sentimental, yet, unreasonably, one feels that this old gray head might have been —not spared, exactly, but not quite so zestfully and unmercifully lambasted. It should be added that M. Andre, who has frankly fictionized his facts in presentation here and there in the interests of piquancy, makes out a very colorful, fluent and interesting case against the prisoner in his dock, and one worth reading for various reasons." F. H. M.

+ — N Y Evening Post p8 Je 30 '28 240w

"Unlike Waldman's book on Raleigh this biography of Columbus is written with passion, even hatred. It is an amazing opus. Other biographies have pointed out Columbus's defects—his lack of knowledge, his cupidity and his cunning, but few authors have so gleefully abandoned themselves to the task of doing violence to a reputation as has M. Marius Andre. . . Discounting its obvious bias and entirely original logic, the book is ably written and well translated. As a piece of printing and binding it is a little masterpiece of the bookmaker's art. Its defects are certainly not sartorial. They are of character." Arthur Strawn

— + N Y World p10m My 6 '28 600w

Reviewed by Herschel Brickell
No Am 225:adv Je '28 220w

"M. André's conception of Columbus is in such violent contrast to that conjured up in textbooks for generations of boys and girls the world over, I am certain there must be error in both. . . His narrative suffers from the lack of authenticating material and from the clear intention to condemn Columbus and to belittle his discoveries." Harry Salpeter

Outlook 149:314 Je 20 '28 480w

"M. André has written a most stimulating book, in which instruction and entertainment are happily combined—a book which was well worth translating into English. One word of warning must be said, however. Before the end Columbus evidently begins to get on his Biographer's nerves, for he brings charges against him that are quite without substance."

+ — Sat R 146:272 S 1 '28 850w

"The prodigious labor, industry, and learning, upon which as foundation this as his other historical works rest, are discernible only to the trained scholar and historian; so skillfully does the author employ his unquestionable art and talents as a writer, guided by his gift of poetic insight, that his finished work takes on the glamor of a fascinating tale of fiction, while exhibiting the form and polish of the keenest satire and most unassailable dialectic; all delivered in a punctilio of the highest courtesy and best of temper throughout." C. C. Peterson

+ Sat R of Lit 4:782 Ap 21 '28 2000w

"His latest biographer gives good authority for his facts, but we are not yet wholly convinced."

Spec 140:942 Je 23 '28 180w

Times [London] Lit Sup p606 Ag 23 '28 200w

World Tomorrow 11:376 S '28 50w

ANDREWS, ANDREW IRVING. Ceramic tests and calculations. 172p $2.25 Wiley

666 Pottery—Formulae, tables, etc. Clay industries 28-4766

"Useful work giving directions and necessary factors for correct calculations. Assumes a knowledge of chemistry and algebra. Deals with clay tests and their calculation and interpretation, glazes, bodies, enamels, and glasses." —Pittsburgh Mo Bul

---

N Y New Tech Bks 13:16 Ap '28
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:631 D '28
St Louis 26:281 S '28

ANDREWS, CLARENCE EDWARD. Innocents of Paris. 280p il $2.50 (7s 6d) Appleton

914.436 Paris—Description. Paris—Social life and customs 28-7765

The book is dedicated to the grotesques on Notre Dame and contains mellow sketches of the grotesques of the Paris streets—street vendors, flower-girls, junk dealers, ancient restaurateurs, and the like. David Snodgrass illustrates these various types called by the author "the innocents of Paris."

"Here is a book that is as revelatory of the real Paris as any book on the city that has been written for several years. It is never trite or cursory or guide-booky or impertinent or touristy or antiquarian or dull or bombastic. It is no more than a series of ten chapters that contain the essence of a dozen or more aspects of Paris that are generally passed over by the tourist, but which are a part of the familiar life of the idling lover of Paris who makes it a point to scour the side street and odd corners."

ANDREWS, C. E:—Continued

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p6 Mr 25 '28 700w

Boston Transcript p3 Ag 11 '28 360w

"It is a readable and lively account, and though it shows no very deep knowledge of the French character, it is a genuine if romantic reflection of life in the poorer quarters of Paris. The places he describes will many of them be unfamiliar to English readers, even to those who have lived in Paris—the Flea Market, the cheap 'dancings' and café-bars."

+ — New Statesman 31:544 Ag 4 '28 380w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:587 N '28

"It is the forts aux Halles and their girls, the old-clothes and old-iron men out with their barrows or off duty in their cafés, the strange old men living in tiny, dusty antiquaries' or booksellers' shops in streets such as the Rue Bonaparte and its neighbours, whom he presents most attractively and convincingly. His methods vary; sometimes he gives us a little essay, sometimes a piece of obvious fiction, but both are with few exceptions equally true to life. This is a book which gives the reader a pleasant surprise; for he begins it feeling that it is going to be shallow and obvious, and finds before long that it is in fact almost profound as well as amusing."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p356 My 10 '28 430w

Wis Lib Bul 24:252 O '28

ANDREWS, MARIETTA MINNIGERODE (MRS ELIPHALET FRASER ANDREWS). My studio window; sketches of the pageant of Washington life. 450p il $5 Dutton

B or 92 Washington, D.C.—Biography. Washington, D.C.—Social life and customs 28-22397

Continuing the reminiscences begun in Memoirs of a poor relation (Book Review Digest, 1927) Mrs Andrews writes now of the busy friendly years in Washington after her marriage. Her own silhouettes of historic personages and of famous friends in Washington society illustrate the book.

"More truly and more entertainingly than most of those who write about Washington, Mrs. Andrews paints with sweeping brush, handing out the recipe for an excellent punch with the same generosity of spirit with which she mingles the famous and the obscure as they pass under her 'window' or sit by her hickory log fire." Anne Hard

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p15 N 25 '28 480w

"In her pageant of Washington life, the writer retails many interesting anecdotes, some of them not without humor and some of them not without importance. . . This large reservoir of historic material will please many a quiet-minded reader to whom vigor of presentation is not very important. . . It is an unquestionably successful book as far as it goes, and lily-white in its absence of scandal." J. R. S.

+ — Boston Transcript p6 O 13 '28 300w

"The book is marked by its broad-minded sympathy, its rich humanity, its imagination and courage and taste. It is the book of an artist and a writer who is also, in the wide and enduring sense of that sometimes misused word, an aristocrat. Mrs. Andrews has the understanding and the sanity, we surmise, to see life steadily and see it whole."

+ N Y Times p26 D 9 '28 500w

"Another delightful book of reminiscences. . . Good, gossipy stuff." Herschel Brickell

+ No Am 226:adv N '28 80w

"They are clever portraits after the manner of an earlier day."

+ R of Rs 78:34 O '28 40w

St Louis 26:389 D '28

"Her book is a lively chronicle, never very searching, always animated, that flits from one figure to another, stops now to discourse on hats and again, to recount the satisfactions of good descent, passes kindly judgment on most, and revealing light on a few, of the figures that have made Washington society, and is consistently good-humored and generally self-satisfied."

+ Sat R of Lit 5:384 N 17 '28 250w

Springf'd Republican p8 N 29 '28 540w

ANDREWS, WILLIAM ELLIOTT. Imagine my surprise! a travel-diary of a flapper-philosopher. 275p il $2 Stokes

817 28-8161

Four or five flappers with Aunt Maude in tow frolic thru Europe, picking up thrills and boy friends along with quantities of luggage posters and scrambled misinformation.

"If the humor does not always click, many should find entertainment in the meanderings abroad of Diane and her friends."

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 My 20 '28 80w

"The book is a little crude and synthetic in spots, but if you can forgive instances of that, highly satisfying on the whole." S. V. V. W.

+ — Boston Transcript p2 My 29 '28 400w

Cleveland Open Shelf p120 N '28

"The whole story of her trip with Flip, Lucie, Peg, Natalie, Prue and the harassed Aunt Maude makes fine reading for any traveler, past, future, or would-be. It is so perfectly a caricature of a certain typical but so far literarily neglected type of American girlhood that it is especially regrettable that the author, by allowing his heroine to indulge in misspellings and mangled history, lays himself open to the charge of writing 'another "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes" thing.' It is, on the contrary, worth reading for itself; and Diane could stand on her own merits as funny."

+ Ind 121:21 Jl 7 '28 140w

Springf'd Republican p7f Mr 25 '28 200w

ANGELL, ROBERT COOLEY. Campus; a study of contemporary undergraduate life in the American university. 239p $2.50 (10s 6d) Appleton

378.73 Students. Colleges and universities —United States 28-6562

A study of undergraduate life in the American university—athletics, fraternities and sororities, campus activities, recreation, problems of self-support, religion and class morale. The author, not far removed from his own undergraduate days, is assistant professor of sociology in the University of Michigan and his study is largely based on his observation of undergraduate life in that university.

"The book is a useful contribution to a field in which much sociological work remains to be done." M. H. Bickham

+ Am J Soc 34:566 N '28 200w

Booklist 24:346 Je '28

"His survey is notably competent and except for the patronizing note which pipes up now and again, he has presented a fair picture of our contemporary undergraduate life." C. B. P.

+ Boston Transcript p5 Je 9 '28 330w

Christian Century 45:577 My 3 '28 100w

Cleveland Open Shelf p71 Je '28

Reviewed by Christian Gauss

New Repub 57:170 D 26 '28 220w

"Professor Angell's book is based on intimate, first-hand observation and his discussion is so searching, so fair-minded, so willing to recognize the necessity of accepting the social changes a new age is bringing about that it must rank as one of the most important of recent studies of the educational scene."

+ N Y Times p18 Ap 1 '28 450w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:255 My '28

Pratt p13 autumn '28

"Discusses the whole question in a dispassionate, common-sense way. He has been trained in the appraisal of social problems and he is fortunately young enough to understand young people. The book has one defect which the author himself recognizes, namely, that so far as direct experience goes it is based on a single institution, the University of Michigan." F: P. Keppel

+ Sat R of Lit 4:906 My 26 '28 500w

"Moderation, combined with industry and sound sense, has resulted in a valuable study of a very interesting subject."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p498 Jl 5 '28 800w

Wis Lib Bul 24:157 My '28

ANTHONY, EDWARD. How to get rid of a woman; being an intimate record of the remarkable love affairs of Wilton Olmstedd, esq., man of the world and student of life, together with his revealing impressions of women and his amazing discoveries concerning the sex. 319p il $2 Bobbs

28-18758

A male Lorelei, beautiful but incredibly dumb, recalls with satisfaction the episodes of his busy love life. He counts them over one by one, the women he eluded and the Chicago widow who won him.

"Mr. Anthony's book provides light entertainment. It lacks the spontaneity and incisive punches that characterize the work of his fellow writer and contributor to 'Life,' Bob Benchley, but is well calculated to supply an hour or so of diversion."

Boston Transcript p6 Ag 22 '28 220w

"Mr. Anthony has adopted for the setting of Wilton Olmstedd's amorous adventures a form of humor which is no longer rare. In fact, since the notable popularity of Anita Loos, it is not so rare as one could desire. Unfortunately, Mr. Anthony cannot be conceded entire success. He has destroyed much of the humorous value of his story with obviousness and much of its narrative value with monotony."

— N Y Times p7 Ag 12 '28 300w

"The various types of girls whom Wilton meets, and their various but in every case equally effective ways of dismissing this great egotist, are cleverly described. As a very light piece of literature, this will be found diverting for an idle hour."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e O 14 '28 230w

ANTHONY, HAROLD ELMER. Field book of North American mammals. (Putnam's nature field bks.) 625p il $3.50 Putnam

599 Mammals—North America 28-15150

With many full page illustrations in color and black and white, and sketch maps and drawing thruout the text, this compact volume describes fully every species of mammals to be found in North America, north of the Rio Grande. This includes both land and water mammals.

Booklist 25:12 O '28

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p13 S 9 28 100w

Boston Transcript p5 Je 23 '28 130w

N Y Times p20 Je 24 '28 400w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:562 N '28

ARCHBOLD, WILLIAM ARTHUR JOBSON, ed. Twentieth-century essays and addresses. 235p $1.75 Longmans

824 English essays—Collections 27-23533

Contents: William Windham, by the Earl of Rosebery; The romantic movement, by Arthur Symons; Cloud castle, by Edward Thomas; De senectute, by Frederic Harrison; London life in the time of Addison, by Sir James Frazer; The British character, by George Santayana; The Gordon riots, by Austin Dobson; John Dryden and political satire, by Sir Walter Raleigh; John Stuart Mill, by Viscount Morley; The art of poetry, by Richard Aldington; The soul of a people, by Viscount Haldane; Edmund Burke, by J. C. Collins; On popularity, by Arthur Clutton-Brock; Sir Robert Peel by Augustine Birrell; The artless art of repartee, by Edward Sullivan.

"This is really a textbook for college students; but the general reader will find much that is amusing in the included essays and much that is instructive, for they are put together as examples of varying styles in English prose."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p15 F 5 '28 100w

N Y Evening Post p13 Mr 10 '28 50w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:163 Mr '28

Springf'd Republican p16 D 2 '27 80w

Times [London] Lit Sup p864 N 24 '27 1250w

ARDEN, MARY. Luck, and other stories. 255p $2 Day [7s 6d J. Cape]

28-17389

A first collection of the stories of a young English author. Contents: A charming old man; The casual acquaintance; The idealist; Daughters; Holiday time; Luck; The button; Eva; The play; Uncle Alfred; The stepmother; Between friends.

"They are excellent short stories, poignant, ironic or faintly humorous. In fact, they are individually delightful. They are so good that it seems hardly fair to remember 'The Garden Party' and the story about the woman on the boat whose litttle boy was dead. But the comparison is inescapable. The Arden stories have much the same methods as Katherine Mansfield's, and are about much the same kind of people. The difference is that Katherine Mansfield was a poet and a genius, and so far Mary Arden does not show that clairvoyant perception that set Katherine Mansfield apart." Elizabeth Wyckoff

+ — Bookm 67:214 Ap '28 250w

"A refreshingly keen talent and a ready and humorous appreciation of the kind of things men and women do and are, as apart from their profoundly complicated rationalizations, give to the work of a young English writer, Mary Arden, the value and often the vividness of pure intuition." Eugene Lohrke

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p14 Je 24 '28 350w

"Her themes are characters and episodes, difficult at best, but impossible unless the storyteller has vivid flashes of insight. In not one of these 255 pages does Miss Arden make her reader sit up and take notice."

— Boston Transcript p10 Mr 31 '28 120w

"These twelve carefully under-emphatic ironic tales will undoubtedly prove one of the most distinguished of the season's short-story collections." C. P. F.

+ Nation 126:355 Mr 28 '28 120w

"Miss Arden's observation is better than her writing; her stories, excellent in conception, are not worked out quite firmly enough in detail. What distinguishes her work from most 'good' fiction is that it is genuine. She works not on interesting ideas or situations, but on life, and there is nothing tired or second-hand either in her subject matter or her treatment." Edwin Muir

+ — Nation and Ath 41:20 Ap 9 '27 200w

"Miss Mary Arden does, and does brilliantly, the same thing for suburban London as Miss Suckow and Miss Ferber do for extra-metropolitan America." Naomi Royde-Smith

+ New Statesman 29:540 Ag 6 '27 180w

Reviewed by H. E. Dounce

N Y Evening Post p11 F 18 '28 550w

"Twelve stories, varying in length, told in a brisk, palpitating, photographic style, which it seems difficult to overestimate. No rib-ends or elbows of old-fashioned plot are discernible in these stories. They are slices of life. The art of omission is practiced to a striking degree. An odd mind-over-matter quality is frequently felt. The author never offers a solution to the mysteries depicted. Her triumph is in the fact that the interest is aroused and maintained at a high pitch."

ARDEN, MARY—Continued

+ N Y Times p10 F 19 '28 420w

"Young, as we are assured this English writer is, she displays an astonishing touch of maturity, an incisive understanding and insight, which is commonly looked upon as the property of age. Those who demand in short stories neat, symmetrical narratives that click to a climax will be disappointed with Miss Arden's work. Her method is loose and unconventional, her stories unfinished and left hanging in the air, and readers anxious to know 'how it comes out in the end' must supply the ending themselves. For the author it is enough that a situation, poignant or merely interesting, has been presented."

+ — N Y World p7m My 27 '28 160w
Pratt p40 autumn '27
Sat R of Lit 4:724 Mr 31 '28 180w

"Miss Arden is a new short-story writer of individual power and charm. Miss Arden has not yet attained the inevitability of the perfect artist. But she has a true instinct for the revealing trait or situation, and gifts of humour and sympathy that should carry her far."

+ Spec 138:608 Ap 2 '27 160w

"One may reasonably grow a little tired of the announcements which introduce this or that teller of short stories as the destined successor of Katherine Mansfield. The impression left by Luck, and Other Stories by Mary Arden is that in one way the comparison is more pertinent than usual."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p248 Ap 7 '27 350w

ARENDT, MORTON. Storage batteries; theory, manufacture, care and application. 285p il $4.50 Van Nostrand

621.354 Storage batteries 28-13176

"Practical work with historical introduction and a chapter on general theory followed by chapters on lead plates and their manufacture, sulphuric acid electrolyte, factors influencing capacity and efficiency, lead storage cell parts and assembly, installation, operation, maintenance, the nickel-iron-alkaline cell, testing, and applications. Only such theory as is actually necessary to account for reactions and cell characteristics has been considered. Author is Assistant Professor of Electrical Engineering, Columbia University."—N Y New Tech Bks

Booklist 25:13 O '28

"Material is logically, simply, and lucidly presented."

+ Ind & Eng Chem 20:1278 N '28 220w
N Y New Tech Bks 13:39 Jl '28
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:570 N '28

ARLEN, MICHAEL, pseud. (DIKRAN KUYUMJIAN). Lily Christine. 307p $2.50 Doubleday, Doran

28-31018

Lily Christine is a delightful person, wise, kind, intensely loyal and unselfish. She has also a sense of humor and is not in the least a prig. She is used to her big, lumbering young husband's derelictions with "pieces of nonsense" and knows how to deal with them. But the affair of Mrs Abbey is beyond her. Against this woman's bland hypocrisy and her husband's weak submission, neither the courage of Lily Christine nor the love of her friends can prevail.

"Despite its limitations and its superficiality, this neatly turned story has an idea and with it a much more genuine consideration of character than I recall in Mr. Arlen's earlier work. It shows that he can be intelligent as well as clever. The cleverness of Mr. Arlen, so heady at first quaff, becomes in long drinks as tedious and insipid as ginger-ale that has been left to stand in a warm room. This quieter book, after a rather annoyingly elliptic start, settles down with a promise of more durable versatility." Mary Ross

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p3 N 18 '28 900w

"If we look underneath the exaggerations, the pretensions and trivialities of this dextrously written story, we do observe a great deal of merciless and intelligent criticism of British social life, of its injustice, and its formidable hypocrisy. Mr. Arlen is not an expert gunner. He is proficient in the romantic pastime of archery. He is remorseless, but his weapons have only a measure of effectivness." D. F. G.

+ — Boston Transcript p6 N 14 '28 750w
New Repub 57:148 D 19 '28 180w

"All this might have been tragedy. But Michael Arlen can only adumbrate tragedy. Those glamorous phrases, the syrupy veil of his prose, makes it seem very far away. Where it ought to move one to a state not very far from tears, it leaves one saying, 'A sad story. But after all, what difference does it make? These people never really lived.' "

— N Y Times p6 N 18 '28 620w

"It would be idle to argue that in Mr. Arlen's latest novel he has altogether conquered his own irritating idiosyncrasies—his 'smartness' is constantly peeping out—but it can truly be said that 'Lily Christine' is the most dignified novel that he has yet written. . . It contains one charming, touching figure, it is very well-written, and it unfolds a drama, which, if improbable, is nevertheless impressive. And the final chapter, with its eloquent restraint and its unanswered, agonizing question, is masterly." R: Curle

+ Sat R of Lit 5:369 N 17 '28 580w

ARLETT, ADA HART. Psychology of infancy and early childhood. (McGraw-Hill euthenics ser.) 228p il $2 McGraw

136.7 Child study 28-13372

"A textbook for use in courses in child development in colleges and universities by a professor of child care and training in the University of Cincinnati who has herself contributed largely to the study of the pre-school child. The problems of children of that age are logically presented, including inheritance, common innate equipment, activities, tendencies and emotions, habit formation, sensation and perception, memory, imagination, thinking process, forms of expression, social attitudes and personality development, and individual differences. A brief list of references and class-exercises are given with each chapter."—J Home Econ

Booklist 25:52 N '28
J Home Econ 20:597 Ag '28 110w
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:551 N '28

ARMSTRONG, MARTIN DONISTHORPE. Lady Hester Stanhope. (Representative women) 180p $2 Viking press [3s 6d G. Howe]

B or 92 Stanhope, Lady Hester Lucy 28-15271

A well-written biography of the brilliant yet pathetic figure of Lady Hester Stanhope, who with the death of her uncle, William Pitt, and the end of her triumph over London society, sought to forget her griefs and disappointments in travel in Syria with a caravan of attendants.

Reviewed by Marguerite Harrison
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 Ag 26 '28 400w
Nation 127:232 S 5 '28 50w
New Statesman 30:214 N 26 '27 350w

"Mr. Armstrong has added nothing new to the mass of material already in book form concerning Lady Hester Stanhope. But he has selected from it with good judgment and has woven his material together into a very interesting and gorgeously colored narrative."
+ N Y Times p20 Je 17 '28 550w

"Mr. Martin Armstrong has given a vivid presentation of a woman large-hearted, determined and courageous, but one who compels our admiration rather than wins our affection."
+ Sat R 144:708 N 19 '27 520w
Sat R of Lit 4:991 Je 23 '28 130w
Spec 139:sup836 N 12 '27 50w
Times [London] Lit Sup p856 N 24 '27 200w
Wis Lib Bul 24:223 Jl '28

ARMSTRONG, MARTIN DONISTHORPE. Laughing; an essay. (Pleasures of life ser.) 87p $2 Harper [5s Jarrolds]

157 Laughter 28-10728

This essay explores the fruitful field of laughter as one of the pleasures of life, discussing its nature and varieties and its uses and abuses.

Booklist 24:382 Jl '28

"This book is a collection of pleasant conceits, written in light vein, with much amusing material as illustrations. Mr. Armstrong is not seemingly trying to say anything in particular, besides spreading the genial glow which laughter in general has for him." L. S. K.
+ — Boston Transcript p6 My 5 '28 300w

"It is not important, interesting or stimulating enough to justify attention from the busy man. It does not transcend its genesis as a book written to order, to take its place in a series. . . Martin Armstrong, the distinguished poet, becomes a merely graceful prosaist; the style lacks individual character and force. Little ideas are rolled on the tongue, small hints drawn out at length, commonplaces like 'rooted deep in our common nature' are resorted to and the reader is invited to join in the politest of afternoon tea smiles." Shaemas O'Sheel
— + N Y Evening Post p5 Jl 28 '28 380w
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:561 N '28

"Though Mr. Armstrong writes wisely and with wit, and we presume all that he says about the nature and habit of laughing is true, still, we think laughing one of the poorest of subjects to write about."
Sat R of Lit 5:173 S 29 '28 180w

ARMYTAGE, PERCY. By the clock of St James's. 370p il $5 Dutton [18s Murray]

B or 92 Great Britain—Court and courtiers 28-12564

Having been for many years Gentleman usher at the Court of St James, Mr Armytage fills his book with recollections of the pageantry of court functions, and of royal visitors from other lands. The illustrations are from photographs.

"A delightful assortment of reminiscences—vignettes of life at court as viewed from the intimate angle of one who has had much to do with its ceremonies."
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 Jl 8 '28 160w
Boston Transcript p2 F 18 '28 700w
Cleveland Open Shelf p102 S '28

Reviewed by P. W. Wilson
Outlook 148:477 Mr 21 '28 700w

"Mr Armytage's early memories range from Charles Kingsley, the novelist, to Mr. Gunter, famed in the far-off Victorian days as a maker of ices. His book will be read with equal pleasure and profit, not only by those who are interested in the details of Court ceremonial—a relatively small number, we suspect—but by those who are interested in human nature. And human nature, it seems, is not excluded from the Court of St. James's."
+ Sat R 144:98 Jl 16 '27 550w

"Descriptions of shows greater or smaller might well make dull reading, but somehow this book is far from dull. The writer manages to impart a very real sense of enjoyment, partly by a kind of literary telepathy which is not unfrequently found among inexperienced writers who have the gift of literary simplicity."
+ Spec 138:1025 Je 11 '27 680w
Springf'd Republican p10 F 22 '28 600w

"There is considerable variety of interest in Mr. Armytage's genial memoirs."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p421 Je 16 '27 1050w

ARNESON, BEN ALBERT. Elements of constitutional law. 371p $2.50 Harper

342.73 United States—Constitutional law. United States—Politics and government 28-3684

"Dr. Arneson has undertaken the task of preparing an 'elementary treatise on the law of the American Constitution' which he hopes will serve (1) as a text in 'liberal arts courses in constitutional law' and also (2) as a stimulating book for the general reader who may be 'interested in delving a little deeper into constitutional problems than does the average description of our governmental machine.' "—Am Pol Sci R

"It must be confessed that there are statements in the book which, for the student, might have been more useful if authority had been cited. Moreover, a greater use of court decisions could have been made. . . Notwithstanding the criticisms offered, the reviewer is of the opinion that Dr. Arneson has accomplished his task with remarkable accuracy and success. The book is packed with common sense." J: P. Senning
+ Am Pol Sci R 22:467 My '28 540w

"The book gives a clear, brief exposition of the American Constitution as it has been developed by the Supreme Court—a statement unhampered, so far as it is humanly possible, by erudite citations of cases. . . The book is a little too elementary for the college student. The unusual scarcity of case citations becomes for the student a fault rather than a virtue, and he misses also the suggestive criticism which he can find in an author such as Burdick." R. M. Dawson
+ — Ann Am Acad 137:262 My '28 120w
Boston Transcript p6 Ap 7 '28 200w
Wis Lib Bul 24:299 N '28

ARNOLD, JOHN. Murders in Surrey wood (Eng title Surrey wood mystery). 312p $2 Dutton [7s 6d H. Jenkins]

28-30706

At first Doctor Dick Henshaw was mighty cross because Professor Merrow wakened him on the night the body was found in Surrey Wood. Later he was very glad, for it led him into the wildest chase he ever had, and the life of a country doctor is bare of excitment as a rule. Robbery, kidnapping, murder and the disposal of surplus bodies; all were mixed up and Doctor Dick was in the thick of it.

Boston Transcript p5 D 22 '28 260w

"It is not particularly difficult to guess a part of the solution of the mystery or to fathom a part of the motives for the murders which take place, but enough new puzzles crop up from time to time to keep the reader interested up to the very end."
+ N Y Times p30 D 9 '28 140w

"We'd describe this one as fair to middling." W. R. Brooks
Outlook 150:1342 D 12 '28 120w
Springf'd Republican p7e N 25 '28 500w

"A smoothly running tale in which the next development is rarely very obvious."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p133 F 23 '28 100w

ARNOT, ROBERT PAGE. Soviet Russia and her neighbors. (Vanguard studies of Soviet Russia) 175p 50c Vanguard press

327.47 Russia—Foreign relations 27-24123

A study of the international relationships of Soviet Russia with the rest of the world, which is designed to give authoritative answer to such questions as "Why did Great Britain break her trade treaty with the Soviet government? What is the connection between Russia and the nationalist revolution in China? How does Russia feel about the United States? What are her policies regarding her near-eastern neighbors?" (Publisher's note)

Reviewed by F. R. Dulles
Bookm 66:573 Ja '28 150w

"The volume of the Vanguard Studies which is by far the most valuable to American readers is 'Soviet Russia and Her Neighbors.' The appendix contains the only complete chronology I have seen of the weird, almost farcical, history of the relations between the Soviets and the United States government. What is of arresting interest in the book is the spirit of certain prosaic international engagements entered into by the Soviets—the treaty with Persia, for example. If ever anything of this altruism has before found its way into the cynical archives of diplomacy, I have not heard of it." Paxton Hibben

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p3 N 13 '27 270w

Reviewed by P. H. Douglas
Christian Century 45:314 Mr 8 '28 120w

Educ R 76:31 Je '28 230w

Reviewed by Stuart Chase
— Nation 126:157 F 8 '28 130w

Reviewed by Herbert Solow
N Y Evening Post p13 Ja 7 '28 200w

Reviewed by J. G. McDonald
Survey 60:301 Je 1 '28 180w

"Soviet Russia and Her Neighbors deals with the foreign relations of the U.S.S.R. Professor Dennis has done it previously on a more elaborate scale. Still this little book of 175 pages sketches very well the outline of that strange story, of which the last chapter is by no means written." H. C. E.

World Tomorrow 11:183 Ap '28 220w

ASBURY, HERBERT. Gangs of New York; an informal history of the underworld. 382p il $4 (18s) Knopf

364 Gangs. Crime and criminals—New York (city). New York (city)—Social conditions
28-10023

A lively account of the wicked days of old New York when the gangsters of the Bowery and the Tenderloin earned their infamous reputations in hearty defiance of the law. The chronicle closes with the rise of the police and the fall of the gang as the result of the Becker-Rosenthal case of recent memory.

"Mr. Asbury protests that he is writing no sociological treatise. If his book be compared to such as Dr. Frederick Thrasher's The Gang, it will be seen that he is, strictly speaking, correct. But he has written an immensely more readable book than Thrasher's; one devours its pages eagerly as though it were thrill-laden fiction rather than fact. . . One wonders exactly how accurate its sources may be. The general reader, however, need not worry, for he has before him a work of immense interest whether the multifarious details of skull-cracking, bloodletting and general devilishness be minutely exact or not." D. L. Hunt

+ Ann Am Acad 139:215 S '28 460w

Booklist 24:384 Jl '28

"He writes well and is a careful fact gatherer. If anyone is interested in the New York that was, Mr. Asbury will bring it back to him." D. C. Seitz

Bookm 67:447 Je '28 450w

"Herbert Asbury's underworld is an underworld, and not a region of heroes. The stage and the screen will look to it in vain for the broken-hearted gentlemen who turn to crime out of a frustrate goodness, and there practice honor among thieves, punctilio toward their victims, and eloquence upon the world at large. The book has been written by a newspaper man who does not mind denying himself the pleasure of melodrama." Carl Van Doren

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p3 Ap 1 '28 1250w

"An account fully as interesting as any bit of crime fiction that you can think of." S. H.

+ Boston Transcript p7 Ap 14 '28 1150w

"A great deal of research, if not of scholarship, has gone into the making of this horrible book. Horrible because this veridical history deals not only with continuous battle, murder, and sudden death, with bestial cruelty and brutality and degradation, but also with a continuous story of political corruption and vile exploitation by Tammany of the community it governed."

Ind 120:437 My 5 '28 100w

"The volume, as the author remarks, 'is not a sociological treatise, and makes no pretence of offering solutions for the social, economic and criminological problems presented by the gangs.' As a matter of fact, it does not even discuss these problems; it merely tells the story of the more spectacular gangsters, with a quantity of picturesque detail which is its sole and sufficient reason for existence." Malcolm Cowley

New Repub 55:74 Je 6 '28 150w

New Statesman 31:368 Je 23 '28 80w

Reviewed by J: R. Chamberlain
N Y Times p3 Ap 29 '28 1500w

"This is a fine piece of historical writing, and as full of interest to any lover of the picaresque as any one has the right to ask." Herschel Brickell

+ No Am 225:adv Je '28 150w

"Mr. Asbury's work is historically important. . . A book for a permanent place on any shelf, and one that should be read with keen interest before taking its place there for reference." Russell Crouse

+ Outlook 149:34 My 2 '28 420w

Pratt p13 autumn '28

Sat R 146:24 Jl 7 '28 130w

"One of the best American books of its kind. Mr. Asbury writes in a direct and engaging manner; he refuses to deal in that travesty on learning which passes, in some books, by the name of psychological analysis. He writes that he does not aim 'to interpret and analyze the gangster in the modern I-think-he-thought manner.' Instead, he tells the story of the New York underworld for the past century, and his narrative is excellently presented in a book adorned with amusing pictures from the old weeklies and newspapers." Edmund Pearson

+ Sat R of Lit 4:821 Ap 28 '28 480w

"New World monkeys differ from Old World monkeys; and though New York was not an exception among big cities in breeding lawbreakers in its slums, the species developed there was marked by distinctive features. In tracing these the reader can find justification, if he wants one, for interesting himself in the monkey tricks set out by Mr. Asbury—monkey tricks described with point, gusto, and a sense of proportion that makes them entertaining reading in themselves."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p372 My 17 '28 800w

Wis Lib Bul 24:219 Jl '28

World Tomorrow 11:348 Ag '28 30w

ASBURY, HERBERT. Tick of the clock. 206p $2 Vanguard press

28-5643

Having set the stage of the murder and gathered all the suspects on the scene of the crime, the Inspector proceeds to trap the guilty

one into a confession. This he does by "the tick of the clock."

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p18 F 26 '28 120w

"There is a matter-of-fact, honest-to-goodness veristic ease about Mr. Asbury's tale which conveys the illusion of truth and whets one's curiosity as to the solution. And the author scores in so much as he presents a genuine enigma. With as good a mystery as he has up his sleeve in this instance, it is not necessary to make a parade of its elusiveness in the telling." F: H. Martens
+ N Y Evening Post p12 F 25 '28 360w

"This is, essentially, just another good reliable detective story done in the usual manner, though there are minor innovations here and there."
+ — N Y Times p11 F 19 '28 380w

"It may be described as a rattling good yarn, all things considered, which moves rapidly from a sensational beginning to a quite plausible and ingenious conclusion." Vincent Starrett
+ N Y World p10m Mr 4 '28 140w

"A very second-rate detective story."
— Sat R of Lit 4:707 Mr 24 '28 100w

"As far as the mechanics of mystery novel writing go, 'The Tick of the Clock' is a good specimen of the kind. The author does not fall down in a single requirement."
Springf'd Republican p7f Mr 18 '28 250w

ASBURY, HERBERT, ed. Not at night! 386p $2 [2] Vanguard press

Short stories—Collections 28-23870

A collection of gruesome short stories originally printed in England in "Weird tales." The authors are little known in this country; the stories are chosen not for literary merit but for their success in producing cold chills and goose flesh.

"A sinking feeling is likely to be induced by swallowing the volume whole. Take as needed." Will Cuppy
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 N 18 '28 130w

"The stories included are chosen not for any literary merit they may posses, or lack of it, but rather for their ability to make one's hair stand on end from as many angles as possible. They embody every degree of gruesomeness. They are scientific, pseudo-scientific, hyper-scientific. Their settings range from medical laboratories to slimy swamps; their characters from voodoos to maniacs. All are motivated by some unspeakable abnormality. They may delight a certain taste, but the average person will be satisfied to take them in small doses, if at all."
Boston Transcript p4 D 5 '28 130w

" 'Not At Night' is a collection of twenty-five tales of horror, some of which might please a ghoulish reader, if he were able to forget the unnecessary and damaging introduction by Mr. Herbert Asbury, who tells, in a kittenish manner, the tricks of the hack-writer of horribilia." T. S. Matthews
+ — New Repub 57:200 Ja 2 '29 150w

"This book is, most certainly only for those rare and fortunate beings whose nerves are nonexistent. The stories that this book is made up of are horrible beyond description, exceeding Poe and the French masters at their most lurid. Some of the stories are well written and possible, some are grossly improbable, but all are too vivid for pleasure."
— + N Y Times p36 N 25 '28 300w

ASHBEE, CHARLES ROBERT. Caricature. (Universal art ser.) 187p il $8 Scribner [21s Chapman & H.]

741 Caricature [28-18818]

"In the course of the work caricature is surveyed from many angles: in its relation to the mimetic sense, to technique, to freedom, to grossness, to the creation of types, to costume. The temperaments, aims and accomplishments of many of the world's masters of caricature and high comedy—from Peter Breughle the Elder to Cesare—are studied sympathetically. The final chapter, devoted to caricature and modern art, is pungently controversial."—N Y Times

Booklist 25:17 O '28
Nation and Ath 43:558 Jl 28 '28 2100w

"Mr. Ashbee's book is desultory and unsystematic, a causerie rather than a thesis. Mr. Ashbee avoids consecutive history and his criticism is mostly ad hoc; his text being conveniently close in reference to his many and well chosen (but not very well printed) illustrations. At the end of his book is a long list of caricaturists, which contains a large number of obscure names but not, to take a few various and outstanding examples, those of Dighton, Toulouse-Lautrec, Beardsley, Poulbot or Low."
— + New Statesman 31:336 Je 15 '28 220w

"A book that embraces the subject in affectionately impressionistic style; a book obviously prepared con amore. Often the writing is not very clear; yet it is impossible to miss this author's attitude of genuine connoisseurship, and many of his observations invite thoughtful consideration. . . Mr. Ashbee's method of handling this subject frequently obscures where patently it seeks only to make clear. This seems to be due to a faulty arrangement; a failure to take up one distinct phase at a time and see it straight through. A reader who desires a wholly coherent plan will have himself to weed and assort and piece together." E: A. Jewell
+ — N Y Times p4 Jl 8 '28 1600w

"From internal evidence it would seem that Mr. Ashbee's book was compiled some years ago. It embodies, for example, a list of caricaturists based on one in an issue of the 'Encyclopædia Britannica,' which has long been obsolete, and the author not only omits any reference to some of the younger men, British and foreign, both of a popular and a narrow range of esteem, but to such masters of caricature as Isabey, Pellegrini ('Ape' of Vanity Fair), Spy, Léandre, Sem, and others; just as his bibliography fails to include indispensable writers on the subject. . . .The author's knowledge may well be called encyclopædic, but, the encyclopædia was out of date."
— Sat R 145:774 Je 16 '28 820w

"In general the book may be cordially recommended to collectors or students of caricature who have passed the accumulative and aspire to enter the critical stage of their hobby."
+ Sat R of Lit 5:559 D 29 '28 200w

"Mr. Ashbee surveys the whole field of caricature from the earliest times to the present day, illustrating his points with plentiful and well-chosen illustrations."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p353 My 10 '28 820w

ASHBROOK, FRANK GETZ. Fur-farming for profit. (Rural science ser.) 300p il $4 Macmillan

636.9 Fur-bearing animals 28-8909

Fur farming, tho a new industry, has already become an important one in the United States. This illustrated story of the industry covers the breeding and marketing of fur-bearing animals of every kind, giving an exhaustive account of fox farming, and brief but comprehensive accounts of the raising of other animals. The author is in charge of the Division of fur resources, United States biological survey.

Booklist 24:387 Jl '28

"Excellent volumes are in existence describing the methods of raising specific animals, especially the silver fox, but no one volume has been so inclusive and accurate." H. A. Innis
+ Canadian Hist R 9:182 Je '28 110w
J Home Econ 20:444 Je '28 40w
N Y New Tech Bks 13:18 Ap '28
Wis Lib Bul 24:220 Jl '28

ASHBY, DOUGLAS. Things seen in Switzerland in summer. (Things seen ser.) 158p il $1.50 Dutton

914.94 Switzerland—Description and travel [28-13384]

This illustrated guide book to the beauties and pleasures of the Alps in summertime is a companion volume to Domville-Fife's "Things seen in Switzerland in winter." (Book Review Digest, 1925).

Booklist 24:396 Jl '28
Pratt p33 autumn '28
Springf'd Republican p7f Jl 1 '28 120w

ASHLEY, SIR WILLIAM JAMES. Bread of our forefathers; an inquiry in economic history. 206p il $4.25 (12s 6d) Oxford

338.1 Bread. Grain trade—Great Britain. Agriculture—Great Britain [28-18753]

"The question of the kinds of grain our forefathers used for breadmaking proves on examination, to be 'intimately bound up with some of the most fundamental problems of our economic and social history.' By the end of the eighteenth century, wheat was firmly established as the universal bread grain in England, at a time when the commoners of other northern races still ate rye. . . It is clear from the old records, both civil and ecclesiastical, that wheat and rye bread early became the symbols of social position, rye being the staple food of the commoners, wheat that of the aristocracy or overlords. In England the change in the balance from rye to wheat was much influenced by the interest in the land taken by the lords of the manors."—Nature

Boston Transcript p4 S 1 '28 350w
Nature 121:858 Je 2 '28 500w

"On the whole, this is a learned and fair-minded inquiry into a significant subject." N. S. B. Gras
+ — Sat R of Lit 5:19 Ag 4 '28 570w

"His general propositions are most skilfully and attractively worked out, with a mass of evidence from printed and unprinted sources. Ashley's last book thus throws new light on English social history and points the way to fuller research into a most interesting problem."
+ Spec 140:772 My 19 '28 380w

"In this last work Sir William Ashley has left a fine study of the kind he did so much to promote, a blending of economic history and antiquarian research, which will be a delight to all who care to read of the past and of the ways of our forefathers. . . The author's learning is marked on every page, and is combined with an attractive modesty when he ventures into regions—antiquarian and agricultural—which are not strictly his province."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p178 Mr 15 '28 1100w

ASHTON, MARY GRACE. Race; a novel of marriage. 320p $2.50 Stokes

28-20840

Ivan Schenstein is the son of a rich Jewish father and a Christian mother whose whole married life has been spent in secret rebellion against the sacrifice of her own race and religion. Ivan has been brought up in more or less orthodox fashion but does not take his religion as seriously as his father's people. He falls in love with a Christian girl, a Catholic like his mother. Unlike Ivan's mother Anne will not renounce her religion. Matters are at a deadlock between them until Ivan learns to understand and accept Anne's point of view.

"A novel by an eighteen-year-old girl is a strange thing. Miss Ashton's novel is as strange as any: the pompous and bombastic writing, the exact analysis that astonishes, coming from one so young; the lack of humor and the 'procession of fine, high ideals,' they are all here." R. E. Larsson
Bookm 68:242 O '28 150w
Boston Transcript p8 S 15 '28 150w

"A clever if rather disagreeable and unsympathetic picture of Jewish interiors in London." R. H.
New Repub 56:283 O 24 '28 50w

" 'Race,' subtitled a 'Novel of Marriage,' is the precociously and amazingly mature production of an eighteen-year-old English girl. The story itself grows better as the sociological burden lightens, and, but for a style lacking in color and variety, it might deserve to be called a successful romance."
+ — N Y Times p7 Ag 26 '28 700w
Sat R of Lit 5:384 N 17 '28 480w

ASHTON, WINIFRED. See Dane, C., pseud.

ASHTON-WOLFE, H. Warped in the making; crimes of love and hate. 323p il $2.50 Houghton [18s Hurst & B.]

364 Crime and criminals 28-9543

These are true stories of crimes investigated and criminals discovered by the Paris Sûreté with which the author, an Englishman, was associated as assistant photographer to Dr Bertillon.

"Several excellent stories of crime and one, at least, that is superb, 'The Murder of Don Ramon.' This last is a classic, one of the most remarkable accounts in criminal records."
+ Bookm 67:xvii Jl '28 110w

"His book is advertised as 'more fascinating than fiction' because it is true. In itself that is no recommendation. Detective stories are breath-taking for being done with art, and Mr. Ashton-Wolfe's book is breath-taking for being done with art." Donald Douglas
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p18 Je 3 '28 830w
Cleveland Open Shelf p77 Je '28

Reviewed by E. B. Barrett
N Y Evening Post p6 Je 9 '28 350w

"All of the tales seem to be accurately recounted except for an occasional and quite allowable heightening of tone. Nor do they need much aid from the teller to make them as gripping and haunting as any fiction. For they deal with the starkest and most powerful of human passions and emotions, and they keep the reader absorbed in the eternal drama between the criminal and the hound on his trail."
+ N Y Times p17 Jl 29 '28 450w

"Mr. Ashton-Wolfe is one of those writers who prefer to present fact so that it sounds like fake. The chapters are written in the style adapted for the readers of a Hearst Sunday newspaper." Edmund Pearson
Sat R of Lit 4:821 Ap 28 '28 110w

Reviewed by Leon Whipple
Survey 60:398 Jl 1 '28 130w
Times [London] Lit Sup p135 F 23 '28 90w

ASPINALL, ALGERNON EDWARD. Wayfarer in the West Indies. (Wayfarer ser.) 244p il $3 Houghton [7s 6d Methuen]

917.29 West Indies—Description and travel [28-13118]

The secretary of the West India committee is author of this new volume in the Wayfarer series. It is full of information relating to the West Indies, of general and historical import, and contains besides the many illustrations, a sketch map and an index.

Booklist 24:396 Jl '28

Reviewed by A. B. Maurice
Bookm 67:459 Je '28 90w
N Y Evening Post p9 Jl 7 '28 70w

"When Mr. Aspinall writes a book about the West Indies, that book may safely be read and digested. It will give pleasure, and, what is more rare in books, there will be no ill after-effects when the reader visits the places the book tells about. Mr. Aspinall knows his Indies, as was amply established in his excellent 'West Indian Tales of Old.' 'A Wayfarer in the West Indies' is chockful of the Tropics, of spices of sugar and of palms, and never does the reader lose sight or sound of the blue Caribbean." A. E. Dingle

+ N Y World p8m My 13 '28 280w

"Now that the West Indies are becoming increasingly a tourist resort, the number of readers who will feel grateful for this easy, urbane description by a thoroughly informed guide will grow greater with each passing year."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p135 F 23 '28 280w

Wis Lib Bul 24:222 Jl '28

ASQUITH, LADY CYNTHIA MARY EVELYN (CHARTERIS). Duchess of York; an intimate & authentic life-story including many details hitherto unpublished, told with the personal approval of her royal highness. 228p il $3 Lippincott [7s 6d Hutchinson]

B or 92 York, Elizabeth Bowes Lyon, duchess of

The life-story of the Duchess of York, daughter-in-law of the King and Queen of England is here told, with due emphasis on all its romantic elements and the charms of her personality. A series of photographs picture the Duchess from her earliest childhood to today.

"The most laborious research, Lady Cynthia says, has failed to discover any redeeming faults in the Duchess who had, among all her other advantages in childhood, the luck to be the youngest but one of ten children playing round Glamis Castle and other places in Scotland. There are no fewer than sixty-six illustrations."

New Statesman 31:770 S 29 '28 130w

"The book tells the story of the Duchess' twenty-eight years in a simple and readable fashion, after the author has explained that she cannot offer the high-lights of contrasts in character because she can find only good things to say. . . All the picture of her family life, too, is charming. And the book is very well illustrated."

+ N Y Times p26 N 18 '28 460w

Spec 141:334 S 15 '28 430w

"Readers will enjoy this simple account of the life of a charming and gracious lady, her childhood and youth, engagement, marriage, and motherhood, not forgetting the work which it has fallen to her to do for the Empire."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p649 S 13 '28 50w

ASQUITH, LADY CYNTHIA MARY EVELYN (CHARTERIS), comp. Black cap; new stories of murder and mystery. 334p $2 Scribner [7s 6d Hutchinson]

Diversified stories of murder and mystery by well-known writers. Contents: Shall we join the ladies? by J. M. Barrie; The killing-bottle, by L. P. Hartley; An unrecorded instance, by Mrs Belloc Lowndes; A considerable murder, by Barry Pain; The tarn, by Hugh Walpole; The Islington mystery, by Arthur Machen; Circumstantial evidence, by Edgar Wallace; The prince, by W. B. Maxwell; The smile of Karen, by Oliver Onions; The lovely lady by D. H. Lawrence; The hospital nurse, by Shane Leslie; Telling, by Elizabeth Bowen; Footprints in the jungle, by W. S. Maugham; The lovely voice, by Lady Cynthia Asquith.

"By far the best collection of murder and mystery tales that I have encountered; almost every story in the collection is absorbing and a few are minor masterpieces." B. R. Redman

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 Ap 22 '28 100w

N Y Evening Post p9 My 26 '28 100w

"The short stories, of which this book is composed, have varied and distinguished authorship, but they show signs of strain, as though the writers were scourging themselves to become obediently bloody, bold, and resolute."

Sat R 144:590 O 29 '27 470w

"The selection of stories show that the compiler's preference was for the whimsical and ironical rather than for the frankly thrilling in the mystery and detective field of literature."

Springf'd Republican p7f Je 24 '28 170w

Wis Lib Bul 24:254 O '28

ASQUITH, LADY CYNTHIA MARY EVELYN (CHARTERIS), ed. Treasure cave. 144p il $2 Scribner [6s Jarrolds]

808.8

A second collection of verse and prose for children similar in style and format to other volumes edited by Lady Cynthia Asquith.

N Y Times p28 N 11 '28 100w

Reviewed by M. B. Gray

Sat R of Lit 5:482 D 8 '28 180w

Springf'd Republican p7e D 16 '28 70w

ATHERTON, MRS GERTRUDE FRANKLIN (HORN). Jealous gods; a processional novel of the fifth century, B.C. (concerning one Alcibiades) (Eng title Vengeful gods). 452p $2.50 Liveright [7s 6d Murray]

Alcibiades—Fiction 28-25179

The story of Alcibiades and Tiy, daughter of the Pharaohs, a queenly, brilliant, enigmatic woman who came to Athens from Egypt on an errand of her own. Alone among women she was Alcibiades' equal; she was to him friend, antagonist, his comrade in war, and after years of stormy history, his wife. Then at last her mission to Athens was fulfilled.

Reviewed by A. B. Parsons

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p5 N 18 '28 950w

Reviewed by W: E. Harris

Boston Transcript p3 N 17 '28 1650w

"This is a competent, slow-moving historical novel of the period just following the Periclean Age."

Nation 127:665 D 12 '28 110w

"Mrs. Atherton has told this story with considerable knowledge of the period and a careful attention to archaeological detail; but, although the story is interesting enough in its way, it never quite convinces."

— + New Statesman 32:200 N 17 '28 120w

"Structurally it is a competently executed novel on a grand scale. Historically it is based upon unimpeachable sources. Combining the popular features of the Loeb classics with the literary accomplishments of the author of 'Black Oxen,' it is as instructively interesting a story as you will currently come across."

+ N Y Times p6 O 28 '28 500w

"About 'The Jealous Gods' there is a mist of unreality which neither excellent writing nor thorough knowledge can dissipate."

— + Outlook 150:1256 N 28 '28 450w

"Like its forerunner, Vengeful Gods is conceived upon a generous scale, and is at once an exciting tale and an absorbing panorama, reflecting, learnedly yet lightly, almost every aspect of Greek life in the days of its glory."

+ Spec 141:797 N 24 '28 60w

"The book is a fine piece of imaginative reconstruction and insight."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p33 N 29 '28 500w

ATKEY, BERTRAM. Midnight mystery. 231p $2 Appleton

28-6769

Prosper Fair—the Duke of Devizes incognito—camps near a wood at Wolf's Hold. In the night a rider thunders by leaving behind a prehistoric axe head covered with blood. At midnight a girl is shot and killed in the woods. Being on the spot Prosper is questioned regarding the two mysteries and discovering that one of them concerns his cousin Lady Crystal and her fiancé Alan Byrne, he stays to seek a solution.

"A literate and humorously engaging tome." Will Cuppy

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 Mr 25 '28 130w

"Though there is a love story running through the book, it is Prosper, the whimsical, the vagabond duke, who charms us with his personality, his generosity, and his love for his 'little friends,' the elephant, the dog and the donkey, and with his quaint sayings and his clever intuition makes the tale something more than the ordinary run of detective stories."

+ Boston Transcript p10 Mr 31 '28 180w

"For the plot, it's well enough. There is plenty of action and an interesting cast of characters. Atkey has an individual touch in his narration, enjoys his writing, and spreads glamour. The detective-story addict should give him space on the shelf. His sentimentality is offset by a sense of humor."

+ — Sat R of Lit 4:724 Mr 31 '28 150w

Springf'd Republican p7f Ap 1 '28 120w

Times [London] Lit Sup p669 S 20 '28 260w

ATKINS, GAIUS GLENN. Reinspecting Victorian religion; a back to normal critique; being the Samuel Harris lectures on literature and life given at Bangor theological seminary in nineteen hundred and twenty-eight. 151p $1.75 (7s 6d) Macmillan

821 Browning, Robert. Tennyson, Alfred Tennyson, 1st baron. Religion in literature

28-22175

Dr Atkins turns to the poetry of Browning and Tennyson for this exposition of the religion of the Victorians, for "these two men between them brought a range and depth of thought and feeling to the spiritual interpretation of life which I think cannot be matched in any poetry." Dr Atkins is Professor of homiletics at Auburn theological seminary.

"Out of 'Cleon,' 'Idylls of the King,' 'In Memoriam,' 'Abt Vogler,' 'Saul,' and 'The Ring and the Book,' he weaves a five-act drama of life, creating a definitive picture of spiritual struggle from frustration and doubt to faith and redemption. With quiet humor and sympathetic insight he has brought together from their poems what may be called the religious autobiographies of these great Victorians." Gilbert Loveland

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p26 N 25 '28 100w

"The book is successfully done, inasmuch as the writer's dramatic sense is sufficient to control his moral earnestness and to prevent him from merely producing a sermon. The book shows optimism, religious energy." A. H. S.

+ Boston Transcript p2 O 3 '28 580w

AUBREY-FLETCHER, HENRY LANCELOT (HENRY WADE, pseud.). Missing partners. 331p $2 Payson & Clarke [7s 6d Constable]

28-19959

James and Charles Morden were cousins and partners in a London shipping firm. When the two disappeared simultaneously and later the badly battered body of James Morden was found in the Thames, Charles was judged to be the murderer. But Charles returned from America, went to jail and eventually proved his innocence. Then the police had to hunt down other clues and found—the guilty party.

Reviewed by C: M. Purdy

Bookm 68:233 O '28 150w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 Ag 26 '28 80w

"The intrusion of the amateur detective element is, as usual, unconvincing. Nevertheless, it is a good and gripping story."

+ — New Statesman 31:492 Jl 21 '28 40w

"It gets off to a slow start with the reader wondering rather boredly if Charles really did do James in, but the tempo increases rapidly without sacrifice of credibility until the surprising finale. A completely logical plot, but you won't guess the answer without help." W. R. Brooks

+ — Outlook 149:717 Ag 29 '28 80w

"An ingeniously complicated story, that might, however, well have dispensed with certain irritating facetious touches."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p381 My 17 '28 110w

AUBRY, OCTAVE. The emperor falls in love; tr. from the French by Henry Longan Stuart. 304p $2.50 (7s 6d) Harper

Napoléon I, emperor of the French—Fiction

28-5536

The romance of Napoleon and Josephine told by a popular French novelist. It introduces Napoleon at the outset of his career and leaves him during the Egyptian campaign, when he has become convinced of Josephine's infidelity.

"This excellently written volume furnished irrefragable testimony as to Josephine's worthlessness and to the patience and sweetness of Napoleon toward the woman he adored. The reader who can steel his heart against Bonaparte, seizing time amid the fall of shrapnel and din of war to write tender missives to her must be obdurate indeed."

+ Bookm 67:xxxv My '28 110w

"M. Octave Aubry knows his craft. In comparison with this little book, most of the historical romances and romanced histories which are flooding the American market seem decidedly crude. The translation, although not literally inspired, is well above the average. Careless proof-reading is the most glaring sin." Albert Guerard

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p16 Mr 25 '28 850w

Cleveland Open Shelf p67 My '28

N Y Evening Post p9 My 19 '28 100w

"His account will seem to many readers—those who regard Bonaparte as a hero and a genius, and alike those who see him as the pawn of circumstances—to be singularly unfaithful to the psychological probabilities. In part, the fault seems to be one of incapacity. It requires genius to depict genius convincingly, and Octave Aubry seems to have slight claim to any such exalted description. He cannot come close enough to his subject."

— N Y Times p12 Mr 4 '28 280w

Reviewed by Raphael M'Cord

N Y World p11m Mr 11 '28 60w

"Effectively to handle the vast throng of figures that inevitably crowd the broad canvas of an historical novel is a task not without difficulty. Octave Aubry possesses both the above gift and a sound dramatic instinct, the two prime requisites in an author of the historical novel."

+ Sat R of Lit 5:27 Ag 4 '28 460w

AUBRY, OCTAVE. On the king's couch; tr. by Evelyn Johnson. 250p $2.50 Boni & Liveright

27-23448

This is the romanticized history of Anne Roman, an obscure young girl of Grenoble, whose beauty made instant conquest of Casanova and, in due time, of Louis XV of France, so that its youthful possessor became the preferred mistress of the king and the successful rival of Mme de Pompadour.

Reviewed by Parker Tyler
Bookm 66:705 F '28 100w

"It is easy reading; a picturesque, somewhat flowery and rococo sentimentalized presentation of an incident in the round of (borrowing Maurice Hewlett's phrase) the 'stickier pleasures' of the master of Parc-aux-Cerfs." F: H. Martens

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p16 Ja 15 '28 550w

Boston Transcript p2 Ja 7 '28 250w

Cleveland Open Shelf p68 My '28

"Weak and mediocre novel. All in all, the book is a failure."

— Living Age 334:186 Ja 15 '28 200w

"A light-hearted, witty, agreeable risqué piece of entertainment."

+ No Am 225:adv Ja '28 50w

"While far from a masterpiece of the genre, yet will serve. It is not too cheap to be readable, nor too inaccurate to be worthless as a picture of the period. It bespeaks the workman who understands his work throughout, if never the artist."

Sat R of Lit 5:538 Ja 21 '28 250w

AUGUR, pseud. See Poliakoff, V.

AULD, GEORGE PERCIVAL. Dawes plan and the new economics; with foreword by Rufus C. Dawes. 317p $2.50 Doubleday, Doran

336.3 European war, 1914-1918—Reparations. Finance—Germany. Economic conditions 27-25563

From 1920-1924 Mr Auld was accountant general of the Reparation commission, and later assisted Mr Owen D. Young in installing the Dawes plan. He therefore writes with authority of the making of the Dawes plan, the plan in operation, and of the outlook for its continued success.

Reviewed by H. E. Fisk
Am Econ R 18:90 Mr '28 1750w

Booklist 24:233 Mr '28

"An extraordinarily effective piece of controversial writing. His sympathies in respect of both the political and the economic aspects of reparation controversies are mostly with the French and are markedly anti-British." A. A. Young

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p3 Ja 29 '28 1200w

"Mr. Auld brings the economic side of the peace very ably into focus, but the moment he touches upon political or social matters he seems hopelessly at sea and occasionally reveals an abysmal misconception of European institutions and ideals. His picture of the world economic machine is one of the most brilliant essays of its kind that this reviewer has read; and the extent of the damage caused to Europe by the war and the extent to which its paralysis has made the United States the greatest financial power on earth are admirably illustrated, even though it is not always possible to agree with the reasoning." T. J. C. Martyn

+ — N Y Times p3 F 19 '28 1400w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:200 Ap '28

"We recommend this book to the American business man whose confidence may have been disturbed by the Keynes clamor."

+ R of Rs 77:14 F '28 140w

Spec 140:581 Ap 14 '28 150w

"Mr. Auld's exposition of his view is at times somewhat vigorous, to put it mildly; he dislikes the 'new Economists,' and regards them as dangerous logic-chopping partisans. But his reasoning is clear, and his conclusions deserve sympathetic study. For nothing is more certain than that if the Dawes Plan is prematurely challenged, we shall have to face a new series of European quarrels which would be most dangerous for peace."

+ Spec 140:650 Ap 28 '28 650w

"A timely and important book."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p419 Je 7 '28 1680w

Wis Lib Bul 24:18 Ja '28

AULNOY, MARIE CATHERINE JUMELLE DE BERNEVILLE, comtesse d'. White cat, and other old French fairy tales; arr. by Rachel Field. 150p il $3.50 Macmillan

Fairy tales

Five fairy tales of the Comtesse D'Aulnoy, retold by Rachel Field and charmingly illustrated by E. MacKinstry.

"These eighteenth century tales of Mme. d'Aulnoy's are sheer invention, as gay, as deliciously and conscienceless extravagant as the ruffled, flower-decked and exquisitely bouffant costumes of the same period in the pictures. The child to whom you read these stories will not sit hushed, absorbed, peering into another world, but will wiggle and interrupt with squeals of delight, and beg to see again the White Cat in all her finery, or to hear once more about the tiny dog in the walnut shell." D. P. Lathrop

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p8 D 9 '28 680w

"Charming book. Miss MacKinstry's skill is unquestionable. Her full-page illustrations have the romantic, rather bloodless grace that is in the tradition of seventeenth century France. The tales themselves are old favorites." Ruth Seinfel

+ N Y Evening Post p9m D 29 '28 320w

"To anyone steeped, as Elizabeth MacKinstry is, in the spirit and atmosphere of eighteenth century France, the d'Aulnoy tales are a perfect vehicle; one can readily see how their wit, grace, and delicate sophistication would be irresistible. They are of the essence of a civilization to which Miss MacKinstry's own work dates back in spirit and inspiration. The little occasional drawings are delightful as the color pages, and shape, size, and type have been chosen to make a well-balanced and harmonious book." Margery Bianco

+ Sat R of Lit 5:558 D 29 '28 300w

AULT, NORMAN, comp. and ed. Seventeenth century lyrics; from the original texts. (English lyrics) 524p $3.50 (10s 6d) Longmans

821.08 English poetry—Collections. Lyric poetry 28-1315

Following an earlier anthology by the same compiler, "Elizabethan lyrics" (Book Review Digest, 1925), this collection contains not only the well known lyrical poetry of the period covered, but a large number of poems which have not been reprinted since the seventeenth century and some found in old manuscripts and now printed for the first time. As in the earlier collection, the arrangement is chronological.

Booklist 24:315 My '28

"It is not only a valuable record of the poetic genius of an age, but a record of its editor's fine discrimination and devotion to a difficult task."

+ Bookm 67:xxv My '28 270w

"An extremely important addition to the many collections appertaining to this era of copious production."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p20 F 26 '28 480w

"Mr. Ault's excellent anthology helps to bring order out of the chaos of seventeenth-century English poetry, much of which is still fugitive."

+ Nation 126:495 Ap 25 '28 90w

Reviewed by P: Quennell
New Statesman 30:798 Mr 31 '28 1100w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:215 Ap '28

"It may safely be said that no previous worker in either field has searched through so much material or been more concerned to achieve a faultless text. Unfortunately, though in several respects Mr. Ault has surpassed Bullen, he has not Bullen's taste. Like its predecessor, this volume contains quite a score of pieces which have no right to be included in any anthology. . . On the whole, Mr. Ault's most important services to English poetry are the provision of the fullest and most intelligently-framed bibliographical guide yet produced, and the criticism of certain accepted attributions."

AULT, NORMAN, comp. and ed.—Continued

+ — Sat R 145:167 F 11 '28 700w

"Lovers of poetry and students of England in the 17th century will greet Norman Ault's book with enthusiasm. The book meets a real need in the study of English poetry. . . The literary—and one might almost say the 'biological'—value of the chronological arrangement is inestimable. Through the pages of this book one can watch the slow evolution of English poetry between the years 1620 and 1700." C. M. K.

+ Springf'd Republican p7f Ap 22 '28 1300w

Times [London] Lit Sup p126 F 23 '28 350w

AUSLANDER, JOSEPH, and HILL, FRANK ERNEST. Winged horse; the story of the poets and their poetry; with a bibl. by Theresa (West) Elmendorf. 451p $3.50; educ ed $1.50 Doubleday, Doran

809.1 Poetry—History 27-27772

For descriptive note see Annual for 1927.

Booklist 24:153 Ja '28

"A valuable and a fascinating book." M. G. Bonner

+ Bookm 66:331 N '27 110w

"This is not primarily a book for children, although its clarity and simplicity should make it an instructive delight for any intelligent youth. But it is much more than that. It is also a book for adults who know a deal about poetry as well as for those less fortunate readers who are merely at the gateways to that vast and magic land. It is also a book for lovers of English poetry. . . The idea is excellent and the two authors have adhered to it in the most consistent manner." Herbert Gorman

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p3 Ja 15 '28 620w

"The book is good reading all the way through, but the two chapters called 'Under Steam and Stone' are particularly good because of their forceful presentation and clear interpretation of modern poetry." J. W. M.

+ Boston Transcript p5 D 14 '27 680w

Cleveland Open Shelf p46 Ap '28

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:67 Ja '28

Pratt p26 spring '28

St Louis 26:82 Mr '28

"The book contains some statements that are not true. It states as facts many hypotheses which are simply the intelligent guesses of the learned. A book which devotes one line to Lucretius, omits all the great literatures of Asia, and assigns a whole page to Vachel Lindsay, cannot be considered impeccable in its sense of proportion. But, though we mention these matters for the guidance of confiding readers, we do not present them as severe criticisms of the work. A book must be judged according to its aims. The aim of 'The Winged Horse' is not to give a well proportioned survey of history, but to show 'the youth of all ages,' what it should read and in what spirit the reading should be done. Judged according to such a standard, it is a decidedly readable and decidedly valuable book." F: E. Pierce

+ — Sat R of Lit 4:536 Ja 21 '28 250w

Wis Lib Bul 24:87 Mr '28

"Valuable for all who desire a simple account of English poetry. The book abounds in fresh insights and balanced judgments. If it is meant for children it presupposes a high degree of child intelligence." R. N.

+ World Tomorrow 11:375 S '28 320w

AUSTIN, ANNE. Jackson street. 298p $2.50 Greenberg

27-22840

" 'Jackson Street' carries Mary Carey along from the slums of a small Texas city to college, early and unwise marriage, motherhood, freedom again and success as a newspaper woman, with promise of poetic achievement. Then love once more. But Mary Carey, dreading marriage, will only agree to live with her lover. She refuses to marry him, fearing a repetition of her earlier unhappiness."—N Y Times

---

"Although the harsh realism is touched at times with emotionalism and melodrama, for a first book it is, on the whole, well done. If it be true that sex motivates many of the chapters, there are indications that Miss Austin realizes that when we have once considered every phase of this subject it may well be relegated to its proper place in the scheme of things, and authors will then be free to work with more wholesome proportions of the elements that make up life." C. B. Sherman

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p18 Ja 22 '28 650w

"The novel is one which, despite its overpopular theme, manages to grip the reader throughout. Perfect frankness abounds, as it does in so many of the popular and current books destined for a day, but the frankness is nicely tempered to miss the vulgar, even in its most intimate detail. It is a work of infinite interest."

+ Boston Transcript p2 D 31 '27 230w

" 'Jackson Street' is not an unusual novel in any respect; it is written in the modern spirit of extreme frankness, but with an entirely decent outlook on the situation. The writer's emphasis on the difficulties of any two people living comfortably outside the conventions of marriage is not original—the French have always been particularly fond of writing of the difficulty of keeping a mistress in good temper—but it appears to be based on sound common sense."

N Y Times p7 N 20 '27 330w

AUSTIN, CECIL. Immortal Ninon; a character study of Ninon de l'Enclos. 261p il $3.50 Brentano's [10s 6d Routledge]

B or 92 L'Enclos, Ninon de

"Avowedly, it is a character study of Ninon de Lenclos. Actually, it is an entertaining series of anecdotes—based on fact, on gossip, or on contemporary correspondence which half the time was little more than gossip come to the aid of an enthusiastic pen—involving the astounding lady who intrigued an important section of Parisian society for half a century." —Ind

---

"The whitewash brush has seldom been brought into more zealous use."

Bookm 67:xxviii My '28 270w

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p8 Ap 29 '28 160w

"To us it seems that the term 'Character-Study' does not strictly apply. Rather should the subtitle be 'An Appreciation.' Evidently the spell of Ninon's personality still holds after nearly two centuries and a half." F. B.

Boston Transcript p2 F 25 '28 950w

"Shorn of its weighty pretensions the book is amusing. Taken any more seriously it is inevitably disappointing. By all means, then, if Ninon strikes your fancy, read it for what it is."

Ind 120:237 Mr 10 '28 160w

Reviewed by R. F. Dibble

Nation 126:616 My 30 '28 650w

New Statesman 30:212 N 26 '27 480w

Sat R 144:711 N 19 '27 150w

Springf'd Republican p10 My 8 '28 450w

Times [London] Lit Sup p780 N 3 '27 520w

AUSTIN, MRS MARY (HUNTER). Children sing in the far West. 187p il $2 Houghton

811 28-22323

"Partly because I was teaching school and felt obliged to have something for my pupils about the land they lived in, and partly because I loved the land so much I couldn't bear not having grown up in it, I made most of the poems in this collection with the help of the children in my school. We had a wonderful time doing it." (Preface) They are poems of the mountains and the sea, and of all outdoors, with a section of Indian songs.

Booklist 25:126 D '28

"These are not children's poems only, save in so far that a genuine poet is eternally a child. They are stirring heart's blood for man and woman as well. They are memory for the old. They are the breath of life. They are all delightfully illustrated by Gerald Cassidy, and Easterner or Westerner, whatever you may be, they will warm your soul." I. W. L.

+ Boston Transcript p9 O 20 '28 350w

"I find Tamalpais, In Papagueria, Dead Water, Seven Rhyming Riddles, and the group of Indian Songs altogether worthy of their very gifted author, whereas I am not attracted by those other pieces in which she has labored to 'keep the child's approach.'" Mark Van Doren

+ — Nation 127:550 N 21 '28 120w

"A particularly satisfactory collection for family reading because there are poems for every age and most of the seventy-seven in the book are poems for every one." B. E. Mahoney

+ Sat R of Lit 5:488 D 8 '28 650w

"Mary Austin has loved Southwest life and air and scene and made songs for children to teach them her loves. This is a new kind of Americanization. The songs reveal the author's feeling, but will they open this arid paradise to child readers? We hope so, for this is a book of novel animals and old lore, sunshine and adoration of God, and better for little city-dwellers than western movies." Leon Whipple

+ Survey 61:169 N 1 '28 60w

AUTOLYCUS, pseud. See Bacon, L.

AVEY, ALBERT EDWIN. Function and forms of thought. 395p $2.50 Holt

160 Logic 27-18904

An elementary text in methodology and logic based upon symbolic principles. References and exercises accompany each chapter.

"A well-balanced discussion of the subject which avoids being merely a restatement of traditional doctrine, a popularization of the subject at the sacrifice of exactness, or a mathematical treatise too concise and technical for the beginner."

Boston Transcript p6 F 25 '28 220w

"The succession of new textbooks in elementary logic, each attempting to cover in simple and coherent fashion a most complex and heterogeneous series of developments, testifies to a still unsatisfied demand in this field. Professor Avey has seen the central difficulty in the situation and has been more than moderately successful in overcoming it." A. E. Murphy

+ Int J Ethics 38:235 Ja '28 500w

"He has given us a well-written and inclusive summary of the deductive aspects of the traditional logic, with the introduction of just enough symbolism to convince the student of its advantages without at the same time antagonizing him by involving him in the intricacies of the logical calculus. While sympathizing completely with the author's point of view and appreciating fully the difficulties of his task, I am disappointed in his choice of symbols for the representation of the general and particular propositions." A. C. Benjamin

+ — J Philos 25:246 Ap 26 '28 580w

AYRES, RUBY MILDRED (MRS REGINALD WILLIAM POCOCK). Broken. 364p $2 Doubleday, Doran [7s 6d Hodder & S.]

28-20222

Giles Chittendam forms a malicious plan to humiliate the woman who drove his brother to suicide. But Giles is caught in his own trap, and falls in love with his intended victim. He cannot marry her since he already has a wife. The Alps, and the Riviera furnish a background for this feverishly romantic tale.

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p18 S 9 '28 100w

Times [London] Lit Sup p97 F 9 '28 130w

AYRES, RUBY MILDRED (MRS REGINALD WILLIAM POCOCK). Luckiest lady. 301p $2 Doubleday, Doran [7s 6d Hodder & S.]

27-21622

The "luckiest lady" had a wealthy and adoring husband, a devoted little protegée, and the means to gratify every wish. The story tells how she behaved when she fell in love with another man and all her apparent riches counted for nothing.

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 Ja 8 '28 130w

"There are times when the author handles her characters with a depth of feeling highly unusual in novels of this type. Her character delineation is also for the most part, above the average. All of which points to the conclusion that, while 'The Luckiest Lady' is one of several thousand mediocre romances of the year, it has enough qualities to prove it a little more worthwhile to a person who is a seeker after good literature as well as good romance."

+ — Boston Transcript p2 D 24 '27 320w

Times [London] Lit Sup p793 N 3 '27 160w

B

BABBITT, HAROLD EATON. Plumbing. 455p il $5 (25s) McGraw

696 Plumbing 28-3569

"A guide to plumbing design and installation with little or no instruction in the use of tools. Embodies the results of the most recent researches and has information which simplifies plumbing for dwelling houses and reduces the venting required in larger buildings. Water supply and drainage are fully discussed from engineering points of view. Numerous types of apparatus and fittings are described and amply illustrated. The appendix contains extracts from standard specifications for pipes, fittings, and materials. A good glossary. Author is Professor of Sanitary Engineering, University of Illinois."— N Y Tech Bks

---

Booklist 24:312 My '28

N Y New Tech Bks 13:22 Ap '28

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:265 My '28

Pratt p21 summer '28

BACHELLER, IRVING ADDISON. Coming up the road; memories of a north country boyhood. 316p $3.50 Bobbs

B or 92 28-22325

Mr Bacheller comes up the road of his boyhood in northern New York state bringing genial memories of his school days, his home life, and of village characters. His recollections of more recent days, condensed in the last chapters, tell of his coming to New York, of his first literary efforts and success, and of his associates and friends, Pulitzer, Mark Twain, Stephen Crane, Hamlin Garland and many others.

BACHELLER, I. A.—Continued

"One doubts if anything so modestly honest, so sweetly friendly, so proud and yet so humble, so gentle and unassuming, has seen the light for many a day. 'Coming up the Road' is a new experience in biography, and a thoroughly delightful one." I. W. Lawrence

Boston Transcript p3 N 3 '28 1500w

Reviewed by E. F. Edgett

Boston Transcript p7 N 10 '28 150w

Reviewed by H: J. Forman

N Y Times p5 N 25 '28 1400w

"Irving Bacheller's stories about the 'North Country'—New York State north of the Adirondack wilderness—have long since made friends for him all over the United States. This book is another delightful contribution in the same field."

+ R of Rs 78:38 N '28 30w

St Louis 26:389 D '28

"Has no charm of style and little of that quaint, if not very subtle, humor, which chiefly perhaps made the fortune of his two or three once immensely popular novels. The earlier part of the book is the more interesting."

— Sat R of Lit 5:436 D 1 '28 70w

Springf'd Republican p10 N 20 '28 450w

BACHELLER, IRVING ADDISON. House of [2] the three ganders. 315p $2 Bobbs

To his story of a rural community in northern New York State and of a young lad who drifts into town and settles there, Mr Bacheller has added a mystery plot. This is based on an actual murder case. A woman is shot and her father killed, and suspicion is cleverly diverted to an eccentric but harmless town character. Shad, the homeless boy, has a hand in the case.

"Occasional blatant sentimentalism does not harm the dry Yankee humor of this book, and the extreme objectivity of treatment is well adapted to the wild, earthy freshness of the north country that colors the narrative, and the portraiture of simple people in a small town. A murder, effective local color and one piece of excellent characterization is always a fortunate and satisfying combination."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p8 D 23 '28 500w

"A story of the Adirondacks, replete with humor, wisdom and other Bachelleriana."

+ N Y Evening Post p11m D 8 '28 80w

"No doubt many readers will heartily enjoy meeting benevolent, though fearful, Miss Betty Spenlow, cynical young Bony, who nicknamed the meeting house 'The Sob Works,' and last, but by no means least, the noble-hearted old tinker who had such an unpleasantly narrow escape from being hanged."

+ N Y Times p6 D 16 '28 600w

BACON, CORINNE, comp. Standard catalog; fiction section; supplement. (Standard catalog ser.) 55p pa 50c Wilson, H.W.

016.8 Fiction—Bibliography. Bibliography—Best books

The first supplement to the 1923 edition of the Fiction section of the Standard catalog series lists 558 titles, with annotations and a subject index.

Booklist 24:308 My '28

Wis Lib Bul 24:157 My '28

BACON, CORINNE, comp. Standard catalog; social sciences section. (Standard catalog ser.) 2d ed rev and enl 160p $2 Wilson, H.W.

016.3 Social sciences—Bibliography. Economics—Bibliography. Education—Bibliography 27-27796

The second edition of the Sociology section, now published as the Social sciences section, of the Standard catalog includes about 1300 titles of the most representative and useful books on social, economic and educational questions, with descriptive and evaluative notes.

Am Pol Sci R 22:231 F '28 50w

Booklist 24:170 Ja '28

BACON, GASPAR GRISWOLD. Constitution of the United States in some of its fundamental aspects. (Bacon lectureship at Boston univ.) 201p pa $2 Harvard univ. press [9s Milford]

342.73 United States. Constitution 28-16145

"Six lectures delivered at Boston university on the Bacon lectureship. Advances the argument that overcentralization and the 'pass-a-law' hysteria, more or less consequent on the complex needs of an expanding nation, are the prime dangers of the day. The author is essentially a strict constructionist and deplores encroachment on states' rights through 'loose' interpretation of the fundamental law. Paternalism and lawmaking mania he considers as threats to individual initiative and the sense of local responsibility, upon which sound government must ultimately rest."—Springf'd Republican

---

"The lectures are only mildly notable. . . As federal usurpation is obviously one of the most dangerous political tendencies in this country at the moment, those who fear and resent it will probably be glad to find Mr. Bacon on their side, but his protest is altogether too gentle and professionally dignified to stir the blood. The evils of centralization and arbitrary exercise of governmental authority which Mr. Bacon sees perfectly clearly will not be remedied, we may be sure, until lawyers and others who know the facts and realize their significance speak out with a good deal more stoutness than Mr. Bacon shows."

— Nation 127:276 S 19 '28 210w

"It seems ill to detract from what has been written with such deep sincerity and in such distinguished language, but we should have been more content with the conclusions if Mr. Bacon had shown exactly where democracies have gone astray which have developed further than the American democracy."

Spec 141:221 Ag 18 '28 880w

"While Mr Bacon's argument is clear and his style far from ponderous, he appears consistently as a special pleader. While every point of view has a right to its propaganda, there is such a thing as objective historic analysis and interpretation. This book is like several that have appeared on the subjects and seems hardly to deserve the imprint of the Harvard University Press."

— Springf'd Republican p6 Jl 16 '28 680w

"Mr. Bacon's attitude throughout is rigidly conservative."

Times [London] Lit Sup p691 S 27 '28 140w

BACON, LEONARD (AUTOLYCUS, pseud.). [2] Legend of Quincibald. 76p $2 Harper

811 28-24284

The first part of this poem was delivered as the Phi Beta Kappa poem at Yale university, 1926. The three sections of the poem, Quincibald in Mediocria, The exploration of Cockaigne, The battle of Argothica are an attempt to deal symbolically with the stuff of personality.

"Some may find it wordy, with too many passages that are merely expository. Many will complain that it lacks clarity. Yet few competent critics will deny that for its union of intellectual brilliance, wit and vigor and verve, freshness, variety and vividness of imagery, insight and outsight, swing and splendor, seriousness of purpose, depth of passion, energy of thought and audacity of imagination the poem is without parallel in our contemporary American verse. . . Half forsaking the seat of the scorner, Leonard Bacon has recorded here—and great is the achievement—profound experiences of the human spirit, the terrible and glorious adventure of the soul." K. L. Bates

+ — Boston Transcript p3 O 6 '28 2700w

Reviewed by M. P. Levy
New Repub 57:172 D 26 '27 180w

Reviewed by Percy Hutchison
N Y Times p4 N 11 '28 200w

"In the 'Legend of Quincibald' gravity and satire mix with gravity in the ascendant. I have read it twice, a fact which testifies both to its interest and to its difficulty." O. W. Firkins

Sat R of Lit 4:457 D 8 '28 600w

BACON, PEGGY, Mercy and the mouse, and 2 other stories. 85p il $1.75 Macmillan
28-25503

Stories of Mercy, a clever kitten without much heart, and the tricks she played to oust her rivals and make herself supreme in the affections of the household. Illustrations by the author.

Reviewed by Ernestine Evans
Nation 127:547 N 21 '28 200w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Outlook 150:1335 D 12 '28 40w

BACON, ROGER. Opus majus; tr. by Robert Belle Burke. 2v 418;419-840p il $10 Press of the Univ. of Pa. [42s Oxford]
189 28-7540

The Opus majus upon which Roger Bacon's fame chiefly rests, was written about 1268 but it was not until 1733 that the first printed edition appeared. Dean Burke's translation makes this great medieval work for the first time available in English. The object of the work was to persuade the Pope, as the leader of Christendom, of the practical usefulness of scientific knowledge and method.

Boston Transcript p6 Je 30 '28 320w

"Since surprisingly little of the large philosophical production of the Middle Ages has been translated, this contribution is of no slight importance if a widespread understanding of medieval thought is to be hoped for. The translation is smooth, intelligible, close to the text, and for the most part exact." R: McKeon

+ — Nation 127:206 Ag 29 '28 520w

"The 'Opus Majus' is a loosely written, repetitious and long-winded work, filled with quotations from the Pagans, the Fathers and the Scriptures, original in nothing but its conception and purpose. . . That the world worships science today does not make Bacon our prophet; we have slighted his arguments and denied his aim. It is only when theology and science have made an indissoluble union that it can be said that Bacon's voice has at last been heard." Paul Weiss

New Repub 55:101 Je 13 '28 580w

"The ordinary reader will find Prof. Burke's translation easy to read, and an introduction to one of the most acute minds of the thirteenth century dealing with matters that have not yet lost all interest to the modern mind. . . The large class of people interested in medieval history and thought as well as the smaller class of professed students of the subject owe a debt of gratitude to Prof. Burke for the valuable service he has rendered in opening out to them one of the master works of medieval thought."

+ Sat R 146:82 Jl 21 '28 800w

BAGBY, ENGLISH. Psychology of personality; an analysis of common emotional disorders. 236p $2.50; student's ed $2 Holt
131 Psychoanalysis 28-14559

A textbook in psychoanalysis for the lay reader which by the case method makes easily intelligible various abnormal psychological states and the emotional disturbances which give rise to them. The author discusses repressions, defense reactions, day-dreaming, the inferiority complex, and other emotional disorders familiar to the psychoanalyst.

"The treatment of the book is simple, lucid, and unimaginative. There are a few pedantic passages, a few glazed generalities and now and then an axiom forgetfully repeated; but it is on the whole a helpful piece of work for the audience which it is intended to reach." C. M. L.

+ — Boston Transcript p2 Ag 18 '28 360w

"This is a useful book in modest compass covering an important field. The hackneyed comment that it will fill a need is in this instance more than a reviewer's handy phrase. . . Between the covers are assembled interpretations of the ills that mind is heir to, not in the seriously devastating forms of the major mental disorders, but in episodes and conditions of handicap met with in the borderland of the abnormal. Professor Bagby's position is that of a temperate Freudian."

+ Sat R of Lit 5:159 S 22 '28 420w

BAGGER, EUGENE SZEKERES. Francis Joseph, emperor of Austria—king of Hungary. 572p il $5 Putnam

B or 92 Francis Joseph I, emperor of Austria. Austria-Hungary—History 27-22188

A full-length study of Francis Joseph and his sixty-eight years' reign over the uneasy combination of states which constituted the Austro-Hungarian empire. With an attitude which the biographer himself describes as one of "loveless impartiality" Mr Bagger interprets in terms of the life and character of this stubborn and lonely monarch the inevitable downfall of the empire of the Habsburgs.

Booklist 24:246 Mr '28

"With reservations I must say that Eugene Bagger has done an enviable job with old Francis Joseph. Here and there I detect the serpent's trail of the Sozial-Demokrat's mind, but on the whole he has subdued conscientiously his tendency to doctrinaire Liberalism." L: Sherwin

+ — Bookm 66:588 Ja '28 780w

"Mr. Bagger has made the most of his opportunities and, to use the time-worn formula, his book reads in some parts 'like a novel.' . . One is disposed to think that, in spite of the brilliant qualities of the book, Bagger lacks the sympathy for his hero which is necessary, as Emil Ludwig reminded us the other day, for the writing of biographies of a superior type. One would have liked to see 'Francis Joseph' written with more of the subtlety and gallantry of Mr. Strachey, who, it seems, is Mr. Bagger's literary god." E. L. Adam

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p21 F 19 '28 580w

Reviewed by T: C. Richards
Boston Transcript p2 Ja 28 '28 600w

"A masterly and highly informative account of the last seventy-five years of Austria-Hungary's history."

+ Hist Outlook 19:184 Ap '28 210w

"Mr. Bagger gives his readers a narrative which is as interesting as fiction and yet contains a large amount of useful information." Emil Lengyel

+ Nation 127:137 Ag 8 '28 500w

"He is well documented and tells a good story. Unfortunately he will not let it tell itself, but must needs be overwhelmingly bright on every page. It is a pity, as he has real insight into his curious subject." Francis Birrell

+ — Nation and Ath 42:910 Mr 17 '28 220w

Reviewed by Poultney Bigelow
N Y Times p11 Ja 1 '28 550w

"There is an ample historical background for this portrait, and much, naturally, of interest to those who are interested in the underlying causes of the World War." Herschel Brickell

+ No Am 225:adv Ja '28 100w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:46 Ja '28

"It is a tale to be told with dignity and restraint, and this, alas! is precisely what is lacking in Mr. Bagger's highly-coloured and verbose narrative."

— Sat R 145:295 Mr 10 '28 200w

"The writing of history need not be dull, but it does demand a certain dignity and of that we find none in M. Bagger's pages. His style is alternately turgid, or crudely and clumsily Carlylean."

BAGGER, E. S.—Continued

— Spec 140:471 Mr 24 '28 220w

Springf'd Republican p7f My 6 '28 450w

"He has been conscientious enough to spend three years on his task, and has produced a useful, if shallow, account of a period on which little has been written in English. . . His account destroys what was the one really outstanding virtue of his central character—dignity. But at the same time it should be pointed out that in care and accuracy it easily surpasses most of the books of Court memoirs and the like among which its style places it."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p131 F 23 '28 400w

"A light, readable, fascinating book." H. C. E.

+ World Tomorrow 11:279 Je '28 300w

BAIKIE, JAMES. English Bible and its story; its growth, its translators and their adventures. 318p il $5 Lippincott [10s 6d Seeley, S.]

220 Bible.Whole—History 28-28343

"Dr. Baikie's work is designed for the young or very 'average' reader rather than for the student. Dr. Baikie devotes most of his volume to retelling, in simple, popular, interesting fashion, the familiar story of our English Bible. But he gives us a few prefatory chapters in which he describes the alien origins of what has long been our greatest national book, and he concludes with a certain amount of criticism."—Nation and Ath

Booklist 25:103 D '28

Reviewed by Gilbert Thomas

Nation and Ath 44:114 O 20 '28 180w

Outlook 150:1372 D 19 '28 100w

"This is a very straightforward account from the Protestant side, but with an accurate statement of the facts, of the history of the sources and growth of the English Bible, with a number of illustrations—Holbein portraits and others—of varying degrees of excellence. It contains a great deal of information about the different versions of the Bible in English which are not readily obtainable in any other form, and it can be recommended not only on that ground but as being simply and directly written."

+ Sat R 146:586 N 3 '28 110w

"Dr. Baikie has produced a work which, while in no way original was very much wanted. We have nothing else so readable and yet so comprehensive on the coming into being of the Authorized Version."

+ Spec 141:407 S 29 '28 680w

"His point of view is as he says, 'frankly Protestant,' but the general tone of a very readable book is certainly not wholly partisan even though it is from time to time somewhat unduly rhetorical."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p942 N 29 '28 130w

BAIKIE, JAMES. Glamour of Near East excavation. 348p il $5 Lippincott [10s 6d Seeley, S.]

913 Excavations (archeology). Egypt—Antiquities. Assyria—Antiquities. Babylonia—Antiquities. Palestine—Antiquities [28-10726]

"An account of the treasure-hunt for the buried art, wisdom & history of the ancient East, from the Nile to Babylon, the adventures, disappointments & triumphs of the hunters, & the knowledge thus acquired of the ancient world."—Subtitle

Booklist 24:359 Je '28

"There is a glamor and a romance in the story which is told in an alluring fashion. It is no dry-as-dust archaeological disquisition, but a moving tale of adventure for the excavators, and as wondrous a revelation of ancient life." T. C. R.

+ Boston Transcript p2 F 21 '28 360w

N Y Evening Post p5 Jl 14 '28 180w

"There is a picture of long buried civilizations which can hold the attention and quicken the imagination of any reader, and the author of this volume knows how to provide it. He is very well informed, gifted with a true sense of proportion, and the master of a lively style. The book is excellently illustrated." C: C. Torrey

+ Yale R n s 18:195 S '28 700w

BAILEY, HENRY CHRISTOPHER. Mr Fortune, please. 238p $2 Dutton [7s 6d Methuen] 28-2377

Reggie Fortune is asked to take a hand in the affairs of a number of persons in distress. This is in every case to the great advantage of the victim, and to the utter defeat of the villain.

Booklist 24:321 My '28

"Although not too intricate, all the stories are well constructed and interesting in their tale of crime. Most of them rest on conventional, likely motives for committing murder. Yet the means by which the deduction is arrived at are both clever and entertaining. The humor, however, is extraneous." W. E. H.

+ Boston Transcript p3 Mr 10 '28 200w

Reviewed by R. C. B. Brown

N Y Evening Post p13 F 11 '28 300w

N Y Times p26 Mr 4 '28 200w

"Mr. Bailey has an unusually strong faculty for planting his initial situations and working them up to a denouement genuinely dramatic and practically unforeseen. Besides, he knows how to write, and occasionally betrays a sense of ironic humor."

+ N Y World p9m My 19 '28 100w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:243 My '28

Pratt p43 autumn '28

"Interest is keenly sustained in each of the six stories."

+ Springf'd Republican p7f My 20 '28 60w

"The author adds six more chapters to his chronicle of the career of Reginald Fortune, and in so doing contrives to maintain that high standard of originality and excellence from which he has never allowed his creation to depart."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p233 Mr 31 '28 280w

BAILEY, LIBERTY HYDE. Garden lover. (Background bks.) 154p $1.50 (6s 6d) Macmillan

716 Gardens. Gardening 28-7265

These essays for garden lovers by one of themselves are dissertations on the pleasure of gardening in general rather than specific directions for planning and making a garden, tho articles are included on fruit and botanic gardens.

Booklist 24:353 Je '28

"Even when he pleads for a fruticetum he is interesting; even when he deliberately attempts fine writing he is tolerable, and when he loses himself in the history of an elm tree that he has known and loved he is magnificent."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p16 Je 3 '28 260w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:397 Jl '28

Pratt p24 autumn '28

St Louis 26:317 O '28

Wis Lib Bul 24:122 Ap '28

BAILEY, LIBERTY HYDE. Harvest of the year to the tiller of the soil. (Background bks.: the philosophy of the holy earth) 209p $1.50 (6s 6d) Macmillan

630.1 Farm life. Agriculture—Economic aspects 28-2685

Short essays on farm life and on the farmer's relation to life, concluding with extracts from letters from many farmers expressing the joys of the tiller of the soil.

Reviewed by T: M. McCormick
Am J Soc 33:1019 My '28 150w

"A refreshing volume arguing with simplicity and directness that there are other rewards in farming than the money income." Bernhard Ostrolenk

+ Ann Am Acad 138:195 Jl '28 250w

"In addition to presenting timely and cogent judgments, the book has a definite literary charm."

+ Booklist 24:312 My '28

"One of the finest essays in the collection is on 'My Father's Hoe.' Not only has it power as common-sense philosophy, but it has literary merit of real worth. The book is delightful reading whether you are a dirt farmer or not."

+ Boston Transcript p4 Mr 3 '28 130w

J Home Econ 20:362 My '28 30w

Nation 127:93 Jl 25 '28 130w

"There is in it discussion, informed and wise, of the current alleged unrest of the farmers, discussion so broadly based, so practical and understanding, that it illuminates the agricultural problem and points the way toward a better situation. And there is also such deeply rejoicing portrayal of the satisfactions of life lived close to the earth as could be written only by a lover of the soil having the soul of a mystic and the heart of a poet."

+ N Y Times p10 Ja 29 '28 330w

"The writing, if here and there a little cumbrous, shows deep feeling and at times a touch of real poetry. Intensely alive to the troubles of the time, the writer has an unshaken faith in the future of the life of the soil."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p521 Jl 12 '28 260w

Wis Lib Bul 24:122 Ap '28

BAILEY, VERNON HOWE. New trails in old Spain. 313p il $3.50 Sears

914.6 Spain—Description and travel 28-2549

"An excellent combination of travel narrative and guide book which purposes 'to indicate the more important attractions of the larger cities, to describe some little known towns, and give an idea of the life and customs of the people of the provinces.' "—Cleveland Open Shelf

---

Reviewed by Lawton Mackall
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p14 Ag 26 '28 320w

Boston Transcript p4 F 18 '28 530w

Cleveland Open Shelf p76 Je '28

"His narrative is filled with so many kinds of interests and reflects with such color and vitality the life of the people, their character, manners and customs, and the charm of the places he visited that it is a fascinating book for home reading, while it will be indispensable for the traveler who wishes to follow his example."

+ N Y Times p18 F 12 '28 270w

BAILEY, VERNON HOWE. Skyscrapers of New York; with an introd. by Cass Gilbert. 27p il $15 Rudge

725 Architecture—New York (city). New York (city)—Views 28-13459

"In twenty-three crayon drawings Vernon Howe Bailey has pictured some of the most impressive of these structures which have so greatly modified New York within a generation. As here shown they embody the commercial spirit and abundant enterprise of our epoch. To these pictures, reproduced beautifully by the aquatone process, Cass Gilbert, designer of the tallest of skyscrapers, the Woolworth 'Cathedral of Commerce,' has written an introduction."—Boston Transcript

---

"In this volume the skilled limner has seen these buildings with the eye not only of the architect, but with that of the poet, and his subtle lines and well-accented light and shade have put into black and white a record of the most picturesque group of buildings to be found anywhere in the world. The pictures tell the story, and it is a story that moves the imagination." G. H. S.

+ Boston Transcript p4 My 19 '28 320w

"Mr. Bailey has selected for his black and white drawings some of the most imposing individual buildings and some of the most effectively massed groups of skyscrapers. The publishers have given to his drawings the aid of a handsome volume, with large pages, fine paper, and broad margins on which the sketches are admirably reproduced. It is a publication to rejoice in."

+ Sat R of Lit 4:917 My 26 '28 80w

BAKER, CHARLES H. Jr, ed. Rejections of 1927. 304p $2.50 Doubleday, Doran

Short stories—Collections (28-20572)

For one reason or another pronounced unsuitable for publication in the magazines to which they were submitted, these "rejections of 1927" form an interesting group of greatly diversified stories. They range from a farcical incident of the marines in Coblentz, to the tragedy of a girl who was neither black nor white.

"When we take stock 'Rejections of 1927' is a praiseworthy effort. Technical weaknesses in the midst of good matter can be a source of interest. With a few exceptions seriousness of intention marks these selections. In general, they are apt to be quite as artistic (if not technically so correct) as the bulk of accepted work, and they are in general considerably more liberal and interesting. A fuller volume will be welcomed next year." R. B. C.

+ Boston Transcript p4 Jl 25 '28 550w

"This well-meaning compilation of short stories that have been sternly returned from editorial sancta is admirably calculated to give at least a pin-prick to the illusion that every successful fiction writer retains, deep down in his deck, one manuscript of really high quality which no editor will touch. The contents of this anthology are without exception excellent machine products; and the big-fiction magnates who rejected them must have done so out of sheer whimsicality."

Nation 127:162 Ag 15 '28 100w

"Each story, in order to fulfill the requirements for admission to the volume, must have been rejected by at least ten American magazines. The result is in truth more than a little surprising, not only because many of the tales are decidedly above the general run of magazine fiction, but because the reason for their rejection is sometimes difficult to perceive. . . For several obvious reasons this volume composed of the 'Rejections of 1927' is an exceptionally interesting book, even though the reader may not entirely agree with its editor, Charles H. Baker Jr., and find all the stories collected here 'worth reading.' "

+ N Y Times p19 Je 17 '28 850w

"By three of its stories, anyway, Mr. Baker's editorship is justified, and most of the stories are more interesting than the average magazine product. We hope in another year he can give us another collection as good."

+ Sat R of Lit 5:190 O 6 '28 550w

BAKER, JOHN EARL. Explaining China. 312p il $5 Van Nostrand

915.1 China

"John Earl Baker writes as an engineer, and he knows China as an engineer. This is something new in books on China. He has discovered, in years of harsh experience, that 'the Chinese people have never learned to act constructively in groups larger than those to be found in one village, unless compelled to do so by imperial authority or by an imminent, common danger.' Until they learn to do so, he believes, they cannot build a modern government. . . He tends to believe that China's salvation will come through the development of efficient local governments rather than from a single national government."—Books (N Y Herald Tribune)

BAKER, J: E.—Continued

"His advice is sage and friendly and documented by practical experience."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p27 N 4 '28 250w

Boston Transcript p4 N 3 '28 500w

"His book is a searching analysis of the Chinese economic system, with excursions into history, politics and social life. It has an engineering simplicity about it, and to Americans who want a cold-blooded veracious statement of China's position as a trade market and as a potential competitor in manufacturing it is comprehensive and extremely interesting." Gardner Harding

+ N Y Times p22 N 18 '28 400w

BAKER, MARGARET. Water elf and the miller's child. 84p il $2 Duffield 28-21501

Once there was a water elf who lived in a mill pond. This is the story of his adventures, daintily and charmingly illustrated silhouettes.

Booklist 25:126 D '28

"The story of the little lonely elf and the miller's child is unfolded with the logical simplicity and sufficient number of happenings desired in a book for little children, and the Bakers know their child audience and how to write and draw for them." M. G. Bonner

+ N Y Times p40 D 2 '28 90w

+ R of Rs 78:559 N '28 50w

"The author has used familiar material, but she has used it freshly and with taste. The drawings are excellent."

+ Sat R of Lit 5:357 N 10 '28 70w

BAKER, RAY STANNARD (DAVID GRAYSON, pseud.). Life and letters of Woodrow Wilson. v 1-2 335;373p il $10 Doubleday, Doran

B or 92 Wilson, Woodrow 27-25411

For descriptive note see Annual for 1927.

"This is the first biography of President Wilson that can be regarded as of serious historical importance. Mr. Baker is always clear in his presentation and avoids anything like subtlety in his running comments. There is nothing in these volumes which the simplest mind can not comprehend. He writes, it is true, as an official biographer, extending the sympathy which every biographer ought to have with his subject to something approaching eulogy." C: Seymour

+ Am Hist R 33:898 Jl '28 850w

Booklist 24:246 Mr '28

"The books as he has written them will certainly be read, by friends and foes alike of Woodrow Wilson. They present to both a new picture of the man, and a truer one than has heretofore been drawn. A fascinating picture, the first two volumes of which, covering the first fifty-four years of Mr. Wilson's life, reveal the sources both of his strength and of his weaknesses." F. P. Stockbridge

+ Bookm 66:318 N '27 1900w

Cleveland Open Shelf p23 F '28

"One hesitates to affirm, on the basis of this first instalment, that Mr. Baker has in hand a really great biography, but there is no doubt whatever that he has launched an exceptionally interesting and important one. His failure to reach the highest plane, if failure it shall turn out to be, will be due mainly to two limitations, both of which, the one indirectly and the other directly, have been self-imposed. The first is the fact that he was for a number of years, and those the years of Wilson's greatest prominence, in close and even confidential relations with Wilson, and, eventually, the chosen biographer and political and personal interpreter. The second is his deliberate decision to keep his book within the narrower limits of biography by 'using only enough of a setting of historical fact to explain the course of the man.' . . There are no dull pages in these well-written volumes, and even the reader who cares for Wilson least will find it hard to leave the volumes unfinished once they have been begun." W: MacDonald

+ Nation 126:451 Ap 18 '28 1250w

Reviewed by Haslam Mills

Nation and Ath 42:756 F 18 '28 500w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:113 F '28

Pratt p36 spring '28

R of Rs 77:8 F '28 180w

St Louis 26:80 Mr '28

Sat R 145:168 F 11 '28 780w

"We look forward with interest to the succeeding volumes. Meanwhile this instalment is one that every student of modern history should not only read, but reread and take long to consider."

+ Spec 140:161 F 4 '28 750w

"Mr Baker has performed his task as literary legatee and authorized biographer with sympathy, great diligence, and much literary skill, but to judge of the biography as a whole, merely by these volumes, is, of course, impossible—they do not treat, even indirectly, the most hotly controversial episodes of Wilson's career in public office. They do, however, make clearer than ever before the background and preparation of that career."

+ Springf'd Republican Ja 29 '28 1850w

Times [London] Lit Sup p71 F 2 '28 1800w

"Although we may fully recognize the sincerity, and nearly always agree with the justice of Mr. Baker's laudatory comments on the material he presents, we nevertheless resent them. We want at least the illusion that we are drawing our own conclusions, and by the same token, we want fuller information than Mr. Baker has given in these volumes as to what people said and thought who disapproved of Woodrow Wilson." F .P. Keppel

+ — Yale R n s 17:578 Ap '28 980w

BAKER-CROTHERS, HAYES. Virginia and the French and Indian war. 179p $2 (10s) Univ. of Chicago press

973.26 United States—History—French and Indian war, 1755-1763. Virginia—History 28-14788

"This little volume deals with the part played by Virginia, and to a lesser extent by Pennsylvania, Maryland, and the Carolinas, in the French and Indian War. For the first time we grasp the importance of the fur trade of the Ohio region—to what extent it was a factor in bringing on the war, how it drew the Indians into alliance with one side or the other, how it contributed to Braddock's defeat by alienating the Cherokees, how it caused fierce controversies between South Carolina and Virginia, made cooperation by the colonies difficult, and actually influenced the selection of the route to Fort Duquesne."—Am Hist R

"The book is well organized, the points clearly presented, the errors few and unimportant. A serious defect is the omission of even cursory descriptions of most of the military campaigns. This makes parts of the book unintelligible for the reader who is unacquainted with Braddock's defeat or the campaigns in the north. Professor Baker-Crothers has given us a thorough and valuable bit of work, and his main points, although perhaps stressed too greatly, are important and well taken." T: J. Wertenbaker

+ — Am Hist R 34:160 O '28 420w

"Professor Baker-Crothers has done a notably careful and thorough piece of work, and his analysis of the economic influences which determined the policy of the Assembly is a real contribution."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p15 S 16 '28 300w

Times [London] Lit Sup p604 Ag 23 '28 450w

BALASCHEFF, MME MARIE. The transplanting; a narrative from the letters of [the author], a Russian refugee in France; ed. by Martha Genung Stearns. 251p il $2.50 Macmillan

B or 92 Russians in France. European war, 1914-1918—Refugees 28-6636

The writer of these letters spent a part of her girlhood in Washington during the years when her father, Prince Cantacuzene, was Russian ambassador to the United States. When the revolution overturned the whole system in Russia and her own life as well, Madame Balascheff made her way to France with her five sons and began the building of a new life. The letters of the first half of the book tell the experiences in the new soil and the heroic attempts to make a living there. In the last half she looks back to her life in Russia, England and America, before the wreck of her fortunes.

"A brave spirit animates this narrative, impervious to hardships and refusing to be submerged by despondency. Discerningly edited, these letters cannot fail to touch the emotions." Lisle Bell

\+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p19 My 13 '28 530w

"In its quiet way this book is a remarkable lesson in character building and might be used in the curriculum of high schools. It would go far toward pointing the way to what real people do and what real people are." A. S. H.

\+ Boston Transcript p4 Mr 14 '28 750w

Churchman p19 Je 30 '28 200w

Cleveland Open Shelf p102 S '28

"A few ardent Soviets may say that the volume is insidious anti-Bolshevist propaganda designed to appeal to our American sentimentality, but even as such it deserves praise as a beautiful and well-executed picture of a lovely woman."

Living Age 334:844 My 1 '28 300w

"It is a book that will have a special appeal to women, although her description of the Revolution as seen through the eyes of a woman and non-combatant serves as an excellent complement to [Men are like that], Mr. Hartill's work." Milton Byron

\+ Outlook 148:435 Mr 14 '28 160w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:488 O '28

"Madame Balascheff, née Princess Marie Cantacuzene, is an unusual type of refugee, whose frank good will and radiant common sense have triumphed over a problem of transition that may completely baffle personalities less simple or more plaintive."

\+ Spec 141:108 Jl 21 '28 620w

Springf'd Republican p7f Ap 15 '28 100w

Springf'd Republican p10 Ap 27 '28 680w

"A charming book, illumined by a spirit of the sternest courage allied with gentleness."

\+ Times [London] Lit Sup p561 Ag 2 '28 450w

BALDWIN, ALICE MARY. New England clergy and the American revolution. (Duke univ. publications) 222p $3.50 Duke univ. [17s 6d Cambridge univ. press]

973.31 United States—History—Revolution. United States—Politics and government. Clergy—United States 28-6517

"Hitherto little account has been taken of the influence exerted on contemporary political thought and activity by the New England clergy, especially of the Congregationalist and Presbyterian Churches [in the Revolution]. The omission has now been repaired by this well-documented monograph. Miss Baldwin makes it clear that the political ideas of the time were closely connected with the theological and ecclesiastical doctrines preached from the New England pulpits. The 'election sermons,' in particular, were not only heard by large audiences, but were frequently printed and widely circulated throughout the country towns, where they served as text-books of politics. The way was thus prepared for the independence movement, and, when it came, the New England clergy did much to stimulate resistance to England."—Times [London] Lit Sup

---

Reviewed by E. B. Greene

Am Hist R 34:136 O '28 500w

Boston Transcript p3 Ag 11 '28 630w

"This study is not a clever piece of propaganda, put up in scholarly form, to extol the importance and influence of the church or the clergy. Rather it is a good example of the type of thing which needs to be done for every period of American history in the interest of a better understanding." W. W. Sweet

\+ Christian Century 45:733 Je 7 '28 400w

"On every page lies the proof of painstaking determination to discover and reveal the facts. A surprising amount of information is crowded into the footnotes and the two appendices. A rich bibliography and a well-prepared index round out the volume." E. C. Kolb

\+ Crozer Quarterly 5:362 Jl '28 400w

"Miss Baldwin has handled a great mass of new material in a most commendable manner; indeed, this monograph might well serve as a model for historical investigators. Her style is clear, her material logically organized, her points well made. She has written upon a phase of the American Revolution about which there has been considerable speculation in recent years, but about which little was actually known. From every standpoint this study is most commendable." W. W. Sweet

\+ J Religion 8:641 O '28 680w

N Y Evening Post p12 Mr 31 '28 90w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:552 N '28

Springf'd Republican p8 S 15 '28 1000w

"This result of Miss Baldwin's painstaking and scholarly research is a real contribution to the history of the American Revolution. Miss Baldwin's work should do good service in correcting the exaggerated notions generally current as to the preponderance of foreign influences in determining the thought and action of the American people during the revolutionary period."

\+ Times [London] Lit Sup p259 Ap 5 '28 170w

BALDWIN, MRS FAITH. See Cuthrell, F.

BALDWIN, GRATIA EATON. New Beatrice; or, The virtue that counsels; a study in Dante. 88p $2 Columbia univ. press [10s Milford]

851 Dante Alighieri 28-8378

"Miss Baldwin's little book deals with the special problem of the 'Vita Nuova,' the problem which has proved itself a stumbling-block for most of its critics. . . There are two obvious directions in which interpretation of the 'Vita Nuova' can go: that curious work can be taken as autobiography in cryptogram, or as pure allegory without biographical foundation. All the possible information is probably known; in the end the reader judges according to his predilections. Miss Baldwin is one of the allegorizers."—Times [London] Lit Sup

---

"Mrs. Baldwin's book is the result of ten years of dedication and study, and in its presentation, not the usual formal enunciation of conclusions heavy with footnotes and the paraphernalia of research, but a spiritual biography of deepening insight into Dante's meaning." Raymond Weaver

\+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p15 Ag 5 '28 1150w

"Miss Baldwin is a very earnest student who began her contemplation of Dante in a class, and early 'recoiled' from the notion that Beatrice could have been an earthly woman. She has a style pedantic though personal, colourless but not limpid, and it is difficult to grasp her tenuous conclusions. . . Her worst fault is that her gently obstinate and sermonizing tone would convey to the inexperienced the highly erroneous notion that Dante is dull."

BALDWIN, G. E.—Continued
Spec 141:193 Ag 11 '28 250w

"Miss Baldwin believes that she has made a discovery; she writes in a tone of autobiographical ecstasy. Whether she is right or wrong, she has all the fresh enthusiasm of the discoverer. Her conclusions would carry more conviction if they were not so violent."
— Times [London] Lit Sup p732 O 11 '28 410w

BALDWIN, STANLEY. Our inheritance; speeches and addresses. 349p $2.50 Doubleday, Doran [12s 6d Hodder & S.]

304 [28-18021]

A selection of the speeches of the British prime minister, delivered during the last two or three years in England and Canada. It is not always the problems of the British Empire of which he speaks. Special occasions of great variety offer opportunity for personal comment on such subjects as books, cricket, fly-fishing and "the loneliest job in the world," that of prime minister.

Reviewed by S. K. Ratcliffe
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p7 D 9 '28 600w
Boston Transcript p3 N 10 '28 280w
N Y Times p22 O 14 '28 320w

"The hasty newspaper reader will probably be surprised to find how entertaining the speeches are. Mr. Baldwin is one of our most cultured statesmen, devoted to books and art, and possessed of pretty wit—as he shows, for instance, in his St. David's Day address of last year, or his speech at the Royal Society dinner. He is typically English in his restraint."
+ Spec 140:647 Ap 20 '28 200w

"This selection, for which the publishers are apparently responsible, has been excellently done. It contains the essence of the Prime Minister's philosophy, omitting everything ephemeral or partisan. The author of the selection was concerned less with the message than with the man, and the closing sections of the book appropriately reveal Mr. Baldwin in his happy 'unbuttoned' mood when a kindly and spontaneous humour is permitted to season his wisdom."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p279 Ap 19 '28 900w

BALFOUR, ARTHUR JAMES BALFOUR, 1st earl of. Opinions and argument from speeches and addresses, 1910-1927. 301p $4 Doubleday, Doran

304 28-9947

While the speeches and addresses given here deal largely with political subjects, the range of the book's contents is wide, and includes other lighter or more personal matters. The speeches are grouped under the headings Personal and other memories; A political miscellany; The modern state; On imperial affairs; Zionism; International affairs; Golf.

"Most readers will not suspect that the speeches, delivered extemporaneously, have in the main been reproduced without revision. . . To say anything sensible on such a variety of matters, and to say it with literary elegance and an air of intellectual competence, is itself a feat, and one all the greater because, during most of the years which this volume covers, Lord Balfour was actively in politics notwithstanding that the burden of party leadership had been laid aside." W: MacDonald
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p13 Ag 26 '28 850w

"Oratory is a word that cannot be used in connection with Lord Balfour. He is one of the most masterly of English speakers, but his speaking even on the most formal occasion makes no approach to formality. Often enough, when printed as it comes from the verbatim reporter, it looks rather distressing. But when subjected to correction in trifling matters it comes out like fine conversation—flexible, effortless, and perfectly clear."
+ Nation and Ath 42:326 N 26 '27 650w
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:325 Je '28
Times [London] Lit Sup p775 N 3 '27 1100w

BALFOUR, HEARNDEN, pseud. of BERYL HEARNDEN AND EVA BALFOUR. Enterprising burglar. 305p $2 Houghton [7s 6d Hodder & S.]

28-20730

He was a gentleman, he was good looking, he had plenty of money, but he wanted excitement. Life in England was too tame after the furor of the war. So he took up burglary and left his card at each job—Vive le Sport, it read. He robbed the too wealthy and gave the proceeds to the poor. There was conspiracy rife in high places and he ran across it; here was something more sporting than burglary. He took a hand in this, got into a peck of trouble, came out triumphant, bringing with him a charming sweetheart.

Booklist 25:125 D '28
Boston Transcript p5 O 6 '28 250w
Times [London] Lit Sup p861 N 15 '28 90w
Wis Lib Bul 24:307 N '28

BALFOUR-BROWNE, FRANK. Insects. (Home univ. lib. of modern knowledge) 256p $1 Holt [2s Williams & N.]

595.7 Insects 28-7696

A brief general introduction to the structure, classification and life-history of insects, with chapters on social life among the insects and on insect-collecting.

Booklist 24:387 Jl '28
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 Je 3 '28 140w
Boston Transcript p7 Je 2 '28 140w

"A truer account than The Ant People. One could hardly want a better introduction to the subject. And yet most people will find Dr. Ewers's book the more interesting, however much they may dislike his method and his girdings at formal science. He has given a fairly complete picture of the ants, while Mr. Balfour-Browne has only been able to touch on the essentials of insect life in general."
— + New Statesman 30:437 Ja 14 '28 320w
St Louis 26:350 N '28

"An excellent book for the general thoughtful reader."
+ Sat R of Lit 5:92 S 1 '28 120w
Spec 140:sup465 Mr 24 '28 200w
Times [London] Lit Sup p931 D 8 '27 50w
Wis Lib Bul 24:249 O '28

BAMFORD, T. G., and HARRIS, HAROLD. Metallurgist's manual; foreword by T. Turner. 246p il $5 Van Nostrand [15s Chapman & H.]

669 Metallurgy

"Title is somewhat misleading; half of the book is concerned with assaying and chemical analysis of metallurgical materials. Chapters on smelting, pyrometry, and metallography cover these subjects briefly, and there are various tables which may interest both the chemist and the metallurgist."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

---

"The methods presented show careful selection from the most modern practices. The language is clear and concise and the instructions are easy to follow. It might be regretted that no references to more comprehensive treatises are made." G. E. Doan

+ — Chem & Met Eng 35:108 F '28 300w

"A book with this title, written by lecturers in metallurgy at the University of Birmingham, was expected to be a notable addition to metallurgical literature. It was a disappointment to find that it contains almost nothing of interest to the metallurgist, as that profession is usually defined in this country. Information on the hot- and cold-working of metals, mechanical testing, and heat treatment is conspicuous by its absence. The iron-carbon diagram appears, with a few comments on heat treatment of steel, but the reader gets no hint that heat-treatable aluminum alloys exist. The manual is distinctly below the average of the other books in its field." H. W. Gillett

— Ind & Eng Chem 20:103 Ja '28 280w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 32:650 D '27

BANCROFT, FREDERIC. Calhoun and the South Carolina nullification movement. 199p $2 Johns Hopkins

975.7 Calhoun, John Caldwell. Nullification. South Carolina—Politics and government. United States—Politics and government

28-11820

A brief historical and critical study of a famous political incident in Jackson's administration and of the events leading up to and succeeding it.

"One is puzzled to see just what has inspired this work. The chapters read like lectures for a popular audience. Their content is the familiar story as seen from what might be called the point of view of the Whig tradition. Such interpretation as has been added to the bare facts is in accord with that tradition. Today a good many people, not special pleaders, feel impelled to disagree. There are new interpretations which some of us had hoped Mr. Bancroft had admitted to his thoughts. But, of course, he is within his rights in turning his back on views that are still controversial. . . It is also fair to insist that Mr. Bancroft's last chapter is too dogmatic for true history. His reasoning, summing up the episode, is underlaid by the legalistic temper. Here is an echo of the school of the old Constitutionalists." N. W. S.

— Am Hist R 34:163 O '28 250w

"He unravels the intricacies of a complex period and evaluates the motives of leaders with an impartiality not always shown by historians of movements marked by high and bitter feeling. . . On the whole, it is an impersonal account accurate and well-annotated and a definite contribution to the period it covers." G. R. B. R.

+ Boston Transcript p2 Ag 11 '28 400w

BANG, HERMAN JOACHIM. Ida Brandt; tr. from the Danish by Arthur G. Chater. 311p $2.50 Knopf

28-25957

Her father was land steward on a Jutland estate. Her mother was from the peasant class, but she filled her new position with dignity, if not with ease. Ida spent a quiet and well-bred childhood, and when her father died, went unquestioningly on taking good care of her mother until she too died. Then, because she thought everyone should work, Ida became a nurse in Copenhagen. Karl von Eichbaum, a friend of her childhood, was employed at the same hospital and gradually Ida gave more and more of her time, money and love to this weak son of the aristocracy. When Karl fell in love with another girl of his own class, Ida went quietly and uncomplainingly on her way. Sacrifice was the keynote of her life; she hardly seemed to sense it.

"Whatever this novel suffers from the indirection of its method is amply atoned for by a certain feeling for the more delicate shades of character and the perfect finish of the portrait it offers. It is a work based on clear but sensitive observation of life and a sympathy that steers clear of the befuddlement of moral issues."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p21 N 18 '28 500w

"The novel lacks atmosphere; it is done timidly instead of boldly; it leaves the reader cold and unmoved."

— Boston Transcript p6 N 17 '28 300w

"The pictures of life on the country estate and of Copenhagen society impress the reader with their authenticity, and are to that extent interesting. As a novel the book is competent and reasonably vivacious."

+ Nation 128:111 Ja 23 '29 200w

"Begins with so clumsy and outdated a device that one shivers at the thought of plowing through another book full of the realism of the '90s. Fortunately, however, the rest of the book resorts to nothing so stupid as the long letter—the kind of letter which would never be written—that Ida Brandt receives from her girlhood friend, and the story that follows commands respect and interest."

+ — N Y Times p48 D 2 '28 600w

BANKS, ELIZABETH L. Remaking of an American. 297p $5 Doubleday, Doran

B or 92

28-8746

The autobiography of the war years and after, of an American journalist in London. Miss Banks has a dramatic story to tell of London during the war and of her own unwearied efforts in the cause of the allies. She returned to the United States via Canada after the war, and in a chapter of illuminating contrasts between England and America, gives the reasons for the reaffirmation of her American citizenship.

"She writes in a somewhat journalistic, anecdotal manner, but clearly and logically, with a painstaking regard for accuracy and a nice sense of the dramatic value of her material."

+ Bookm 67:xvi Jl '28 120w

"Her book is a document in contemporary international relations and interesting to those who would rather tackle the study of Anglo-American relations in personal narrative than in economic or political analysis." Ernestine Evans

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p4 My 20 '28 1100w

Boston Transcript p5 Je 9 '28 140w

"She is the most untiresome recorder of her own experiences and views you can find in a multitude of autobiographers. You'll like Elizabeth on every page."

+ Educ R 76:78 S '28 1300w

"An interesting book, rather more interesting than Mr. Bok's description of his own manufacture as an American. Miss Banks was a journalist expatriate in England. Later she came back to this country and, strangely enough, discovered that she liked it. Her conversion is well told and will please patriots who are not necessarily hundred per centers."

+ Ind 121:69 Jl 21 '28 100w

"Her argument for the superiority of America is not developed in a connected narration or in ordered arguments, neither is it developed with violence. She rambles about among brief paragraphs, letters, disjointed notations. Few of her chapters have firm and jointed structure. In such a method she is very clever. A flaming, thunderous argumentation of her own would invite challenge and contradiction. Instead, she presents her material with little comment—the reader draws conclusions. 'Here is England that I love, here is America that I love,' she seems to say, 'What do you make of them?'" Marie Luhrs

+ N Y World p9m My 20 '28 700w

BANNER, HUBERT STEWART. Romantic Java; as it was & is; a description of the diversified peoples, the departed glories & strange customs of a little known island, remarkable both for its arts, decorative & dramatic, & for its natural beauty & the richness of its resources. 282p il $6 Lippincott [21s Seeley, S.]

919.22 Java [28-10987]

Equipped with a map and a number of interesting pictures the book describes the life and customs, the art and culture of the various Javanese peoples. The history of Java and present day political problems are also touched upon.

Reviewed by Lawton Mackall

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p14 Ag 26 '28 250w

"The volume as a whole makes absorbing reading, and a good index is of material help in locating many particular items of interest." J. H. W.

+ Boston Transcript p1 Ap 7 '28 500w

Cleveland Open Shelf p118 N '28

"Mr. Banner has written an interesting account of Java, again distinguished by the excellence of its illustrations, especially the line drawings in the text. Much of his history will be new to the average reader."

+ New Statesman 29:818 O 8 '27 50w

Sat R 144:552 O 22 '27 800w

"A scholarly work that loses nothing of interest because of its scientific character. The book is packed full of interesting facts, descriptions of native customs, discussion of the arts of the country, of its scenic features, of its ceremonies and celebrations."

+ Sat R of Lit 4:674 Mr 10 '28 70w

Times [London] Lit Sup p699 O 6 '27 50w

BANNING, MRS MARGARET (CULKIN). Money of her own. 327p $2 Harper

28-20225

A slight variant on the theme of the wealthy wife and the poor husband. When Carol Ranger is ostracized by her set for one of her practical jokes she permits Philip Helm to marry her. So long as they are both poor they are happy. But when Carol comes into her uncle's money her old extravagant tastes play havoc with her new intentions and with Phil's pride.

"Another conventional novel about a social group of modish clothes, polo and catty friends is redeemed by the swift and aptly characteristic dialogue that carries the interest along and often conceals the triteness of plot and characterization. The theme of blase youth, boredom and the pitfalls of money, legitimate though it may be, remains too familiar to elicit any response but that of tacit recognition."

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 S 16 '28 260w

"There is nothing particularly profound or subtle about this latest novel by Mrs. Banning, but for bright and entertaining fiction to while away an idle hour or two it very excellently passes muster."

Boston Transcript p4 S 15 '28 170w

Cleveland Open Shelf p137 D '28

Nation 128:112 Ja 23 '29 220w

New Repub 56:310 O 31 '28 50w

"There is nothing about the story that is outstanding. Mrs. Banning is writing for a woman's magazine audience. She knows the limitations of her readers and consequently never shocks with too modern a phrase or too advanced a social custom. She is not hard to read, and her rapid, conversational style is always satisfactory because too much is never expected of it."

— + N Y Times p7 S 2 '28 400w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:544 N '28

Springf'd Republican p7e N 11 '28 200w

Wis Lib Bul 24:305 N '28

BARBEY D'AUREVILLY, JULES AMEDEE. Bewitched; tr. from the French by Louise Collier Willcox; with an introd. by Ernest Boyd. (Odd no. ser.) 276p $2 (6s) Harper

28-9735

Written in 1854, the story is laid among the superstitious peasant folk on the moors of Normandy. A countrywoman of great integrity and pride is cursed by a shepherd for a fancied slight. She becomes the victim of a degrading passion for a priest, a maimed and sinister figure, enmeshed in political intrigue. The tragic affair is never forgotten by the people of the moors. Years later, one of them retells it to the narrator.

" 'Bewitched' is not a mirror of life and times, such as were the classical novels. It is a mood or an atmosphere, in which we find strong characters, love and tragedy. . . The plot is simple, and the story is told with a great dramatic sense, and with a knowledge of the deepest chords in human nature." L. S. K.

+ Boston Transcript p4 Ap 25 '28 450w

Reviewed by Francis Birrell

Nation and Ath 44:259 N 17 '28 650w

"His romantic and imaginative powers are given full sweep and the result is a fascinating narrative."

+ Springf'd Republican p10 Ap 24 '28 150w

BARBICAN, JAMES. Confessions of a rum-runner. 310p $2 Washburn [7s 6d Blackwood]

28-7036

An Englishman at loose ends after the war, becomes a rum-runner and shares the excitements and profits associated with the game. Names of persons and places are changed in this chronicle, but the facts are vouched for by the publishers.

"On the Island it will be widely read and may shatter many a monocle. Here it can be passed by, for it has little literary or news value. It may do some harm. For the more civilized citizen is beginning to take liquor as it should be taken—straight and for granted."

Bookm 67:xxvii My '28 380w

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 Je 17 '28 210w

Boston Transcript p2 Jl 14 '28 300w

Reviewed by R. C. B. Brown

N Y Evening Post p13 Mr 3 '28 300w

N Y Times p5 Jl 1 '28 650w

"Whether Mr. Barbican who wrote the 'Confessions of a Rum Runner' is any relation to Mrs. Malaprop, I don't know, but being English, he maltreats the American language. Perhaps its appearing in Blackwood's, an English magazine, accounts for the preposterous footnotes, but as the book was reprinted here the publishers could easily have edited it. It seems strange that this first intimate book on a most important phase of American life should be written by an Englishman. Are American bootleggers mice, or are they litterateurs?" Tom Davin

— N Y World p11m Ap 29 '28 200w

"This is an extremely interesting book. Mr. 'Barbican' has a most engaging personality, and recounts his surprising adventures in a lighthearted fashion which makes his book far more entertaining than the average novel."

+ Sat R 144:634 N 5 '27 200w

"A series of dangerous adventures by land, sea and air—all narrated with gusto and in a way to put no strain on credulity."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p778 N 3 '27 980w

BARBUSSE, HENRI. I saw it myself; tr. by Brian Rhys. 251p $2.50 Dutton

940.49 European war, 1914-1918 28-28888

The horrors of war in all its stark brutality are revived in these ghastly incidents which took place in France or in Russia during the Revolution and were observed by M. Barbusse himself or related to him by reliable witnesses.

"In this book of brilliantly incisive sketches taken from the life he stirs one to look at the things he has seen in war and in peace, in Balkan prisons and in quiet European villages, and then to decide whether the world that holds them is yet quite the best of all possible spheres. And he presents these disquieting pictures in a prose that has the urbane style of an academician with something dramatic to write about, for once." C. G. Poore

+ N Y Times p11 D 23 '28 680w

"His book abounds in shocking examples of cruelty, torture, and terror, which are effective propaganda for the 'Class War.' They are, in every instance, based on actual fact, but fact conveniently distorted to serve as a Communist text. As propaganda they are out of date; as literature they are negligible; as polemics alone are they significant." J: Carter

— + Sat R of Lit 5:540 D 22 '28 170w

BARD, JOSEF. Shipwreck in Europe. 314p $2.50 (7s 6d) Harper

28-7957

An American business man suffering from nervous depression undergoes psycho-analytic treatment in Vienna. The new attitude engendered toward himself and his fellows leads to an unhappy experience, and tho he tries to understand his Viennese friends and their point of view, he succeeds only in finding himself isolated from them and from his old life.

"It is so good that one realizes with a shudder that only in an age when 'American' has become as notorious a misnomer as 'Hun' was a misnomer not so long ago, could its main thesis have been so warped. . . The Americanism of Ulric Raphael confuses an ironical fable that contained brilliant possibilities, and that in any case makes interesting reading and leaves one looking forward expectantly to this writer's next book." A. B. Parsons

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p13 Ap 22 '28 900w

"This novel presents an amazing gallery of fresh, delightfully handled portraits, and if its hero is an unpleasant reflection both upon man and upon America, the author has suffused his work with an unfailing and ingenious humor which deepens and enriches the acute realism of the whole." H. W. R.

+ Boston Transcript p4 Je 9 '28 500w

"An interesting thesis, though stiffly and coldly developed; one can but regret that the thesis should have absorbed the entire book."

— + Nation 126:493 Ap 25 '28 100w

"There is an agreeable hardness about the author's mind, but the book is unconvincing." Raymond Mortimer

Nation and Ath 43:144 My 5 '28 100w

"Finding that his golden fleece has turned to cotton wool, this Jason learns at last that he is not made for Europe. The record of the discovery is given with crispness, sympathy and humor. Although Paris, Berlin and London are also visited, the story opens and closes in Vienna, and it is the Viennese scenes that are the best." C. A. C.

+ New Repub 55:104 Je 13 '28 280w

— New Statesman 31:546 Ag 4 '28 130w

"Much material is gathered and piled up: rich, inflammable stuff which promises a blazing denouement. Mr. Bard applies the torch and a feeble flicker rewards our suspense. . . That the framework is so slight is a real loss, for Mr. Bard writes well, is skillful at presenting atmosphere and has both wit and intelligence." Tess Slesinger

— + N Y Evening Post p13 Mr 31 '28 300w

N Y Times p9 My 27 '28 440w

"One thing can be said for the novel and that is that the story moves rapidly and is well constructed. There is nothing gripping or inspiring about it; in fact, there are places when you wonder whether you are not more bored with Smith's story than Smith is bored with himself."

— + Springf'd Republican p5f Ag 12 '28 350w

Reviewed by Halle Schaffner

Survey 60:485 Ag 1 '28 300w

Times [London] Lit Sup p582 Ag 9 '28 130w

BARING, MAURICE. When they love. 206p $2.50 Doubleday, Doran

28-23042

To save his young artist friend from the wiles of a light woman, an English author undertakes to make the lady fall in love with himself. So well does he succeed, and so mistaken is he in her real nature that she dies, literally, of a broken heart. The affair takes place in Rome.

Booklist 25:119 D '28

"It may be the first-person narrative form, with its spareness of detail and emphasis on plot, or it may be a certain fastidious delicacy in Mr. Baring which keeps this from becoming a truly revealing picture. Jenny, as a passionate and deeply loving woman, is never clearly realized, and so her death, even with the moving setting the author has given, fails to produce the sense of inevitability."

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p16 N 11 '28 450w

"Maurice Baring writes a direct and intensely lucid prose. At times he is witty, often he is ironic, always he is fundamentally sound in his conception of the values of life. . . Ingeniously written though this novel may be, we are never stirred from the commencement of the story to its close. We are enlivened at moments and even amused. We are continually interested in seeing what spectators think of the comedy. Yet its great fault lies in finding comedy where tragedy would be infinitely more fitting." D. F. G.

+ — Boston Transcript p2 S 19 '28 1400w

"Mr. Baring writes well, because he writes with great plainness; his stories have emotional force, because the emotion in them is indicated rather than expressed." T. S. Matthews

+ New Repub 56:184 O 3 '28 250w

"'When They Love' is, of course, well written, and the vivid, fascinating figure of Jenny True has been effectively sketched."

+ N Y Times p6 O 7 '28 680w

"We criticise only the supernatural touch at the end. We find interest, entertainment or excitement frequently between the covers of these books, but seldom, as in this case, real distinction." W. R. Brooks

+ — Outlook 150:1214 N 21 '28 170w

Sat R of Lit 5:439 D 1 '28 320w

BARKER, ERNEST. National character and the factors in its formation. 288p $3.50 Harper [10s 6d Methuen]

320.15 National characteristics. Nationalism and nationality [27-24609]

For descriptive note see Annual for 1927.

"To those who care to have their mind set thinking about these things, and to those many who have looked for a book on nationalism which combines liberalism of outlook with a genuine love of tradition, this work of a ripe scholar is heartily to be commended." G. E. G. Catlin

+ Am Pol Sci R 22:199 F '28 1000w

Booklist 24:318 My '28

Reviewed by J: Langdon-Davies

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p14 Ap 22 '28 280w

Boston Transcript p1 S 24 '28 750w

"Especially interesting is the chapter on Language, Literature and Thought, but, indeed, throughout this admirable book one is in contact with a mind versed in wresting clarity and life from a subject too often relegated to the classroom."

+ Dial 84:255 Mr '28 80w

BARKER, ERNEST—Continued

"This book is of the first importance to teachers and students of ethics in the more practical applications. The fundamental problem of the moral standard and of the criterion by which to estimate the quality of any national character—these are not discussed. But Professor Barker has certainly covered a large enough field and his illuminative examples and suggestive criticism make his book valuable for political philosophy in general." C. D. Burns

+ Int J Ethics 38:354 Ap '28 480w

"The book is important because it is itself so thoroughly English and by its tone, its moral stress, its quality of common sense, its half-humorous preference of cumulative narrative to logical generalization, is even more an example of English national character than a disquisition about it." G: E. G. Catlin

+ Nation 127:140 Ag 8 '28 800w

"The reader who is not repelled by closely printed pages, paragraphs often more than a page in length, and a serious and unenlivened style, will find much to repay him in this thoughtful book." W: MacDonald

+ — N Y Times p6 My 27 '28 710w

"I doubt whether it contains a single new fact; there are few really new ideas, although many old ones are presented in a new light; and the style, though clear and intelligible, rarely rises to such a level that the mere charm of flowing words compels one to read on and on. Nevertheless the book is of the very highest value because Dr. Barker not only displays a remarkable power of balanced judgment, but welds his whole thought into a singularly well-knit and inspiring unity." Ellsworth Huntington

+ — Sat R of Lit 4:697 Mr 24 '28 1100w

Reviewed by H. A. Miller

World Tomorrow 11:133 Mr '28 400w

BARKER, LEWELLYS FRANKLIN. Young man and medicine. (Vocational ser.) 202p $2.50 Macmillan

610 Physicians. Medicine. Profession, Choice of 28-3480

The professor emeritus of medicine, Johns Hopkins university, speaks to the young man about to enter the medical profession on the opportunities for service in all the branches of the field, and of the rewards and satisfactions to be found in such work. The appendix contains advice on the personal qualifications of the medical worker and the choice of a medical school, concluding with a brief bibliography.

Booklist 24:384 Jl '28

"This little book is a concise and practical guide in helping a young man see what he needs and what he may expect to find in a profession that must have high standards as to education, character and ability."

+ Boston Transcript p5 Ap 7 '28 200w

Pratt p12 summer '28

BARNES, ALBERT C. Art in painting. 2d ed rev & enl 560p il $6 Harcourt

750 Painting 28-13536

"Mr. Barnes's already established study of the plastic values in plastic art, and of the means whereby they may be taught and appreciated, is enlarged and revised in order to bring the accounts of contemporary painters more directly into line with the purpose of the book and in order to make room for discussion of the early German, Flemish, Dutch, and French painters."—Nation

---

Booklist 25:85 N '28

"A notable venture into one of the most difficult of all fields. Mr. Barnes makes no use of jargon and he engages in no hocus-pocus. His analyses of individual paintings are lucid and his estimates of individual painters are sound." B. R. Redman

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 Jl 15 '28 250w

Boston Transcript p4 Je 16 '28 400w

Nation 127:114 Ag 1 '28 60w

Times [London] Lit Sup p450 Je 30 '27 1050w

BARNES, DJUNA. Ryder. 323p il $3 Liveright 28-21480

"The story of Wendell Ryder, his gallant old mother Sophia, his wife, and his mistresses, rushes off tangentially in streams of technical display characteristic of the group around Joyce, but it invariably keeps to the dilute and echoed sound of Chaucer, Sterne and the King James Version. It is bloated, in the Joyce-out-of-Rabelais manner, by endless catalogues of objects; its people are pressed thinner than paper between the listed contents of their clothes-presses, their mantelshelves and their out-houses. Miss Barnes sweeps the scraps together with a strong arm and a long wind: they remain, unaffected by this vigor, litter from exemplars. The book's bawdry becomes a kind of kickshaw thrown in with the rest, to no purpose because borrowed."—New Repub

---

"A witty and original book, fat with rich phrasing and written with an almost too facile brilliance."

+ Nation 127:sup639 D 5 '28 180w

"Miss Barnes, although here she has gone rather high and wide, is extremely capable of herself. She is richly and authentically gifted: 'A Book' and some of the less derived passages of 'Ryder' are witness to her power. If she were to listen to herself she could not for a long time mistake the technical article of apparel for the true tissue of creation." L. B.

+ — New Repub 56:282 O 24 '28 320w

"Here is a tumbling bookful of words, a braggadocio and higgledy-piggledy and rummage sale of words, a tongue-in-my-cheek and thumb-to-my-nose of words—farmers' words and pedants' words and words to be said hanging out the clothes when the scrubbed sheet runs away with the wind." Vincent McHugh

N Y Evening Post p9 S 29 '28 530w

"Here are nimble wit, gay humor, trenchant satire, and, above all, a grandiose imagination creating a robustious world of loose-tongued, free-living characters such as have hardly ventured on paper for a century. 'Ryder' is certainly the most amazing book ever written by a woman." E. S. Bates

+ Sat R of Lit 5:376 N 17 '28 800w

BARNES, ERNEST WILLIAM. Should such a faith offend? sermons and addresses. 331p $3 Doubleday, Doran [7s 6d Hodder & S.]

230 Theology. Church of England. Sermons 28-11337

The bishop of Birmingham, a modernist whose views on evolution and the doctrine of the Eucharist have made him a center of controversy in the Church of England by arousing the antagonism of the Anglo-Catholic party, brings together 31 of his sermons and addresses fairly representing his position on these questions.

Nation and Ath 42:460 D 17 '27 750w

Reviewed by A. N. Wildes

Outlook 150:996 O 17 '28 600w

"The more the book is studied, the more the persuasion grows that the capacity to build a large and constructive view is wanting. The word science appears on almost every page, but the thing that other writers mean is absent."

— + Spec 139:1055 D 10 '27 250w

"Much of this book has already appeared in various journals during the last six or seven years, but it is a real gain to have in one volume a statement of what we must take to be the position of a prominent Modernist in the English church."

+ Springf'd Republican p7f Ja 15 '28 1100w

"He is rarely conciliatory and sometimes suggests the tone of the superior person who doubts the intelligence of those who hesitate to accept his views. Probably more people have been irritated by the manner of the Bishop's recent pronouncements than by their substance."

Times [London] Lit Sup p945 D 15 '27 850w

BARNES, HARRY ELMER. Evolution of penology in Pennsylvania; a study in American social history. 414p il $5 Bobbs

343.2 Prisons—Pennsylvania. Punishment. Crime and criminals—Pennsylvania. Criminal law 27-24760

"A short introductory chapter discusses the importance of the history of penology in general and of the development in Pennsylvania in particular. This is followed by longer chapters on the coloniai period, the period from 1776 to 1835, and the period from 1835 to 1927. This shows that in the period from 1776 to 1835 Pennsylvania played a leading part in the movement for the reform of criminal jurisprudence and penal administration, not only in America but also in Europe. After 1835 conditions became steadily worse until 1913, when plans for improvement began to be formulated which have been applied to some extent during the last few years. The work includes a special discussion of prison industry and a chapter on Politics and Prison Administration."—Am Pol Sci R

"The detailed study of the 'Pennsylvania system' and the analysis of recent penological developments should prove both valuable and enlightening. However, the state is no longer a leader in penological progress; and its standards are the ones held generally throughout the country. This book will prove exceedingly valuable as a reference in connection with college courses in crime and penology." G: B. Mangold

\+ Am Econ R 18:146 Mr '28 200w

Am Pol Sci R 22:230 F '28 160w

Reviewed by W. D. Lane

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p7 Ja 15 '28 360w

Reviewed by Lorine Pruette

Nation 126:411 Ap 11 '28 480w

Reviewed by P. H. Douglas

New Repub 55:336 Ag 15 '28 400w

"The principle of individual treatment is coming to the fore and a genuine, scientific application of the principle can hardly be much longer delayed. Professor Barnes has done well to make this tendency the keynote of his history and the basis of his hope for the future. But he is a ready writer, with a passion for generalization, and needs to be read carefully to realize how halting and spasmodic our progress has been." G: W. Kirchwey

\+ N Y Times p11 My 13 '28 880w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:198 Ap '28

"Professor Barnes's admirable work is more than the history of penology in one of our oldest states: it is a study of the basic and characteristic penology of a century. Much has been written of the history of Pennsylvania penology. This work is, however, the most careful and exhaustive study yet made of the subject. It acquires added value from the fact that its author is not only a competent historian, but an advanced and discriminating sociologist." A. H. MacCormick

\+ Sat R of Lit 5:56 Ag 18 '28 480w

"The book bears all the earmarks of having been finished ten years ago with but a feeble gesture toward bringing it up to date. We wonder if, perhaps, this may not be at the root of its shortcomings. The valuable historical material in Mr. Barnes' book would be made all the more significant and useful by a conscientious digging for contemporary facts which would make it a more trustworthy guide of present, as well as an admirable history of past, events." F. L. Sanville

— + Survey 59:784 Mr 15 '28 580w

BARNES, HARRY ELMER. Living in the twentieth century; a consideration of how we got this way. 392p $3.50 Bobbs

909.82 Civilization, Progress. Twentieth century 28-22009

Dr Barnes sets forth the changes in human life and thought which separate the civilization of our day from that of two or three generations ago. He shows how the advances in science and technology during the last fifty years have produced a new world of material culture and forced radical changes in social, industrial and political institutions.

Reviewed by Gilbert Seldes

Bookm 68:225 O '28 250w

"Professor Barnes approaches his task with characteristic gusto. He has the courage of the crusader who knows that he is right and that his enemies are the apostles of the forces of darkness. He does not attempt to convince but to finish off his opposition." R. A. Wade

\+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p11 D 23 '28 900w

"Offering himself as a chronicler rather than as a critic, Professor Barnes sums up in highly interesting fashion the differences which show themselves between the civilization of the present century and that of its predecessor. Here and there in the volume his opinions give ample variety to the narrative." E. N.

\+ Boston Transcript p6 O 6 '28 550w

Reviewed by Herschel Brickell

No Am 226:adv N '28 40w

R of Rs 78:36 N '28 60w

St Louis 26:391 D '28

"It is an astounding piece of work, for while the book probably contains no material which could not be found elsewhere, it comprises between its covers the summary of researches and developments in a dozen different major fields. It is a happy circumstance that Mr. Barnes is rather partial to what is new and progressive in all these fields; for while he sees unsolved problems facing us in every direction, his is not the attitude which deplores or fears the changes but rather seeks to understand and utilize them as fully as possible." Paul Jones

World Tomorrow 11:470 N '28 480w

BARNES, HOWARD TURNER. Ice engineering. 364p il $5 Renouf pub. co.

551.57 Ice GS28-268

"This unique work by the Professor of Physics in McGill University treats fully of the structure, formation, and properties of ice and the various means to prevent its damaging action in hydraulic power plants and in navigable waters. Especially interesting is the chapter on the use of thermit in ice-breaking. There is an extensive classified bibliography."—N Y New Tech Bks

---

Booklist 25:107 D '28

N Y New Tech Bks 13:36 Jl '28

BARNES, MRS MARGARET (AYER). Prevailing winds. 298p $2.50 Houghton

28-24064

Stories of young love and marriage reprinted from Pictorial Review, Harpers, and the Red Book. Contents: Home fire; Set a thief; Feather beds; Shirtsleeves to shirtsleeves; The eyes of youth; The dinner party; Arms and the boy; Perpetual care.

"Deft and skillful in construction, finished in manner, these stories are the work of a practised hand. The rise and fall of ordered technique makes them easy and pleasant reading, and the rhythm of the prose itself carries along. But for all their apparent success, a lack of variety in tone and a narrowness in scope induce a sense of sameness that is akin to monotony. On finishing the book, all is as one, and one as all."

\+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p27 D 9 '28 300w

Boston Transcript p4 D 15 '28 200w

BARNES, MARGARET—Continued

"Eight excellent short stories are to be found in this appropriately named book. Many of the stories have a high emotional quality, attained more often through revery than action. There is, however, a noticeable similarity of theme: regret for lost love."

+ N Y Times p28 N 25 '28 720w

"It is sometimes very agreeable to read a tale which has the hall marks of complete 'sophistication.' One 'sophisticated' short story, or several written by different authors, from varying points of view, furnish spiritual refreshment. But it is questionable whether a collection from one writer—unless he be a genius—can be of sufficient power to stand close scrutiny. In this collection, 'Set A Thief to Catch A Thief' is possibly the most original. Yet it is not a thing one would care to read twice. This may be said of any story which merely endeavors to criticize a single phase of life. Cleverly, 'smartly' written, there is considerable about this volume."

— + Sat R of Lit 5:358 N 10 '28 180w

BARNES, MRS MARY FRANCES (HARTLEY). Feeding the child from two to six; with an introd. by Richard M. Smith. 206p $2.50 (10s 6d) Macmillan

613.2 Children—Nutrition. Menus 28-4095

A book of balanced menus for the child of two to six. Party menus, and cooking rules and recipes are also given. The author is an experienced dietitian.

Reviewed by L. A. Wilkes

Am J Pub Health 18:1328 O '28 170w

Booklist 24:350 Je '28

"Unquestionably the author knows well the chemistry of foods and the chemistry of nutrition. But she has resolutely refused to make this volume a textbook of chemistry. She does not try to impart to harassed mothers all the technical information which she has gained from many years of study and experience in the feeding of children. Instead, she has written a book showing mothers and nurses just how one who does know all these things would advise them to proceed in the practical tasks of ordering meals, preparing vegetables and stimulating child-appetites. Readers of her text may not equip themselves for the honors of a graduate-degree on the Commencement platform, but they will do exceedingly well in the kitchen. Later, academic honors will be taken by their healthy, well-fed children."

+ Boston Transcript p9 Mr 31 '28 250w

"For the intelligent but untrained mother or nurse by a former dietitian in camps for little children."

J Home Econ 20:281 Ap '28 50w

BAROJA Y NESSI, PIO. Tree of knowledge; tr. from the Spanish by Aubrey F. G. Bell. 329p $3 Knopf

28-18501

A story of student life in Madrid. Andrés Hurtado is one of a large ill-conducted household, full of dissensions and antagonisms. He is intelligent, moody, and his experiences as a medical student and later as a doctor only deepen his conviction of the cruelty and bitterness of life. He falls in love at last with his only friend, a girl who has loved him for a long time, and marries her. Even thus, his happiness is short-lived. Lulu dies in childbirth, and Andrés has no wish to survive her.

"The strength of the book lies in its description of the perverse and shiftless types which crowd the streets of Madrid. With a cool impersonality more devastating than propaganda, Baroja pictures the diseased state of a whole society." E. H. Walton

Bookm 68:98 S '28 150w

"Baroja's novel 'The Tree of Knowledge' has long been regarded as one of his best works, a rounded and finished attempt to put into fictional form the peculiarly cynical and bitter philosophy which is his own. It is in addition to being an excellent example of the author's writing and a clear revelation of the essential masculinity and vigor of his mind, an unsparing picture of life in Spain, of life in medical schools, in a small town and in Madrid. Aubrey F. G. Bell, who knows Spain as well as he does the Castilian tongue, has made an unusually satisfactory translation." Herschel Brickell

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p5 Jl 22 '28 1200w

" 'The Tree of Knowledge' is a profoundly interesting book. As a picture of Spain and of Spanish life though a drab one, it is undoubtedly authentic, and painted, moreover, by the greatest of contemporary Spanish novelists." E. B. H.

+ Boston Transcript p4 Ag 11 '28 500w

"In most respects it is a masterly performance, this sharp, acid portrayal of the futile career of Andres Hurtado, symbol of that intellectualist generation which grew to disillusioned manhood at about the time of the Spanish-American War. This is not the first time this book has been written by Baroja; indeed its secondary theme—the fatty degeneration of contemporary Spain—is explicitly that of his great trilogy, 'The Struggle for Life.' The repetitiousness, however, does not seem to matter; for his inventive genius, akin to Balzac's, provides him with eternally new situations; and his scornful, honest prose excites admiration despite the familiarity of his subject matter." C. P. F.

+ Nation 127:162 Ag 15 '28 200w

"The terse descriptions of student life in Madrid and small-town existence in the provinces are probably the best things in the book. Certain clinical portions may revolt those with weak stomachs, and probably only specialists will enjoy twenty-four pages of philosophical dialogue which come directly in the middle of the book. The author seems to write with unusual sincerity and integrity. For this reason his work is decidedly above the average." C. A. C.

+ New Repub 56:27 Ag 22 '28 200w

"The book is particularly important as an unsparingly realistic picture of Spain, done with a hard humor that serves as a corrective for the usual romantic nonsense about the country." Herschel Brickell

+ No Am 226:adv S '28 110w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:427 O '28

BARR, DENNIS. Crimson quest (Eng title A dock brief). 310p $2 Sears [7s 6d J. Cape]

28-21981

Izzard, second mate on the Cloudbank, was charged with the murder of a shipmate while the vessel was discharging cargo at a Rumanian port. Back in England where Izzard was to be tried, he picked out John Stoyle, a young barrister, to defend him and then proceeded to tell John practically nothing. John had Armorel in mind and he determined to make a success of the case to prove his worth in her eyes. He embarked on the Cloudbank, went thru hazardous experiences and came back with the proof of Izzard's innocence. And Armorel was waiting for him.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 S 23 '28 60w

Boston Transcript p9 O 20 '28 100w

"Is a brisk, improbable adventure story, rather over-facetious, but entertaining, and well told." Cyril Connolly

+ — New Statesman 30:662 Mr 3 '28 50w

"Well written and full of lively descriptions of foreign lands. But it is really a book of adventure, not a detective story." L. P. Hartley

+ Sat R 144:232 F 25 '28 40w

"The tale is pure extravaganza, but its vivacity, humour, and pictorial charm carry the reader joyfully along." Gilbert Thomas

+ Spec 140:239 F 18 '28 200w

Springf'd Republican p7e N 18 '28 180w

Times [London] Lit Sup p224 Ag 22 '28 140w

BARRETT, EDWARD JOHN BOYD. Jesuit enigma. 351p il $4 Boni & Liveright

271.5 Jesuits 27-23705

For descriptive note see Annual for 1927.

Reviewed by L. P. Edwards
Am J Soc 34:225 Jl '28 480w

"The author may be a good psychologist, but he is a very poor artist. He lets us see in every chapter of his book that he writes out of a grudge, and he overdoes his argument. The intellectual achievements of the Jesuits are absolutely suppressed. Instead, Dr. Barrett confines himself to looking for anything discreditable, however trivial, he can find. Most of his facts, it should be pointed out, were dug out of Father Campbell's history of the Jesuits; but he has been careful to select only such incidents as could be interpreted in an evil light." Theodore Maynard
— Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 Ja 29 '28 1100w

"This is not a sensationally anti-Jesuit book. It makes no startling revelations of depravity or immorality. It gives no support to the crude notion that the Jesuits are either fiends, criminals, or traitors." W. E. Garrison
Christian Century 45:144 F 2 '28 1200w
J Religion 8:160 Ja '28 20w

"His book is a penetrating and intimate interpretation of the history, principles, practice, and psychology of the Society of Jesus, of which he was a member from 1905 to 1925. It has none of the nastiness or bitterness of the ordinary literature of exposure." J: T. McNeill
+ J Religion 8:298 Ap '28 950w

"The picture which he draws, while less appealing as a piece of spiritual biography than Alfred Loisy's 'My Duel with the Vatican,' and without the central thread of a great religious controversy which helps to make that book a classic, is nevertheless one of vivid interest, certain to be painful to those who have affected to see in the Jesuit order a model of intellectual ability or religious devotion, and disturbing to such as fear ecclesiastical encroachment upon religious toleration or the practice of democratic government." W: MacDonald
Nation 126:70 Ja 18 '28 550w
Nation and Ath 44:214 N 10 '28 1300w

"The book will be widely read, and deservedly so. It bears the earmarks of authenticity. If Dr. Barrett has fallen into the error of special pleading here and there, it does not vitiate his exposition nor the main trend of his arguments. To one who reads the book, the title 'Enigma' seems a bit misleading. There is nothing essentially puzzling about the Jesuits. If they are wrong, it is their premises that are at fault, not their logic. And those premises have behind them the teaching authority of the Holy See, with its claim to infallibility." J: C. Petrie
+ New Repub 53:253 Ja 18 '28 90w
Reviewed by P. W. Wilson
N Y Times p16 Ja 22 '28 550w
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:437 O '28

"Dr. Barrett has written a deeply interesting but far from satisfactory work. One of the most desirable of yet unwritten books is an adequate one on the Order of Jesus."
+ — Sat R 146:505 O 20 '28 1000w
Reviewed by C: S. Brown
Survey 60:243 My 15 '28 230w

BARRETTO, LARRY. Old enchantment. 319p $2 Day

28-9050

"Aunt Ellen, the indomitable old aristocrat of one of New York's old families, rules with arrogance her nephew and his twins, Audrey and Alexander. Rather than have them earn their own living they live on the little money she has left and without friends. Suddenly awakened to the modern world, the two young people cast aside the old traditions to go to work. Alexander finds work in a missionary office and Audrey dancing at a night club. One can not help sympathizing with the aunt in the end as we see her entering an old ladies' home, and the father dying. Alexander goes to a small mining town to marry his childhood sweetheart and Audrey is now able to marry Jack Harris, the divorced man she met while dancing at the club."—Cleveland staff notes

"It is a story of decaying aristocracy of implacable and, somehow, magnificent snobbery, that is to me far more human than any such tale Edith Wharton has ever told. 'Old Enchantment' deserves a hugh following." J: Farrar
+ Bookm 67:294 My '28 150w
Bookm 67:463 Je '28 140w

"This story is written without conviction, as if the author were constantly looking out the window as he typed or thinking of something else. Although competent and fairly interesting, one is tempted to damn it with the faint praise of 'readable,' for it is very easy to read—or to forget—and seems to have been a little too easy to write." Esther Forbes
— + Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p16 Ap 8 '28 630w

"The opening pages, which contain some memorable passages of Manhattan family life at the beginnings of this century, especially a fight wherein the young heir of a gentle family is beaten up by a band of slum children, lead the reader to expect much. When the action reaches the present day, it ceases to be engrossing."
+ — New Repub 54:279 Ap 18 '28 220w
Reviewed by R. C. B. Brown
N Y Evening Post p13 Ap 7 '28 200w

" 'Old Enchantment' is complete; the vulgar new has triumphed over the even more vulgar old. Vale, ave."
— N Y Times p9 Mr 18 '28 620w
Reviewed by J: R. Chamberlain
N Y Times p26 Je 24 '28 70w
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:243 My '28

"The narrative is unpleasant in its revelation of the silliness and futility to which a decayed gentlewoman may descend in order to preserve intact her own sterile gentility. [But it] is always very pleasant reading; only rarely does it descend from a high level of technical excellence. Mr. Barretto writes a graceful and sensitive prose; he has the power to stir our emotions."
+ — Sat R of Lit 4:954 Je 9 '28 210w

BARRIE, SIR JAMES MATTHEW, bart. Peter [2] Pan; or, The boy who would not grow up. uniform ed 162p $1.25 Scribner

822 28-26932

This is, curiously enough, the first appearance in book form of the play which is probably the most widely known and best loved of all Barrie's plays. The dedication to the Five with whom he shares the claim of authorship, and the stage directions thruout the play are a characteristic delight.

Reviewed by B. R. Redman
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 D 16 '28 170w
Springf'd Republican p10 N 28 '28 150w

BARRINGTON, E., pseud. See Beck, L. A.

BARROW, REGINALD HAYNES. Slavery in the Roman empire. 259p il $4 Dial press [15s Methuen]

326.937 Slavery in Rome. Rome—Social conditions [28-20621]

The author reviews the working of slavery in the first two centuries of the Roman Empire. He devotes his attention to the making of slaves, slaves in the household and on the land, in trade and industry, and in the service of state and town. He discusses the slave as a man and the custom of manumission and comes to the conclusion that slavery was not the cause of the downfall of the Roman Empire. The book contains a bibliography.

BARROW, R. H.—Continued

"The book is well annotated and it contains a comprehensive bibliography. In what it reveals of the old Romans, as well as in what it suggests of their social and economic problems, it is an excellent contribution to its subject."
+ Boston Transcript p7 N 7 '28 380w

"A work that is packed with facts illuminated by imagination, and couched in a style so easy and unaffected that only on reflection does one fully appreciate the research and the learning of which it is the expression."
+ New Statesman 31:132 My 5 '28 950w

"The history of Roman slavery is so full of interesting economic and social problems that this book—reasonably complete, quite reliable, and not too technical—will certainly meet with favor here as it has in England."
+ Sat R of Lit 5:497 D 8 '28 480w

"To the perennial controversy as to the true causes of Rome's decline the book is a contribution of value."
+ Spec 140:625 Ap 21 '28 180w

"The student will find in this volume ample information on the various aspects of slavery and guidance to inscriptions and literary sources. Mr. Barrow may be congratulated on a good piece of work which will be useful to many students of Roman history."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p444 Je 14 '28 750w

BARRY, CHARLES, pseud. Smaller penny. 262p $2 Dutton [2s 6d R. Holden] 28-14552

A London financier is found dead in front of his wireless set with a gun and a penny, slightly smaller than the ordinary coinage, on the floor nearby. Inspector Gilmartin must determine whether this is a case of murder or suicide, and what the penny has to do with it. The disappearance of the dead man's housekeeper and the discovery of a nephew only delay the solution, which hinges, as Gilmartin expected, on the trick penny.

"This is a businesslike, sensible and cumulatively exciting yarn." Will Cuppy
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 Jl 1 '28 100w

Cleveland Open Shelf p123 N '28

" 'The Smaller Penny' is a good title, and one can scarcely blame the author for padding his story a bit to justify it. It is a good story and it deserves a good title."
+ N Y Times p16 Jl 15 '28 160w

Springf'd Republican p7f Jl 8 '28 100w

BARRY, FREDERICK. Scientific habit of thought; an informal discussion of the source and character of dependable knowledge. 358p $3.50 Columbia univ. press

507 Science—Methodology. Logic, Symbolic and mathematical 27-24398

"Although Professor Barry is content to call this study merely 'an informal discussion of the source and character of dependable knowledge,' he ranges over a wide field. The conviction at which he ultimately arrives is that educational standards must inevitably be revised to conform to scientific humanism. 'It is less than two generations ago that our higher education became fully secularized and still more recently that its scope was extended sufficiently to permit its thorough liberalization,' he points out. Even so, there is still a long distance to travel. The cultivated world is 'going back to school,' but its standard of cultural values is being altered to meet the needs of modern scientific thought."—Books (N Y Herald Tribune)

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 F 5 '28 160w

"The exposition as a whole is thought-stimulating in the best sense." E. N.
+ Boston Transcript p3 D 24 '27 760w

"This book is well worth a reading by those who aspire to understand the balanced, cautious and painstaking character of true scientific thought." W. U. G.
+ Boston Transcript p3 Ja 7 '28 650w

"The work ends with a lengthy and moderately cheerful estimate of the possibilities for the dissemination of 'scientific humanism' in our universities. Certainly 'The Scientific Habit of Thought' is a worthy contribution to such an enterprise." A. E. Murphy
+ Int J Ethics 38:358 Ap '28 330w

"The unique fact about the book is that it breaks new ground. In his laboratory at Columbia, Dr. Barry has been doing pioneer thinking in assessing science and linking it up with metaphysics." P. B. McDonald
+ Sat R of Lit 4:555 Ja 28 '28 550w

"We are not impressed by the treatment of causality, the fundamental principle of the 'uniformity of Nature'; indeed Mr. Barry says as little about it as he can. He is evidently not quite at home in a philosophical discussion. On his special subject Mr. Barry is lucid and acute. His account of the evolution of some of the fundamental concepts of modern science is excellent: we may instance particularly the history of atomism on pages 249-271. Here and throughout he does full justice to the amazing achievements of the Greek intellect, which worked out the necessary forms that our knowledge of the physical world must take long before anything that we should now regard as real knowledge had been attained. Certainly he goes far by his own example to make us understand his conception of 'scientific humanism.' "
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p404 My 31 '28 1100w

BARRY, IRIS. Portrait of Lady Mary Montagu. 336p il $5 Bobbs [15s Benn]

B or 92 Montagu, Lady Mary (Pierrepont) Wortley 28-6511

"Miss Barry busies herself with setting forth a fine example of a woman of parts, who enjoyed her place in the world. Any biography of Lady Mary Wortley Montagu, who introduced vaccination into England, by tactics bold and commonsensical should give a great many American women a new notion of social method. Miss Barry is best when she is writing of the younger and simpler Mary, obliged, since her mother was dead and her father no clever match-maker, to manage her own marrying, and managing it heartily but with a constant head. The latter part of the book, describing Lady Mary's retreat to Italy, her relations with her son, and her return to hold a court in London in the little house arranged for her by her daughter, Lady Bute, has in it all the vitality of the materials."—Books (N Y Herald Tribune)

Booklist 24:360 Je '28

"Though she has indeed made Lady Montagu very much alive, the authoritative frame and the portrait itself do not quite harmonize. One questions at times the accuracy of the portrait and the liberties that the author takes, and then decides that, all in all, it is an admirable if not always convincing adaptation of Strachey's biographical methods." Robert Kissack, Jr.
+ — Bookm 67:445 Je '28 220w

"Miss Barry tells the story of the facts in competent narrative and with agreeable scholarship. The volume should pave the way for a revival of interest in Lady Mary's letters, in the possibilities of learning as a way to power and glory, in the tongue as a weapon, and the pen as an art which can produce an equal intoxication in writer and in reader, and faith in wit, which makes old women as interesting as beauty does young ones." Ernestine Evans

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p5 Mr 18 '28 550w

Boston Transcript p4 Mr 24 '28 500w

Cleveland Open Shelf p103 S '28

"Many pitfalls lie in wait for the writer of fact who employs in large measure the method of fiction. But Miss Barry has avoided them all, and presents us with an historical study that is more vital and charming than nine-tenths of even the best novels. Not only does Lady Montagu emerge from these pages clothed with real flesh and blood, but the whole background of her age glows with convincing life and colour."

+ Nation and Ath 42:790 F 25 '28 520w

"This study of her personality is neither quite a biography nor quite a novel. Frankly, Miss Barry had been better advised to write a novel rather than what purports to be a biography, interlarded with purely imaginary conversations. Miss Barry knows more than enough about eighteenth-century England to make the background to a novel, across which Lady Mary and her circle might move. What she cannot know is whether her readers will be content to be guided by her arbitrary imaginings, with no indication where fact ends and fiction begins."

— + New Statesman 30:500 Ja 28 '28 680w

"It was a full life and it is well told by Iris Barry. This is by no means the first biography of Lady Mary Montagu, but it is surely as good as any ever done." H. I. Matthews

+ N Y Times p9 Je 3 '28 700w

"It does not contain much that is new, but it presents the life of Lady Mary Montagu in an entertaining manner and although professing inability to solve the 'mystery' that still surrounds her, provides enough material so that the reader can draw his own conclusions." Harry Hansen

+ N Y World p10m F 26 '28 950w

"Miss Barry loses some of the effect of validity in her portrait by that too prevalent modern mixture of novel writing and biographical writing which makes easy but somewhat spurious reading and fails to comprehend the essential basis of either form." Ruth Suckow

Outlook 148:673 Ap 25 '28 150w

Pratt p41 autumn '28

"Miss Iris Barry has written a striking portrait of this famous and unfortunate Englishwoman, and has written it in so easy a style that it delights the reader as it would have delighted Lady Mary herself. The sober historian may be shocked by Miss Barry's transitions from the known to the unknown; by her failure to give much indication of when she is quoting and when reconstructing; and by the absence of references to sources of information; but for our part, we are confident that she has fully justified her method."

+ Spec 140:19 Ja 7 '28 880w

"Miss Barry's method owes something to the 'novelist' biographers, but it retains a good deal of the more familiar personal study, especially after the first few chapters. Her preface is somewhat unfortunate in its tendency to violence, and it starts the reader on the book with a bad taste in his mouth. But that is quickly forgotten in the interest of a brilliant, acute and penetrating study of a remarkable woman." H. K.

+ Springf'd Republican p7f My 20 '28 660w

"Miss Iris Barry is keenly interested in the background and the detail of her portrait of Lady Mary Wortley Montagu, as well as in her central figure, and she has very successfully sketched in the notabilities of a brilliant age. We may disagree with her conclusion that all former biographies of Lady Mary 'concern a corpse'; but that is not to deny that there is room for this new study of a remarkable personality, and that within its limitations it is very well done. But with all her ability to write good English she is often careless; she is fond of schoolgirl's verbs and writes that Pope was 'thrilled' to meet Lady Mary, and that she was 'intrigued' by something else; that Queen Anne was 'worried to death,' and that the Duke of Kingston's mind 'fussed indefinitely with the cause of his present passion.' "

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p73 F 2 '28 900w

"Miss Barry's sketch is slight, and, although readable enough, is quite undistinguished. One feels that the real personality, dignity, and worth of Lady Mary have undeservedly suffered by this careless succession of situation, anecdote, and incident. Her own pen would have written scathingly of her biographer's poor allotment of nearly one hundred pages to those dull letters between her and Edward Wortley Montagu and the almost total neglect of her mature correspondence with its acute advice to her daughter on the education of her grandchildren, with its fearless, witty, and rapid-fire criticism on books of the day." M. E. Chase

+ Yale R n s 18:374 winter '29 220w

BARTLETT, ARTHUR C. Sea dog. 299p $1.75 Wilde

27-27938

Furious that his father has bequeathed him nothing more valuable than a mongrel, young Wilson Bersey rows Pieface out to sea and leaves him there to drown. The dog is picked up by a ship. A short time later Wilson himself is rescued by the same ship and brought face to face with Pieface. After the first instinctive antagonism, friendship springs up between the two. The events of the voyage and the courageous example of the sea dog effect a change in the boy's character.

"The sea adventure of Pieface and his master malgre lui, are many and are told sympathetically."

+ Boston Transcript p7 O 29 '27 350w

"The change in Wilson through Pieface's influence is plausible, although coincidence is depended upon too much in the narrative."

Springf'd Republican p7f D 18 '27 100w

BARTLETT, ARTHUR C. Spunk, leader of the dog team. 311p $1.75 Wilde

26-21297

A gloomy, taciturn lad, son of a New England hermit, rescues a sled dog from its brutal master. For the sake of the dog that he calls Spunk, Sam gets into and out of a good many scrapes, and in the process becomes a different sort of boy.

Springf'd Republican p7f D 19 '26 260w

Wis Lib Bul 23:82 Mr '27

BARTLETT, FREDERICK CHARLES. Psychology and the soldier. 223p $3 Macmillan [7s 6d Cambridge univ. press]

150 Psychology. Soldiers 28-17155

"For the last six years Mr. Bartlett has been responsible for the lectures on psychology in relation to military problems at Cambridge, and his present volume is a selection from the material on which these lectures were based. Modern psychology is defined as 'a systematic attempt to understand the conditions of human activity,' and Mr Bartlett shows its possibilities in regard to the soldier's life in training and in war."—Sat R

"It is a difficult matter to discuss the practical application of psychology in a manner that appeals to the novice without offending the expert, but in this book Mr. Bartlett has succeeded admirably. Although he addresses himself primarily to the student of military affairs his discussion is also of interest to the general reader. . . Such a combination of sound psychology and simple exposition deserves a larger audience than the students to whom it was originally addressed."

+ Nature 121:89 Ja 21 '28 180w

BARTLETT, F: C:—Continued

"This is an interesting piece of practical psychology. Mr. Bartlett says quite rightly that recruits should be put through intelligence tests as well as medical examinations, and that these tests should be worked out by psychologists and not by sergeant-majors. Mr. Bartlett suggests that all officers should be instructed in elementary psychology. And they might well begin by reading this book."

+ New Statesman 30:472 Ja 21 '28 200w

N Y Times p16 Mr 11 '28 330w

"This is an admirable book to read which should be compulsory for all young officers. All who had experience on the Western Front in the late war will agree that Mr. Bartlett thoroughly understands how modern warfare may affect the men in the trenches."

+ Sat R 144:793 D 3 '27 130w

Times [London] Lit Sup p27 Ja 12 '28 820w

BARTLETT, ROBERT ABRAM. Log of Bob Bartlett. 352p il $3.50 (15s) Putnam

B or 92 Seafaring life. Arctic regions

28-21051

Captain Bob Bartlett, whose modest story of forty years' seafaring and exploration is here told, is a native of Newfoundland and his early years were spent in the sealing fleets of that country. He started on arctic voyaging with Peary, commanding the "Roosevelt" on its voyage to the North pole. In 1913 he went with Stefansson as master on the last voyage of the "Karluk."

Booklist 25:116 D '28

"The book is an absorbing autobiography, as one would have expected from a man of extraordinary energy and action." F. P. H.

+ Boston Transcript p2 S 12 '28 900w

"Captain Robert A. Bartlett's story of his life will cast its spell over all who find in true tales of daring that thrill which comes from contact with brave men and stalwart deeds. . . The 'Log' is a book without embellishments, and some few may feel that it lacks a little in color. But in its pages Robert Bartlett is reliving his life with such intensity that any artificial coloring would be out of place. The 'Log' is a vital addition to saga literature."

+ N Y Times p9 S 2 '28 1550w

"An autobiography is a most unsatisfactory form of literature. If the author is egotistical, he tells too much. If he is the modest sort of man who really does things, he tells far too little. This latter is the fault of 'The Log of Bob Bartlett.' But whatever its omissions, Captain Bartlett has written a yarn with the tang of the sea about it and a perfect treasure house of quaint Newfoundland sealing expressions and superstitions. Throughout the entire book run, like two crimson threads, the dominant characteristics of this bluff sailor;—his love and devotion to his Mother, and his devotion and loyalty to his commander, Peary, the idol of his heart." M. A. Peary

+ Sat R of Lit 5:99 S 8 '28 1100w

"The author has no literary tricks; he writes with the directness of a man who wants to finish his job, but his simplicity is sometimes effective. We can thoroughly recommend this biography to all who like a straightforward adventure yarn."

+ Spec 141:605 O 27 '28 150w

Springf'd Republican p12 O 31 '28 480w

Times [London] Lit Sup p789 N 1 '28 1000w

BARTLEY, NALBRO ISADORAH (MRS HORACE LERCH). The fox woman. 327p $2 Doubleday, Doran

28-16625

Stanley Ames starts life as the spoiled daughter of a doting father. She continues a career free from denials of any sort by wrecking her husband's life and is on the point of ruining her son's, when life tricks her as she has so often tricked others.

"The tale is usual and dull—sordidly dull. In magazine claptrap, a great deal is told about the character of Stanley Ames, whose unwitting adoption of the son of her old lover does not tend in the least to stiffen her spinal column. She is a 'regular' vamp—not even an interesting one." L. B.

— N Y Evening Post p9 My 26 '28 90w

"Unfortunately, Miss Bartley lacks the touch of good characterization which would raise this book above the banality of its plot. Stanley is a stiff automaton incapable of evoking sympathy even when her toy world goes to pieces in her hands. But although the author has failed in creating a convincing study of a 'fox woman' there is sufficient wealth of picturesque incident to keep the story from dragging."

— + N Y Times p22 My 20 '28 440w

BARTLEY, NALBRO ISADORAH (MRS HORACE LERCH). Mediocrat. 314p $2 Doubleday, Doran

28-24266

Hilda Reynolds has made the sort of home that outsiders love to come to, and her husband and children hate to leave. Hers is a happy, rational household until the coming of the siren. This is Vesta Critchlow, who arrives in town with a grown son, a second husband, and a captive bachelor. She proceeds to annex Hilda's husband while her son lays siege to Hilda's daughter. The mediocrat, as Vesta calls her, shows fight and more than holds her own.

"Admitting the skill of the author in allowing the characters to speak for themselves, one must regret that she has not exercised a necessary restraint. The talk goes on until it ceases to be clarifying and becomes confusing. People that you believe in when you first meet them grow so articulate that you begin to suspect that their existence is merely vocal."

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p16 N 18 '28 180w

"As usual, Mrs. Bartley points a sane moral and writes an amusing tale."

+ Boston Transcript p6 N 7 '28 380w

N Y World p9e O 28 '28 90w

BARTON, GEORGE AARON. Studies in New Testament Christianity. 150p $2 Press of the Univ. of Pa. [8s 6d Oxford]

225.6 Bible. New Testament—Criticism, interpretation, etc. 28-12832

Dr Barton's studies in Christianity in apostolic times focus, in this small volume, on the fulfilment of prophecy, the person of Christ, God, sin, the death of Christ, the eucharist, the Christian life.

"Unbiased, careful, analytic, Dr. Barton seeks earnestly and diligently the New Testament for the teachings of the various writers and of Jesus himself on the crucial matters of the faith. With all this there is synthetic ability and power combined with lucidity and simplicity in putting the results of careful study into straightforward statements." T. C. R.

+ Boston Transcript p2 Jl 28 '28 300w

"It needs no more than the reading of the first chapter to give one assurance that here is the work of a man who has passed beyond mere erudition to the profound simplicity of ripened scholarship and judgment."

+ Christian Century 45:980 Ag 9 '28 80w

Reviewed by B. S. Easton

Churchman p19 My 12 '28 220w

"In these essays will be found ofttimes a fresh approach to many old questions. One of the amazing facts about the New Testament is the interesting reading that the thousand-and-first discussion of its subjects often makes." M. S. Enslin

+ Crozer Quarterly 5:355 Jl '28 600w

BARTON, SAMUEL GOODWIN, and BARTON, WILLIAM HENRY. Guide to the constellations. (McGraw-Hill astronomical ser.) 74p il $2.50 McGraw

523.89 Constellations 28-8180

"A book of a size to admit charts large enough to show plainly the positions of the constellations and their important stars at any hour and in any month. There is a chart for each month, besides two giving the southern constellations, with concise directions for their use and clear descriptions of each star and constellation, the Milky Way and other wonders of the sky."—Boston Transcript

---

Booklist 24:387 Jl '28

"Light and easily handled it is a book anyone eager to become familiar with the positions of the constellations and their brilliant stars will be delighted to possess."

+ Boston Transcript p2 Je 16 '28 220w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:564 N '28

Pratt p16 autumn '28

"Although it is not intended to be a textbook, and treats each topic only briefly, still the text does contain much accurate astronomical information as well as the essential facts about the various astronomical bodies. All astromical terms are clearly and simply defined, so that even the beginner will have no trouble in understanding the meanings. Futhermore, the definitions are well arranged, and the book contains such a complete index that it should prove to be a very satisfactory reference book for many purposes." Ida Barney

+ Science 68:16 Jl 6 '28 400w

BARTON, WILLIAM ELEAZAR. Abraham Lincoln and Walt Whitman. 277p il $2.75 Bobbs

B or 92 Whitman, Walt. Lincoln, Abraham 28-6099

The discovery of an unknown lecture on Abraham Lincoln by Walt Whitman led the author into a study of Whitman's poems on Lincoln and an effort to find everything that Whitman ever wrote or said about him. This, in turn, led into a study of Whitman's whole life as it is connected with his writings on Lincoln, and, inevitably, to a comparison of the two men.

Booklist 24:360 Je '28

"Offers some important, if sometimes rather fuliginous, sidelights on the activities of the 'good gray poet' during the Civil War years. The surfaces over which Mr. Barton skates with such apparent reserve and timidity are, however, worthy of somewhat deeper penetration." Eugene Lohrke

— + Bookm 67:437 Je '28 230w

"Dr. Barton's latest book is only a pot-boiler added to his reputation as a scholar." N. W. Stephenson

— Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p7 My 20 '28 90w

"The book is important: first, because of the light which it throws upon Whitman's personality; second, as an illustration of the minute research which is required in the accurate writing of history and biography."

+ Christian Century 45:510 Ap 19 '28 120w

"Personal reminiscences, critical studies, admiring tributes and slandering warnings have been given of Walt Whitman by critics and friends. And now comes a clergyman whose weapons are contempt and ridicule and attempts to wound Whitman by revealing what he has found to be the truth about the man who could turn and live with animals because they are so placid and self-contained. If one is determined to read about Whitman, he should buy John Bailey's little book, 'Walt Whitman.' If one wants to know about him, he should read 'Leaves of Grass.' It takes a lover of poetry to appreciate the greatness of Whitman. I have a suspicion that the reverend gentleman is deaf to poetry." Joseph Collins

— N Y Evening Post p12 Mr 31 '28 1250w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:405 Jl '28

R of Rs 77:12 My '28 120w

"Mr. Barton's 'Abraham Lincoln and Walt Whitman' is the better of his two recent books on Lincoln. It contains the results of industrious investigation of the popular beliefs that the poet and the statesman knew each other and that each held the other in high esteem."

Sat R of Lit 4:953 Je 9 '28 330w

BARTON, WILLIAM ELEAZAR. Father of his country; how the boy Washington grew in stature and spirit and became a great soldier and president. 301p il $2 Bobbs

B or 92 Washington, George 28-21006

This life of Washington for boys is a companion volume to the author's life of Lincoln and is illustrated from drawings by H. A. Ogden.

"We are always impressed with the sense of justice, the good taste and the painstaking zeal which characterize Dr. Barton's work. His is that of both biographer and historian." F. P. H.

+ Boston Transcript p2 O 24 '28 500w

"Written for young people, it can be read by their elders with equal, if not even greater interest, for Dr. Barton, while adhering to a simple, straightforward style, avoids oversimplification. He also has a strong vein of commonsense criticism, which enables him, for instance, to present a much more judicial view of the biographical endeavors of Parson Weems than is ordinarily inflicted upon the reading public. . . In Dr. Barton's pages the first President appears as a human figure without losing the qualities which made him the Father of His Country." R. J. Davis

+ Sat R of Lit 5:346 N 10 '28 200w

BARTON, WILLIAM ELEAZAR. Women Lincoln loved. 377p il $5 Bobbs

B or 92 Lincoln, Abraham 27-22843

The author of the "Life of Abraham Lincoln" contributes another volume to Lincoln biography in this sketch of the women who are known to have influenced his life. The word "loved" is employed in a broad sense to include his mother, his grandmother, his sister and the women in whom in varying degrees he showed an interest, as boy and man.

Booklist 24:279 Ap '28

Reviewed by D. C. Seitz

Bookm 67:208 Ap '28 400w

"Consciously or unconsciously, Dr. Barton has taken over a good deal of the 'Ariel' method. Fortunately he uses it spasmodically; at times it slips off him and he is himself again: careful, exact, scrupulous; at other times he gives full rein to the main bout of the 'Ariel' method—the interweaving of fact with conjecture, with no argument in support of the conjecture." N. W. Stephenson

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p17 Mr 25 '28 850w

"In the opinion of this reviewer the most valuable part of the work is the long chapter dealing with Mrs. Lincoln. Other much shorter chapters have seemed almost irrelevant and at best to contain hardly more than sufficient material for a long paragraph." F. L. B.

+ — Boston Transcript p6 Ja 7 '28 1100w

Cleveland Open Shelf p118 N '28

BARTON, W: E.—Continued

"This excessively padded footnote to Mr. Barton's enormously detailed life of Lincoln supplies new facts in plenty, but very little new light."

New Statesman 31:supx My 19 '28 170w
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:46 Ja '28
Pratt p35 spring '28
R of Rs 77:8 Ja '28 130w
St Louis 26:47 F '28
Sat R of Lit 4:953 Je 9 '28 150w
Spec 140:684 My 5 '28 360w
Times [London] Lit Sup p381 My 17 '28 210w

BARTRAM, WILLIAM. Travels. (Am bookshelf) 414p $2.50 Macy-Masius

917.5 South—Description and travel. Natural history. Indians of North America 28-3822

This classic of American literature was first published in Philadelphia in 1791. William Bartram, a botanist who traveled widely for specimens, was the son of John Bartram whose botanical garden, the first established in America, is now preserved in Philadelphia as a city park. Bartram's famous book, describing his travels in the Carolinas, Georgia and Florida, is given in these pages without abridgement. It is largely concerned with natural history and abounds in descriptions of forest life. It is also valuable as an original authority on the Southern Indians and as an account of the manners, customs and government of the tribes visited.

"It is a book more familiar to collectors of rare works than to the general reader, but the latter will be repaid for perusing its pages. It is indeed, written in the style of the great travelers like Marco Polo and Sir John Mandeville, but it is much more to be relied upon than those narratives, for Bartram was a seeker after truth, a keen observer and was under no necessity of reciting marvelous tales to insure a sale for his book. The reprint is well printed and bound in decorated cloth."

+ Boston Transcript p3 F 18 '28 230w

"Any reader coming to this book for the first time will wonder why it has been allowed to pass into the limbo of famed forgotten things. There cannot be many more delightful descriptions of travel and exploration in early American literature."

+ Nation 126:326 Mr 21 '28 200w

"A worthy addition to a 'bookshelf' most happily conceived." H. E. D.

+ N Y Evening Post p13 F 11 '28 100w

Reviewed by C: J. Finger
N Y World p10m Ap 1 '28 400w
R of Rs 77:26 Mr '28 100w
Sat R of Lit 4:786 Ap 21 '28 1000w
St Louis 26:388 D '28

BASSETT, JOHN SPENCER. League of nations; a chapter in world politics. 415p $3.50 (15s) Longmans

341.1 League of nations. World politics 28-14213

Treating his subject as a historian, not a partisan, Professor Bassett describes without prejudice the nature and government of the League and reviews the work it has accomplished during the seven years of its existence.

"The writer presents the League of Nations in a somewhat conventional way, and omits the consideration of many of its activities. The facts are garnered from the official minutes of various conferences, and are presented without any attempt to fill the lacunae of official records from the rich literature that is available. The result is a fair-minded and objective though incomplete summary of the more exciting 'political' tangles of seven years with little emphasis on the cumulating achievements in international coöperation. . . But the slight inaccuracies do not mar the usefulness of an informing and interesting study, which ought to reach a wide public." M. O. Hudson

+ — Am Hist R 34:133 O '28 900w

"Without prepossessions or prejudices, the author has made in this volume an excellent presentation of the circumstances surrounding each major question dealt with by the League." L. S. Rowe

+ Ann Am Acad 138:188 Jl '28 110w
Booklist 25:8 O '28

"A sane and judicious story of what during the last decade the League of Nations has been and has done. . . The story is good history, sound and reliable." C. J. H. Hayes

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p7 Je 10 '28 1050w

"Wherever possible, he seems to avoid merely reiterating what is already known by those who will read his book, and to present the traditional topics in a little different manner, with a little different background, and sometimes a little different interpretation." A. S. R.

Boston Transcript p4 My 26 '28 230w

"Professor Bassett's book is probably intended to be of interest to the general reader. He makes no contribution to political philosophy or to the history of moral experience. His statesmen are schoolboys. However, the record of events is dated, and the summary is useful." C. D. B.

Int J Ethics 39:120 O '28 250w

"This narrative is written in a spirit of perfect detachment and with the same scholarly and interpretative style familiar to the reader of his other works." K: F. Geiser

+ Nation 127:184 Ag 22 '28 630w

"A very useful, straightforward, sympathetic account of the work of the League during the first seven years of its existence. It makes a good textbook."

+ Nation and Ath 43:472 Jl 7 '28 50w

"Professor Bassett presents the facts, scientifically arranged and attractively set forth, disclaiming the rôle of prophet or counselor. In his attitude he is distinctive among those who have written of the League. His book exhibits a clear application of the historical method of treatment to one of the most difficult of subjects." A. S. Will

+ N Y Times p7 Je 17 '28 1800w
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:450 O '28
Pratt p12 autumn '28

"It sets forth, lucidly and with many a characteristic genial touch, the evolution of the League and its efforts to prevent war. As such it is a very present help in evaluating the Kellogg Pact, which is a further step in this evolution, and we bespeak its perusal by every Senator and person of influence who wants to see the Pact ratified by the United States." S. B. Fay

+ Sat R of Lit 5:321 N 3 '28 860w

"The book, in the hands of those unfamiliar with League history, may be a misleading guide, for it is marred by a number of inaccurate statements."

— Spec 140:942 Je 23 '28 80w
Springf'd Republican p10 Je 15 '28 450w
Times [London] Lit Sup p435 Je 7 '28 70w
Wis Lib Bul 24:187 Je '28

"This is probably the most illuminating volume on the League of Nations that has yet appeared." K. P.

+ World Tomorrow 11:310 Jl '28 140w

BASSHE, EMANUEL JO. The centuries; portrait of a tenement house. 227p $2 Macaulay

812 28-11755

Escaping the pogroms in Russia a group of emigrants flee to America and settle in the East side tenement district of New York. From a quiet village life to the sweat shop and the streets of the city is a bewildering change.

The play describes the effect of the transplanting on old and young of many types, particularly the girls who go to work in the factories.

"I have seen many such plays and I have read still more and tried to keep an open mind. But now I have frankly given up the attempt. They are too much for me, and I admit it. They seem to me not only to lack order but to lack the ability, or certainly the patience, to understand and strive for order, and if they represent the drama of the future, me for the fireside and slippers." W. P. Eaton

— Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p13 Je 3 '28 70w

Boston Transcript p2 Je 30 '28 200w

Reviewed by Rex Hunter

N Y Evening Post p14 Ap 14 '28 50w

"It is not so stylized as 'The International,' but its aim is impressionistic and not realistic. There is a poetic quality in some of the lines, and the entire play breathes a genuine tenderness and beauty. It is difficult to form any judgment of these plays after reading them, so obviously are they designed for production."

Springf'd Republican p10 My 10 '28 280w

BASSHE, EMANUEL JO. Earth; a play in seven scenes; with an introd. by Eric Walrond. 122p $2 Macaulay

812 28-3156

Pagan superstitions clash with Christian superstitions in a negro community where Deborah, the Christian, calls on her God to crush the voodoo man who has taken her son from her. The whole community is torn by the conflict.

Reviewed by Glenn Hughes

Bookm 67:591 Jl '28 50w

Reviewed by W. P. Eaton

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p18 F 5 '28 30w

"Mr. Basshe has not yet found himself, but he has great talent and is growing steadily." Rex Hunter

N Y Evening Post p14 Ap 14 '28 50w

"The play tells a dramatic tale, often profoundly moving. It is not a genre study of the southern Negro of a defined locale such as Paul Green gives in his plays, although there is truth to negro psychology in the portrayal. Many of the passages are of passionate beauty, and many of the scenes rise into vivid intensity. Mr. Basshe writes with telling power, his feeling for character giving him a bend toward realism. This realism, however, is in the service of an innate idealism, so that whatever particular symbols he uses, as here the negro character, take on an aspect of universality." Jane Dransfield

+ — Sat R of Lit 4:649 Mr 3 '28 300w

BATEMAN, JOHN HENRY. Highway engineering; a textbook for students of civil engineering. 418p il $4 Wiley

625.7 Roads. Pavements 28-5373

"Undergraduate course presenting fundamental principles of theory, with comprehensive descriptions of present practice. Covers economics, financing, location, design, construction, maintainance and operation. Has chapters on dust prevention, street cleaning, snow removal, and traffic regulation and control. The appendix contains a standard outline of specifications for highway construction, and some methods for sampling and testing bituminous materials. Author is Professor of Highway Engineering in Louisiana State University."—N Y New Tech Bks

---

Booklist 24:387 Jl '28

+ Eng N 100:786 My 17 '28 280w

N Y New Tech Bks 13:24 Ap '28

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:464 O '28

BATES, HERBERT ERNEST. Day's end, and other stories. 286p $2 Viking press [7s 6d J. Cape]

Stories in somber mood, set chiefly in the English countryside. The title story, which is also the first and longest of the collection, is of a broken old farmer who will not acknowledge defeat.

— Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p44 S 30 '28 280w

"The one long story in the book is not a complete success. The dialect is not good, and the author indulges in a good deal of overwriting, rare in his shorter work. But he is undoubtedly a master of a certain kind of atmospheric character sketch, and his work, though suffused with melancholy, is individual and lovely." J. F. S.

+ — Boston Transcript p1 S 15 '28 760w

"They are all short, poignant studies of little, frustrated lives, done with gravity and honesty. They fail to achieve real distinction largely because, while Mr. Bates's situations are invariably tragic, his people are not. They are too simply conceived and too briefly rendered."

— + Nation 127:sup377 O 10 '28 120w

"I recommend 'Day's End' to lovers of quiet writing and the eternal verities." Raymond Mortimer

+ Nation and Ath 43:332 Je 9 '28 110w

"All the stories are written in the same vein, which would, in lesser writers, be described as poignant. Actually they are studies in diffidence or tenderness described with great reticence of style and feeling." Cyril Connolly

+ New Statesman 31:484 Jl 21 '28 420w

"Most of these stories are of individuals beaten by themselves, or what they think about themselves. Unlike Chekhov's stories they lack that relentless combining of circumstances which make for power against a nature not strong enough to fight. And unlike Katherine Mansfield's stories there is no play of light and shade to delight the reader, no happy choice of subject matter. As stories, they will add nothing to the reputation of the author."

— N Y Times p28 O 14 '28 1000w

"He has no technical resources; he often uses ugly, clumsy words like 'soddened,' and his sense of humor is very fitful. . . But when Mr. Bates writes well he writes very well; his very lack of affectation, of knowing the way an effect may be obtained, makes him impressive. And he shows an amazing emotional sympathy with a great variety of characters and subjects; he never seems to lead his imagination into paths that are foreign to it, and there is scarcely a story in all the twenty-five that has not some memorable touch of beauty or strangeness." L. P. Hartley

+ — Sat R 145:811 Je 23 '28 500w

"Mr. H. E. Bates is already recognized as an artist; and if the reader should find Day's End a little devitalizing, it is because he deliberately confines himself to muted chords, and the tragedies of the inarticulate and inhibited. . . We are left with a sense of impotent and almost imbecile creatures lapsing into paralysis in an unnaturally ominous world, and an inclination to accuse Mr. Bates of a wilful sadness. He sometimes forces his effect with unnecessary ugliness." R. A. Taylor

— + Spec 141:60 Jl 14 '28 210w

"These stories are not so good as they might be in view of the promise of Mr. Bates's first book, but their thought is again poetic and original; they have the same freshness and great descriptive beauty, though there is not much that is solid in them."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p506 Jl 5 '28 250w

BATES, SYLVIA CHATFIELD. That magic fire. 227p $2 Houghton

28-21054

Sylvia and Alexey spend their childhood together in a small town in Connecticut. Separated in early youth they do not meet again until after the war, and then to Sylvia's grief

BATES, S. C.—Continued
Alexey leaves her without asking her to marry him. She finally marries Albert Morgan and is quietly happy with her children and her work in the hospital for war veterans when Alexey reappears to prove that their love for each other has never altered.

"That Magic Fire is a young novel, and it has the charm, the engaging qualities one expects from the young in Connecticut. Its prose is clear and supple and not without thin echoes of music. The characters are not badly drawn, but still they have the air of being figures in a decorative composition, styled, facile." R. E. Larsson

+ — Bookm 68:242 O '28 150w

"There is intense feeling in this novel but it is in a nebulous state. Pathos, tragedy and beauty float by in a random procession, wraiths too hazy to do more than suggest very vaguely the bitter brave pilgrimage of the spirit. There is confusion of thought and sometimes of speech, and the author seems uncertain of her exact purpose. Manifestly, 'That Magic Fire' furnished more heat than light. . . The novel is obviously a weak transcription of the emotion that inspired it."

— + Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p44 S 30 '28 230w

"Beyond its tastefully selected backgrounds one doesn't remember much."

Nation 127:665 D 12 '28 90w

N Y Times p25 S 16 '28 160w

BATESON, WILLIAM. William Bateson, F. R. S. naturalist; his essays and addresses together with a short account of his life by Beatrice Bateson. 473p $8.40 Macmillan [21s Cambridge univ. press]

575 Heredity. Variation (biology). Evolution
28-18384

"Bateson devoted his life to the experimental study of heredity in plants and animals, and was one of the first to recognize and advocate the fundamental importance of the Mendelian principles. . . Mrs. Bateson's Memoir (occupying 160 pages) not only reflects the development of biological science in an active period (1884-1926), especially through many of Bateson's entertaining letters, but it shows very clearly the growth of a sensitive and rather unsuccessful youth into a vigorous and aggressive leader. . . The essays and addresses cover a wide range, from such educational topics as 'The Place of Science in Education' to 'Gamete and Zygote, a Lay Discourse.' Several are Presidential addresses, delivered before learned bodies in Australia, the United States and Canada, as well as in England."—Books (N Y Herald Tribune)

'This book gives the essence of a rare personality and the best of his thoughts. It is bound to interest the intelligent general reader and it should find a place in every educational library, where it cannot fail to give inspiration to students whose habits of mind are being formed." H. M. Parshley

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 Ag 19 '28 1100w

Reviewed by A. G. Tansley

Nation and Ath 43:216 My 19 '28 1150w

Nature 122:339 S 8 '28 1400w

"The charm of the volume lies in the memoir. The very man, always lovable but never in a halo, is your companion. His letters are gay and very suggestive; and sometimes you almost forget his absorption in science. Some of the addresses are already a little out-of-date, so quickly has science advanced; but if anyone wishes a clear account of what the Mendelian laws mean and may mean in practice, he will find nothing better than the address on 'Mendelian Heredity and its Application to Man'; or his inaugural lecture on 'The Method and Scope of Genetics.'" W. B.

+ Spec 140:sup615 Ap 21 '28 700w

"Of men whom Darwin set in motion William Bateson was the greatest—the most original and fertilizing mind. Bateson's actual accomplishment was great, but the stimulus he gave to sound thinking in his own branch of knowledge is even greater and still more enduring; all through his writings are dropped suggestions and criticisms that will continue to start up exploration in fields not bounded by his immediate inquiry."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p266 Ap 12 '28 1750w

BATTENHOUSE, HENRY MARTIN. Bible unlocked. 553p $3.50 Century

220 Bible, Whole—Criticism, interpretation, etc.
28-5684

"A study of the history, literature and religious teachings of the Bible, by the professor of Biblical literature at Pennsylvania State College, intended for 'the layman and all readers and lovers of the Bible.' Contains a chronology of Bible history interestingly related to world history and a good bibliography. The footnote references to the Bible add to its usefulness as a working tool."—Wis Lib Bul

Boston Transcript p2 My 2 '28 120w

"A well-written treatment of the history, literature and teachings of the Bible. It presents the modern point of view, and covers the ground in a comprehensive manner. It is well adapted to class work in which a general and untechnical course on the entire Bible is desired."

+ Christian Century 45:702 My 31 '28 110w

J Religion 8:496 Jl '28 50w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:552 N '28

St Louis 26:374 D '28

Wis Lib Bul 24:218 Jl '28

World Tomorrow 12:522 D '28 50w

BAUDELAIRE, CHARLES PIERRE. Letters of Baudelaire; tr. by Arthur Symons. 259p $4 Boni

B or 92
27-24819

"This volume is uniform with those containing the poems and prose of Baudelaire, translated by Arthur Symons. It contains all the letters that the author of Fleurs du Mal wrote to his mother in the course of his tortured lifetime."—Boston Transcript

Reviewed by B. R. Redman

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p7 Mr 11 '28 750w

Boston Transcript p6 N 26 '27 620w

"One of the most touching correspondences in all literature." Alyse Gregory

+ Dial 84:241 Mr '28 700w

"The intimate and profoundly moving letters reveal the tragedy of a sensitive mind, reveal the heartbreaking bitterness and hope and struggle of a man unfitted to combat the implacabilities of life. This collection has been translated into sensitive and appreciative English, and is a beautiful and valuable supplement to the complete 'Prose and Poems.'"

+ Ind 120:46 Ja 14 '28 200w

"These letters to his mother, though handsomely printed and passably translated, have been edited with less care than even a casual reader might desire. There is no index. The notes are helpful, but decidedly incomplete. No biographical data are given, and very few hints concerning the characters; so that the reader is left standing, as it were, outside a telephone booth and listening to half of a vehement conversation between strangers. Yet in spite of these faults, 'The Letters of Baudelaire' ought to be compulsory reading for young poets." Malcolm Cowley

+ — New Repub 53:328 F 8 '28 780w

New Statesman 31:20 Ap 14 '28 850w

Reviewed by Joseph Collins

N Y Evening Post p12 D 10 '27 860w

"The collection is limited to letters from Baudelaire to his mother. One realizes that a certain interest attaches to the son-mother relationship thus offered for study, and that a picture of the author of 'Les Fleurs du Mal' gradually emerges which might have been lost, and surely would have been blurred, had the volume not had such singleness of purpose." Percy Hutchison

N Y Times p7 Ja 1 '28 1400w

Sat R 145:291 Mr 10 '28 800w

Times [London] Lit Sup p126 F 23 '28 1200w

BAUER, EDWARD EZRA. Highway materials; a textbook covering production, specifications, sampling and testing of highway materials. 353p il $3.50 McGraw

625.8 Road materials. Pavements 28-5914

"College course designed to give students a general working knowledge of the qualities of materials desired for the various types of pavements. Also useful to engineers in writing specifications and in the inspection of materials and construction work. Numerous standard methods of testing and sampling are given. Author is Instructor in Civil Engineering, University of Illinois."—N Y New Tech Bks

"The book can be recommended as a good text for engineering classes and a valuable assistance to a highway construction engineer who desires to obtain a good working knowledge of highway materials." H. S. Mattimore

\+ Eng N 100:452 Mr 15 '28 480w

N Y New Tech Bks 13:24 Ap '28

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:388 Jl '28

BAUM, JAMES EDWIN. Savage Abyssinia. 336p il $5 Sears [12s 6d Cassell]

916.3 Abyssinia—Description and travel. Natural history—Abyssinia 27-24128

"The Field Museum of Chicago sent an expedition to explore the interior of Abyssinia. Mr. Baum acted as historian for the party and put his findings into this book. Specimens of wild life were brought back in great abundance and much heretofore unknown geographical information discovered. The book deals with the hunting of these wild animals and descriptions of the travels of the group of explorers."—N Y World

"Mr Baum has written a thick, authoritative, well-put-together volume, not failing to throw in a lot of well chosen and should be interesting local color, yet the thing is in some almost unexplainable way tiresome." W. B. Seabrook

\+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 Ja 15 '28 120w

New Statesman 31:236 My 26 '28 200w

"Mr. Baum's professorial training is put to good use, but when he attempts to describe the characteristics of the people and their manner of living he falls somewhat short."

\+ — N Y World p11m Ja 15 '28 100w

"Mr. Baum writes as an expert naturalist, but without forgetting the romance, adventure, color and strangeness of a strange land. Its leading personalities, from Ras Tafari down, are skilfully sketched." Herschel Brickell

\+ No Am 225:adv Ja '28 170w

"The story could hardly have been better told. The pursuit of the ibex in the north is particularly well described, and, for its sake, we easily forgive Mr. Baum his political dissertations."

\+ Sat R 146:124 Jl 28 '28 200w

"The scientific importance of the expedition is immense, and the story is on the whole well told, in spite of the author's quaint insouciance concerning the better graces of English construction." H. I. Priestley

\+ — Sat R of Lit 4:858 My 12 '28 210w

Times [London] Lit Sup p301 Ap 26 '28 1000w

BAX, CLIFFORD. Bianca Cappello. (Representative women) 168p $2 Viking press [3s 6d G. Howe]

B or 92 Bianca Cappello, consort of Francesco Maria de' Medici, grand duke of Tuscany 28-14031

Bianca Cappello was a beautiful sixteenth century Venetian whose capacity for adventure and intrigue amounted to genius. In Florence, where at sixteen she had eloped with a worthless lover, she fell under the eye of Francesco, son of Cosimo de' Medici, and for twenty-five years kept him captive to her beauty and charm, to which she added an unusual intelligence and a resolute will.

"Quick-moving and excellently told story."

\+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p7 Jl 22 '28 650w

Boston Transcript p2 Je 30 '28 300w

Cleveland Open Shelf p118 N '28

"This biography reads like a flash and is fascinating enough to be true."

\+ Dial 85:175 Ag '28 130w

"Mr. Clifford Bax has made the most of his history of the young, beautiful, and intrepid Venetian girl, whom he calls a genius."

\+ Nation 127:232 S 5 '28 70w

"Mr. Bax need not have been at such pains to champion Bianca: it is unlikely that this generation will care to cast stones at her. The essay is to be recommended to all who like their biography filleted."

Nation and Ath 42:194 N 5 '27 300w

New Statesman 30:150 N 12 '27 500w

"The high spots of her story escape in spite of the author because of their quality per se, but Mr. Bax has done nothing to improve on an encyclopedic version. Bianca Cappello remains a far-off enigmatic figure in history." T. S.

— + N Y Evening Post p9 My 26 '28 80w

Reviewed by Harry Salpeter

N Y World p7m Ag 5 '28 220w

"If his book lacks the body to interest a student of the renaissance, it still is pleasant reading marked by brilliant pictures of the time of which he writes, and highly satisfactory for the general reader, who may be led by it into such comfortably complete books as Young's 'The Medici' or Symonds' 'Renaissance in Italy.' "

\+ — Outlook 149:750 S 5 '28 320w

Sat R of Lit 4:991 Je 23 '28 130w

"Mr. Clifford Bax has not succeeded in showing us the human being that must have existed behind the violences and brilliances of her career. He might perhaps have succeeded better if he had not been, as a conscientious modernist, so anxious to whitewash 'the infamous Bianca Cappello' of John Addington Symonds and the Victorians. But we do not want either an attack or a defence. The arguments with which he tries to defend her are not only generally unconvincing in themselves, but are a hindrance to the accomplishment of his proper purpose."

— + Times [London] Lit Sup p856 N 24 '27 280w

Wis Lib Bul 24:190 Je '28

BAXTER, WILLIAM J. Chain store distribution and management. 279p il $5 Harper

658.87 Retail trade. Chain stores 28-9247

This analysis of chain store methods of management and sales covers the nationally known chains in every line—drugs, dry goods, groceries, etc.—and also the smaller systems of a few units each. Mr Baxter, of the Chain store research bureau, tells how this huge volume of business is handled by the various chain systems to effect a profit to the distributor and a saving to the customer. The book is illustrated from photographs, facsimiles of advertising displays, etc.

BAXTER, WILLIAM J.—Continued

"An important book for those interested in the striking changes in methods of merchandising. The volume is based upon research and packed with statistical data as well as pictorial illustrations."

+ Am Econ R 18:305 Je '28 60w
Booklist 24:388 Jl '28
St Louis 26:280 S '28
Wis Lib Bul 24:220 Jl '28

BAYNES, ERNEST HAROLD. Three young crows, and other bird stories; sel. and ed. by Louise Birt Baynes. 183p il $1.75 Macmillan

598.2 Birds—Legends and stories 27-24691

Short stories about birds. Contents: Wild geese at night; The coming of the birds; Humming birds—winged voyagers; The ruffed grouse; The blue jay: sometimes bad; A bald eagle; Night-hawks; The American osprey as a guest; Isaac, the turkey-vulture, an interesting but unlovely bird; Ariel, a broad-winged hawk; Vireos; Three young crows.

Booklist 24:251 Mr '28
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:179 Mr '28
Wis Lib Bul 24:307 N '28

"Delightful stories of varied bird life by the late well-known naturalist, strikingly illustrated."

+ World Tomorrow 12:523 D '28 20w

BEACH, REX ELLINGWOOD. Don Careless; and, Birds of prey. 340p $2 Harper

28-10876

Two magazine stories of novelette length. The first is the romantic tale of a wager made and won by Francisco Suarez, called Don Careless, that he will win Valencia, a high-born beauty and the pride of the Spanish-American seaport, Ascension. The second is a story of wealth and wickedness on a country estate in New York.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 Ap 29 '28 80w
Boston Transcript p4 Ag 15 '28 240w

"Some may scoff at the unrealities of certain episodes, some may recognize a thinness of construction, some may question the probability of certain romantic situations, yet few will deny the author's ability to tell a story. Glibly the story goes on to a close which may be easily foretold, which may hold little surprise, yet which those who enjoy a Rex Beach story will read—simply because of that story-telling gift that permits of holding interest even to an obvious conclusion."

+ — N Y Times p22 My 20 '28 230w

"Those who are satisfied to get their luxuries vicariously will enjoy the story to an especially high degree. Mr Beach is frankly a light story teller, and in these two efforts he succeeds in doing all that is required of him."

Springf'd Republican p7f Je 17 '28 200w

BEARD, CHARLES AUSTIN. American party battle. (World today bookshelf) 150p $1.50; pa 80c Macmillan

329 Political parties—United States. United States—Politics and government 28-22424

Dr Beard presents in small compass a general sketch of American party history and outlines the issues on which the party battles have been fought.

Booklist 25:53 N '28

"To compress 150 years of political history into 150 pages is no easy task. Few men could do it, and still fewer would have the courage to try. Mr. Beard has had both the courage and the competence. His breadth of historical interest, his power of accurate generalization and his literary resourcefulness have combined to make this book stimulating, readable, worthwhile." W: B. Munro

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p4 N 4 '28 650w

"Briefly, non-technically, clearly and, of course, without partisanship or any kind of bias, Dr. Beard sketches the outline of party history in this country. . . The only criticism of the book is that it is so short. Within his brief limits Dr. Beard has achieved a masterly piece of work which should be widely read by voters."

+ N Y Times p3 O 14 '28 530w
R of Rs 78:34 N '28 40w

BEARD, CHARLES AUSTIN, ed. Whither mankind; a panorama of modern civilization. 408p il $3 (12s 6d) Longmans

901 Civilization. Progress 28-25938

A symposium on modern civilization, by competent authorities. Contents: Introduction, by C: A. Beard; The civilizations of the East and the West, by Hu Shih; Ancient and mediæval civilizations, by H. W. van Loon; Science, by Bertrand Russell; Business, by Julius Klein; Labor, by Sidney and Beatrice Webb; Law and government, by H. L. McBain; War and peace, by Emil Ludwig; Health, by C.-E. A. Winslow; The family, by Havelock Ellis; Race and civilization, by G: A. Dorsey; Religion, by J. H. Robinson; The arts, by L: Mumford; Philosophy, by J: Dewey; Play, by Stuart Chase; Education, by E. D. Martin; Literature, by Carl Van Doren; Epilogue, by C: A. Beard.

"The real value of the book lies in the reactions made by the individual contributors studying the general situation from their own peculiar viewpoints. It is highly refreshing, for instance, to find a prominent Chinese student like Hu Shih sweeping aside the much vaunted spirituality of the Eastern civilizations. . . Mr. Dorsey is a little too acridly polemical in his discussion of race and civilization, and Mr. Van Loon, in his comparison of ancient and medieval civilizations with our own, is so diverting that some people may fail to take him seriously. But every one of these articles deserves to be read and pondered, and most of them can be read with keen enjoyment of the clear language and exposition." Edwin Bjorkman

+ Ashville Times p6 D 23 '28 500w

"It would be idle to deny that 'Whither Mankind' has something of the specific symposium quality but it has it to no very great extent. Most of the writers have entered into sufficiently enthusiastic relationships with their subjects, so that the self-conscious atmosphere cannot damp their spirits." Rebecca West

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p1 N 4 '28 2450w

"Replete with interest from first to last." E. N.

+ Boston Transcript p4 O 13 '28 900w

"In the four hundred pages there is good picking for many tastes—none perhaps better than the editor's introduction." V. L: Parrington

+ — Nation 127:sup621 D 5 '28 1100w

Reviewed by H. M. Kallen
New Repub 57:198 Ja 2 '29 1150w

"Dr. Beard's introduction and epilogue orient the contributions of his colleagues. To him must credit be given for the vision which brought them together in a collective undertaking of major importance to the modern world." Evans Clark

+ N Y Times p1 N 4 '28 2000w

Reviewed by Herschel Brickell
No Am 226:adv D '28 110w

"In spite of their unequal merit the essays make an interesting and suggestive volume. The writers are men of this age, all moderns. In these essays, for the most part, they think and criticize their world after its own moving standards; yet there is seemingly consideration of the many series of antecedents out of which our dynamic present has so energetically sprung." H: O. Taylor

+ — Sat R of Lit 5:313 N 3 '28 1800w

"It must be admitted that not all the contributors reach the same level of thoughtful analysis that Mr Beard for the most part maintains. Few readers will be equally interested in all the contributions but few will fail to find in it suggestive and significant generalizations."

+ — Springf'd Republican p7e N 4 '28 1500w

Times [London] Lit Sup p995 D 13 '28 420w

BEATTY, ARTHUR, comp. Romantic poetry of the early nineteenth century. (Modern student's lib.) 546p $1 Scribner

821.08 English poetry—Collections 27-26631

Selections from the poetry of Wordsworth, Coleridge, Scott, Byron, Shelley, and Keats, with a note on each poet by the editor.

Reviewed by B. R. Redman

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 My 13 '28 380w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:579 N '28

"The book is compact and fits in the pocket. Professor Beatty's first paragraph, with its reference to Shelley and Keats dying before they had developed their full powers, seemed to us misleading. But in his later notes prefaced to the selections from the different poets, Professor Beatty evinces more sagacity. His book is a good primer, no more."

+ — Sat R of Lit 4:766 Ap 14 '28 160w

"The volume supplies the student with the materials necessary for an understanding and appreciation of the romantic movement in British poetry, and offers to the general reader the verse of the period that he is likely to be most interested in."

+ Springf'd Republican p7f Ap 22 '28 140w

Wis Lib Bul 24:159 My '28

BEAVERBROOK, WILLIAM MAXWELL AITKEN, baron. Politicians and the war, 1914-1916. 240p il $5 Doubleday, Doran [10s 6d T. Butterworth]

940.342 European war, 1914-1918—Great Britain. Great Britain—Politics and government. Statesmen, British 28-24045

Maxwell Aitken, a young Canadian, entered English politics in 1910. He became private secretary to Bonar Law and was influential in the formation of the Coalition cabinet. In 1917, he was raised to the peerage as Baron Beaverbrook of Beaverbrook. His book is a revelation of cabinet affairs during the first two years of the war and of some of its chief political figures—Winston Churchill, Lord Kitchener, Premier Asquith, Lloyd George and Bonar Law. In particular the book is a tribute to Lord Beaverbrook's friendship for Bonar Law and a defense of his statesmanship.

"Lord Beaverbrook has written his book with a restraint and carefulness of statement which may have made it seem more valuable, but has doubtless made it less interesting than it would have been if he had let himself go in more characteristic vein." W. K. Midgeley

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p16 N 25 '28 750w

Boston Transcript p4 N 3 '28 950w

"The book is full of dramatic passages, for Lord Beaverbrook writes with insight as well as with knowledge and has a keen eye for the picturesque. He is easy to read and worth reading. He has tried to be fair and has measurably succeeded." W: B. Munro

+ Living Age 335:150 O '28 680w

"With all its faults, his book is informed by a genuine emotion. For it is almost too evidently inspired by devotion to a dead friend. The author's whole orchestra of praise, blame, and anecdote is tuned to a single-minded elegy on the late Mr. Bonar Law. . . One feels that Lord Beaverbrook would do greater service to his late friend, if he would consent to publish his papers with a memoir. For the present blend of hearsay and random anecdote is not conspicuously helpful." Philip Guedalla

— + Nation and Ath 43:256 My 26 '28 650w

"Taken on its merits, and without any reference to the personality of its author, the main defect of the book is that it is primarily an attempted panegyric of Mr. Bonar Law; and a more difficult man to panegyrise it would be hard to conceive. . . A great deal of Lord Beaverbrook's book is sheer unhistorical nonsense which we feel sure he would never have written if he had himself been in direct touch with the actual course of events. Nevertheless, it is a very jolly and interesting book, a kindly book full of good stories, new lights and acute observations, written with both humour and good humour, extremely readable and utterly without egotism or malice. One forgives its panegyrical absurdities very easily, and only a little less easily its form."

+ — New Statesman 31:260 Je 2 '28 1350w

"It is a curious and, for the psychologist, a fascinating story of mixed motives influencing men at a chaotic time." P. W. Wilson

+ N Y Times p6 Je 17 '28 2200w

" 'Politicians and the War' should be read as a text-book by students of politics for its exceptional competence in revealing the mentalities of politicians. It should be pondered by statesmen for the efficiencies and defects it points out in their methods. The general reader will find in it fascinating character studies, illustrated by lively accounts of incidents from the inside which show in practical fashion how Democracy carries on in a world crisis." J. W. T. Mason

+ Sat R of Lit 5:213 O 13 '28 3200w

"A curious and striking book. Lord Kitchener, Asquith, Lloyd George, and above all, perhaps, Bonar Law appear in their true proportions, unheroic certainly, but very human, and with none of the nauseating gossip and innuendo that disfigure some recent memoirs. As a contribution to history we doubt whether Lord Beaverbrook has been frank enough in telling us of the heroes of Downing Street, but his account of the intrigues that surrounded Kitchener, and his estimate of the character and influence of that public servant, is undeniably vivid and insighted."

+ — Spec 140:769 My 19 '28 200w

"As a whole the book is informative and will give to those who have never studied the British cabinet system a clear picture of what goes on behind the scenes. It is a worthy though not a major addition to the growing library of war books."

+ Springf'd Republican p6 O 22 '28 320w

"Lord Beaverbrook has the defects of his qualities. His is a mind singularly vivid and positive and self-confident. The same authoritative tone marks his searching appreciations of men like Mr. Lloyd George and Mr. Churchill, whose genius appealed to him, and his superficial judgments of men like Lord Oxford and Lord Curzon, whom he evidently knew but little and did not understand. In intention his book is a whole-hearted tribute to his old friend, Mr. Bonar Law. Actually Mr. Bonar Law emerges as a colourless figure, with less vigour of thought and action than Mr. Lloyd George, Mr. Churchill, Lord Kitchener or Mr. McKenna."

— + Times [London] Lit Sup p366 My 17 '28 1000w

BECK, MRS LILY (MORESBY) ADAMS (E. BARRINGTON, LOUIS MORESBY, pseuds.). Captain Java. 368p $2 Doubleday, Doran [7s 6d Harrap]

28-23098

A light and amusing yarn which runs into the supernatural before the adventure is out. Cap'n Homan and Cap'n Dixon decide to spend their declining years on a South Sea Island. Cap'n Homan advertises for a wife to take along. The young woman who answers the advertisement is none other than the daughter of an old seafaring friend, and is recognized by a little mother-of-pearl image given her by Homan himself when she was a child. The three charter their ship and sail to the South Seas, and it is there that the little pearl image, a grotesque likeness of a local god, draws the girl and the old captains into a weird and threatening adventure.

BECK, L. A.—Continued

"Louis Moresby has tossed off a South Sea item that is nothing less than grand, whether you call it idyllic romance, historical-pastoral-fantastical, tragi-comedy, or melodrama regardless—it's a highly successful mixture of a number of things. Uncommonly good writing, with abundant humor." Will Cuppy
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p18 O 7 '28 150w

Boston transcript p3 O 27 '28 360w

Times [London] Lit Sup p132 F 23 '28 130w

BECK, MRS LILY (MORESBY) ADAMS (E. BARRINGTON, LOUIS MORESBY, pseuds.). Empress of hearts. 300p $2.50 Dodd [7s 6d Harrap]

Marie Antoinette—Fiction 28-23920

The story might be called the Necklace of diamonds, for it is this famous jewel, originally designed for the Du Barry, which is here made the cause of Marie Antoinette's downfall. The young queen is sympathetically, even lovingly, presented. She is shown refusing to accept the priceless bauble which the king urges upon her, because she is unwilling that the people should pay for it. Upon her final refusal a vast network of intrigue springs up in which Cardinal de Rohan, Cagliostro and the Lamotte are the principals. It is made to appear that Marie has robbed the treasury to buy the necklace. It is her death verdict.

"Mrs. Barrington's Marie Antoinette is not only 'a generous and noble character,' but pure as a lily. It is in her efforts to gild her lily and in her failure to bring out the development of the queen's character that the interpretation falls short. With the early hardships of the little Viennese hoyden the author is in accord, but of the wiser woman who, too late, learned the grim humor of a hungry mob, or the dignified defendant of a shocking trial there is too little said." Virginia Nirdlinger
+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p25 N 11 '28 550w

" 'The Empress of Hearts' is perhaps the best novel E. Barrington has written since 'The Glorious Apollo.' " J. W. M.
+ Boston Transcript p2 N 24 '28 500w
N Y Times p50 D 2 '28 820w

"The whole book is labored, heavy with historical allusion ineptly used. Much space is given to such details of dress, decoration and boudoir chatter as are supposed to delight the feminine mind. In some of her previous romantizations of historical characters, E. Barrington has achieved real dramatic effect. Here the sugar-coating is too thick. The strong, bitter heart of truth is lost."
— Outlook 150:1128 N 7 '28 230w

"No writer possessed of a grain of literary sense could tell such a story badly. E. Barrington has many grains, and she tells the story extremely well. Not since she charmed us with her early narratives of Stella and the Gunnings has she done better than in this novel. For novel and work of art it always is." E. A. Aldrich
+ Sat R of Lit 5:458 D 8 '28 550w

"The story is a little discursive, sentimental, and highly-coloured; and the author is too prone to interpose historical commentary instead of fusing the history with the actual tale itself. The writing, nevertheless, has considerable charm."
— + Spec 141:605 O 27 '28 50w

Springf'd Republican p7e D 30 '28 250w

Times [London] Lit Sup p968 D 6 '28 170w

Wis Lib Bul 24:306 N '28

BECK, MRS LILY (MORESBY) ADAMS (E. BARRINGTON, LOUIS MORESBY, pseuds.). Story of oriental philosophy. 429p il $5 Cosmopolitan bk.

181 Philosophy, Hindu. Philosophy, Chinese. Buddha and Buddhism. Confucius and Confucianism 28-21510

Mrs Beck brings within understanding and readable limits a knowledge of the thought of Asia. The smaller philosophies are not detailed but the thought of the great men who were the sources of the philosophic systems of the East is clarified for the general reader. The book is devoted about equally to Indian and Chinese philosophy, with a chapter each on Tibet, Persia and Japan.

Booklist 25:103 D '28

"Her book is not only a summary. It is a text warmed and informed by the divination of this remarkable woman. Say that she simplifies, that she popularizes, that she tries to speak the unspeakable. Yet her own insight offers you more than a survey of Oriental philosophy." Zona Gale
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p8 S 9 '28 1350w

"Familiar with the East both by travel and residence, Mrs. Beck shows a masterly acquaintance with the literature of its famous sages, and much in her absorbing chapters, rich as they are in personal portraiture, is given to indicating how closely the thought of the West has been paralleled and even anticipated by the intellectual output of Asia." Edmund Noble
+ Boston Transcript p3 Ag 25 '28 2100w

"Although Mrs. Beck is an easy and a facile writer, it is almost inevitable that such a tremendous undertaking should fall short of its expectation, and 'The Story of Oriental Philosophy' leaves an impression of bewilderment. The philosophy to which the Eastern philosopher devoted a lifetime of study is not easily set forth in 425 pages."
— + Ind 121:237 S 8 '28 200w

Reviewed by C: Johnston
+ N Y Times p4 O 7 '28 1300w

"Her book is no small improvement over Dr. Durant's well-known Story of Philosophy. The difference is that L. Adams Beck does give a good deal of the philosophy of Buddha, Confucius, Lao Tsu, Mencius, Pantanjali, and others, while Dr. Durant contented himself with writing engagingly about the lives of the philosophers." Herschel Brickell
+ No Am 226:adv O '28 150w

"A more uncritical work in every way it would be hard to imagine. And yet the book has its value. The author's enthusiasm for her subject—which is really Oriental religion, not philosophy—is genuinely contagious. If there is little in her book to stimulate the mind, there is much to touch the heart."
+ — Sat R of Lit 5:497 D 8 '28 450w

"Wide travel and wider reading, great experience and greater enthusiasm, practised skill as an interpreter of the Orient and even more as a writer of romances—all these have gone into the making of The Story of Oriental Philosophy." Kenneth Saunders
+ World Tomorrow 12:519 D '28 420w

BECK, MRS LILY (MORESBY) ADAMS (E. BARRINGTON, LOUIS MORESBY, pseuds.). Way of power; studies in the occult. 285p $2.50 Cosmopolitan bk.

294 Occult sciences. Yoga 28-6985

"It begins with an account of her personal experiences in the occult, which were extensive but of the usual variety, and of the powers and achievements of various Indians, all ardent followers of that interesting phase of Buddhism in which she also believes, the Yoga system of mental and physical discipline. The four most interesting chapters are devoted to a doctrinal explanation of the Yoga dogmas, very much condensed and simplified. The last chapters are practical. The reader is told on what sort of diet to live, how to breathe, how to direct one's thoughts, and a hundred other helpful details which are almost as interesting to learn of as the philosophy itself."—Boston Transcript

---

"The author continually goes into the little inlets, the muddy places, instead of keeping in the broad sun stream. She uses her metaphysics as mental balm rather than blood that goes to every part of the body, purifying it, making the world worth experiencing, giving courage and will and the realization that we are unique and universal in the same instant. Some of this has been in the author's intention, but she has not had the power to place her realization in living terms. And for that reason you doubt their being realizations." Margery Latimer

— Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p34 Ap 15 '28 600w

"It is a book to appeal to the religious dilettante, inspire those who are inclined towards mysticism, and irritate the practical and scientific. It is written capably and with finish, and is illuminated by Mrs. Beck's intensely loyal belief."

+ Boston Transcript p3 Ap 25 '28 220w

N Y Times p18 My 13 '28 500w

Reviewed by S. F. Damon

Sat R of Lit 4:881 My 19 '28 120w

BECKFORD, WILLIAM. Travel-diaries of William Beckford of Fonthill; ed. with a memoir and notes by Guy Chapman. ltd ed 2v 347;373p il $12.50 Houghton [42s Constable]

914 Europe—Description and travel

[28-17873]

"The first volume of this edition of William Beckford's Travel Diaries is a reprint of the original scarce edition of 'Dreams, Waking Thoughts and Incidents' which is an account, in the form of letters to a friend in England, of the Grand Tour which Beckford made in 1780 when he was twenty. . . His Grand Tour took him through the Western Germanies, through Switzerland and to Italy. . . The second volume is an account of a visit to Portugal and Spain in 1788 and an excursion into the monasteries of Alcobaca and Batalha in 1794."—Sat R

"A valuable feature of this edition of the 'Travel Diaries' is Mr. Chapman's memoir of William Beckford. It is a very scholarly presentation and tends to reduce the element of mystery in the life of its subject and to exculpate him from a sinister imputation that has long clung to his name." Jacob Zeitlin

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p17 Ja 13 '29 700w

Boston Transcript p2 S 19 '28 720w

"The author of these lively if romantically mannered travel letters is surely one of the strangest men on record, and it was quite worth while to reprint him in this handsome form."

+ Nation 127:500 N 7 '28 120w

"It is impossible to find in the first series of letters any reason for their original suppression. They are pleasantly descriptive of the Low Countries, The Rhine, Switzerland and Italy, with the romantic coloring of the time. The accounts of Spain and Portugal are readable enough. The 'Recollections,' written in 1835, from notes and memory, however, show Beckford as a mature and realistic observer and narrator, with something of the raciness of George Borrow." R. M. Lovett

New Repub 56:181 O 3 '28 520w

"It is an inveterate Romantic that the Diaries reveal him, though his appreciation of life and scenery is tinctured by a certain acid good-sense quite unknown to the more widely advertised leaders of the movement. Irregular and rather diffuse, his style does not benefit by quotation. But it must be a very stubborn and insensitive reader who is not affected, and sometimes to an extremely acute pleasure, by the intermittences of that recurrent flash."

New Statesman 31:90 Ap 28 '28 1000w

"Mr. Chapman deserves both praise and thanks for his accurate and painstaking scholarship, and his interesting, if debatable, memoir." H. L. Matthews

+ N Y Times p36 N 25 '28 1450w

"The merits which are most remarkable in him, and which his style reflected, were those which English prose was, in the nineteenth century, to acquire. Beckford had imagination, aspiration after the unattainable, diversity of expression, and passion."

Sat R 145:634 My 19 '28 800w

"Mr. Guy Chapman has contributed an excellent biographical preface to his edition of the Diaries. Already in his lifetime Beckford was legendary, and it was a difficult task to disentangle facts from fable." Alan Porter

Spec 140:sup607 Ap 21 '28 1000w

Times [London] Lit Sup p331 My 3 '28 2200w

BEDDOW, BRUCE. Black country (Eng title Man of the midlands). 390p $2.50 Doubleday, Doran [7s 6d Cassell]

28-25178

A realistic novel of the English mines. George Rudd's mother was a farm girl. She left her loved country reluctantly and from the first, hated and feared the mines. When her husband was killed in the mines she determined to keep her son out of them. So George grew up to a clerical job in a coal selling office, and to a strong faith in the cause of the miners against the owners. He fell in love with a girl whose ambitions far outran his own, who scorned his belief in the cause and led him to betray it.

"Mr. Beddow has not merely given a fine character portrayal; much of his most vivid writing is in the picture of the poverty-stricken miners. The plot is completely subordinate to the depicting of a social evil. Mr. Beddow writes forcefully, but with restraint, and he lacks a sense of humor as utterly as does Theodore Dreiser. Some pages dealing with miners' meetings and propaganda speeches make 'Black Country' seem too obviously a pièce-à-thèse."

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p18 O 28 '28 300w

Boston Transcript p7 O 27 '28 350w

"Mr. Beddow's book is saved from being a sociological polemic by the fact that the drama takes place through intensely individualized persons. His talent is unusual and exceptionally promising, his sympathetic perceptions poignant. But he strikes me as a talent still struggling with itself. The book is too long, and possibly too darkly projected. It seems like a chunk of coal, not yet kindled to fire, but solidly packed with significance."

+ — Nation 128:112 Ja 23 '29 250w

New Repub 56:358 N 14 '28 170w

"As nearly as a book can present the character of a man and the influences that shaped it, this book presents George Rudd. You know everything he did. Such an exhaustively complete picture would be tiresome to read if a less accomplished author had attempted it. Mr. Beddow is a novelist in the old tradition, yet he can vary his medium from badinage to tragedy without cumbersomeness."

+ N Y Times p7 O 7 '28 560w

"This is a large-scale novel, written with feeling and with a genuine knowledge of pit-head life."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p714 O 4 '28 140w

BEDEL, MAURICE. Jerome; or, The latitude of love; tr. by Lawrence S. Morris. 264p $2 Viking press [7s 6d Duckworth]

28-18285

The hero of this gay confection, which was awarded the Goncourt prize in France, is a young French playwright who has had a play accepted by the National theatre of Christiania and who goes to Norway to see it produced. He falls in love with the country and with Uni Hansen but the latitude of both proves un-

BEDEL, MAURICE—Continued
suited to his southern blood. The story is a witty commentary on modern youth and contrasted styles of love-making.

Booklist 25:119 D '28

"M. Bedel has caught a trick or two from his predecessors in the cosmopolitan novel, Paul Morand and Jean Giraudoux, but he is inferior in style and less rich in substance. He gets his fun out of the contrast he makes between the Norwegian and the Gallic points of view on the amenities, the gallantries, the sports and the amours of civilized life. He is erudite in such matters, a scholar of diversions." G. B. Munson
Bookm 68:84 S '28 350w

Reviewed by Ernest Boyd
Bookm 68:212 O '28 180w

Reviewed by Eugene Lohrke
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p7 Ag 5 '28 720w

"Frivolous and purely farcical it is, to be sure, but infinitely amusing, and infallibly delightful to all lovers of gaiety and wit. Maurice Bedel's satire though keen and spicy is invariably genial and good-humored." E. B. H.
+ Boston Transcript p2 Jl 28 '28 400w

Cleveland Open Shelf p137 D '28

"The book, admirably translated, is recommended to all the Van Vechtens of our own land who would learn to write witty light fiction with just the right savor of delicate indecency."
Nation 127:162 Ag 15 '28 120w

Reviewed by T. S. Matthews
New Repub 55:259 Jl 25 '28 120w

"It is as pure a comedy as 'Candide'; but, in lacking generally those philosophic overtones which delighted Voltaire, it succeeds in being only the more consonant with the spirit of its age." Vincent McHugh
+ N Y Evening Post p5 Ag 18 '28 900w

" 'Jerome' is one of those lightweight pieces, written with grace, with wit and with technical deftness, which it has become a commonplace to acknowledge as the property of France. It is a satire carried to the lengths of burlesque, a travesty of both romantic and modernistic love, a laughing contrast of the Nordic and the Southern temperament. This book is just right for summer. The descriptions of arctic Norway alone will keep one cool. But beyond its farcical scenes, its humorous climaxes and anti-climaxes, the book must be admired for its true Gallic sophistication, its craftsmanship that is as firm as it is light."
+ N Y Times p6 Jl 1 '28 780w

"M. Bedel has treated the subject farcically, with a plentiful spicing of satire, and the result is a really delightful and sophisticated novel. I observe that it was compared by the French critics with Thomas Raucat's The Honorable Picnic, and it has something of the same spirit as that rarely amusing story." Herschel Brickell
+ No Am 226:adv Ag '28 120w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:544 N '28

"That it should have won the Prix Goncourt last year is in itself sufficiently surprising, and that it should have annoyed the Norwegians to the extent of retaliation is yet more so. For it is an excellent light novel of the modern French type, distinguishable from a hundred others only by its original subject matter." T. M. Purdy, Jr.
Sat R of Lit 5:69 Ag 25 '28 350w

Wis Lib Bul 24:254 O '28

BEDFORD-JONES, HENRY (JOHN WYCLIFFE, pseud.). Black Bull. 344p $2 Putnam 27-19117

A tale of seventeenth century Italy in the high romantic manner. An Irish cavalier travels to Italy on an errand of vengeance. His enemy is the spurious Duke of Corthia, a man whose power extends from his ill-gotten castle to Rome itself, and whose criminal acts have roused the hatred of many besides the Irishman O'Neill. After long pursuit, O'Neill brings his quarry to bay on the scene of his greatest crime, the inn of the Black Bull.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 D 25 '27 100w

"This is a spirited tale full of the glamor of Old Italy."
+ Boston Transcript p4 O 15 '27 200w

"A good plot, and an action so lustily and gorily continuous that the fact the scene and age have practically been librettoed a la Verdi will escape many a reader." F. H. M.
+ N Y Evening Post p14 Ja 21 '28 150w

"In many ways, H. Bedford-Jones is but an echo of Sabatini, reproducing most of the faults of the latter, although less vivid and convincing in his manner of writing. Yet he does display a certain amount of ingenuity in the manipulation of his plot, and the rapid flow of the narrative from exciting event to exciting event will undoubtedly prove intriguing to a considerable number of readers."
— + N Y Times p36 N 27 '27 380w

No Am 225:adv Ja '28 30w

BEDFORD-JONES, HENRY (JOHN WYCLIFFE, pseud.). D'Artagnan, the sequel to The three musketeers; augmenting and incorporating a fragmentary manuscript by Alexandre Dumas. 312p $2.50 Covici, F. 28-22458

"D'Artagnan rides again, also Athos, Porthos and Aramis, of blessed memory. Richelieu plots at Grenoble with the faithful Capuchin, Pere Joseph; Marie de Medici sulks and counterplots at Lyon, and Anne of Austria, Queen of France, is a prisoner. The main events of the tale occupy some weeks in the summer of 1630. There is a mysterious child in the abbey of St. Saforin, and D'Artagnan performs mighty deeds involving it, the missing will and what not. The child happens to be Raoul, Vicomte de Bragelonne, whose real parentage is set forth by Dumas in 'Twenty Years After.' The plot swarms with duels, intrigue, swoons and everything needful."—Books (N Y Herald Tribune)

Booklist 25:119 D '28

"Herein, by great good luck, is high romantic adventure of the right old heady flavor. . . Mr. Bedford-Jones's book is full of the proper spirit and stuffed with genuine thrills."
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p20 N 11 '28 300w

"In spite of a weak style, a poor dramatic sense, a technique far inferior to that of Dumas, Mr. Bedford-Jones has recaptured the spirit of 'The Three Musketeers' in his 'D'Artagnan.' "
+ — Boston Transcript p7 O 13 '28 150w

"It is a lively romance full of plots and counter-plots, flashing swords and deeds of derring-do, performed in order that a piece of parchment may reach the proper hands to tell its own story in the blood spots and sword thrust which stain it. That the tale is inferior to the rest of the series, that the D'Artagnan and Athos, the Porthos and Aramis here presented do not seem quite the same as the renowned quartet who were Alexandre Dumas's great gift to the world, does not prevent it from being an entertaining, swiftly moving story."
+ — N Y Times p3 N 25 '28 420w

"H. Bedford-Jones has rounded out the fragmentary Dumas manuscript into a story full of action and fire and quite in the manner of the master of romance. . . The novel is well worked out in detail, even though the progress of actual historical events in the background seems to us sketched with occasional clumsiness."
+ — Sat R of Lit 5:252 O 13 '28 280w

BEDFORD-JONES, HENRY (JOHN WYCLIFFE, pseud.). King's passport. 336p $2 Putnam [7s 6d S. Paul]

Artagnan, Charles De Baatz De Castelmore; styling himself comte d'—Fiction. Cyrano de Bergerac, Savinien—Fiction
28-4238

Being the romantic adventures of a gentleman of fortune who escapes from the Bastille, wins in a duel a passport signed by Louis XIII and adopts the rôle therein described, becomes a servant of the queen and an enemy of the cardinal and pursues his adventures to their stirring close with his comrades in arms, Cyrano de Bergerac and d'Artagnan.

Booklist 25:28 O '28

"The story runs off the reel excitedly and adroitly. But it is historically less convincing, its atmosphere is less vivid, than the one the more cultured and exquisite French authors of 'The Years Between' have managed to produce."
+ — Bookm 67:xxiv Ag '28 150w

Boston Transcript p5 Ap 4 '28 580w

Cleveland Open Shelf p91 Jl '28

"A fine, galloping, vividly told yarn."
+ N Y Times p24 Ap 1 '28 220w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:192 Ap '28

"The novel as a whole, although neither so solid nor so sweeping as it might have been, is excellent reading. An intelligent, skillful novel of action."
+ Sat R of Lit 5:74 Ag 25 '28 180w

"Cyrano, whom nature must have made specially for novelists to write about, is the character whose appearances the reader is likely to welcome most; but the great cardinal is also well drawn; so is his cunning secretary, the not-yet-famous Mazarin."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p634 S 6 '28 250w

BEEBE, ELSWYTH THANE. See Thane, E., pseud.

BEEBE, WILLIAM. Beneath tropic seas; a record of diving among the coral reefs of Haiti. 234p il $3.50 (15s) Putnam

591.92 Marine fauna. Haiti—Description and travel. Birds—Haiti. Diving, Submarine. Scientific expeditions. New York zoological society
28-22400

There can scarcely be a more fascinating experience than to sit on the floor of the ocean near a coral reef, or to be specific, at the bottom of Port au Prince Bay, and watch the multicolored forms of submarine life in play. This is what Mr Beebe has done, even on occasion plying pencil and note pad (of zinc) as he watched. This story of the high lights of a recent expedition to Haiti under the auspices of the New York zoological society includes some data on the equipment of the expedition and a list of Haitian birds and fish. The illustrations are not quite so fine as those of the Arcturus adventure and there is but one plate in color.

Booklist 25:56 N '28

" 'Beneath Tropic Seas' is a somewhat riotous work, with few traces of order or continuity after the brief first chapter that plants one exquisitely in the milieu. Thereafter the engine sputters before getting back its smooth pressure, and, between intervals during which the rails hum, we are shunted onto sidings from which the view in which we are particularly interested is quite shut off. . . But what shall we say of the best of this book? Simply that nowhere else in our tongue or any other can we find such vivid, personal and circumstantial pictures of the realm beneath the tropic waters." R. C. Murphy
+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p7 O 28 '28 900w

"He has the power of communicating his excitement to the reader. He is least satisfactory when he attempts to be philosophical; but any newspaperman will recognize that Beebe is a superb reporter; and it is something new in literature and in life when a first rate reporter walks, with eyes wide open, along the bottom of the sea." L: S. Gannett
+ Nation 127:458 O 31 '28 480w

"Sometimes his comparisons are almost too rich and exotic. . . But for the most part his touch is as sure as his imagination is vivid and gorgeously furnished; he makes us feel the swish and swirl of the waters above our heads with the magical play of scintillating light."
+ — N Y Times p4 N 4 '28 880w

Reviewed by Herschel Brickell
No Am 226:adv D '28 60w

Outlook 150:1336 D 12 '28 120w

R of Rs 78:40 N '28 30w

"This new world of submarine life known hitherto mainly to the naturalist only in the crushed and mutilated booty of the dredge, or in bleached and contracted shape in bottles and jars, is revealed here for all who may read, in word and phrase as rich and full of charm as are the iridescent and always graceful denizens of the coral jungle itself. To portray so vividly and to introduce so gracefully the marine world to the public is an accomplishment which many admiring readers will appreciate and enjoy." C: A. Kofoid
+ Sat R of Lit 5:316 N 3 '28 580w

"One finishes this book with a sharp sense of inadequacy; not because of anything wanting in the author's description of life below tropic seas but inadequacy in oneself, for having been born without natural apparatus for living comfortably under water for as long a time as one cared to stay down." H. M.
+ Spec 141:705 N 10 '28 1000w

"Some of these chapters are slight, and not all deal with submarine life; but by far the most arresting are those which enable us to see, through Dr. Beebe's reflective eyes, the wonderful fairyland of the waters in which he rambled in his diving-dress."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p849 N 15 '28 850w

BEEDING, FRANCIS, pseud. of JOHN LESLIE PALMER, and HILARY AIDAN ST GEORGE SAUNDERS. House of Dr Edwardes. 312p $2 Little [7s 6d Hodder & S.]
28-676

The creepy story of an appalling fiasco at a continental insane asylum. During the absence of Dr Edwardes, the head of the house, a young English woman doctor comes to Chateau Landry as assistant to the man in charge. There is something wrong with the place, and each day increases Miss Sedgwick's apprehension of horror to come. At the hair-raising climax, Dr Edwardes returns, but too late to prevent a tragedy

---

"Mr. Beeding has been as discreet as may be in using insanity as entertainment, and his plot is sufficiently ingenious." Will Cuppy
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p16 Ja 22 '28 120w

"It is a perfectly readable story, and full of thrilling moments."
+ Boston Transcript p6 Ap 21 '28 300w

Cleveland Open Shelf p123 N '28

"This can scarcely be called a mystery story, for the reader is not long kept in the dark as to the true state of affairs. It is primarily a story of horror, with diabolism as the leading motive."
N Y Times p14 Ja 15 '28 280w

"It is no fair telling the plot of 'The House of Dr. Edwardes', but it would be no fair to let enthusiastic addicts miss it. It is guaranteed hair-raising."
+ Outlook 148:118 Ja 18 '28 300w

Times [London] Lit Sup p934 D 8 '27 250w

Wis Lib Bul 24:90 Mr '28

BEEDING, FRANCIS, pseud. of JOHN LESLIE PALMER, and HILARY AIDAN ST GEORGE SAUNDERS. Six proud walkers. 324p $2 Little

28-17206

Horror piles on horror to a climax that is almost anti-climactic in this tale of an international plot to embroil Europe in a new war. The hero is a very young Englishman whose nerve takes him creditably thru the murder, kidnapping, and chamber of death episodes, but nearly fails him in the torture scene, and deserts him utterly for a moment during the burial alive in the catacombs. Fortunately his partner is a secret service man seasoned to peril. The scene is Rome and its environs.

"Mr. Beeding deserves the Breath-Taker's Palm for his adventure stories. Any one of them is enough to give one a nice case af hysterics, and in this latest murder-adventure tale he has, I think, surpassed himself." C: M. Purdy

\+ Bookm 68:235 O '28 170w

"In his latest thriller Mr. Beeding has written what is by far the best of his tales. It is entirely plausible, although sufficiently out of the ordinary."

\+ Boston Transcript p10 Ag 8 '28 230w

Cleveland Open Shelf p123 N '28

"Considerably better than the average international intriguer." W. R. Brooks

\+ Outlook 149:557 Ag 1 '28 130w

"Mr. Beeding has shown ingenuity in the devising of situations and complications as well as skill in the unfolding of his tale; interest is never allowed to flag and suspense and doubt are sustained to the end. 'The Six Proud Walkers' is good entertainment."

\+ Sat R of Lit 4:1037 Jl 14 '28 150w

Springf'd Republican p7f S 2 '28 100w

"If Francis Beeding has merely set out to show how little there may be to choose between the methods of High Finance, Communism and Commercialized Crime, and how necessary for the well-being of mankind it is that the League of Nations should exist to restrain these dangerous forces, he has succeeded amply. If his purpose were more usual, and he wished to deceive, harrow, shock, delight and generally interest the reader, his success is even more ample."

\+ Times [London] Lit Sup p730 O 11 '28 620w

Wis Lib Bul 24:254 O '28

BEER, THOMAS. Road to heaven; a romance of morals. 266p $2.50 Knopf

28-12656

Sent away from home for his village philanderings Lamon Coe drifts to New York and the hospitality of his cousin Abner. He is more or less accepted by the motley group of Abner's friends, but even thruout his affair with Frankie, an opulent, kind-hearted vaudeville dancer, is acutely homesick for the farm. He runs into a home town girl in the city, and with Frankie's tragic end, and the death of generous, inscrutable Abner, Lamon takes the road to his bucolic heaven with her.

Booklist 25:28 O '28

Reviewed by Margaret Whipple

Bookm 67:540 Jl '28 830w

Reviewed by Garreta Busey

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p3 Je 3 '28 980w

Boston Transcript p2 Je 6 '28 450w

"To say that Thomas Beer has manufactured an almost fantastically brilliant novel out of a movie plot is merely another way of affirming that he is the best writer ever developed by the sagacious editor of the Saturday Evening Post. It is great stuff—great Saturday Evening Post stuff. It is the first sophisticated apotheosis of the homely virtues in American literature. But who would be so ruthless as to analyze this novel, which though its basis is melodrama and its attractive power a function of sentimentality, is, nevertheless, so brilliantly written, so charmingly composed, so adept in understatement, so rich in irony and wit that any reasonably good-natured reader is forced to accord it the accolade of unqualified admiration. Here is hokum polished to almost unbearable radiance. It is not merely the best book Thomas Beer has given us; it makes the other 'sophisticated' writers look feeble." C. P. Fadiman

\+ Nation 126:646 Je 6 '28 850w

Reviewed by Francis Birrell

— Nation and Ath 43:430 Je 30 '28 200w

Reviewed by T. S. Matthews

New Repub 55:153 Je 27 '28 300w

"A capable and amusing book. The author has been unusually fair to the misguided intellectuals who take, not a serpent, but a young bull, into their bosom. Most of the dialogue reads like highly efficient reporting of real types; the hero is very much less of a prig than one might expect, and nearly all the clever people are likeable as well." Cyril Connolly

\+ New Statesman 31:484 Jl 21 '28 300w

Reviewed by H. E. Dounce

N Y Evening Post p9 My 19 '28 1000w

"The style and form of Thomas Beer, have been subtly developing until in his present novel his pictorial quality and psychologic interest have achieved a fine balance."

\+ N Y Times p8 My 13 '28 680w

Reviewed by J: R. Chamberlain

N Y Times p26 Je 24 '28 50w

"A disappointment to many of the admirers of a fine stylist.'

— No Am 226:adv Jl '28 80w

" 'The Road to Heaven' is abundantly supplied with excellent character sketches. Thomas Beer is an elegant, a very beau among novelists. His style, if mannered and overburdened with rhetoric, is on the whole an appropriate medium for the expression of his meticulous observation and exquisite taste, for his scorn of moral undress and his appreciation of brave gesture. 'The Road to Heaven' is delightful reading, however one takes it."

\+ Outlook 149:434 Jl 11 '28 440w

Reviewed by L. P. Hartley

Sat R 146:88 Jl 21 '28 100w

" 'The Road to Heaven' is essentially a melodrama, and an extremely effective one. . . His people live and love with an astonishing immediacy, but there is as yet no directing force back of them other than the author's desire to make them live as part of a story. Just beyond the excellencies of Mr. Beer's present accomplishment lies the realm containing everything that is really important in writing. One hopes and believes that Mr. Beer will soon enter it." Theodore Purdy, Jr.

\+ — Sat R of Lit 4:1018 Jl 7 '28 700w

"Some exciting quality the book possesses. One's interest never flags, for Mr. Beer's style is mobile and insinuating. Yet nobody seems to matter quite enough, so the interest is roughened now and then by disappointment." R. A. T.

\+ — Spec 140:983 Je 30 '28 250w

Springf'd Republican p7f Je 10 '28 450w

BEERBOHM, MAX. A variety of things. 268p $3 Knopf

824 28-22602

"There is at any rate no monotony between these covers. Together with a fantastic moral tale, essays exist here, and two fairy stories, a play, a parody, a memoir of a friend, a memoir of two imaginary friends, and also a tribute to a third imaginary friend, who is still living (or was so six years ago). The days of composition, too, are refreshingly various."—Author's note

"His work gives us that peculiar sense of perfect harmony and balance, of right proportions, which makes us, if we let ourselves think of analogous pleasures we have received from other forms of art, couple the slenderest books in the world with its most tremendous music and its most majestic buildings." Rebecca West

\+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p1 O 14 '28 3300w

"The imaginary portraits, a form of writing difficult of convincing execution, are marvelously deft. The papers seem utterly effortless; a man is portrayed, not with all the pomp and plot of fiction, but simply as a character—and with what irresistibly subtle simplicity! So intensely do these people seem to live, that there is no more 'reality' in the sketch of Aubrey Beardsley—(a tenderly appreciative tribute to a loved friend)—than in those which are frankly imaginative writing." A. E. L.

+ Boston Transcript p2 O 6 '28 400w

"Mr. Beerbohm is not strictly a beautiful writer. His simplicity is a trifle larger than life, and his irony slyer than it need be. An anarchy of small conceits is his stock-in-trade, a faint overtone of wit, every phrase asserting its rights over a not discreditable sentence. For the rest, his writing is not at all original. It seems to have been derived rather from a gallimaufry of familiar models." T. S. Matthews

New Repub 56:334 N 7 '28 600w

"Something very delicate, very faint, very urbane and just a shade gracefully cynical, Mr. Beerbohm attains in his portrayal of the whole human race, whether in his caricatures with the brush and pencil or those conceived in words. And in this volume be it fantasy, imaginary portrait, essay or parody, there is an almost ineluctable and quietly impersonal malice." Edgar Johnson

N Y Evening Post p8m N 3 '28 480w

"If much of him does not bear re-reading, some of him cannot bear too much of it; and that is the final test." L: Kronenberger

+ N Y Times p2 S 30 '28 1150w

Reviewed by Herschel Brickell

No Am 226:adv N '28 90w

"The simplicity of his style deceives you; it is a simplicity of the letter, of the written word, beneath which is a subtlety and wisdom that charms you, and no one can so gracefully prick the bubbles of inherited and acquired complacencies."

+ Outlook 150:1175 N 14 '28 160w

BEETHAM, BENTLEY. Among our banished birds. 227, 16p il $4 Longmans [10s 6d E. Arnold]

598.3 Water birds. Limicolae Agr28-95

The book is an account of the wanderings of a distinguished ornithologist in Europe to study the characters and habits of rare birds in their natural habitats. At one time many of these beautiful birds had their breeding grounds in England, but were obliged to seek protection elsewhere, many of them finding asylum in Spain. In his notes the author shows why these birds were exiled from England and what chance there is now of their return. Contents: The avocet; The spoonbill; The black-tailed godwit; The black tern; The marismas; The black-winged stilt; The pratincole and the Kentish plover; A heron nursery; The buff-backed heron; The egret.

"He is a closer student, if less of an artist, than Hudson, and he has the same passion for the wild thing left wild." L: S. Gannett

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p18 Ja 15 '28 480w

Boston Transcript p4 D 17 '27 230w

Reviewed by Frances Pitt

Nation and Ath 42:sup258 N 12 '27 170w

"Both in illustrations and in text it is above the average of its class, but it does not cease to be typical. There is a haunting sameness about the accounts of bird-photographers' experiences—they all go to the same places, lie cramped in the same hides, suffer the same anxieties and disappointments, and bring back the same sets of views of birds approaching, sitting on, or leaving their nests. Mr. Beetham can be taken more seriously as an observer than the average bird-photographer, but coming just after Mr. Selous he naturally gives the impression of being a little thin and superficial."

+ — New Statesman 30:supxvi N 5 '27 280w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:153 Mr '28

"Even more as an ornithologist than as a photographer the author brings freshness and originality to his task. Mr. Beetham's descriptions are most vivid and striking when he finds himself among those nesting species of the Spanish 'marismas.'"

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p837 N 17 '27 650w

BEGBIE, HAROLD (GENTLEMAN WITH A DUSTER, pseud.). Howling mob; an indictment of democracy. 126p $2.50 McBride [5s Mills & B.]

321.8 Democracy. Great Britain—Social conditions 27-23376

"Addressing himself to England, where democracy is effective politically but not socially, the 'Gentleman with a Duster' calls for measures to prevent the proletariat from capturing, by constitutional action, the machinery of state. Distorting freely the facts of history, as well as the arguments of his opponents, he traces all British troubles to the democratic principle . . . As a contrast to the degradation of the democratic era we are given a lyric picture of eighteenth century England, when the Whig aristocracy ruled benevolently a nation of light-hearted peasants. Democracy is responsible for the doom of this golden age because, according to the author, 'industrialism is a creation of democracy.'"—Books (N Y Herald Tribune)

"The new constitution he offers for referendum would retain an elected Parliament for advisory purposes, but would place all power in the hands of a small senate, nominated by the chief trading bodies and learned societies of Great Britain. He does not develop this bright idea in great detail. The best comment on it and on his book as a whole he has himself provided on the titlepage—a very happy quotation from Coleridge. 'In politics, what begins in fear usually ends in folly.'" Keith Hutchison

— Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 Ja 15 '28 430w

"A very clever and brilliantly written book."

+ Living Age 332:555 Mr 15 '27 600w (Reprinted from Sunday Times)

"The remedy seems simple enough, sane, and on the whole practicable. One is led to expect, from the unwarranted sneers and expressions of contempt with which the author frequently reviles 'the howling mob,' that he is ready to urge a drastic purge of the body politic. He writes, of course, exclusively from a British viewpoint, but his observations are of general interest wherever the democratic ideal is worshipped as an article of an unquestionable faith." F. J. C. Martyn

+ — N Y Times p20 Mr 18 '28 620w

Times [London] Lit Sup p131 F 24 '28 260w

BEITH, JOHN HAY (IAN HAY, pseud.). Poor gentleman. 303p $2 Houghton [7s 6d Hodder & S.]

28-2516

The hero, poor gentleman, is blind. But he is considered dangerous, none the less, by a group of sedition mongers in England, who kidnap him and carry him off, as luck has it, to a place he knows very well. Despite his handicap the poor gentleman wrecks the plans of the gang, and rescues the lady they have also abducted.

Booklist 24:321 My '28

Reviewed by Harriet Sampson

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p18 Mr 18 '28 640w

Reviewed by I. W. Lawrence

Boston Transcript p4 F 18 '28 2250w

Cleveland Open Shelf p78 Je '28

BEITH, J: H.—Continued

"'The First Hundred Thousand' may have been hardest, but 'The Poor Gentleman' is certainly one of the best of Ian Hay's books. It is not particularly 'important,' as the publishers announce, save for its propagandist elements; however, it is entertaining to an amazing degree."

+ Ind 120:141 F 11 '28 200w

"A pleasantly written adventure story, but why had the author to call his villains Bolshevists? It seems to show a lack of invention. However, nobody writes the light adventure story better than this writer." Edwin Muir

+ — Nation and Ath 42:753 F 18 '28 40w

N Y Evening Post p12 F 4 '28 100w

"A light, agreeably written story that may be read as a pure mystery yarn or a tract."

+ N Y Times p9 Ja 29 '28 800w

Sat R of Lit 4:724 Mr 31 '28 280w

"The book is a real 'thriller.' Those who dislike thrillers must not read it. The long arm of coincidence has been literally stretched on the rack of Ian Hay's invention. The British public, quite unreasonably, loses its senses over a ruffian to be extradited to America for murder. But these little objections are not of much account. The Head-Master of Eton would call this 'a book to take in a railway train.' As such, we recommend it."

— + Spec 140:168 F 4 '28 400w

"A very smooth, agreeably written mystery story."

+ Springf'd Republican p7f Mr 25 '28 250w

"Although the parts of the book which deal with the dastardly plans of Nanoukian and his followers to start a revolution in England are commonplace in the extreme, 'The Poor Gentleman' is not without considerable compensations. There is Connie Lyndon, a vivacious and charming heroine, there are delightful pieces of dialogue when the characters forget the plot and talk about nothing in particular, and there is a truly memorable Cockney in the person of Mr. Alf Noseworthy."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p152 Mr 1 '28 160w

BELL, ARCHIE. Spell of Ireland. (Spell ser.) 317p $3.75 Page

914.15 Ireland—Description and travel 28-9852

"A pleasantly informal book about Ireland and the Irish people. Touches on all of the places which the tourist will be likely to visit. Well illustrated, with a map."—Wis Lib Bul

---

Reviewed by A. B. Maurice

Bookm 67:459 Je '28 150w

Cleveland Open Shelf p90 Jl '28

Pratt p32 autumn '28

"Mr Bell writes with intelligent appreciation of the life and spirit of modern Ireland, as well as of the historic background and the scenic beauties of city and country. In fact, his humor and infectious manner make his account much more attractive than the usual book of travel."

+ Springf'd Republican p7f Jl 22 '28 130w

Wis Lib Bul 24:222 Jl '28

BELL, CLIVE. Civilization; an essay. 264p $2.50 Harcourt [7s 6d Chatto & W.]

901 Civilization 28-22432

Clive Bell gives a very civilized and lucid definition of the civilized man and an analysis of the qualities and conditions which constitute a civilized state of society. The civilized man, in his definition, must have above all else a sense of values. He is not the creator, usually, or the man of action, rarely the hero or the artist, never the self-seeker and troubler of peace, but the appreciator, the man of reason, of taste and good manners.

Booklist 25:114 D '28

Reviewed by Gilbert Seldes

Bookm 68:226 O '28 580w

"Mr. Bell is eminently worth hearing. Unlike most critics of art, he has wit, scholarship and engaging effrontery; he is neither long-winded nor obscure; he has ideas, and he presents them not only with cleverness but with stimulating assurance." T: Craven

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p20 S 30 '28 1500w

Boston Transcript p9 O 20 '28 680w

"The value of such books as this of Mr. Bell's is very great, especially for students of the moral sciences, because treatises have no life, and Mr. Bell's book is alive. It should be read by all lecturers and students of ethics." C. D. Burns

+ Int J Ethics 39:118 O '28 460w

"Mr. Bell's book is wittily and often brilliantly phrased." J. W. Krutch

+ Nation 127:662 D 12 '28 980w

"His principal merit as a writer is that he starts innumerable hares. And the hares that he starts have this charming peculiarity, that the unwary reader who goes in pursuit finds only too often that they have a sting in the tail. It is true that Mr. Bell is himself so civilized that even his hare is artificial and runs by electricity, and that, being something of a barbarian, I should like sometimes to get my teeth into the real thing, but to write such a fresh and readable book on the subject of civilization is a feat of which he may well be proud and for which we may well be grateful." Leonard Woolf

+ — Nation and Ath 43:331 Je 9 '28 900w

Reviewed by R. M. Lovett

New Repub 56:156 S 26 '28 200w

"Here is a perfectly clear definition of Civilisation which no one can ignore. It is not only the best and most comprehensible that we have seen, but also the most impregnable. It is a really brilliant piece of authentic analysis. With Mr. Clive Bell's book we have only one serious fault to find. Minor faults include an occasional ambiguity of style which might easily be illustrated, but is not really important. What is important is that he seems utterly to overlook the immense significance in the development of civilisation of the specifically religious emotion—exhibited almost as often by atheists as by devotees. He never refers to it." R. B.

+ — New Statesman 31:287 Je 9 '28 2300w

"The World War showed that it is much easier to die for civilization—or be made to die for it—than to define it. Mr. Clive Bell, fortunately for the professions of art and literature, did not die for it, but he is, in this present little volume, attempting the bolder task." R. L. Duffus

N Y Times p2 O 14 '28 1200w

"Clive Bell is a master at writing lightly of serious things. His ideas as expressed in this book are not controversial, although in the past he has found many to disagree with his opinions on art and life. He writes with wit and a sort of easy charm that should help readers usually disinclined for serious reading to enjoy his book."

+ Outlook 150:1034 O 24 '28 380w

Reviewed by Arthur Colton

Sat R of Lit 5:397 N 24 '28 1600w

Reviewed by A. S. Duncan-Jones

Spec 140:911 Je 16 '28 220w

Times [London] Lit Sup p465 Je 21 '28 1100w

"The book is delightfully written and worth reading even by those who can accept only a small portion of its prejudices." R. N.

+ World Tomorrow 12:521 D '28 400w

BELL, EDWARD PRICE. Europe's economic sunrise; a survey of the constructive forces contributing to its Spirit of the morning; introd. by Charles Gates Dawes; the plan of the book by Max Mason. 217p $2.50 Chicago daily news, 15 N. Wells st., Chicago

330.94 Europe—Economic conditions. Great Britain—Economic conditions 27-17243

This volume gathers together articles and interviews that have appeared at short intervals during the last year as features of the special foreign news service of the Chicago Daily News.

The articles reflect the views of prominent men of England, France, Germany, Italy and the United States on the social and economic forces at work today.

"One cannot read Mr. Bell's interpretative and clarifying pages without the ardent wish that his book might have the widest possible reading among Americans, that it might be one of the best of 'best sellers.' For it meets more simply, more illuminatingly and more readably than have other presentations of its theme the shocking need of American readers for a better understanding of conditions in Europe and of the vital connection with them of the United States."

+ N Y Times p18 Ja 22 '28 420w
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:200 Ap '28

BELL, GERTRUDE MARGARET LOWTHIAN. Letters; sel. and ed. by Lady Bell. 2v 791p il $10 Boni & Liveright [£2 2s Benn]

B or 92 Arabia. Bagdad. Voyages and travels 28-7693

For descriptive note see Annual for 1927.

Booklist 24:246 Mr '28

Reviewed by O. H. Dunbar
Bookm 67:103 Mr '28 900w

"These letters. . . possess the spontaneous and charming facility of happy self-assurance. it is a pity that the letters have been so discreetly edited with an eye to political offense. In the future the complete correspondence may well be the basis for history. For the present they are a record of enchantment, the reflection of an eager and a brilliant personality." W: Whitman, 3rd

+ Ind 120:92 Ja 28 '28 500w

Reviewed by V. Sackville-West
New Repub 53:277 Ja 25 '28 750w

"They reflect, as intensely, as frankly, as wittily, a personality as vividly alive to life as was Mme. de Sevigne—no matter how antithetically so; plus a socially broader and humanly less restricted outlook, and a sheer joy in existehce, in human service, in life as a surpassing adventure to which, despite the gayety and charm of her correspondence, the famous Frenchwoman cannot pretend." F: H. Martens

+ N Y Evening Post p12 Mr 3 '28 750w

"Because of her deep understanding and comprehensive grasp she becomes central in diplomacies, becomes an adviser of desert rulers, becomes an agent who helps to stabilize Arabian frontiers." C: J. Finger

N Y World p10m D 11 '27 210w
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:113 F '28
Pratt p34 spring '28
R of Rs 77:8 F '28 200w
St Louis 26:80 Mr '28

"She had wit and humor and elicited it from others, she had a gift for vivid phrase and moving description, and somewhere she found the energy to sit down night after night till she died to share her life with her family and friends. It is bitterly disappointing, then, to find that Lady Bell and, presumably, some co-editors from officialdom, have been circumspect to the point almost of inanity in editing some of the letters. It is irritating to be served up with tantalizing hiatuses of printer's dots when the original letters were so obviously loaded with first-hand and frank comment on exciting affairs by a principal actor in them." Bartlet Brebner

+ — Sat R of Lit 4:663 Mr 10 '28 1550w

"These letters stand as a fascinating document which discloses the life and mind of one of the most remarkable women of her age."

+ Springf'd Republican p7f Mr 4 '28 1250w

Reviewed by H. G. Dwight
Yale R n s 17:789 Jl '28 1700w

BELL, GERTRUDE MARGARET LOWTHIAN. Persian pictures; with a preface by Sir E. Denison Ross. 198p $3 Boni & Liveright [10s 6d Benn]

915.5 Persia—Description and travel 28-23850

"Persian Pictures was the fruit of Gertrude Bell's first journey to the East, made in 1892 when she was a brilliant young woman of twenty-four. Sir Denison Ross, in his introduction, shows that she had no wish at all to publish her Persian sketches. When at last she yielded to pressure she declined to put her name to the book. The excellence of the writing was immediately recognised, but for some reason it was allowed to go out of print, and even the renown which Gertrude Bell achieved by her later books and her remarkable work in Baghdad did not avail to bring it out again until the present year. . . At the close of the nineteenth century the country and the people were still as Haji Baba had known them, and to Gertrude Bell they were irresistible. Her pictures make twenty chapters, not all of them concerned with the lighter matters."—New Statesman

---

Booklist 25:115 D '28

"They are thin, they are pseudo fine writing, but despite those weaknesses they have an undeniable grace and sublety that lift them at any rate above the banal. They have a special interest, too, because they represent the immature excursions in aesthetics of a woman who afterward became authentically great—never great as an artist, but great as a scholar, great as explorer, great in statecraft." W. B. Seabrook

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p17 N 25 '28 320w

"Though the Persia of Miss Bell's days is probably as extinct as she hints that the Orient of the Arabian Nights was during her own stay there, the pictures her words evoke are so stimulating and so alluring as to make the risk of disillusion seem worth taking."

+ Boston Transcript p2 O 10 '28 200w

"A volume which will serve further to establish her as one of the most brilliant and imaginative of English women."

+ Nation 127:720 D 26 '28 60w

"Readers of her Letters will not need to be assured that nothing she wrote could be anything but sincere, sharp, and discriminating. Never was anyone so incurably responsive to the interest and force of life. The book proclaims itself as the work of someone young enough to be excited, but intelligent enough to be thoughtful." V. Sackville-West

+ Nation and Ath 43:179 My 12 '28 630w

"There is no more fascinating volume in English than this concerning the life of Persia during the generation preceding the great modern disturbances and changes. Gertrude Bell is indubitably of the elect among English travellers."

+ New Statesman 31:430 Jl 7 '28 330w

Reviewed by R. Le Gallienne
N Y Times p3 D 30 '28 1100w
St Louis 26:357 N '28

"Gertrude Bell was only twenty-six when she wrote the book, but, reading it over again now, one wonders whether she has ever done anything better, excepting, of course, 'The Desert and the Sown.' "

+ Sat R 145:672 My 26 '28 100w

"Truly Miss Bell had a spiritual grasp of the East given to few Western men or women. Her little pen picture of 'The King of the Merchants' and his surroundings is perfect in style and in that subtle power of transferring not merely the setting of a scene to the reader's mind, but its very soul."

+ Spec 140:692 My 5 '28 80w

"Not one of her Persian Pictures but contains the promise of the shrewd observation and the understanding of Oriental character which her later writings abundantly fulfilled and which equipped her in due course for her unique work in Iraq."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p373 My 17 '28 680w

BELLAH, JAMES WARNER. Gods of yesterday. 258p $2 (7s 6d) Appleton

28-2672

These realistic stories of men in the air service in France appeared first in the Saturday Evening Post.

"Almost the first highly satisfactory stories about the airmen who fought in the war. That is real praise, for the subject demands something more than a tame talent. Mr. Bellah has brought to it a gift for swift, direct, pointed narrative curiously combined with a sensitive imagination."

+ Bookm 67:xxxiv My '28 130w

"Nearly all the short tales included in the present book skip blithely about the countryside from France to England or even to Scotland and back again. If Mr. Bellah chose, he could increase the strength of the scene he is really interested in by limiting his attention to that and no other. . . On the whole, however, Mr. Bellah does get under the skin and show what really goes on in the great flying squadrons. He has yet, however, many things to learn about fashioning his material and getting the most out of it." W. E. H.

+ — Boston Transcript p2 Mr 7 '28 380w

"Here is a collection of short stories about the war to thrill the most dispassionate reader."

+ Ind 120:314 Mr 31 '28 90w

"Many readers probably have already seen 'Fear,' the opening story and beyond question the best. It appeared first in a magazine and later in one of the anthologies of the year's 'best' stories. Beautifully written, psychologically sound, his tale is a splendid rendering of the loyalty and high courage which, cloaked under a shell of carelessness and indifference, characterized the members of the British flying units. If it contained nothing of any value except the 'dog fights' between British Camels and German Fokkers it would still stand as one of the most stirring narratives the war has produced."

+ N Y Times p18 F 19 '28 380w

"The literary qualities of Mr. Bellah's short stories are usually gratifying, making for suspense and vividness. 'Fear,' the longest story, is also the best, for it carries a sustained narrative of character through to an excellent climax. In short, 'Gods of Yesterday' handles its pleasantly novel material with considerable effectiveness."

+ Sat R of Lit 4:868 My 12 '28 140w

"Mr. J. W. Bellah's stories should enable the most earth bound reader to visualize both the pageant and the breathless movement of active service flying. In itself this must be accounted an achievement, for aerial combat is the most difficult type of warfare to describe in a manner that is accurate as well as lucid."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p168 Mr 8 '28 350w

BELLAH, JAMES WARNER. Sons of Cain. 248p $2 (7s 6d) Appleton

28-23043

The scene is laid in London at the time of the Armistice. Major Murray Petching, American, celebrating with a group of friends, meets Frederika Seleyce, who has been a V. A. D. in France. Freddy is married to a cad who should never have been married at all, and who will neither divorce her nor let her divorce him. In the disintegration of standards going on about them Murray holds his love high, refusing to accept a casual relationship with Freddy. The way opens for them to have each other with honor.

"Here are the pleasantest group of people any author has introduced to us for a long time. 'Sons of Cain' they may be, their veneer of civilization worn off by long service of the war god, but their charm is in no wise affected and one leaves them with a decided wish that the acquaintance could be prolonged."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p20 N 4 '28 250w

"Although the background of the book offers opportunities for colorful portrayal and for rousing drama, and although there are passages that are not without vividness, one feels that the author has made far from the best possible use of his material. . . The novel is no more than the shadow of what it might be in the hands of an abler narrator."

— + N Y Times p34 N 18 '28 450w

BELLAMANN, HENRY. Crescendo. 296p $2.50 Harcourt

28-21982

Robert Ives is an artist approved by fashionable New York. He appeals strongly to women of many types, and at least four women are in love with him. Robert himself is honestly in love with his wife, a noted concert pianist, and Leslie, a twenty year old society girl. He wishes to keep both; but this solution, which seems so simple to Robert, is acceptable neither to wife nor maid. Extraordinarily sympathetic and unselfish as the two are, they insist on some other solution. Robert finds it, at great cost to all three.

"Conceived with intelligence, this novel stands far above the average in the depth, serenity and certitude of its protestation and in the force of the problem it presents, a problem at once both general and special."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p43 S 30 '28 300w

Boston Transcript p1 O 13 '28 300w

N Y Evening Post p8m D 29 '28 80w

"The author analyzes a little heavily and coldly; he does not reveal his people through themselves. True, they think; they talk; they become, indeed, so articulate (even foreign-born Astrid) that they represent their problems with great intelligence. But they never rise to drama through emotion or to emotion through drama. The book is formal rather than natural, and for that reason unreal."

— + N Y Times p6 S 30 '28 700w

Sat R of Lit 5:252 O 13 '28 200w

BELLAMANN, HENRY. Upward pass. 80p $1.50 Houghton

811 28-23938

This is Mr Bellamann's second collection of poems. He is also the author of two novels.

"Though it all makes a brave show of glitter and light the significance is hard to see." C: Divine

— Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p34 D 2 '28 100w

Boston Transcript p4 D 26 '28 320w

"Mr. Henry Bellamann, whose verses are as fragmentary as shafts of January sun, and often as gleaming, is outside classification. He is not defiant of poetic tradition, he is not a rebel; but his poetry does not conform to tradition. He is unaccountable; and for the very few." Percy Hutchison

N Y Times p20 N 11 '28 150w

BELLINGER, MRS MARTHA IDELL (FLETCHER). Short history of the drama. 469p $3 Holt

809.2 Drama—History and criticism 27-22665

An outline survey of the development of the drama from Aeschylus to Eugene O'Neill. Such a bird's eye view allows only brief treatment of individual dramatists, periods and countries. The supplement gives a still more summary listing of important playwrights, with their dates and representative plays.

Booklist 24:355 Je '28

"It is a convenient and fascinating guide, with no pretences to scholarship, but with enthusiasm for the subject. . . The Bellinger guide fills a popular need." M. H. Moses

+ Bookm 66:576 Ja '28 200w

"Serious students of drama will hardly have time to read her book." W. P. Eaton
— Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p14 Ja 15 '28 160w

Cleveland Open Shelf p20 F '28

"Mrs. Bellinger covers so vast an extent of territory that she has had perforce to be a bit summary in her treatment of its individual segments. Nevertheless, the amount of attention she has given to each of these phases is so considerable and the volume as a whole is so comprehensive in its survey that for the ordinary reader and for the beginning student of the drama the volume will have very great value."
+ N Y Times p6 D 11 '27 330w
Wis Lib Bul 24:88 Mr '28

BELLOC, HILAIRE. Danton; a study; Am. ed., with new preface. 448p il $5 Putnam

B or 92 France—History—Revolution. Danton, Georges Jacques 28-4514

Published in London in 1899, Hilaire Belloc's study of Danton appears for the first time in an American edition, with a new preface and 17 illustrations. Belloc writes in a spirit of admiration of Danton's character and of his place in the Revolution.

Booklist 24:361 Je '28
"Beneath the glow and sparkle of a style scintillating with beautiful phrasing there is evident the steady heat of Truth."
+ Bookm 67:xxvii My '28 310w

" 'Danton' was an early work, and its faults were naturally ascribed to boyish immaturity. But Mr. Belloc is now nearly sixty, and he is still a boy. Need we add that nothing could make him more lovable than this perennial boyishness? At any rate, he has aspired, more daringly, perhaps, than any living writer, and he has almost attained." Albert Guerard
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p16 Ap 1 '28 930w

"Twenty years having passed since the first publication in England of this study of a pivotal life and life work, its publication for the first time in America will possess for most readers the freshness of appeal of a first edition. If it be true, as Michelet once said, that 'history should be a resurrection of the flesh,' then in this as in his other biographical studies Hilaire Belloc, evoking clearly from a confused past a remarkable personality, as rugged as Nature herself, and as inexplorable, proves himself a master." F. B.
+ Boston Transcript p8 Ap 7 '28 800w

"Most students are already familiar with the work through its English editions (Nice, 1899), which have competed for favor with M. Madelin's biography. The latter has the advantage of riper scholarship and yields little advantage to Belloc's volume in literary charm, but it is certain that Mr. Belloc will be read with enjoyment and profit for at least another thirty years."
+ Hist Outlook 19:244 My '28 160w

"What more, or what less, could one wish to say, in 1928 of the present reprint than was said in 1899 of Mr. Belloc's brilliant first enterprise in the writing of history? It is now, as it was then, a wonderfully fascinating book." S. K. R.
+ New Statesman 32:20 O 13 '28 400w
Reviewed by E: Shanks
Sat R 146:505 O 20 '28 170w

BELLOC, HILAIRE. Haunted house. 272p il $2.50 Harper [7s 6d Arrowsmith] 28-561

There is no real mystery here, for the reader is in the secret from the start, when Mr Henry Maple, egged on by his American fiancée, decides to furnish Rackham with a lively ghost, thereby preventing his aunt from selling the family manor except to him, the rightful owner. The group of prospective purchasers, titled and otherwise, and the scheming aunt Hilda provide the author with material for an amusing satire.

Booklist 24:321 My '28
"The Chesterton drawings alone are worth the price of admission." Will Cuppy
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 F 12 '28 150w

Boston Transcript p6 Mr 3 '28 550w

Cleveland Open Shelf p66 My '28

"If the satire is over-laboured, the fun, when it at length gets under weigh, is not so rollicking as it might have been." Sylva Norman
Nation and Ath 41:752 S 10 '27 550w

"Mr. Belloc's satire upon the foibles and poses of 'high society' are pointed but at the same time kindly and tolerant. It is this attitude of suave amusement that contributes greatly to the charm of the book; and the humor, while often hilarious, is never rowdy." Ruth Lechlitner
+ N Y Evening Post p13 Ja 28 '28 520w

"Mr. Chesterton's drawings are executed with characteristic vagueness and spirit. The book as a whole is fun, but if you are not English and aren't interested in the fact that it is possible to acquire a coronet and an 'immemorial home' for hard cash in England, this burlesque ghost-story's serious purpose—and it is serious in every undertone of its high-spirited satire—is apt to prove bewildering."
N Y Times p7 Ja 22 '28 1550w

Pratt p43 autumn '28

"The illustrations are excellent. The narrative exhibits to the full Mr. Belloc's high spirits and uproarious sense of humour, but it changes its character mid-way. Though I enjoyed Mr. Belloc's humour and humours, and welcomed to the scene more, and still more outrageous, peers, I a little regretted the new version of Sussex that the opening pages seemed to promise." L. P. Hartley
+ — Sat R 144:201 Ag 6 '27 150w

"Had the letterpress been as amiable as Mr. Chesterton's illustrations The Haunted House would have been a rollicking entertainment. But, alas, Mr. Belloc is not good-humoured; he writes with scorn."
— + Spec 139:193 Jl 30 '27 300w

"It is always pleasant to see Belloc and Chesterton enjoying themselves together and if the result in this case is not quite brilliant it is at least entertaining and funny."
+ — Springf'd Republican p7f Mr 18 '28 300w

Times [London] Lit Sup p518 Jl 28 '27 520w

BELLOC, HILAIRE. History of England; 4v v 3, Catholic England: III. The later Middle ages A.D. 1348 to 1525. 434p $3.75 Putnam [15s Methuen]

942 Great Britain—History (26-6531)

The third volume of Belloc's history deals with the later Middle ages, from the Black death to the Reformation.

Booklist 25:22 O '28
"This volume has all the positive and negative qualities of its predecessors. Mr. Belloc never forgets that mediæval history, whether we like it or not, is predominantly Church history. To him, the one over-whelming important event in these two centuries is the Reformation; therefore he keeps that question constantly before us." G. G. Coulton
Nation and Ath 42:850 Mr 10 '28 960w
Reviewed by Neilson Abeel
New Repub 55:259 Jl 25 '28 350w

New Statesman 31:52 Ap 21 '28 1200w

"Vivid descriptions of battles and keen biographical sketches of important characters lend an unfailing interest to both volumes. Partisan as the work undoubtedly is, one does not have to agree in order to admire." W. S. Hayward
+ Sat R of Lit 5:209 O 13 '28 600w

BELLOC, HILAIRE—Continued

"It is so interesting and suggestive in part that we cannot but regret the author's determination to write with a definite bias against Protestantism and against 'the official textbooks.' "

+ — Spec 140:333 Mr 3 '28 250w

"To anyone brought up on orthodox textbooks this history should come as a breath of fresh air. But Mr. Belloc tends to overstate his paradoxes, and to develop what is really sound and true in his theories to such an extent that a corrective is necessary."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p265 Ap 12 '28 1350w

BELLOC, HILAIRE. How the reformation happened. 290p $3 McBride [10s 6d J. Cape]

270.6 Reformation 28-13799

"Frankly a brief for the Roman Catholic Church in its struggle against the reforms which eventually divided Christendom. Mr Belloc describes the movement in Europe which culminated in the final separation of the dissenters from the ancient faith."—New Repub

---

"The most stimulating historical criticism that has for long appeared. Though not pedantic, it is scholarly, though not corrosive, it is piercing. It displays the genius of a man who has the firmest of firm convictions, whose intolerance is deliciously palatable through his tolerance, whose interestedness is outdone only by his disinterestedness and detachment." A. S. R.

+ Boston Transcript p6 Jl 18 '28 1100w

Nation and Ath 44:112 O 20 '28 1300

"Mr. Belloc is at his best in the sections devoted to France. Here he is in his element, and his estimates of personalities and movements are more correct. It is a pity that Mr. Belloc cannot write from a less partisan point of view, although much of his charm lies in his vehemence. Often he is convincing." Neilson Abeel

+ — New Repub 55:260 Jl 25 '28 320w

New Statesman 31:supx O 6 '28 1250w

"For all the limitations, Hilaire Belloc has written a fine and stimulating book full of persuasive charm. Like Martin Luther, 'he can do no otherwise.' His pages devoted to France are so fine, so full of life and truth, that one hopes he may decide to write a history of that fair land, where his very limitations would be his strength. The present revival of Catholicism in France would give him the needed climax for a superb book." C: Johnston

+ — N Y Times p13 Je 10 '28 1550w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:437 O '28

"The author, always lucid by nature and by choice, is here especially determined to be understood and almost spells out the words of the lesson for us. The audience to which this teaching is addressed cannot know, has not even any means of guessing, on what evidence these generalizations are based. Does it therefore accept them on Mr. Belloc's assurance? It does not. . . 'How the Reformation Happened' may be criticized from certain points of view, but its clarity is beyond praise. No one who reads it with the least attention could ever be in doubt as to the author's meaning or fail to carry away with him an accurate recollection of that meaning." E: Shanks

— + Sat R 146:505 O 20 '28 340w

Times [London] Lit Sup p850 N 15 '28 900w

BELLOC, HILAIRE. James the Second. 298p $4 Lippincott

B or 92 James II, king of England (James VII of Scotland) 28-25370

Mr Belloc makes the best possible case for the Stuart monarch, whom he represents as a stubborn and brave man, possessed of a strong sense of duty but poor political judgment, who was set an impossible task.

Boston Transcript p4 O 10 '28 1200w

"It is an amusing book, but it is not biography or history; it is propaganda. His James II. is the James whom Mr. Belloc would like us to believe sat on the throne of England, the patriot king, the upholder of religious tolerance, the martyr for the true faith. All the Protestants are, of course, scoundrels and traitors. Mr. Belloc makes this myth into a rattling good story, which I certainly enjoyed reading." Leonard Woolf

Nation and Ath 43:210 My 19 '28 130w

"Possibly the figure that emerges in these pages may not be James in his habit as he lived, but at least we are given something human and intelligible, and even Mr. Belloc, uncannily dexterous as he is, has never posed a character more skilfully against the background of his age. To say this is not necessarily to accept the author's interpretation of the play of forces in seventeenth century England. . . Mr. Belloc's study may ensure in future a more charitable view of the man; but even so, his extraordinarily brilliant advocacy is not likely to reverse the verdict on the king."

+ New Statesman 31:supviii My 19 '28 880w

"It is, in Mr. Belloc's best style, a brilliant controversial defense of the most stupid, bigoted and reactionary of England's Stuart Kings. One feels that Mr. Belloc's 'noble dupe' receives plenary absolution at his hands—i. e., is vindicated, because, in the last analysis, he is a faithful son of Mother Church." F. H. M.

+ — N Y Evening Post p11m D 8 '28 200w

"While it will hardly succeed in breaking down all the prejudices that are held against the Catholic monarch, Mr. Belloc succeeds in making out a strikingly strong case." Herschel Brickell

+ No Am 226:adv N '28 150w

"The subject is per se more interesting to English than to American readers, but any one with a flair for history must find so individual a re-reading of it stimulating. Belloc's style is lucid, full of vitality and wit. History, in his hands, is a lively thing."

+ Outlook 150:994 O 17 '28 280w

Sat R 145:402 Mr 31 '28 90w

"Mr. Belloc appears in the guise of rescuer of monarchs in distress. It is a gallant effort, and it goes without saying that in its course we are refreshed by re-acquaintance with Mr. Belloc's old lucidity and force, which are such ample reward for our reading. . . Reading his latest book is in fact a strenuous joy which should not be missed. It is always salutary and stimulating when accepted verdicts in history are challenged, and the onslaught on customary opinions of such a doughty controversialist as Mr. Belloc has a tonic if not a destructive effect. Twisting the academic lion's tail, pulling the beard of decorous dons may be a zestful, amusing, and within certain limits even a healthy exercise. But in reading his present book we cannot help feeling that Mr. Belloc has indulged himself in this particular penchant rather more than is funny."

+ — Sat R 145:468 Ap 14 '28 1100w

"Mr. Belloc writes so well that one could wish it were history that he were writing, rather than Bellocian opinions about history. It is perhaps fortunate that his prejudices make the book a bit tiresome. When Mr. Belloc is at his best he can be dangerously plausible and carry with him all his readers but the historians. He is often suggestive, and occasionally, as when he deals with population in Sussex villages at the time of Domesday Book, exceedingly interesting. But he can hardly write a page of history without supporting a cause or forcing upon a period his own pet ideas." Wallace Notestein

+ — Sat R of Lit 5:583 Ja 12 '29 600w

"The two factors which make the present study, with all its faults, delightful reading (and condone the author's irritating partisanship) are, first, the style, which has a splendid bravura swing. But the second and more important quality of the book lies in Mr. Belloc's insight into historical causes. . . A reader would get what we consider to be an utterly distorted view of the conflict of the seventeenth century from Mr. Belloc, but he would, at any rate, realize that there was a conflict and would know what it was about. We can therefore recommend the book."

+ Spec 140:649 Ap 28 '28 680w

"This is a brilliant and challenging book. It has the incisiveness and distinction of style which we expect from Mr. Belloc. Through nearly 300 pages the interest of the subject does not waver and the book appears on the flood tide of Stuart rehabilitation. Mr. Belloc's book is 'provocative' in the best sense of the word, and his main theses are worthy of careful consideration."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p301 Ap 26 '28 1200w

BELLOC, HILAIRE. Robespierre; a study. 417p $5 Putnam [12s 6d Nisbet]

B or 92 Robespierre, Maximilien Marie Isidore de. France—History—Revolution 27-27821

"Mr. Belloc's volume on Robespierre is not new. It was first published in London in 1901. Since that time the whole French Revolutionary era has been reinterpreted. Mr. Belloc is fully aware of that fact and in the preface to the present edition he acknowledges that were he writing the volume today some of his conclusions might be very different. But such conclusions, one gathers, would not materially alter the picture of Robespierre or the part he played in that titanic struggle that man might be freed from the shackles of the old régime." —Hist Outlook

Hist Outlook 19:183 Ap '28 150w

"That he has woven a species of curious glamor about the personality of a man who, all said and done, was one of the most terrible of bores, the kind with only one theme and that theme himself, will not detract from the value of this human document which his publishers have so intelligently granted a new lease on life." F: H. Martens

+ N Y Evening Post p11 O 8 '27 500w

"The author has subjected his character to the most microscopic scrutiny. We flatter ourselves that the psychological biography is one of our present-day discoveries, but that is nonsense. Thirty years ago we had this study of Robespierre, which is unsurpassed as a piece of psychological analysis. So logical, so luminous is the work that one lays the volume down with the conviction that there is nothing more to be said." C. G. Bowers

+ N Y World p10m D 18 '27 150w

"In the years that have elapsed since its first appearance it has made many ardent admirers and will doubtless be welcomed heartily in its new format, which is an attractive one." Herschel Brickell

+ No Am 225:adv Ja '28 90w

Pratt p35 spring '28

BELLOC, HILAIRE. Towns of destiny. 238p il $5 McBride

914 Cities and towns—Europe. Cities and towns—Africa 27-24256

"The greater portion of the book is concerned with Spain, the Rhine March and those towns of Sicily, the Balearics and North Africa won back from the Moors which the author calls 'The Recovered Country.' In the description of the blending of three eras of the European race, the founding of Greece and Rome, the peril from Islam, the triumph of reconquest, Belloc draws his finest pictures, makes his most stirring effects."—Books (N Y Herald Tribune)

"With cadenced dignity creating a beauty not preciously remote, Hilaire Belloc proves his contention that the treasuring of the past is the privilege of a lively mind. His clear sense of the continuity of history adds strength to sensitive description; his awareness of the living past gives color and movement to sticks and stones."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p3 Ja 1 '28 150w

"No other English essayist, it seems to me, can blend the tale of half-remembered cities to the accompaniment of musical prose as Belloc can; no other writer as well as he can make a memorable habitation a place never to be forgotten." J. F. W.

+ Cath World 127:373 Je '28 320w

"These beautifully chiseled impressions, some of them but a few pages in length, are evocative and compelling, in the highest degree, and not a little of their flavor is due to the fact that Mr. Belloc, in calling up the glamour and romance of these temporary habitats of destiny, does not forget 'the irony which fills all history,' and the end of the path of glory." F: H. Martens

+ N Y Evening Post p11 D 17 '27 480w

"There are those who illuminate history as well as write it, and of these is Hilaire Belloc. Perhaps it is because he brings the soul and insight of an imaginative artist to his task as well as an immense background of literary and historical knowledge. Whatever the cause, he succeeds as do few writers of history in arousing the desire of the reader to visit the places he barely mentions, and in making real and vivid the scenes he describes and the historical significance of out-of-the-way towns and citadels, ignored of the tourist."

+ N Y Times p15 Ap 8 '28 600w

R of Rs 77:12 F '28 60w

BELLOWS, GEORGE WESLEY. George W. Bellows: his lithographs; with an essay by Thomas Beer and an introd. note by Eugene Speicher. 254p $15 (63s) Knopf

763 Lithographs, American 27-23662

For descriptive note see Annual for 1927.

"The book is well chosen and well done; and in that single volume we may review the short, entire life-work in lithography of perhaps the world's greatest master of that medium. Here we may see suggested all the incomparable silver delicacy and the deep, black velvet richness of the prints, and by that eloquence be drawn to move among their characters, to delight in them, to know them, want and start to love them." Rockwell Kent

+ Bookm 66:677 F '28 580w

"A volume of the complete lithographic work of George Bellows was inevitable sooner or later, and this one in all respects leaves little to be desired. The plates, numbering 195, are beautifully printed. The index not only makes their chronology clear but offers interesting bits of information about individual drawings. The value of the book is further enhanced by Thomas Beer's splendid prefatory essay which creates an abiding sense of Bellows's personality and at the same time interprets his work with sympathetic understanding." G. H. Mullin

+ Nation 126:213 F 22 '28 1000w

Reviewed by Stark Young
New Repub 54:193 Mr '28 1200w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:473 O '28

Reviewed by F. J. Mather
Sat R of Lit 4:668 Mr 10 '28 580w

BEMAN, LAMAR TANEY, comp. Flood control. (Reference shelf) 162p 90c Wilson, H.W.

627.4 Floods. Mississippi river—Floods. Floods—Bibliography 28-26445

Arguments for and against the vexed question of government responsibility for flood control are presented in the form of articles selected from authoritative sources, and an extensive bibliography of the subject is added.

Booklist 23:392 Jl '28

BEMAN, LAMAR TANEY, comp. Selected articles on intervention in Latin America. (Handbook ser.) 295p $2.40 Wilson, H.W.

327.72 United States—Foreign relations—Spanish America. Spanish America—Foreign relations—United States 28-13307

From a wealth of excellent material on the subject of intervention in Latin America Mr Beman has chosen the articles here reprinted. Charles and Mary Beard, Theodore Roosevelt, Calvin Coolidge, Ernest Gruening, Lewis Gannett and Kirby Page are among the authorities quoted.

Booklist 24:392 Jl '28

"The volume is well suited for furnishing high school debaters with pertinent material. The general reading public too, should find it very informing." A. C. Wilgus

+ Hist Outlook 19:295 O '28 120w

Wis Lib Bul 24:187 Je '28

BEMAN, LAMAR TANEY, comp. Selected articles on old age pensions. (Handbook ser.) 359p $2.40 Wilson, H.W.

331.25 Old age pensions 27-18696

Articles and excerpts from speeches on the systems of old age pensions in other countries, the need for such pensions in the United States, and the movement for a federal old age pension law.

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:13 Ja '28

Wis Lib Bul 24:52 F '28

"Mr. Beman has succeeded in bringing together a mass of valuable and scattered material on the subject, although the worth of some of the inclusions may be questioned. Some improvement could have, perhaps, been made in the topical arrangement. The book, however, is invaluable for its bibliography, which is practically all inclusive and up-to-date." Abraham Epstein

+ World Tomorrow 11:134 Mr '28 100w

BEMIS, SAMUEL FLAGG, ed. American secretaries of state and their diplomacy. 10v v 4-5 392;436p il ea $4 Knopf

327.73 Cabinet officers—United States. United States—Foreign relations. Statesmen, American (27-8473)

The fourth volume of this series of studies of the American Secretaries of State covers the period between September 22, 1817, when John Quincy Adams took office, to March 4, 1825, the end of John Forsyth's term. The fifth volume covers the period of American expansion at its peak. Contents: Daniel Webster, by Clyde Augustus Duniway; Abel Parker Upshur, by Randolph G. Adams; John Caldwell Calhoun, by St George Leakin Sioussat; James Buchanan, by St George Leakin Sioussat; Appendices; Index.

"The same standards of accuracy and of wide information which were set in the earlier volumes are well maintained. The value of the series as a work of reference becomes increasingly evident. Its disadvantages as a method of presenting American diplomacy are here strikingly evident in the constant division of subjects actually continuous, as that of Texan relations. What can be done by editing to meet this difficulty seems to have been done." C. R. Fish

+ — Am Hist R 34:138 O '28 720w (Review of v 4)

Booklist 25:9 O '28 (Review of v 4-5)

"The work as a whole is indispensable to any reference library and of the first importance to historical students."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p27 N 4 '28 280w (Review of v 4)

Reviewed by Donald Williams

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p15 Ja 13 '29 400w (Review of v 5)

"Among the volumes of this exemplary series of biography in little, it is doubtful if any will be more enlivening than this. . . It is fortunate that the Secretaries of State for twenty years, men of such particular distinction, find place together in so valuable, so well written, so important a volume of this admirable series." S. L. Cook

+ Boston Transcript p3 Je 23 '28 1950w (Review of v 4)

Reviewed by E. F. Edgett

Boston Transcript p6 S 29 '28 200w

"This volume carries on ably and at times brilliantly a series that is now in mid-career and promises to become one of the most interesting and valuable companions for all students of American political history." Van Wyck Brooks

+ Ind 121:116 Ag 4 '28 1050w (Review of v 5)

Reviewed by A. S. Will

N Y Times p3 Ag 12 '28 580w (Review of v 5)

Times [London] Lit Sup p511 Jl 12 '28 880w (Review of v 4)

BENCHLEY, ROBERT CHARLES. 20,000 [2] leagues under the sea; or, David Copperfield. 233p $2 Holt

817 28-31116

Once more the collaboration of Robert Benchley and Gluyas Williams has produced a hilariously entertaining book. These short pieces on random topics are reprinted from several magazines.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p7 D 16 '28 800w

Boston Transcript p4 D 22 '28 280w

" '20,000 Leagues Under the Sea' is an advance over the previous Benchley. Its improvement derives from the serious pieces mixed in with the buffoonery. The old-time Benchley touch is there in 'The Low State of Whippet Racing'; but never before had he doffed the cap and bells to write such an article as 'The Typical New Yorker'. . . It is likewise a serious Benchley who calls out to the Babbitt-baiters, 'Cease Firing!' One looks for an article flinging anathema upon the heads of the serried hosts of Sinclair Lewis; but one reads on to discover a very fair and penetrating analysis of the reason for the rise of the Lewises." J: Chamberlain

+ N Y Times p4 D 9 '28 1200w

Reviewed by W: R. Benét

Sat R of Lit 5:512 D 15 '28 500w

BENDA, JULIEN. Treason of the intellectuals [2] (La trahison des clercs); tr. by Richard Aldington. 244p $2.50 Morrow [7s 6d Routledge]

320.1 Intellectuals. Nationalism and nationality. Philosophy, Modern 28-23313

"That the intellectuals of the world have sold out to utilitarianism, leaving their proper devotion to truth and humanity, is the theme of Julien Benda's scorching analysis of the current leaders of thought. By taking on political passions, the intellectuals have played the game of the state, espoused war and conflict and lost that universalism which is their true reason for existence. While it is the European scene that Benda deals with, his contention is even more true as regards America, for we have had fewer thinkers of real detachment."—World Tomorrow

---

Reviewed by H. D. Hill

Nation 128:23 Ja 2 '29 680w

Reviewed by T. S. Eliot

New Repub 57:sup105 D 12 '28 2600w

Reviewed by Montgomery Belgion

Sat R of Lit 5:281 O 27 '28 2650w

"M. Julien Benda is very well known in France, but is almost unknown here. He is brilliant, but very Latin. Living in the France of the last twenty years, it is natural that he should see nationalism as the one predominant and frightful danger which faces the world. . . The book may seem heady stuff to many English readers; but if they will get over a natural prejudice to abstractions they will find very much that is worth reading in its pages."
+ Spec 141:706 N 10 '28 400w

Reviewed by Paul Jones
World Tomorrow 12:521 D '28 160w

BENEFIELD, BARRY. Little clown lost. 317p $2 Century
28-20760

Shep Tideboy is the youthful hermit-heir of an old Louisiana plantation. A sick old medicine man and his daughter take shelter with Shep during a storm, and when during the night the old man dies, Shep determines to look after the daughter. They marry and move to a college town where Shep gets a belated education. Phoebe, the young wife, honing for the road, runs away. Shep searches for her in vain, and grief-stricken returns to the plantation. While his wife is playing clown in a circus, Shep is trying to avoid entanglement with his cousin's wife. He is not wholly successful, and when Phoebe returns there is a new complication to face.

Booklist 25:70 N '28

"'A Little Clown Lost' is thus far Benefield's best book. It is more firmly moulded as to plot; less made up of pleasant patches. There is a really powerful central situation, independent of surroundings. It is a temptation, of course, to pick small flaws. The title seems less effective than it should, and unfortunately reminiscent also of an ancient nursery rhyme. There is a tendency to repeat a good trick too often; too many tall infants, and by gannies, and aye, Lordy's. . . But we should not be too carping over trifles. For Mr. Benefield is doing his own thing and doing it well." R. B. Sanborn
+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p14 S 9 '28 700w

"This new story of Mr. Benefield's has no elements of greatness in it but there is distinct popular appeal in the figure of the little clown who loves so much and sacrifices so much." D. L. M.
Boston Transcript p4 S 5 '28 840w

"Mr Benefield is a sentimentalist, and the milk and honey of his characters grows tiresome. Even Hal, the wicked drunkard with the nice side to his nature fails to convince us that this is a good or even an interesting novel. It is difficult to forgive anyone who drips sentimentalities in the present tense."
— Ind 121:261 S 15 '28 200w

"The story is sentimental, and the situations, especially the dénouement, verge upon melodrama. The simplicity and reality of the three chief people of the story, however, give the book a quality which sets it off from the ordinary run of fiction." M. E. U.
+ — New Repub 56:256 O 17 '28 120w

"Whimsical and very sentimental, quite charmingly told, and centering about a gallant, appealing little figure, Barry Benefield's new novel is of a distinctly popular type. The merit of the book is in its characterization."
+ N Y Times p6 S 2 '28 600w

"He can and does take the most commonplace characters and the most hackneyed plots and weave them into fanciful and beautiful tales. The present volume is no exception to the rule except that upon analysis it is found to be composed of more than the usual hokum." Milton Byron
+ — Outlook 150:840 S 19 '28 480w
Springf'd Republican p7e S 30 '28 230w

BENES, EDVARD. My war memories; tr. from the Czech by Paul Selver. 512p $7.50 Houghton [21s Allen & U.]
943.7 Czechoslovak Republic. European war, 1914-1918—Czechoslovak Republic

The Czechoslovak minister of foreign affairs tells a detailed story of the revolutionary movement of the Czechs that led to the building of the new state, in the government of which he and President Masaryk have become the leaders.

"The book is not uninteresting, but somehow or other Dr. Benes does not succeed in decorating the struggle for Czech independence with the romance which came so naturally to Mazzini, Garibaldi, and the Italians of the Risorgimento." Leonard Woolf
+ — Nation and Ath 44:178 N 3 '28 180w
Spec 141:742 N 17 '28 720w
Times [London] Lit Sup p769 N 1 '28 2300w

BENET, STEPHEN VINCENT. John Brown's body. 377p $2.50 Doubleday, Doran [10s 6d Heinemann]
811 United States—History—Civil war—Poetry. Brown, John—Poetry 28-21932

A long narrative poem of great energy and sweep, which swings into view the whole course of the Civil war, throwing into relief against the war torn background individual figures of both North and South, soldiers and civilians.

Booklist 25:64 N '28

"His poetry is at times entirely compelling. It contains lines and passages that one would gladly remember forever. Even where Benét's poetry is not so fine, it is sustained by a fine sincerity—by the poet's own heart honestly feeling all that is felt—and it is adorned with interruptions of excellent lyrical song. All these virtues compel one to judge John Brown's Body by the standards of great art. And as a great work of art, I think the book fails. It lacks altogether the incisive and breathless concentration that great poetry must have. It lacks rapture and perfection." Max Eastman
+ — Bookm 68:362 N '28 800w

"The poem is as good as knowledge, sincere personal feeling, and Mr. Benét's particular literary expertness, could make it. To argue that it is more than this, would be quite specially unjust. It is a popular patriotic epic of essentially the same order as Noyes's Elizabethan Odyssey; regarded as a grand historical poem like 'The Dynasts,' it would be a heavy disappointment. All the virtues of readability, romantic charm, reminiscent pathos, it has in abundance; the higher virtues that one might exact of such a performance, it very definitely lacks." Newton Arvin
+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p1 Ag 12 '28 1450w

"It is of course probable that many will wax ecstatic over 'John Brown's Body,' that it will be hailed as a great achievement in American poetry, and proclaimed a great chronicle of Civil War events. In fact, the chorus of approval is already arising. Mr. Benet is a very young man, and this sort of praise will do him no good. He is ambitious, energetic, gifted in many ways, but he has his spurs to win, and he has not won them with 'John Brown's Body.'" E. F. Edgett
— + Boston Transcript p2 Ag 11 '28 1350w

"'John Brown's Body' is certainly an ambitious and courageous attempt to achieve something exceptional both in story and verse, and it is certain to attract attention for the boldness of its conception even though in its execution Mr. Benet is unable to realize his great ambition to become the poetic annalist of the Civil War." E. F. Edgett
Boston Transcript p7 O 6 '28 300w

BENET, S. V.—Continued

" 'John Brown's Body' is without a question the most important volume of poetry published in America this year. It is a long narrative poem of the civil war—an epic, one might say, of war itself, for all wars are of a pattern." Fannie Butcher

+ Chicago Daily Tribune p9 Ag 11 '28 480w

Cleveland Open Shelf p130 D '28

"There are many evidences of haste and slovenliness in the workmanship; merely as narrative the book is loose-jointed, with much thrown in that one cannot remember after the page is turned. . . The secret is that Mr. Benet was not writing a pretty poem. The prose of the piece is quite intentional, the roughness planned. He designed—and executed—a swift, nervous, rather sprawling epic which should contain within itself the smell of civil war, the confusion of a people in despair, the miscellaneity of a continent upheaved. Judged as such, 'John Brown's Body' must be considered in general a success; and in particular there are many fine passages."

+ — Nation 127:169 Ag 22 '28 920w

" 'John Brown's Body' has merit enough; it has hair-raising defects; and yet it deserves to be widely read and, within reason, praised. It is an interesting book, but it is not the kind of work that the public has been led to believe it is. It has been called among other things an epic and it has been compared, not unfavorably, to the 'Iliad.' . . The poem is not in any sense an epic; neither is it a philosophical vision of the Civil War; it is a loose, episodic narrative which unfolds a number of related themes in motion-picture flashes. In spite of some literary incompetence in the author and the lack of a controlling imagination, the story gathers suspense as it goes and often attains to power." Allen Tate

+ — Nation 127:274 S 19 '28 1000w

"It is a straightforward, close-circumstanced narrative, with great attention to the distinguishing marks of the period it chronicles. The verse varies, and there are prose interventions. If it is not within the ranks of epic poetry, it is 'a tale of the times of old' by a precise and sympathetic student." E. B.

+ Nation and Ath 44:216 N 10 '28 120w

"Mr. Benét's poem is an epic in intention, in scope, in sense of racial consciousness. It may not win the medal of the American Academy, but it will be crowned by the Grand Army and the Confederate Veterans, and by those who feel the spell of the past of which they remain the survivors." R. M. Lovett

+ New Repub 56:51 Ag 29 '28 1100w

"Mr. Benét's poem, though very long indeed, is not dull; it is magnificently readable, and his variations of metre help it to carry its load of matter. For the style, it owes, inevitably a great deal to Whitman; in arrangement of material it recalls The Dynasts—though Mr. Benét has kept only hints of that poem's metaphysical crudities and has escaped its aridity."

+ New Statesman 32:supx D 1 '28 900w

"Whether he does or does not possess the epic faculty, Mr. Benet is at any rate fired by the epic ambition. He conceives largely, if loosely; his guide lines, though they may waver (his exordium, for example, poses the slave trade and his conclusion the struggle between the spirit and the machine as the spiritual center of his book), are never niggardly or mean. The technique of his verse, too, is dominated by the same generousness of conception. . . Yet this very technical facility, admirable though it may seem at first, appears the expression of an inherent weakness. It is a weakness so fundamental, that, for me at least, it stamps 'John Brown's Body' as a second-rate, if considerable, production." C. P. Fadiman

— + N Y Evening Post p5 Ag 11 '28 1350w

"Line by line, much of John Brown's Body is no more poetry than the messages of the electric signs on Broadway, but it has vitality; it combines romance and realism in a peculiarly American blend. Whatever its minor faults, it is in the large a distinctly fine achievement, and its popular success a literary event of no small importance." Herschel Brickell

+ — No Am 226:adv O '28 280w

"There are moments which do not help the scheme. The attempt to outline the major strategy of the war was, in the nature of poetry, doomed to failure. And poet and man of stature that Benét unquestionably is, his music cannot quite command the full diapason needed for the greatest of his moments. But in all short of that he is a music master." James Boyd

+ — Outlook 149:752 S 5 '28 750w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:485 O '28

Pratt p29 autumn '28

St Louis 26:323 O '28

"It has been widely read, and will be still more widely read, for it is not one of your tours de force of intellect and technique to be admired and then tucked away on the library shelf. It is a library of story telling itself, a poem extraordinarily rich in action as well as actors, vivid, varied, and so expressive of many men and moods that prose could never have carried its electric burden. . . The versatility of his poetic style is unusual. He can do anything except the organ line in which blank verse reaches its highest powers, and perhaps for this reason the historical center of his poem is the least impressive portion although an excellent foil for the lyric movements that surround it." H: S. Canby

+ Sat R of Lit 5:161 S 29 '28 3000w

Reviewed by Leon Whipple

Survey 61:168 N 1 '28 480w

"His words are bold and stormy enough. What they fail to communicate is the calm at the centre of the storm. And for want of this the storm too often deadens our hearing. Yet despite its want of unity and relevance his poem is a remarkable piece of imaginative reporting; and one in which not only the forces which make history are embodied in the speech and action of very diverse men and women but the ideas also of which these forces were the driving power."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p960 D 6 '28 1000w

Wis Lib Bul 24:302 N '28

"A book that is poignantly and exhaustingly alive. It is neither a peep-show, a puppet theatre, nor a moving picture in type, for its fusion of life, art, and critical acumen in flights of lyric poetry with final dramatic effect offers its audience, at one and the same time, a vivid vicarious experience and an important philosophic comment. This may be high praise, but so it is. From a literary standpoint the thing which has interested this reviewer most is the author's skill in combining the classical implications of his intellectual point of view towards his material as a whole with his romantic method and lyrical style in expressing his emotional attitude towards his particulars." Hervey Allen

+ Yale R n s 18:391 winter '29 680w

BENJAMIN, LEWIS S. (LEWIS MELVILLE, pseud.). Maids of honour. 314p il $7.50 Doubleday, Doran [21s Hutchinson]

920.7 Great Britain—Court and courtiers. Great Britain—Biography. Woman—Biography 27-27950

Mr Melville has gathered a volume of light and inoffensive gossip about seventeen women popular in court circles during the reigns of George I and George II.

"A very dull account. . . Thorough and painstaking Mr. Melville most certainly is, but it remains for another writer with more wit and imagination to give a satisfactory picture of the frivolous, scheming, and sometimes tragic ladies who surrounded Queen Caroline."

— + Bookm 66:xxi Ja '28 280w

"No doubt there is a considerable public for volumes of this sort, despite the fact that so many of them fall into an indistinguishable pattern, and also despite the fact that they usually sell for much more than other books which are far more entertaining."

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p21 Ja 8 '28 160w

"This is another of Mr. Melville's charming and amusing books with an accurate historical background disguised and enlivened in such a way as to give a most entertaining picture of his chosen age."

+ Boston Transcript p4 F 4 '28 180w

"Many readers will feel grateful to Mr. Melville for bringing within the compass of a single volume the stories of so many women of importance in their day—parleyings with whom in his pages afford much pleasant entertainment."

+ Living Age 333:748 O 15 '27 450w (Reprinted from Bookm [Lond])

Reviewed by H: L. Stuart
N Y Times p13 Ja 15 '28 650w

Sat R 144:255 Ag 20 '27 380w

"Of course we meet the usual crop of annoying errata. But a book of Mr. Melville's is just the thing for people who like to think they are reading history; and so it is—of a kind, not very profound perhaps, but then it is often pleasanter to skate over the surface than to plunge into the depths."

— + Spec 139:320 Ag 27 '27 190w

BENJAMIN, LEWIS S. (LEWIS MELVILLE, pseud.). William Makepeace Thackeray. 327p il $6 Doubleday, Doran [21s Benn]

B or 92 Thackeray, William Makepeace
28-26639

Tho not so announced by the publishers, this book is apparently an abridged reprint of the two-volume biography published in 1889. There is evidence that it has not been carefully revised, as shown by the reference on p.346 to Whitelaw Reid as the "present American ambassador to this country" and many inaccuracies in the index.

Booklist 25:25 O '28

"Melville's style is a bit pedestrian, a bit long-winded, and even repetitious, and a little condensation or selection (without, of course, any malicious scandal-mongery or any perversion of truth) might well make this scholarly piece of work more vivid and effective." Robert Kissack, Jr.

+ — Bookm 67:445 Je '28 250w

"Mr. Melville writes agreeably, has an eye for the humorous and dramatic, and gives a record of events and the outward manifestations of character with good tried workmanship. His 'Thackeray' is only mildly critical, and it goes without saying that he uses none of the modern biographical methods, and is not much interested in secret motive and the subconscious life."

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 My 20 '28 180w

"In the heyday of a school of biographers whose anemic sophistication is merely another form of sentimentality, Mr. Melville frankly and deliberately piles pathos on pathos in an endless succession of sugary sentences. His critical remarks are of little value, but his book is, as scholars are wont to say, thoroughly documented and freighted with an abundance of footnotes. The illustrations are really excellent."

— + Nation 126:462 Ap 18 '28 70w

"This book was first published (in two volumes) in 1889. It is an old-fashioned biography, dutiful and reticent. Like many other biographers, Mr. Melville seems to think it his chief duty to suppress any too great familiarity between his readers and his subject. To the former this policy is somewhat unsatisfactory." Edwin Muir

Nation and Ath 42:26 O 8 '27 820w

"One must suppose that Mr Melville's biography is competent enough. It tells that the original spelling of the name was Thackwra and it closes with a dim-eyed quotation from 'The End of the Play.' But since it is reminiscent of the younger Barham's life of Theodore Hook, that curious, disagreeable piece of apologetics, one must also suppose that it is second-rate. Seemingly, Mr. Melville has been doing too much work in the early nineteenth century, for he has picked up the worst manners and tricks of the biographical writing of that time." Lionel Trilling

— + N Y Evening Post p5 S 1 '28 850w

"Those who desire a fresh interpretation of the great Victorian novelist will not turn to Mr. Melville's book; nor will those who desire critical biography take up this work. But for those who wish to refresh themselves as to the facts of Thackeray's life, and especially those who for the first time are seeking to become acquainted with them, the volume is admirable."

+ — N Y Times p4 Je 17 '28 420w

Reviewed by Harry Hansen
N Y World p10m Mr 4 '28 980w

"Old Thackeray fans will like to read over this book, but other readers will be lost." Ruth Suckow

— + Outlook 148:674 Ap 25 '28 90w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:407 Jl '28

"He gives us a straightforward story of Thackeray's life, told with sufficient fulness of detail, and so as to bring out its color as well as its mere outward events. He makes no pretension to profundity, and yet does not abstain from interpretative comment. The book is interesting from beginning to end." Fabian Franklin

+ Sat R of Lit 4:1013 Jl 7 '28 2100w

BENJAMIN, LEWIS S. (LEWIS MELVILLE, pseud.). Windsor beauties. 285p il $5 Houghton [21s Hutchinson]

920.7 Great Britain—Court and courtiers. Woman—Biography. England—Biography

Anne Hyde, duchess of York, commissioned her protégé Lely to paint the series of portraits of the most beautiful women at the court of Charles II which became known as the Windsor Beauties, from the fact that they were originally housed at Windsor Castle. Drawing upon the diaries of Pepys and Evelyn, the Memoirs of Count Grammont and other sources, Lewis Melville has sketched the careers of eleven of these court beauties. Illustrated with reproductions of the Lely portraits.

"Mr. Melville weaves around these 'alluring sitters' an appropriately gilded net of court gossip, manners and amour."

Bookm 68:xxxvi O '28 60w

"Mr. Melville has done no more than copy out huge chunks of quotations from contemporary diaries, memoirs, letters and lives, with a careful eye for libidinous passages and a slovenly patching together of the whole. The portraits, at least, are charming, and no amount of pedestrian biography can quite rob Lady Castlemaine and the rest of their inherent interest for memoir fanciers."

— + Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 S 16 '28 150w

Boston Transcript p4 S 5 '28 380w

"Mr. Melville's method is that of scissors-and-paste, and his long quotations from Pepys, de Grammont, Etherege, and various lampoonists of the day, laced together with exegesis in a loose pedestrian style, have very little biographical value."

— New Statesman 31:supx My 19 '28 80w

Reviewed by Herschel Brickell
No Am 226:adv O '28 80w

"A gossipy and scandalous chronicle of the smallest possible importance."

— Sat R of Lit 5:244 O 13 '28 200w

"Considering the inane dispositions of these beauties and the monotonous regularity with which King Charles II. appropriated them, Mr. Melville has written a very readable book. It is packed with anecdote and gives a good picture of Court life, but there are too many quotations from Evelyn and Pepys."

BENJAMIN, L: S.—Continued
+ — Spec 140:769 My 19 '28 100w

"Concerning Mr. Melville's subjects much scandalous chronicle has been written. For this compilation he relies upon the acknowledged authorities, keeping safely to the established facts while making few comments of his own. Mr. Melville has an unwearying gift of assimilation and does not write sensationally of the sensational affairs with which he deals."
Times [London] Lit Sup p433 Je 7 '28 120w

BENJAMIN, LEWIS S. (LEWIS MELVILLE, pseud.), and HARGREAVES, REGINALD, eds. Great French short stories. 1066p $3 Boni & Liveright

Short stories—Collections 28-26452

"The editors have essayed to select the most characteristic examples of the French short-story writers." (Preface) The stories, chosen from the whole range of French literature, are presented in chronological order and printed in good sized type on thin paper in a volume of 1066 pages.

"Programmed as 'the most complete anthology ever published,' this collection comes close enough to filling the specification, so that one need not quarrel with the circus superlative. The margins are wide and the type is legible. Nor should one omit a word of praise for the binder, for the volume lies readily open at whatever page one desires. The editors have exercised broad judgment in their selections. If their choices do not meet with universal approval, that is but the inevitable fate which no anthologist escapes."
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p11 Jl 15 '28 150w

"Without doubt there will be found readers to resent the absence of certain well-known masterpieces in this somewhat arbitrary collection, but these people must remember that there never has been a pie baked that contained all the condiments. The volume manifests once again the surpassing skill displayed by the French in this particular form of literary craft."
+ Dial 85:265 S '28 50w
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:365 Jl '28

"To run through the volume's more than a thousand pages is to be impressed once again, by the abundance, richness and variety of the product of an imaginative genius which has flourished, with few intervals of sterility since the charming tale of 'Aucassin and Nicolette' was transcribed in thirteenth-century Provence."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p644 S 13 '28 750w

BENN, JOHN ANDREWS. Columbus—undergraduate. 149p $2 Lippincott [6s Benn]

378.73 Colleges and universities—United States 28-11842

"In this volume whose effective title is borrowed from one of Harold Lloyd's recent films, the son of a well-known publisher describes a year he spent in 1922 at Princeton. Mr. Benn went directly from Harrow to Princeton, and returned to follow a regular undergraduate course at Cambridge. Many professional educators have commented on American University institutions, but it is certainly worth having the fresh and unpretentious commentary of a student. Fortunately, too, Mr. Benn is alert and never superior: he is prepared to put Harrow on one side and to investigate Princeton; he learns a new accent without forgetting or despising the old."—Sat R

Cleveland Open Shelf p71 Je '28

"What he has written is interesting, but slight and unprovocative."
+ — New Statesman 30:504 Ja 28 '28 260w

"The author's astute observation and impartial discussion make an interesting little book well worth the attention, especially, of educators."
+ N Y Times p16 Mr 11 '28 350w

"It is strange to find such an immature style in a volume so full of considered thought: one public school and two Universities may have taught Mr. Benn much of life, but they failed to instruct him in the use of the present participle."
+ — Sat R 145:71 Ja 21 '28 500w

"He has written a clear little book on his experiences. Mr. Benn evidently enjoyed himself very much indeed in America; he seems to have had a natural taste for everything American, and to have appreciated to the full all the curious, and to us novel, practices of American Universities. We recommend the book as giving a clear and critical impression of what life in an American University is really like."
+ Spec 140:57 Ja 14 '28 660w

"Mr. Benn has written an unassuming and informative book about his experiences, which he seems thoroughly to have enjoyed."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p75 F 2 '28 460w

BENNETT, ARNOLD. Savour of life. 313p $2.50 Doubleday, Doran [6s Cassell]

824 28-8647

A miscellany of "essays in gusto" chiefly on literary matters.

Booklist 24:355 Je '28

"The many who have admired 'Clayhanger' and 'The Pretty Lady' are quite entitled to object to Mr. Bennett wasting his time on trivialities." Eugene Lohrke
— Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p24 Ap 1 '28 1200w

"Even when he has nothing particular to say he says it interestingly. He can even turn out seven pages of practically nothing about Einstein and inveigle you into reading the last word. His views on fellow-authors, from Francois Mauriac to Trader Horn, are always entertaining, if a little queer, and rarely very deep, and one likes the candor of them." J. F. S.
+ — Boston Transcript p2 Mr 17 '28 320w
Cleveland Open Shelf p129 D '28

"If there is anything which becomes utterly wearisome after the fiftieth page of a three-hundred page book it is unadulterated common sense—Mr. Bennett's main stock in trade. One begins to long for a little fancy theory, a few startling and possibly indefensibly fantastic ideas; Mr. Bennett's loose man-in-the-street prose is so sane that it eventually drives one mad."
— Nation 126:520 My 2 '28 100w

"It is in the more general essays that Mr. Bennett is most worth reading. But as a critic of literature he has nothing to say." Edwin Muir
Nation and Ath 43:256 My 26 '28 480w

"He is so common-sensible that at times he is dull, and makes us yearn for a more flashy brilliance; but his vigorous attacks on nonsense and his shrewd, plain competence usually carry the reader with him." T. S. Matthews
+ New Repub 54:276 Ap 18 '28 650w

"No one else preaches success and worldly happiness quite so insistently as Mr. Bennett. The Savour of Life has a background of solid yet expensive glitter, English-speaking hotels on the Continent, the Blue Train, an affluence of good books and cigars. There is something fascinating about all this certainty. Whether he is writing about Turgenev (a favourite subject) or medical incompetence or the provincial woman, Mr. Bennett seems to know exactly what he is about and to be assured of its rightness."
+ New Statesman 31:supx My 19 '28 450w

"All his energy in the present collection of essays leaves me about as pallidly unenthusiastic as I have ever been. In spite of his joy, they are very ordinary in their ideas and undistinguished in their style." Edgar Johnson
— N Y Evening Post p9 Jl 7 '28 720w

"This is a personal book, full of stingo, and reflects such parts of modern life as they appear to Arnold Bennett. Mr. Bennett having a wide range of interests, and reporting them with an entertaining and readable style, is provocative in his practical views and prejudices."
+ N Y Times p9 Je 17 '28 730w
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:339 Je '28
Pratt p28 summer '28

"On such matters as Doctors, and Hustle, and Editing a Woman's Paper, he is sensible and entertaining; and scattered here and there one finds interesting fragments of autobiography. But by a curious irony he is at his worst when dealing with the subject which is, or should be, peculiarly his own. Mr. Bennett's pretence of being a philistine has lost its novelty. If he persists in it much longer we shall be compelled to believe it, in spite of his dazzling achievements in creative literature. Many of these articles are reprinted from the columns of an evening newspaper, and it is charactertistic of the carelessness with which the book is flung together that even obvious blunders remain uncorrected."
— + Sat R 145:672 My 26 '28 150w

"These are the fugitive writings of a facile journalist and hardly worth collecting."
— Sat R of Lit 4:765 Ap 14 '28 100w

"This is very good journalism—no more or less. As the basis of good conversation is the act of giving, so the foundation of good writing is to make the reader think, or anyway think he thinks. Mr. Bennett is an adept at that and has given us a double cocktail of conceits and persiflage; its chief ingredient is wisdom and it has a good taste."
+ Spec 140:735 My 12 '28 600w

"He uses the schoolmaster's forefinger with energy, and yet he gives no offence. It is felt that it is all done in kindness for ignorant mortals. Certainly he imparts all he knows with clarity and vitality, exercising the care in style he demands in the work of others."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p414 My 31 '28 110w

BENNETT, ARNOLD. The Vanguard; a fantasia. 347p pop ed $1.50; author's ed $2.50 Doubleday, Doran
27-24947

For descriptive note see Annual for 1927.

Booklist 24:206 F '28

"A proven man of letters and the possessor of a flexible and sometimes highly brilliant style, Mr. Bennett is notorious for doffing his literary conscience, so that at any time he may be expected to issue some fable as bedizened with cute values, yet as shallow aesthetically, as a subway advertisement. 'The Vanguard' is one of them, and though it has verve, and rates as a kind of fourth class entertainment, Mr. Bennett's usual easy technical disposition of his story creates the impression of a strong man brilliantly manipulating a toothpick." Parker Tyler
— + Bookm 66:704 F '28 130w

Reviewed by E. F. Edgett
Boston Transcript p5 F 4 '28 310w

"Of course, there are admirable scenes in this fantasia, as there are in all Mr. Bennett's stories, but the whole is so artificial that the action fails to hold one's interest." Edwin Muir
— Nation and Ath 42:690 F 4 '28 220w
New Statesman 30:498 Ja 28 '28 700w

"Surely never has a novelist of Mr. Bennett's reputation and ability produced so appalling a piece of trash. The whole story is utterly unreal. One never for a minute believes in this millionaire and his yacht and his wife and his financial machinations. The thing is as hollow as a cream puff and not half so sustaining." Conrad Aiken
— N Y Evening Post p12 Ja 14 '28 630w
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:136 Mr '28
Pratt p36 spring '28

Reviewed by L. P. Hartley
Sat R 145:104 Ja 28 '28 660w

"The stage is set for a comedy that is full of amusing situations, but is even more delightful for the wit and incisiveness with which Mr. Bennett illuminates the interplay of the masculine and feminine mind. The climax is entirely satisfying."
+ Spec 140:128 Ja 28 '28 430w
Springf'd Republican p7f D 25 '27 180w
Times [London] Lit Sup p60 Ja 26 '28 520w

BENNETT, ESTELLINE. Old Deadwood days. 300p il $3 Sears
978.3 Deadwood, South Dakota. Frontier and pioneer life 28-6103

"Deadwood in its bold, bad days before the railroad came as it impressed itself on the mind of a little girl. The glimpses of its boldness and badness are all the more vivid because of the sheltered home background from which they are viewed. Gives a sympathetic picture of Calamity Jane, and of other celebrated figures."—Wis Lib Bul

Booklist 24:397 Jl '28

"Miss Bennett tries to make her book interesting and readable, but it is not like a book, it is raw material, the memories of a little girl who loved her parents and listened to them, and, for the most part, saw what they saw." Margery Latimer
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p20 Je 17 '28 800w

"Miss Bennett's book, of its kind, is one of the most engrossing stories of the West ever written."
+ Boston Transcript p2 Ap 7 '28 650w
Cleveland Open Shelf p132 D '28

Reviewed by C: J. Finger
N Y World p10m F 26 '28 480w
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:414 Jl '28

"This is indeed an addition to Americana. . . The author's pen vividly supplies whatever color may be lacking in the illustrations. Her memory is a good one and she runs the range of local characters and episodes in a breezy manner. Also, she does not lack a sense of the dramatic. We can recommend this book to anyone interested in the period."
+ Sat R of Lit 5:174 S 29 '28 220w
Wis Lib Bul 24:160 My '28

BENNETT, ETHEL (HUME) (MRS EDWARD BENNETT). Camp Conqueror. 281p il $1.75 Houghton
28-9157

Wilhelmina Grier had her name shortened to Jill almost as soon as she boarded the train for Camp Conqueror, and she decided she would have a glorious summer. Judy, the heroine of "Judy of York hill," a friend of Jill's, was a counselor and that made Jill more sure of happiness. A whole string of adventures befell dreamy, poetry-loving Jill, but she was no shirker and at the end of the summer she found she had earned her laurels.

Booklist 25:32 O '28

"A book full of fine ideals and aspirations. Every camp has its own way of forming character, but the well-thought-out ideas of Miss Bennett can be advantageously emulated by many camp directors."
+ Boston Transcript p4 My 12 '28 120w

BENNETT, HENRY EASTMAN. School posture and seating; a manual for teachers, physical directors and school officials. 323p il $2 Ginn

371.7 School hygiene. Children—Care and hygiene. Schools—Furniture, equipment, etc. Posture. 28-11450

"This book is a combination of a discussion of posture from an anatomical and a physiological point of view, a report of a study of sitting posture of school children and a description of a method by which the author has arrived at his conclusions of what constitutes a proper school seat."—Am J Pub Health

---

"The book as a whole is a very valuable contribution to the subject of posture, and Mr. Bennett takes a broad view. . . The type of seat described in detail, coincides with studies made by the American Posture League and all who have responsibility in the seating of school children should read this book." Ethel Perrin

+ Am J Pub Health 18:1203 S '28 350w

Booklist 25:9 O '28

"The book will be of major interest to two classes of readers. Students interested in the physical growth of children will find in it a considerable body of data relating to segmental body measurements of children at different ages. This analytical method of studying children adds much to the understanding of their physical characteristics. However, the larger group of readers will doubtless consist of classes of teachers interested in the problem of good posture and school officials who are responsible for the selection of proper seating equipment. For such persons the material will constitute both a suitable textbook for systematic study and a valuable reference handbook. The book is an important contribution to the literature on its subject." G. T. Buswell

+ El School J 29:71 S '28 220w

"The book is an invaluable contribution to administrative officers, boards of education, and manufacturers of seating equipment. It answers in a scientific manner many of the questions which in the past have been answered largely by guesswork." W. C. Reavis

+ School R 36:628 O '28 680w

BENNETT, HENRY STANLEY, ed. England from Chaucer to Caxton. (English life in English literature) 246p $2 Harcourt [6s Methuen]

820.8 English literature—Collections. England—Social life and customs [28-20906]

The first in a series of books designed to present English life in English literature from the time of Chaucer to Dickens. The quotations in this book represent selections from literature from the time of Chaucer to Caxton and are grouped under the headings: Home life; Village life; Town life; Church life; and Foreign life.

"This volume makes a very satisfactory introduction to a new series of books designed to present 'English Life in English Literature,' to illustrate the environment of great authors from purely literary sources, not as usual from historical records. Mr. Bennett's selections are well and discreetly chosen, and are admirably calculated to inspire interest and curiosity, as well as giving a life-like picture of fifteenth-century life in England."

+ Sat R 145:171 F 11 '28 150w

"A valuable commented anthology of social portraiture in words. One merit of the editor is his custom of pointing out the most serviceable editions to which the inquirer should refer."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p153 Mr 1 '28 140w

BENNETT, JAMES O'DONNELL. Much loved books; best sellers of the ages. 460p $3.50 Boni & Liveright [15s Hutchinson]

804 Books and reading 28-902

These short papers, which were first printed serially in the Chicago Tribune under the title "Best sellers of the ages," deal with sixty great books of ancient and modern times. They are briskly presented, with quotation and anecdote, and a few words about their authors.

Booklist 24:231 Mr '28

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 Mr 11 '28 400w

Cleveland Open Shelf p75 Je '28

Dial 84:525 Je '28 70w

"Except in respect of exhaustiveness, this book is better than most 'outlines' and most textbooks. It can be read with pleasure by one already familiar with the world's great books, it can be recommended to those who, handicapped by lack of early education, seek cultural broadening; and it is an excellent book to give to a boy or girl who in this brisk day might be won to the classics, if these could be stripped of the unfair guise of dullness." Shaemas O'Sheel

+ N Y Evening Post p12 F 11 '28 360w

"He writes with the vividness and briskness and compactness of a trained reporter, aiming always to get at the 'human interest' of his story and to cut out everything that would make it dry or formal. It is well done, all of it, and it affords as curious and as successful an adventure in newspaper reporting as it does in literary criticism."

+ N Y Times p11 Ja 1 '28 530w

Reviewed by Harry Hansen

N Y World p10m Ja 15 '28 1200w

Outlook 148:276 F 15 '28 500w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:288 My '28

R of Rs 77:28 Mr '28 120w

St Louis 26:103 Ap '28

Springf'd Republican p10 Jl 25 '28 450w

Wis Lib Bul 24:54 F '28

BENNETT, JAMES W. Dragon shadows. 286p $2 Duffield

28-11971

Short stories of China and the Chinese. Many have seen previous publication in the magazines. Contents: Dragon shadows; Heavenly flowers; The jade pendant; The writer of letters; Football—Shanghai variety; The lord's vineyard; A strange mortality among grandparents; Ph.D.; Pestilence; Rapprochement diplomatique; White man's burden; Ting-a-ling; Loess; The fourth estate; In the mixed court; In a Soochow temple; Odds—ten to one; Tsu—and the salt cure: Trackers; Geomancy; The Caucasian strain.

"Mr. Bennett's stories and sketches are provokingly good. If they are sometimes audaciously realistic in describing the life of foreigners in China they are often delightfully whimsical in describing the life of the Chinese. . . . The pictures which Mr. Bennett paints in his colorful book are not done in hues altogether garish. Some of them are limned in dainty pastel tints, and from these the foreigners are eliminated. . . Authoritative the sketches certainly are, and the stories are faithful glimpses of the Chinese scene." T: Steep

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p9 Ag 19 '28 530w

"Many of Mr. Bennett's sketches are light and shallow; none of them essays any very deep penetration of the soul of the Oriental or of the spirit of Chinese life; yet most of them do give us flashes which are illuminating and vivid. Mr. Bennett gives the impression of presenting pictures which are accurate, if not profound, and, though those pictures offer us only scattered details and hence give a rather impressionistic effect, they are all portrayed entertainingly enough and revealingly enough to fulfill the author's purpose and to please the reader throughout."

+ N Y Times p11 Je 17 '28 380w

BENNETT, JAMES W. Son of the typhoon. [2] 292p $2 Duffield

28-28482

Waung Hen-li is the son of an American sea captain and a Chinese mother. His father died when Hen-li was born and his mother Mei-an bribes her father, to whose house she returns, to keep the secret of her son's birth. Hen-li grows up believing himself to be Chinese; his education and training are on traditional lines. He becomes active in the revolution, and is well on the way to leadership in the New China when the truth of his parentage comes out. It is a great blow to Hen-li, but an American friend finds a post for him where his mixed blood is an advantage.

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p21 N 4 '28 120w

"In the hands of a more expert novelist this might have become a fine chronicle of the recent reawakening of this ancient country. Unfortunately Mr. Bennett seems lacking in some of the ability needed to write novels. Trite situations and phrases, bad sentence structure and a tendency to lapse into the conventional combine to make his book a commonplace novel —far below those of Louise Jordan Miln or of other popular writers of fiction of this type."

— + N Y Times p13 D 30 '28 280w

"Having resided long in China and intimately observed the native inhabitants in relation to the foreigner, Mr. Bennett's story has verisimilitude, understanding of Celestial character, and grasp of the republic's contemporary international problems. But apart from these obvious points, we have not found the tale a particularly noteworthy one. The book presents a convincing picture of China to-day, and the underlying antagonism, beneath the surface of Hen-li, between his two opposing racial strains is plausibly suggested."

+ — Sat R of Lit 5:491 D 8 '28 250w

BENNETT, ROLF. Cranmer Paul. 288p $2 Harcourt [7s 6d Heinemann]

28-11170

Cranmer Paul, mate on a British cargo steamer, has spent little time in philosophizing or moralizing about life. On leave in Liverpool he meets a girl of the streets, loves her, and for the first time feels an acute sense of responsibility. He means to marry the girl, but is transferred to a passenger ship before the marriage can take place. Events on the new ship speed the awakening process, and several of the passengers help to introduce Cranmer Paul to himself. At the end of the voyage he is offered a ship of his own, but he has made up his mind what he ought to do.

"His characters, and even more so his dialogue, remain unconvincing." W: McFee

— Bookm 67:569 Jl '28 680w

Reviewed by E. E. Feinberg

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p15 My 27 '28 1000w

"Both from the story side and from the philosophical, there is steady interest but one is left with the feeling of uneasiness, dissatisfaction. Perhaps that was the author's intention: to make the readers a bit uncomfortable and to set them to thinking seriously upon some of the vital problems presented leaving each reader to settle them for himself." F. M.

+ Boston Transcript p4 My 5 '28 650w

"Here is the story of a character wanting badly an anchor to leeward. Hero or not, he drifts through the pages of the book unable to make up his mind about anything until it is just too late. Moreover, the author doesn't enlist one's sympathy in him or his adventures." F. E. Haviland

— N Y Evening Post p8 Jl 7 '28 380w

"Mr. Bennett writes with artistry and with a certain youthful impetuousness. He fairly lavishes ability on quite unimportant phases of his story. At times, too, he seems to have gone out of his way to cull some phrase or court some suggestion deliberately nasty. Then of course he comes perilously near committing the very youthful literary sin of self-consciously trying to shock. But despite all this, Mr. Bennett has achieved in 'Cranmer Paul' a book in which the intelligent reader will find much of value and interest."

+ — N Y Times p8 My 20 '28 640w

"The conversations on board the 'Tatiana' between Doctor, Padre, Paul, and Smith the Socialist are vigorous, though profane; and the seaman's mind, crudely at grips with problems of love, death, and God, is exposed in its angry bewilderment. Baffled, seething, egotistical, brutal, Cranmer Paul leaves the reader with a regretful sense of waste energy. The book is grim; but it is alive."

Spec 140:805 My 26 '28 200w

"Mr. Bennett writes well and briskly."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p361 My 10 '28 120w

BENSON, EDWARD FREDERIC. Lucia in London. 275p $2.50 Doubleday, Doran [7s 6d Hutchinson]

28-7950

Lucia reigned supreme queen of Riseholme and was perfectly content until a legacy gave her a house in London and almost enough money to run it. With great hopes of conquering society she embarked on her London career and met with some measure of success. There was no doubt that Lucia was a snob and somewhat of a bore, but she cleverly managed her own affairs and was getting on rather well when she had to retire to Riseholme to take care of her sick husband. Then she found that Riseholme needed her and as the money was not holding out too well Lucia decided to abdicate her London throne and regain her lost kingdom.

Booklist 24:321 My '28

Reviewed by E. H. Walton

Bookm 67:331 My '28 70w

" 'Lucia in London' is pleasant if not profound, an amusing enough interlude of unrelieved caricature." Mary Ross

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p29 Ap 15 '28 600w

"It is scarcely Mr. Benson at his best." H. W. R.

— Boston Transcript p5 Mr 17 '28 520w

N Y Evening Post p13 F 25 '28 200w

N Y Times p9 F 12 '28 300w

Reviewed by Marie Luhrs

N Y World p10m F 19 '28 300w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:320 Je '28

"We are unable to give 'Lucia in London' high praise. The plot, largely episodic, lacks continuity and logical development; therefore the success of the novel depends entirely upon character and local color. Although it is only in the central character that we have real vitality, the strength in that place is sufficiently pronounced to be memorable."

— + Sat R of Lit 4:806 Ap 21 '28 370w

"If I think Lucia's creator is a trifle heavy-handed with her in London, and that the duchesses are as vulgar as she is, these faint reservations are chased away by many comic recognitions—delightful moments when Daisy does her own gardening, or her husband salutes Georgie's Oxford trousers."

+ — Spec 139:436 S 17 '27 360w

"A delightfully amusing story."

+ Springf'd Republican p7f Ap 15 '28 200w

"The theme may not be a noble one, but if it was Mr. Benson's intention innocently to amuse, he has certainly succeeded."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p648 S 22 '27 220w

BENSON, RAMSEY. Hill country. 356p $2.50 Stokes [10s 6d Hodder & S.]

28-19284

The winner of the Stokes-Forum biographical novel prize is a story of pioneer days in Minnesota and of James J. Hill, builder of the Great northern railway and a great constructive force in the lives of the early settlers of this region.

Booklist 25:70 N '28

"The announcement that 'Hill Country' is the $7,500 Stokes-Forum Magazine prize American biographical novel leaves us wondering what a biographical novel is. Certainly it is not biography, for James J. Hill, the subject of this model specimen, is never treated of directly. Nor can it be a novel, for in 'Hill Country' there is neither plot nor characterization nor stream of consciousness nor any other element of a novel except setting. We might enjoy it as history if we hadn't been rendered suspicious of its authenticity by being told that it was fiction." Garreta Busey

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p7 Ag 5 '28 630w

"It is a distinguished and altogether novel biography of a great American, not the sugary and flattering biography of an earlier period, or the sour and 'smart' realism of the present fashion. No one will find it dull, and as history as well as biography it deserves a high place." G: H. Sargent

\+ Boston Transcript p3 Ag 18 '28 1500w

"It is exceedingly dull—mostly about Swedish settlers who were altogether too clean and upright to live. One can almost sympathize with the dislike of their American neighbours for them." V. Sackville-West

— Nation and Ath 44:418 D 15 '28 50w

"Written with an intimate knowledge of the early days in Minnesota, the story presents that phase of American history with commendable restraint. The words saga and epic aren't even mentioned."

\+ N Y Times p6 Jl 29 '28 550w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:545 N '28

Wis Lib Bul 24:305 N '28

BENT, SILAS. Strange bedfellows; a review of politics, personalities and the press. 347p $3 Liveright

320.4 United States—Politics and government. Press—United States. United States—Economic conditions 28-21912

A series of essays, most of which have already appeared in the magazines, on politics and politicians, on the press, and on prosperity and the almighty dollar. Among the political portraits are sketches of Hoover, Smith, Mellon, Dawes and Hearst.

N Y Times p29 D 16 '28 450w

"Most of his stuff stands quite well the stern test of being printed in a book." Herschel Brickell

\+ No Am 226:adv N '28 60w

"Mr. Bent is a shrewd and penetrating writer and his book is more than a mere incident in a political campaign." Russell Crouse

\+ Outlook 150:1132 N 7 '28 80w

St Louis 26:375 D '28

"With a sure and discriminating hand, a touch usually light and sketching but adequate, with now and then a devastating smash, Mr. Bent makes human portraits, affords estimates self-evidently just, of real personalities, real forces actually operating. His service is essentially that of a 'de-bunker'; which is not at all the same as calling him an iconoclast. Mostly his pictures are friendly; on the whole sympathetic." J: P. Gavit

\+ Sat R of Lit 5:267 O 20 '28 750w

World Tomorrow 12:523 D '28 30w

BENTHAM, JOSEPHINE. Bright avenues. 304p $2.50 Henkle

28-7331

"The girl with whose life 'Bright Avenues' concerns itself—Christine Merrick—lets her heart, in the language of the palm reader, rule her head. Christine loves ardently: first, her foolish little mother; secondly, an eccentric woman friend, and later a very selfish man. Consequently and inevitably she suffers. The wasteful frivolity of Christine's mother having left the girl with a heritage of just $500, she betakes herself to San Francisco, there to earn her living. . . There come trying times with no job and wearing and unpicturesque poverty. Then Christine marries. She weds a man whom she knows to be selfish, one who has philandered with her and with several other women of her acquaintance. Deliberately she marries him because she loves him and sends away another man who would have given her far more of devotion as well as of financial ease." —N Y Times

---

"This is an unusually good first novel. It has a delicious quality of youth and spontaneity, and occasionally it attains beauty." E. H. Walton

\+ Bookm 67:331 My '28 80w

"An interesting story keenly and skillfully told."

\+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 Je 3 '28 90w

"There is a haunting suggestiveness in 'Bright Avenues' that makes it a book of more than passing interest. Arthur Machen has demonstrated the artistic superiority of significant shading over complete delineation and Cabell has written beautifully of the unattainable. At how much or how little Miss Bentham may owe to the influence of these writers we do not attempt to guess. Whatever may have been her sources, the results are undeniably excellent." E. H. L.

\+ Boston Transcript p2 Mr 7 '28 700w

"Probably realists will find fault with this. But at any rate, it shows another side of the picture that is often drawn without humor."

Ind 120:285 Mr 24 '28 150w

"Reading 'Bright Avenues' is like making the final steep ascent in a roller-coaster. Always the plunge is expected—the breath held. But nothing happens. One is left with a feeling of mild disappointment. The book is a continuous anticlimax. Nowhere is there a sense of reality. The characters are not alive. One reads with interest but little conviction." Marjorie Collins

— \+ N Y Evening Post p15 Ap 14 '28 240w

" 'Bright Avenues' is admirably written, pungently, swiftly, youthfully, yet with wise restraint. The characterization is vivid without resort to exaggeration."

\+ N Y Times p11 F 19 '28 480w

N Y World p9m My 13 '28 130w

"Josephine Bentham is a journalist, and her reportorial training is evidently responsible for some of the best features of 'Bright Avenues'; brittle and witty thumbnail characterizations, succinctness of description, the packing a maximum of atmosphere in a paragraph with a minimum of words; but it also is responsible for a taste for the unusual and bizarre, the feeling that a man biting a dog has more interest than a dog biting a man, and it crowds her pages with all sorts of eccentric types—very well done, to be sure, for the most part."

\+ Sat R of Lit 4:723 Mr 31 '28 380w

BERAUD, HENRI. My friend Robespierre; tr. from the French by Slater Brown. 298p il $3 Macaulay

B or 92 Robespierre, Maximilien Marie Isidore de 28-21496

Using the device of setting down the personal narrative of a boyhood friend of Robespierre who grew up and went to school with him in Arras, followed him to Paris, saw him thru the Terror and put to death on the guillotine, Henri Béraud tells an effectively simple story of the life of the "Incorruptible."

"Granted the initial scholarship and fairness of the author, it is difficult to imagine a more acceptable approach to a debated character. The fact that it can easily be abused and that abuses can swiftly be detected prevents it from being more generally employed." J: Carter
+ Bookm 68:340 N '28 110w

Boston Transcript p2 O 6 '28 420w

"Its simplicity of style should not obscure its genuine creative quality. . . The story is as simple, as limpid, and as unfailingly interesting as any of the Erckmann-Chatrian series, of which its manner often reminds us. But the character of Robespierre is kept always under the author's lens, with very little invented action; and M. Beraud makes us understand, if we do not always like, the unhappy, intense and single-minded man who, when most a fanatic was also most a patriot." Allan Nevins
+ N Y World p9m S 23 '28 460w

BERAUD, HENRI. Twelve portraits of the French revolution; tr. by Madeleine Boyd. 331p $3.50 Little

944.04 France—History—Revolution—Biography 28-29361

M. Béraud's rapid, incisive style etches in clear outline the figures in these twelve portraits of the French revolution: Mirabeau: Danton; Robespierre; Saint-Just; Marat; Camille Desmoulins; Vergniaud; The king; The women; Soldiers and generals; Leaders of the mob; Secondary figures.

"A galaxy of imposing Revolutionary portraits, done with a competence and vigor which place them with the best of such studies. The chief criticism to be brought against the book concerns its slightly misleading title. We have here not merely 'Twelve Portraits,' but something much more inclusive which places the book in an entirely different and more useful category." R. T. House
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p5 D 9 '28 780w

Boston Transcript p6 D 15 '28 320w

"They are rapid, well-written recitals of the main facts of the lives of each sitter, and, with the exception of that of Marie Antoinette, are done with impartiality and appreciation of different types of people. They are too brief, however, to go into disputed points, and the writer has no unusual gifts of character evocation." A. B. Parsons
+ — Nation 127:691 D 19 '28 100w

"There is no denying that, to a considerable extent, he is right. But one cannot help feeling that his would have been a better book if he had visualized the bloody orgies which culminated in the Reign of Terror more as horror and less as drama." T. R. Ybarra
+ — N Y Times p16 D 30 '28 1500w

BERCOVICI, KONRAD. Alexander; a romantic biography. 335p $2.50 Cosmopolitan bk.

Alexander the Great—Fiction 28-20224

A fictionized biography of Alexander the Great featuring the driving force of his mother, a barbarian queen, whose desire for revenge against his father spurred her on to drastic deeds.

"One must be immensely grateful to Mr. Bercovici for the rushing excitement of his narrative as well as for the glowing forms on his tapestry. Thank heaven he has done no standard biography. He has given the terror and soddenness and beauty and fearful drama of real life." Donald Douglas
+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p7 S 16 '28 1400w

"Mr. Bercovici does full justice to both the realism and the romance of a great career." E. N.
+ Boston Transcript p2 S 1 '28 550w

"There is a color and movement to this romantic biography that makes it stimulating and pleasant reading. Bercovici is a poet. If the book is uneven and if inferences are drawn and careless statements tossed about as generalities, there is nevertheless something to fire the imagination."
+ — Ind 121:213 S 1 '28 180w

"Mr. Bercovici has had a long training in the art of presenting legendary material and folktales. His life of Alexander is in no sense a formal biography. It is a rapid narrative, cast in popular form, more or less on the model of the stories he has written about his gypsy heroes, a notable addition to the long series of biographies of various types that have been appearing during these last few years." Van Wyck Brooks
+ Ind 121:308 S 29 '28 1400w

"Mr. Bercovici uses a rapid al fresco style, laying on colors solidly and treating us to a sequence of swift, often startlingly vivid pictures, linked by occasional apothegmatic paragraphs whose philosophy at times seems open to question. It is unfortunate that the author's romance-biography provokes comparison with so beautifully chiseled and psychologically subtle a semi-fictional work as Jacob Wassermann's 'Alexander in Babylon,' for it is entertaining enough reading." F. H. M.
+ — N Y Evening Post p9 O 6 '28 250w

"It did not seem to me as I read it to shed any particular new light upon the life and character of the world-conqueror, nor did the manner of the telling appeal to me as at all distinguished." Herschel Brickell
— No Am 226:adv O '28 100w

"Mr. Bercovici may call his book a romantic biography, but his romance seems to contain a very large element of the physical. The atmosphere of torture and intrigue finally produces a feeling of satiation." W. T. Adee
— Outlook 150:1172 N 14 '28 150w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:545 N '28

St Louis 26:389 D '28

"Bercovici's story is certainly interesting, even exciting in places, but one wonders whether truth is not sometimes more interesting than fiction, whether Hogarth's scholarly work, 'Philip and Alexander of Macedon,' does not make better reading than this 'Alexander.'" C: A. Robinson, Jr.
+ — Sat R of Lit 5:139 S 22 '28 750w

BERCOVICI, KONRAD. Nights abroad. 315p il $4 Century

914 Europe—Description and travel 28-27607

Konrad Bercovici confesses himself at home nowhere because at home everywhere. A wanderer thruout the world he has attempted to catch the spirit and the savour of every country, and in this collection of sketches of the cities of the world he evokes, often in a single incident, the characteristic atmosphere of each place. Harmoniously illustrated by E. H. Suydam.

Boston Transcript p3 N 24 '28 180w

"'Nights Abroad' is such a book as is not met often. The author has found the magic carpet, and E. H. Suydam has done magic pictures to adorn the pages."
+ N Y Times p8 D 9 '28 1350w

"Mr. Bercovici seems to melt, as it were, into the pageant of strange cities and to be at home wherever he goes. His pages reveal these national reactions and thus, though his book is not a great book—despite great passages—it is a curiously intimate book. Yes, intimate and charming. It is the kind of book a traveller should carry with him, this guide to the heart of cities where facts are of no importance and imponderable vitality is everything."
+ Sat R of Lit 5:419 N 24 '28 250w

BERCOVICI, KONRAD. Peasants. 290p $2 Doubleday, Doran
28-8410

A collection of short stories of peasants in various lands—in the Carpathians, Normandy, Spain and Sicily, in the Italian quarter of New York and the Finnish colony in Minnesota. Contents: Land; The master; The unfinished house; The mongrel; Goats; Sirocco; Suzette; Firewood; The beggar of the Alcazar; The stranger; When faith returns; Fanica.

Booklist 24:364 Je '28

"It is not the facile trick of the surprise ending that the author needs but a simple awareness that readers may be trusted and prefer to be trusted with having some understanding of implication. Still other places are marred in Mr. Bercovici's stories by the cliché, by false eloquence and by trite philosophizing. Things like this will affect a reader with impatience in the teeth of the best of materials—even more so in stories which, like 'Land' and 'Suzette' and 'Firewood,' have merit than in those which have not. Most of the other stories are merely innocuous and some are downright impossible; for example, the dog stories, which are hideously reminiscent of Mr. Curwood. Mr. Bercovici has, as the saying goes, promise. But he has written eleven books and ought by now to have purged that promise of many more faults than he has overcome." Edgar Johnson

— + Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p18 Ap 1 '28 800w

"A book of short stories of which it may be said at once that they are good, if rarely exciting, reading from first to last; but that they will add nothing to the literary, as distinct from the popular repute of the author." Shaemus O'Sheel

+ — N Y Evening Post p5 Jl 14 '28 330w

"If not all the stories in this collection display the primitive vigor and the striking exotic quality of Mr. Bercovici's earlier tales, still the volume as a whole exhibits sufficient robustness, color and variety to interest all followers of the author's previous work."

+ — N Y Times p13 Mr 4 '28 450w

"The stories are all well written. They are not, as is so frequently the case with most contemporary work in this form, too much concerned with plot. They build up their characters quietly and with considerable convincing detail. The style is clear and fresh. The suspense is maintained and the denouement is generally surprising. The incidents are certainly original. To the thousands of readers who regard literature as a surcease from life this latest volume by Mr. Bercovici will give pleasure. I must admit I like it myself." Corning White

+ N Y World p11m Ap 1 '28 650w

"As commercial magazine stories they are good; as attempts at literature they nearly all fall short of their mark."

+ — Sat R of Lit 4:830 Ap 28 '28 200w

"The stories represent, it would seem, an advance over those heretofore reprinted—a dangerous conclusion, since some of the present collection first appeared in print as early as 1925. But certainly 'Peasants' seems as a whole to give us stories a bit better managed, a little more substantial and in-seeing. The human rather than the external and the unusual aspect dominates. There is good variety; the book is likely to please new readers and satisfy old admirers."

+ Springf'd Republican p7f Mr 25 '28 150w

BERCOVICI, KONRAD. Story of the gypsies. 294p il $4 Cosmopolitan bk.
397 Gypsies
28-22362

The story of the gypsies from their first appearance in Europe to the present day, with an account of what is known of their origin. Many gypsy legends and stories are woven into the narrative.

Booklist 25:105 D '28

"As a historian of the race of which he has written so many moving short tales, Mr. Bercovici is without a peer. How much research went into the volume we cannot say, but no matter how much it was, the book is fascinating. It is a glorious romance of a romantic people, and it is told by one who understands them well." K: Schriftgiesser

+ Boston Transcript p4 S 29 '28 1600w

"A decidedly colorful, readable account of the gypsies of many lands." F. H. M.

+ N Y Evening Post p9m O 20 '28 130w

"Konrad Bercovici is to be taken as authority on a subject so elusive that he stands practically alone, a monopolist of learning, for, although other Americans have in their own land joined gypsy caravans, observed something of Romany ways, and written of them, the author of 'The Story of the Gypsies' has accompanied them in practically every country of Europe also. Konrad Bercovici, therefore, has written a book for future reference as well as immediate pleasure."

+ N Y Times p5 O 7 '28 1550w

"Even as a record of migrations, this book would be interesting; as it is, full of stories, legends, adventures, observations and comment, it is fascinating. It is clumsily written, to be sure, and too discursive. The author has not known how to select from his mass of material, nor how to arrange his selection to best advantage. But this is a book to be judged on content, and to be read for information and diversion."

+ — Outlook 150:1336 D 12 '28 100w

"The inaccuracies and inconsistencies of the book are too pretty, and mainly too petty, to trouble those outside the Gypsy Lore Society. It is unfair to suggest that this volume should contain an index and a bibliography. It was not written for researchers. Yet, the student, as well as the seeker of glamorous panorama, will find it full of material. Konrad Bercovici is too thorough-going a Gypsy to write an empty or a dull book. Gypsy entertainers never cheat a friendly public." Victor Weybright

+ — Survey 61:318 D 1 '28 540w

BERESFORD, JOHN DAVYS. All or nothing. 327p $2.50 Bobbs [7s 6d Collins]
28-8705

James Bledloe loved his wife with an ideal love. After her third deviation from fidelity during the course of sixteen years, James realized that her love was nothing like his own. He left her then, seeking in religion and in the dispersal of his great wealth some answer to his heart's hunger. He returns with enough spiritual power at his command to win Katherine at last to his way of life and love.

"The story is told in an old-fashioned, heavily explanatory way, and though a dramatic effect is obviously striven for, it is not attained. All of which combined with the deadly humorlessness of the point of view and manner make it a tale that will never hold children from play or old men from the chimney corner." E. M. Stern

— Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p41 Ap 15 '28 600w

Boston Transcript p2 Je 6 '28 350w

"Mr. Beresford writes very well at times and is rather keen at psychology, but in 'All or Nothing' his subject gets the better of him."

— + Ind 120:629 Je 30 '28 130w

"The theme of 'All or Nothing' is ambitious, and Mr. Beresford has not mastered it; but the book is so good in some ways and so bad in others that Mr. Beresford's case becomes a very interesting one." Edwin Muir

— + Nation and Ath 42:752 F 18 '28 250w

"Mr. Beresford's writing is uneven, but it is often powerful, and sometimes reaches heights of great beauty. We have called the story a tragi-comedy, but it is only fair to say that the comedy is inherent, not intentional."

+ — New Statesman 31:54 Ap 21 '28 550w

"It cannot be said that Mr. Beresford's book is either particularly impressive or particularly interesting, while the immaculate James is something of a bore."
— N Y Times p9 Mr 18 '28 580w

Reviewed by Elizabeth Le May
N Y World p9m My 13 '28 250w

"We are compelled to fix our attention on a pompous, ponderous, pretentious, humorless young man, whose earnestness is clouded by dulness, whose admirable opinions on ethics arouse in the reader, as in the hostile clubmen, an invincible aversion; the kind of man to bring virtue into disrepute. Anyone who respects (as I do) Mr. Beresford's talent should hesitate before reading 'All or Nothing.'" L. P. Hartley
— Sat R 145:230 F 25 '28 580w

"Mr. Beresford's usual deftness has deserted him this year. James is by far the dullest and least persuasive prophet we have ever met."
— Sat R of Lit 4:803 Ap 21 '28 270w

"A well-written story; but the characters are wooden and unattractive. The author's evident sincerity and amiability do not permeate them. The intention of the book is admirable; but the execution is dull."
— + Spec 140:168 F 4 '28 110w

Springf'd Republican p7f Jl 15 '28 350w

"The sincerity and care of this study are admirable, and the passages between James and Katherine extremely convincing. But these excellences do not dispel a marked heaviness. Spiritual fire is not a quality of Mr. Beresford's prose."
— + Times [London] Lit Sup p78 F 2 '28 640w

BERESFORD, JOHN DAVYS. Instrument of destiny. 327p $2 Bobbs [7s 6d Collins]
28-22573

Not wholly to the sorrow of his children and grandchildren, the miserly head of the house of Fytton finally dies of one of his heart attacks. The sons with their wives and children, and the daughter with her husband, are gathered at Mallow Park when the end comes. Which, if any, of them administered the poison that actually caused the old man's death? Suspicion hovers over each of them until detective Fellowes directs it to the small unconscious instrument of destiny.

"We cannot feel that Mr. Beresford's gifts are related to detective fiction. The finale of the story is extremely unreal. As an entertaining account of family life in England (with apologies to Mr. Galsworthy) it is amusing. As a good detective story it is far from a success. Mr. Beresford is too able a novelist to submerge his natural gift for analysis in such trite and sensational material."
— + Boston Transcript p6 O 27 '28 280w

"The characters are just the wooden chessmen that we are used to in the books of the most professional detective writers. A readable book, just."
Nation and Ath 43:302 Je 2 '28 90w

"It is a compact and enjoyable novel, exciting and never too obvious."
+ New Statesman 31:520 Jl 28 '28 140w

N Y Times p26 O 7 '28 180w

"It's not an exciting story, but it is well written, and the solution, we believe, will surprise you." W. R. Brooks
Outlook 150:918 O 3 '28 170w

" 'The Instrument of Destiny' is Mr. Beresford's first detective story, and it might well arouse jealousy in more practised exponents of this particular art." L. P. Hartley
+ Sat R 145:844 Je 30 '28 120w

"The necessary murder comes wearily late in the plot, and solution is as laborious as it is unsatisfactory. There is considerable doubt whether either Mr. Beresford's friends or the discriminating followers of detective fiction will find any pleasure in these pages."
— Sat R of Lit 5:385 N 17 '28 100w

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p429 Je 7 '28 400w

BERKELEY, ANTHONY, pseud. See Cox, A. B.

BERKELEY, REGINALD CHEYNE. Dawn; a biographical novel of Edith Cavell. 246p $2 Sears

Cavell, Edith Louisa—Fiction 28-15629

Captain Berkeley has made a vivid and moving story of Miss Cavell's life and death, showing her part in an organization for the aid of escaped soldiers which operated in Brussels, and the circumstances which altered the conciliatory policy of the German military authorities in Belgium to the stern temper which demanded and carried out the execution of Miss Cavell.

Boston Transcript p2 Je 30 '28 700w

"The story is told with such objectivity, such understanding of human nature under the conditions of war and such evident endeavor to do justice to both sides of the conflict that even a German sympathizer, looking back through the perspective of the post-war years, ought to be able to read it without undue excitement. The story is very simple and very moving and it is exceedingly well done."
+ N Y Times p11 Je 24 '28 530w

Reviewed by E. C. Beckwith
N Y World p7m Je 24 '28 180w

"There are many facts about Miss Cavell's career prior to the war that are interesting, and the story of the events leading up to her execution is well told." Herschel Brickell
+ No Am 226:adv Ag '28 150w

"Intended to be both illuminating and moving, 'Dawn' is merely a moderately interesting narrative, completely lacking suspense and solidity. For anyone, however, who is ignorant of the events leading up to Edith Cavell's execution, the story will be superficially informative."
— + Sat R of Lit 5:57 Ag 18 '28 160w

BERNAYS, EDWARD L. Propaganda. 159p $2.50 [2] Liveright

301 Propaganda. Public opinion 28-28779

The propagandist pulls the wires and public opinion is formed or the habits of a people altered. The author explains how this is done, and why, in a series of articles reprinted from magazines, which deal with the propagandist activities of government, big business, politics, and in matters of education, social service, and art.

"A professional propagandist himself, Mr. Bernays writes as objectively as could be expected of him. His book is valuable for its story of the means by which public opinion is so easily moulded." E. B. S.
+ Boston Transcript p3 D 29 '28 500w

"For those who read primarily for information 'Propaganda' will be of interest. It is a useful book, and so simply written, so insistent in its repetitions that even the most gullible should realize, after reading it, what propaganda is."
+ Outlook 50:1372 D 19 '28 70w

BERNSTEIN, MARTHA. Colour in art and daily life; tr. by R. Granger Watkin. 241p $2.50 McBride [6s Methuen]

752 Color 28-12624

"After a preliminary survey of the general properties of color and the scientific theories regarding the nature of light and color, Professor Bernstein takes up each of the primary colors in turn, and concludes with considerations of color in relation to line, surface and space. How colors have been used by different

BERNSTEIN, MARTHA—Continued
peoples and different artists, to what uses and materials they are best suited, how they may be combined—these are some of the aspects which the author treats. The artist and student may find helpful and shrewd hints as to the application of color; the amateur will acquire a refreshing sense of the importance of color in everything which the eye sees—in the stuff of our clothing and house decorations no less than in the art of the museums."—Bookm

Booklist 25:60 N '28

Bookm 67:xxvi Ag '28 120w

"Prof. Bernstein contributes nothing new, but to her credit she avoids theories that are subjective and metaphysical. Her book is of little value to the artist, but for the layman it contains an abundance of information."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p20 Je 10 '28 200w

Boston Transcript p5 Je 9 '28 110w

"A book on color entirely without illustrations is evidently useless except to a reader who can supply the requisite visualization. Accordingly the appeal of this book is to such as have already designed in color. They will find it sensible and widely discursive rather than systematic or original."

+ — Sat R of Lit 5:91 S 1 '28 100w

BERRY, ERICK, pseud. See Best, A.

BERRY, WILLIAM RANSTED. Justice of Allah. [2] 314p $2 Hale, Cushman & Flint, Boston, Mass.

Tommy Macadam and his cousin Susan are English children living in the Levant. They have as playmates two little Turkish girls, Hasneh and Ferideh. The destinies of the four thus linked in childhood, grow closer as they grow older. Over them presides like an evil genius, the figure of Nouri Bey, who keeps Ferideh from her lover, parts Hasneh and Tommy, and is responsible for the death of Susan.

Boston Transcript p9 D 8 '28 110w

"This novel, for all its attempt at swift and vigorous romance, is slightly back-broken. It consists, in fact, of two separate stories with nothing in common but a hard-working villain who does duty in each. . . To the reader who is happily indifferent to stylistic virtues, and who takes his melodrama straight, 'The Justice of Allah' may be safely recommended."

— N Y Times p32 N 25 '28 380w

BERTON, PAUL. Training for speaking; a manual of declamation with exercises designed to teach the student correct breathing, breath-control and gesture based upon the combined methods of the French and Italian schools. 176p il $3 Stokes [10s 6d Harrap]

808.5 Oratory. Public speaking [27-26970]

The book has to do with the mechanics of public speaking—voice production and control, and gesture. The physiology of breathing and speaking is described and illustrated and suitable exercises to develop control are given.

Booklist 24:58 N '27

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 S 11 '27 100w

Times [London] Lit Sup p251 Ap 7 '27 100w

BERTRAND, LOUIS. Louis XIV; tr. by Cleve- [2] land B. Chase. 366p il $5 (18s) Longmans

B or 92 Louis XIV, king of France 28-24831

A French historian and novelist undertakes this defense of Louis XIV, a study of the king as man and ruler and of the lasting good that he did for France. "He seems in a way," in M. Bertrand's estimation, "to have been everything that a King should and can be; he has, as it were, fixed forever our conception of royalty."

"Monsieur Bertrand's book is very vivid, very earnest, very Catholic, very jingostic, very militaristic. And it is admirably translated." R. T. House

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p14 N 4 '28 1050w

Boston Transcript p6 N 21 '28 1000w

"The book can be read with profit only if the author's monarchistic and religious prejudices are discounted; but this is true of a writer as much greater than Bertrand as Sainte-Beuve. Bertrand's portrait of Mme de Maintenon, as of all the King's mistresses, is absurdly unfair. He leans too much on asseveration and too little on the wealth of material available to the historian of this period. Nevertheless the lay student of the period will be well repaid by reading the book." A. B. Parsons

+ — Nation 127:690 D 19 '28 680w

"This is based on solid research and written with the spontaneity of a novelist. There is sufficient psychological speculation to clarify the characterizations, and sufficient enthusiasm to animate the narrative."

+ Outlook 150:1372 D 19 '28 40w

"M. Bertrand (who is a well-known novelist as well as an historian) has put in a thoroughly lively and provocative 'speech for the defence.' We shall be surprised if others do not follow on the same side."

+ Sat R 146:696 N 24 '28 150w

BEST, MRS ALLENA (CHAMPLIN) (ERICK [2] BERRY, pseud.). Black folk tales; retold from the Haussa of northern Nigeria, West Africa. 80p il $2 Harper

398 Folklore—Africa 28-22488

Folk and animal tales told by the Haussa people of Nigeria, West Africa. The Haussas are Mohammedans, and in their folk tales mingle the older nature-worship and the fabled people of the Koran.

"Their adventures and romances take place against a background entirely remote from our civilization and Erick Berry has sketched it as effectively with her words as with her drawings." H. M. Greene

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p8 O 7 '28 260w

Cleveland Open Shelf p139 D '28

"They are unusual stories and will have considerable interest for juvenile readers."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e D 16 '28 100w

BEST, MRS ALLENA (CHAMPLIN) (ERICK BERRY, pseud.). Girls in Africa. 128p il $2 Macmillan

916.69 Children in Nigeria. Nigeria—Social life and customs 28-19470

The first story of the collection is about a journey into Nigeria taken by a sixteen-year-old girl on a visit to her father, a British agent stationed there. The other stories are about adventures of girls of various Negro tribes.

Booklist 25:74 N '28

"Their adventures and romance take place against a background entirely remote from our civilization and Erick Berry has sketched it as effectively with her words as with her drawings." H. M. Greene

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p8 O 7 '28 260w

Boston Transcript p3 O 6 '28 90w

"Mr. Berry tells their stories dramatically, with color and vigor and evidently with knowledge of the native tribes of Nigeria, the scenes in which they live and their manners and customs."

+ N Y Times p10 S 23 '28 150w

Reviewed by A. S. Brackett

Sat R of Lit 5:484 D 8 '28 240w

BESTON, HENRY B., pseud. See Sheahan, H: B.

BETHEA, JACK. Cotton. 316p $2 Houghton 28-10293

His schooling finished, Larry Maynard goes back to his native Alabama to try cotton raising on scientific lines. At first he is welcomed by the planters, who listen with respect to his schemes, but he loses ground before the attacks of one Shelby and is hard put to it to win back faith in his co-operative warehouse. In this, as in his love affair, he is at last successful.

"An exciting story, told in a stirring style by one who knows the South and its people. The old manor house is typical of the southern houses before the war, but the life is distinctly modern. The love story is romantic and appealing." G. B.

+ Boston Transcript p3 My 12 '28 450w

Cleveland Open Shelf p121 N '28

"That there is a good deal of essential drama in cotton growing and selling there is no doubt, and Mr. Bethea has contrived some exciting scenes which furnish glimpses of certain phases of life in Southern communities without distortion. In making his hero the son of an unsuccessful tenant-farmer he has pleasingly abandoned that much of the romantic tradition, although in other respects the young man is up to the usual specifications."

+ Sat R of Lit 4:991 Je 23 '28 250w

Wis Lib Bul 24:254 O '28

BEVERIDGE, ALBERT JEREMIAH. Abraham Lincoln, 1809-1858. 2v 607;741p il $12.50 Houghton [25s Gollancz]

B or 92 Lincoln, Abraham 28-26716

Mr Beveridge did not live to complete his life of Lincoln. The two volumes out of a projected four close with a survey of the great debate between Lincoln and Douglas at Alton, Illinois, in October, 1858. The biography is a monument of industry and scholarship. The author has traced to its source every fact, incident, tradition or statement bearing on the life of Lincoln, comparing, verifying, sifting. The result of this painstaking process is a trustworthy body of evidence on which to form an opinion of the man and his acts.

Booklist 25:68 N '28

"This biography of Lincoln by the late Albert J. Beveridge founds itself upon a bibliography so extensive, and is so rich in foot notes, and in quotations from the words of living witnesses to Lincoln's career, that it seems to render unnecessary any other treatise upon the subject so far as it goes, just as it is likely to supplant all previous performances, which have written of Lincoln's life in terms of works and days." E. L. Masters

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p1 S 9 '28 2500w

Reviewed by J: T. Morse, jr.

Boston Transcript p1 S 22 '28 7500w

Reviewed by E. F. Edgett

Boston Transcript p6 S 29 '28 400w

"The Lincoln that is to be found in these pages is the Lincoln which fact presents, not the Lincoln that the author conceives. In a lawyer-like fashion, he places the facts before his readers, he gives page and book, or document, or letter, for every statement he makes. He comments upon those facts only in so far as they need commenting upon to make them coherent. The rest he leaves to his hero. The result is a stupendous piece of work, scholarly in the extreme but none the less the record of a human being." Fannie Butcher

+ Chicago Daily Tribune p13 S 29 '28 800w

"So large a work, left unfinished and lacking its author's personal final revision, has inevitable errors. But it is a work of lasting importance. Is it 'definitive'? Not by any means. But it is a valuable contribution." W: E. Barton

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 S 26 '28 1900w

"It will be matter of profound regret that a book so learned, so masterly, so mercilessly dispassionate, and so well written must remain only an imposing fragment. The best that could be hoped for is that some later historian, with the ground of Lincoln's earlier career prepared as Beveridge prepared it, may with equal ability and masterfulness carry on the story to its end." W: MacDonald

+ Nation 127:sup368 O 10 '28 1000w

"In this admirable new biography in which every scrap of evidence about Lincoln up to the date of his election as President has been collected and sifted, the rough life in the backwoods of Kentucky and Illinois, in which he spent his first twenty-two years, is vividly described." Philip Morrell

+ Nation and Ath 44:321 D 1 '28 650w

"On the whole this is incomparably the greatest story of Lincoln's life before his presidency. It was a cruel stroke that took Beveridge from us before he reached the Civil War. The more regrettable because these two volumes show such growth and development compared with the 'Life of Marshall' that we had every reason to expect something of epic grandeur when Beveridge reached the years of storm and stress." S. E. Morison

+ New Repub 57:sup117 D 12 '28 1700w

"The most striking aspect of this work is that it is utterly and happily devoid of editorial comment and perversion. No facts are twisted or accentuated, no situation glossed over. With a wealth of provocative material completely and methodically authenticated, Beveridge sets down the bare facts and leaves to the reader of intelligence and judgment the task of formulating the general principles that guided Lincoln's life." R. M. Field

+ N Y Evening Post p11 O 13 '28 1250w

"Hitherto every new book on Lincoln has been So-and-So's conception of Lincoln. Senator Beveridge, however, undertook to present, not Beveridge's Lincoln, but Lincoln. . . Never does Beveridge psychoanalyze, thank God; he makes nobody great or small; he shows them to you, that is all, but when he has shown them to you, you see them, and you do not forget the way they look." C: W. Thompson

+ N Y Times p1 S 23 '28 2300w

"They who love their myths and cherish the illusion of perfect men may resent the author's realistic method which for so many pages depicts a Lincoln not so admirable and certainly not so great; but most, we trust, will rejoice in a method which permits us to witness the growth, inch by inch, of a typical self-seeking country politician into a figure of such moral grandeur and greatness that it must command the admiration of all future years." C. G. Bowers

+ N Y World p8m S 23 '28 1800w

"This book even in its incomplete form, is undoubtedly among the half-dozen real contributions to the subject of Lincoln's life yet written, and a storehouse for future biographers and historians as well." Herschel Brickell

+ No Am 226:adv N '28 230w

"The admirers of Senator Beveridge's 'Marshall' will be a little disappointed in his 'Lincoln' if they allow their anticipations to outrun their reason. Mr. Beveridge was so conscientious and painstaking, so determined not to let political prejudice or personal idolatry sway his pen, that his book is a little lacking in sustained narrative interest." L. F. Abbott

+ — Outlook 150:912 O 3 '28 1900w

Pratt p41 autumn '28

St Louis 26:358 N '28

"There is little or no selection in this book. The wealth of detail is at times almost terrifying. . . But Mr. Beveridge, with his encyclopædic method, shows us more clearly than any previous writer has ever done that Lincoln was, after all, a born politician. . . It is admirably done."

+ Sat R 146:577 N 3 '28 1350w

"Senator Beveridge's 'Lincoln' unfinished as it is, following his distinguished 'Life of Marshall,' confirms us in the judgment that he

BEVERIDGE, A. J.—Continued
merits a high position among American biographical and historical writers." E. P. Oberholtzer

+ Sat R of Lit 5:268 O 20 '28 2250w

"The author never obtrudes himself as a biographer or an interpreter, and introduces only unbiased reflections which help the reader to comprehend the narrative. The mass of detail is unfolded with spontaneity of spirit and with a readability that is unlabored. After Mr Sandburg's poetic interpretation of Lincoln's life, it was well to have the realistic account."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e S 30 '28 1600w

"Incomplete as it is, the work extends to 1,300 closely printed pages, and it is packed with details, elaborately documented, about obscure people and events. Sometimes these details may seem to English readers superfluous. But in general the method is fully justified by the result, which is a vivid picture, full of stir and life, of the strange society in which Lincoln lived and moved. We can follow him as it were day by day, through the long years of his apprenticeship to political life, and thus gauge pretty accurately the influences which formed his opinions and helped to mould his character. Moreover, by being brought thus into intimate contact with all sorts and conditions of the American people, we are enabled to understand the workings of American democracy during this critical period of its growth."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p741 O 18 '28 4000w

Wis Lib Bul 24:304 N '28

"Beveridge refuses to accept any space limitations. He presents all the facts (concerning both background and his subject) which exhaustive research has brought to light. It is in this respect that his work makes a new contribution to the Lincoln literature. He places his materials in an orderly arrangement and presents them without any attempt at literary embellishment or psychological interpretation. The stopping of the pen of the author when he had carried his work only through the first year of Lincoln's career as a national figure is a real loss to historical scholarship and to the American people." R. H. Gabriel

+ Yale R n s 18:370 winter '29 780w

BEZA, MARCU. Paganism in Roumanian folklore. 161p il $2.50 Dutton [7s 6d Dent]

398 Folklore—Rumania 28-25664

The author traces the pagan origin of many Roumanian customs, festivals, and superstitions, some of them still observed in connection with Christian celebrations. Drawings and photographs illustrate the book.

Boston Transcript p5 Ag 29 '28 220w

"This is a very interesting little book, and will be thoroughly enjoyed by all students of folk-lore. Mr. Beza, as a Roumanian who is also well acquainted with England, is in a good position to give us an account of the customs and myths of his people; and some of these, though hitherto not very familiar to Englishmen, will repay attention."

+ New Statesman 31:170 My 12 '28 300w

Times [London] Lit Sup p389 My 24 '28 760w

BIANCO, GIUSEPPE, pseud. See White, J.

BIBESCO, MARTHE LUCIE (LAHOVARY) (PRINCESS GEORGES V. BIBESCO.). Catherine-Paris; tr. by Malcolm Cowley. 368p $2.50 Harcourt

28-13444

This novel of pre-war European society has for its heroine the daughter of a Rumanian noble, who is brought up simply and obscurely in Paris and at eighteen, by marriage to a rich Polish count, is translated to a palace and vast domains at Zamosc and the life of effete European courts.

Booklist 24:402 Jl '28

"The atmosphere of Paris is distilled like an essence throughout the pages, and it is upon this that the beauty of the book depends." Rose Lee

+ Bookm 67:710 Ag '28 250w

"Catherine-Paris is the product of a fine analytical intelligence, an exquisite sensibility and a superior gift for the writing of delicately cadenced prose. As concerns this last, we owe our appreciation of it to Mr. Cowley, of course, from whom we have learned to look for irreproachable translations." L: Galantiere

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p3 My 20 '28 1200w

"This is a book for all who love Paris or excellent writing."

+ Ind 120:629 Je 30 '28 200w

"The book is, on the whole, disappointing. It is written, sometimes glitteringly written, in the French manner, with an air of ironic generalization. The scenes given over to the gatherings of the Leopolski clan are both brilliant and convincing; but Catherine herself is a lay-figure; and when, towards the end we are expected to interest ourselves in her and the mere mechanics of her story, the effort is too great." T. S. Matthews

— + New Repub 55:337 Ag 15 '28 400w

Reviewed by Robert Hyde

N Y Evening Post p8 Je 23 '28 530w

"It is well written and well told, a good story, though hardly an important book."

+ — N Y Times p9 My 13 '28 920w

"Here we have a revivifying of the life and times which only a pre-war generation can appreciate; but which the generation after the war can find most charming. To them it can be a fairy story of utmost delicacy and taste." Christine Diemer

+ N Y World p7m Jl 1 '28 220w

"The novel is written in a delicate prose, which Mr. Cowley has done no violence to, and it is certain to find appreciation among the lovers of the unusual in fiction." Herschel Brickell

+ No Am 226:adv Jl '28 70w

"The book is permeated with the atmosphere of Paris, and with the sense of the omnipresence of the past. It is the work of an urbanè wit, a sharp intelligence, a sensitive spirit, and an accomplished hand (in, for American readers, a perfect translation)." F. L. Robbins

+ Outlook 149:314 Je 20 '28 200w

"As a novel in the ordinary sense of a human story, 'Catherine-Paris' does not fly very far nor high, but as an exercise in the art of witty comment as it was once practiced in France and a comprehensive picture of the whole upper social layer of a certain period, it is distinguished and delightful." Arthur Ruhl

+ Sat R of Lit 4:909 My 26 '28 880w

"Like so many modern novels it is a sort of romanced biography (or autobiography?); and when an author, behind his mask, sets about telling us his own ideas or experiences his pen is apt to run away with him. 'Catherine-Paris' has the divagations and disquisitions peculiar to that style. Still, the opening and the closing chapters, especially, are quite remarkable. The beginning is full of a pathetic, intimate poetry."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p664 S 29 '27 780w

Wis Lib Bul 24:224 Jl '28

BIBLE. WHOLE. Living Bible; being the whole Bible in its fewest words; ed. from the King James version by Bolton Hall. 423p $6 Knopf

220 28-8542

The editor has gone thru the whole Bible, weeding out genealogies, ceremonial details and unnecessary repetitions, but leaving intact familiar sonorous phrases of the King James version. An occasional alteration of a word or phrase is indicated by brackets.

"One questions whether the content of the Bible has ever before been presented in a more deadly form, and certainly one is not given the whole Bible, nor does one find here its substance, in the fewest possible words. . . In the main, the editor has been content to select and omit, but in the New Testament he has added further to the confusion of the reader by mixing excerpts from the Gospels into a hopeless conglomeration after the manner of the old-time Harmonie. In Paul's letters the continuity of the apostle's close knit thinking is constantly interrupted by violent abridgments, and the majestic imagery of Revelation sadly marred by drastic curtailments."
— Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p17 Je 24 '28 210w

"The fact that the author, whose father was Rev. John Hall, D. D., long pastor of the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church of New York, spent many years on the volume, with the help of scholars, is sufficient indication of the care with which the matter was compiled." F. P. H.
+ Boston Transcript p5 My 19 '28 310w
Christian Century 45:670 My 24 '28 130w
Churchman 138:19 O 27 '28 250w
Nation 127:187 Ag 22 '28 110w

"We fail to see why we should spend fifteen shillings on an Authorized Version reduced to a third of its normal size, when we can so easily ignore, in an ordinary edition, what we do not wish to read." Hilbert Thomas
— Nation and Ath 44:114 O 20 '28 100w

"The reduction of the Bible to a third of its bulk without the sacrifice of anything important, and with so slight a sacrifice of its literary value, is a remarkable and a worthwhile work." W. R. Brooks
+ — Outlook 149:157 My 23 '28 120w
Wis Lib Bul 24:218 Jl '28

BIBLE. OLD TESTAMENT. Old Testament: an American translation, by Alexander R. Gordon and others; ed. by J. M. Powis Smith. 1712p $7.50 Univ. of Chicago press
221.5 27-23704

"Seven years ago the University of Chicago Press published 'an American translation' of the New Testament, by Professor Edgar J. Goodspeed, which was described as an attempt to reproduce in 'simple, straightforward English' that common 'language of everyday life' in which the Gospels and Epistles were originally written. What was begun thus with the New Testament has now been completed by 'an American translation' of the Old Testament, which 'tries', says the editor, 'to be American in the sense that the writings of Lincoln, Roosevelt, and Wilson are American.' This Chicago translation of the Bible, now to be considered as a single work, rivals the scholarly achievement of the famous Revised Version. In addition it attempts the distinctive quality of a readableness in form and content which will commend it to the modern man."— Nation

Booklist 24:232 Mr '28

"In the new Chicago version the fine old stories of Genesis, Samuel and Kings and the splendid rhetoric of the prophets ring out with the deathless charm of great literature. The real test of a translation is not a few random scraps from here and there; it is the sustained vigor and clearness of a whole narrative or sermon. The translators are not simply men of great technical learning; they have also that sense for style which makes these great pieces of literature speak as they have not before spoken to our generation." E. J. Goodspeed
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p14 Ag 5 '28 1200w

"The translators have achieved a work of enormous difficulty with great success." J: H. Holmes
+ Nation 126:49 Ja 11 '28 300w

"This text is vivid, smooth, delightful to read. The antique and now artificial character of the King James version is altogether eliminated. There is a loss of sonorous dignity, of the great organ tones here and there. There is loss of sweet familiarity, which always hurts. But more than adequate compensation is to be found in the aliveness of the book, and much of it admirably preserves the inherent beauty of the original. These translators have given accurate renderings, we have no doubt, and they have also achieved true literary style." J: H. Holmes
+ N Y World p11m F 26 '28 800w

"There are marks of haste in some parts of the translation, but what was written was well printed and 'proof-read.' The work is not final, perhaps not even up to the standard of the best modern scholarship. If, however, it is read either where the older version is used or where heretofore the Old Testament is little known, it will not fail to transmit to our generation some of the literary and religious excellences that belong to the Bible." H: J. Cadbury
+ — Sat R of Lit 5:124 S 15 '28 1400w

BIDDLE, FRANCIS. Llanfear pattern. 326p $2 Scribner
27-22663

The son of the Philadelphia Llanfears marries a girl of half Italian and half American blood, and brings her to the family home. Francesca, the newcomer, is assimilated into the Llanfear pattern with comparative ease. Carl, on the other hand, makes a stand for individuality, and carries his rebellion over into his business and political activities. But the family tradition is strong and he eventually conforms to it.

"Carew Acton and his mistress, Belle, emerge from Mr. Biddle's thickly populated canvas with more clarity and charm than any of his characters. Ellen Thrall, the girl for whom Carl does not quite make up his mind to leave Francesca, and Miss Letty Llanfear, whose eccentricity is almost insanity, are also among the most vivid of them. But the background of the book is more real than its characters and their story. Mr. Biddle's style is strong and supple, and he is unmistakably at ease in his new medium." Emily Clark
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p15 Ja 13 '28 520w
Boston Transcript p4 D 28 '27 350w
Cleveland Open Shelf p26 F '28

"We were bored with the story of the Llanfear family. It does not seem to us that they were interesting enough to fill a novel, but the pictures of the Philadelphia political situation about fifteen years ago and the contemporary social life of that city rescue the book from mediocrity."
— + Ind 120:93 Ja 28 '28 200w
New Repub 54:25 F 22 '28 150w

"So many Llanfears appear in the course of 'The Llanfear Pattern,' that it is impossible to keep them straight unless you make a chart for yourself as you read along. But don't let that deter you from approaching a really good first novel." J: Chamberlain
+ N Y Times p7 O 23 '27 850w

"The story itself is a study of futility. It is interesting and the characters are vividly drawn by a good craftsman but one hopes that in his next book Mr. Biddle may devote his talent to a study in achievement."
+ Sat R of Lit 4:575 F 4 '28 300w

BIERSTADT, EDWARD HALE. Curious trials and criminal cases from Socrates to Scopes. 366p il $4 Coward-McCann
343.1 Trials 28-21559

Curious episodes in legal history from the trial of Socrates to the famous "Monkey" trial at Dayton, Tennessee, in 1925.

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p13 N 4 '28 200w
N Y Evening Post p9m O 27 '28 100w

BIERSTADT, E: H.—Continued
Reviewed by Herschel Brickell
No Am 226:adv N '28 50w
Outlook 150:1373 D 19 '28 90w
R of Rs 78:40 O '28 70w

"Mr. Bierstadt gives you his amazing stories straight without any attempt to fictionize them. He relishes the real better than cooked-up effects. He makes everything clear without obtruding himself, and his own restrained sly comment on the scene is often delightful. In fact, the only objection that can be raised to the book is that there is too much in it. The different rich courses are whisked on and off the table before one has been able fully to savor them."
+ Sat R of Lit 5:256 O 13 '28 500w

"Mr. Bierstadt's book is an example of a breezy type of contemporary journalism which, while lacking high authority or scholarly value, helps to promote popular knowledge of the past and understanding of principles."
+ — Springf'd Republican p10 S 20 '28 680w

BIGGERS, EARL DERR. Behind that curtain. 337p $2 Bobbs [7s 6d Harrap]
28-12549

To the solution of the mysterious disappearance of an officer's bride in India Sir Frederick Bruce has given his time and talents for fifteen years. At the end of that time he gives his life. Sergeant Charlie Chan, Chinese detective of San Francisco takes up the case and the clues unearthed by Sir Frederick, finds the missing woman and the reason for her disappearance, and discovers simultaneously the murderer of Sir Frederick.

Booklist 24:402 Jl '28

"Mr. Bigger's best mystery to date."
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 My 13 '28 120w
Cleveland Open Shelf p123 N '28

"The main point is that the mystery is baffling and the end brings no disappointment."
+ Ind 121:93 Jl 28 '28 130w

"In every way this is a superior mystery story." R. Hyde
+ N Y Evening Post p9 My 12 '28 80w
N Y Times p23 My 6 '28 250w

"A rattling good mystery story." Herschel Brickell
+ No Am 226:adv Jl '28 60w
Reviewed by W. B. Brooks
Outlook 149:114 My 16 '28 170w

"The reader will be almost as shrewd as Chan himself if he can guess the identity of the murderer before Chan gets close to him."
+ Springf'd Republican p7f Jl 22 '28 200w

BIGGS, JOHN, jr. Seven days whipping. 219p $2 Scribner
28-17386

In the absence of his colleague who handled the case, Judge La Place sentences an old Indian to a year in jail. His uneasiness at the possible harshness of the sentence is forgotten, at home, by his greater uneasiness concerning his wife, who is shortly to have a child. Oppressed by the heat, his nerves frayed by anxiety, the Judge is thrown into a queer mental state by a sudden menacing thunder storm. The apparition of a young Indian with a dead deer over his shoulder is the final shock. The Judge passes thru an experience that has the horror of an inescapable dream.

Booklist 25:70 N '28

"Strange fantastic book which is in some sense comparable to the tales of Poe, but which lacks their shattering power. Mr. Biggs fails to create the proper atmosphere of tension, to make one feel that one is bound by a nightmare from which there is no escape. Realities and phantasmagoria are, moreover, imperfectly blended and the logical explanation at the end seems somewhat unsatisfactory." E. H. Walton
— + Bookm 68:99 S '28 230w

" 'Seven Days Whipping' could be read simply as a thrilling story, but its force and subtlety derive from a deeper source than the events it chronicles, from the hidden hates and loves of ordinary people, here brought out with the elements of great drama, fear and pity, in the story of a pettifogging middle-aged judge and a simple Indian lad." Mary Ross
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p5 Jl 22 '28 730w

"Mr. Biggs' first book was an attempt to do something big in a big way. 'Seven Days Whipping' is an essay in the opposite direction; and though it is a humbler job than his first, it is much better done." T. S. Matthews
+ New Repub 57:24 N 21 '28 200w

"It fails in its psychological intentions, though it may be read as a mystery story with enough pleasure to warrant an hour's dalliance in its pages."
— + N Y Times p7 Jl 29 '28 630w

"As a gripping study of a man in the throes of crazed, delusionary fear, this short novel is a strikingly fine performance. . . The book is written in a terse, bluntly powerful style which pounds home its weird significance with hammerlike blows."
+ N Y World p7m Ag 12 '28 220w

"John Biggs is interested in the psychic experiences of men, and his book is a brilliant study of a mind under severe emotional strain . . . It seems to us that every one interested in the writing of thrillers and the mechanics whereby suspense is built up would profit from the reading of this book. And more casual readers, looking for excitement, will find almost too much of it here."
+ Outlook 149:594 Ag 8 '28 230w

"The story holds the interest, and the insight it gives into the judicial mind is interesting, whatever opinion one may hold as to its accuracy."
+ Springf'd Republican p7f Ag 19 '28 280w

BIKLE, MRS LUCY LEFFINGWELL (CABLE). George W. Cable; his life and letters, by his daughter. 306p il $3.50 (12s 6d) Scribner
B or 92 Cable, George Washington 28-24845

This biography of George W. Cable is written by his daughter, and contains, besides extracts from his letters to his family and friends, illuminating incidents of his friendships with Mark Twain, Richard Watson Gilder, Henry Ward Beecher, and Andrew Carnegie.

"In this day of biographies, according to varied pattern, there is something refreshing and restful in the way that Lucy Cable has handled this story of her father's life. Because it reads so simply, a life unfolding logically from infancy to final peaceful passing on, one knows it entailed great labor—deep research, careful analysis and tireless correlation—before even a word could be set down." L. H. G.
+ Boston Transcript p5 N 21 '28 500w

"There is much in Mrs. Bikle's book that will be new to most readers, and much that it is well to have known." Herschel Brickell
+ No Am 226:adv D '28 110w
Times [London] Lit Sup p1010 D 20 '28 1300w

BILLINGS, SHERRARD. Talks to boys in the chapel of Groton school. 175p $1.75 Houghton
252 Sermons 28-18163

These inspirational talks to boys were given in the chapel of Groton school by the senior master.

Boston Transcript p2 Ag 18 '28 80w
Wis Lib Bul 24:256 O '28

BIMBA, ANTHONY. History of the American working class. 360p 75c Int. pub.

331.8 Labor and laboring classes—United States. Trade unions—United States

27-23986

A frankly ex-parte survey of American labor history which takes the side of the working class in its struggle against the bourgeoisie. The history reaches back to the early colonizers of America and their European background.

"The student of the labor movement will find this book an excellent example of current 'radical' thought and teaching." F. B. Ward

+ Am Econ R 18:524 S '28 480w

Reviewed by J: R. Commons

Am Hist R 33:888 Jl '28 550w

"The reviewer wishes that all uncompromising opponents of American unionism might read this biased history in a sufficiently calm spirit to understand its implications." F. T. Carlton

+ Ann Am Acad 136:180 Mr '28 150w

"Bimba makes no pretense at having written a book based on original documents that will measure up to standards of academic scholarship. His data were garnered from secondary and sometimes remoter sources, and the book is meant to be a popular presentation, within the limits of one volume, of material to which the worker-student would have difficulty of access. This he has succeeded in doing well, although he would have been much more effective had he not been so discursive."

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p17 Ap 22 '28 340w

Nation 126:302 Mr 14 '28 60w

BINDLOSS, HAROLD. Lone hand (Eng title Firm hand). 295p $2 Stokes

28-7324

Mark Crozier, after his brother's death and the loss of his property to an avaricious uncle, went to Canada to make his fortune. Recalled to Scotland he solved the slight mystery which had surrounded his brother's death, and found contentment.

Booklist 24:364 Je '28

Cleveland Open Shelf p107 S '28

"Life in the Dales and the wild land once crossed by the Roman Wall is admirably depicted, and the reader is made to feel the rhythm of the seasons. Canadian lumber-camps are perhaps commonplace by contrast, though here, too, Mr. Bindloss's descriptive powers have their charm. But the characters of the story are much less interesting and the dialogue stilted."

+ — Spec 140:276 F 25 '28 60w

Times [London] Lit Sup p114 F 16 '28 110w

Wis Lib Bul 24:224 Jl '28

BIRD, ROBERT MONTGOMERY. Nick of the woods; or, The Jibbenainosay. (Am. bookshelf) 395p $2.50 Vanguard press

28-22868

"This swift-moving, murderous tale of the adventures that befell Roland Forrester and his 'fair kinswoman' in the dark and bloody Kentucky of 1782 went rapidly into twenty editions after its first appearance in 1837."—Books (N Y Herald Tribune)

" 'Nick of the Woods' ranks with the best of the Leatherstocking series. Bird is less sentimental than Cooper, and he is less long winded; and when it comes to picking my favorite Indian fighter of all time my vote goes to old Nathan Slaughter himself, as fascinating a character as Cooper ever created." B. R. Redman

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 S 9 '28 250w

"It offers a spirited picture of the pioneers, and a highly prejudiced impression of the Indians." Allan Nevins

Sat R of Lit 5:163 S 29 '28 400w

BIRGE, EDWARD BAILEY. History of public school music in the United States. 296p il $2 Ditson

780.9 Music—Instruction and study 28-12295

From the old-time singing school to the full fledged orchestras, bands and choruses of the public schools today, the author outlines the rapid development and far-reaching improvement in music and music appreciation in the public schools of the United States.

Booklist 25:17 O '28

"Of particular interest to supervisors of public school music. It is doubtful whether there is another book representing so much study and research in music, with the exception of Louis Elson's history of music in America published several years ago." D. H. Marden

+ Portland Evening News p11 S 4 '28 250w

BIRMINGHAM, GEORGE A., pseud. See Hannay, J. O.

BIRTWISTLE, GEORGE. New quantum mechanics. 290p $5.50 Macmillan [16s Cambridge univ. press]

530.1 Quantum theory

"Concerned with development during past two years, reviewing and interpreting the achievements and speculations of the more prominent workers."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

Nation and Ath 43:186 My 12 '28 220w

N Y New Tech Bks 13:22 Ap '28

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:623 D '28

BISHOP, MORRIS. Gallery of eccentrics; or, A set of twelve originals & extravagants from Elagabalus the waggish emperor, to Mr Professor Porson, the tippling philologer. 244p il $3.50 Minton

920 Biography 28-24738

This gallery of eccentrics contains the portraits of twelve historic persons of different countries and different times who were brought to fame by their peculiarities. Contents: Elagabalus; Brusquet; Jan Baptista van Helmont; Sir Thomas Urquhart; Sir Jeffery Hudson; François-Timoléon de Choisy; Duke Mazarin; Captain Bartholomew Roberts; Bampfylde-Moore Carew; Edward Wortley Montagu, jun.; Lorenzo da Ponte; Richard Porson.

"The illustrations are priceless." Herschel Brickell

+ No Am 226:adv D '28 80w

Outlook 150:1336 D 12 '28 140w

"Mr. Bishop handles his material quite reasonably well, and succeeds in communicating something of his own enjoyment of his collected eccentrics."

+ Sat R of Lit 5:438 D 1 '28 250w

BLACK, MRS DOROTHY. Idle women. 305p $2 Lippincott

28-25632

Besides the idle women in the English colony in Rangoon who spend their time flirting with other women's husbands, there is Gay Fanshawe who is loved and admired by both men and women. Gay's husband was, when she married him, aide-de-camp to General Thundersley who had been her lover. Despite her efforts the marriage is not a great success. Ten years later the general follows her to Rangoon and from that time on Gay's life is a prolonged effort to escape her infatuation.

"The story is more serious than its easy flow would indicate, and its very simplicities reveal its cleverness."

+ Boston Transcript p6 N 10 '28 250w

"The characters have reality, and the plot—it would be more accurate to call it the progress—of the story has the tempo of life."

+ Sat R of Lit 4:410 N 24 '28 180w

BLACKWOOD, ALGERNON. Dance of death, and other tales. (Fireside lib.) 224p $2 Dial press [5s H. Jenkins]

28-26620

Six good examples of the author's range in his chosen field—the psychic and the supernatural. Contents: The dance of death; A psychical invasion; The old man of visions; The south wind; The touch of Pan; The valley of the beasts.

Booklist 25:28 O '28

"These are effective, readable tales, containing healthy moments of breath-taking suspense, ending generally on an unsettled note which leaves the reader still perplexed, but somehow satisfied. Mr. Blackwood writes smoothly, and he employs a discreet, plausible air which renders twice as effective and uncanny the ghosts at which normally we can sneer in a sophisticated fashion."

+ — Bookm 68:xxiii S '28 170w

"Mr. Blackwood writes an uncanny tale with a great deal of poetic imagination. Of these six tales it is not unlikely that the average reader will find most engrossing 'A Psychical Invasion.' One cannot, however, agree with the jacket that the stories are the 'very cream' of all Mr. Blackwood's tales. 'The Dance of Death' is, after all, rather commonplace; 'The South Wind' a sketch of atmosphere in whose six or seven pages no actual tale happens; and 'The Touch of Pan,' a story which defeats its own promising purpose as a work of art."

— + Boston Transcript p10 Ag 8 '28 450w

Sat R of Lit 4:765 Ap 14 '28 60w

Times [London] Lit Sup p976 D 22 '27 650w

BLACKWOOD, ALGERNON. Sambo and Snitch. 89p il $1.50 Appleton

27-27965

Sambo was six. One day he found a lizard in the garden and to Sambo's joy and surprise the lizard talked to him. It became his great and secret friend and led him into many adventures, which Sambo's sister Topsy was allowed to share. The engaging pictures of the story are drawn by Audrey Teago.

Bookm 66:472 D '27 50w

"A charming and enthralling thought, well suited to the talent of Algernon Blackwood."

+ New Repub 52:sup367 N 16 '27 100w

"This is a book that children are likely to remember, surely, when they see their next lizard, but most likely before and after also."

+ Sat R of Lit 4:492 D 31 '27 250w

BLAKE, GEORGE. Gettin' in society (Eng title Paper money). 298p $2 Harper

28-13165

Matthew Faed, of humble Galloway origin, at the beginning of the World war had built up a fairly prosperous engineering works on the Clyde. His business was absorbed by a big firm backed by the admiralty and money began to pour in, which upset the balance of Nellie Faed, his wife. Her pitiable attempts at gettin' in society and its effects on the four children complete the story.

Boston Transcript p6 Ag 22 '28 280w

"Mr. Blake gives the familiar situation a fresh twist or two, but his invention flags a little at the end. The novel as a whole, however, is an interesting social comedy and maintains the expectations aroused by Mr. Blake's earlier story, Young Malcolm."

+ — New Statesman 31:618 Ag 25 '28 230w

"Mr. Blake can tell a story, organize his material skillfully and draw character. He has a pawky humor and a kind of downright common sense which enable him to draw devastating pictures of snobs and social climbers." R. H.

+ N Y Evening Post p9 S 29 '28 130w

"It is a novel in the tradition of the great English masters, controlled, developing its plot from the relations of its characters and their development, well written, with touches of beauty in its descriptions of the Highlands. . . A very interesting, very well-written study of the changing social order of the years after the World War."

+ N Y Times p16 Jl 29 '28 640w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:545 N '28

"The theme is not a new one, but Mr. Blake succeeds in putting fresh life into it and in creating several characters, broadly if not farcically drawn, who raise a laugh whenever they appear. The story is not written wholly in a strain of satire, however." L. P. Hartley

+ Sat R 145:738 Je 9 '28 250w

"The novel never is quite so good as we expect it to be, and looking back over the book, once it has been finished, we find difficulty in saying just when, or how completely, it went to pieces. . . Much of 'Gettin' in Society' is no fit target for finicky criticism. Matthew Faed is the good citizen throughout the novel; he is presented to us splendidly. Nell Faed stands out as a brilliantly disagreeable characterization. . . Judged by any standards but the very highest, 'Gettin' in Society' is a competent, sound novel, and a social document of definite interest."

+ — Sat R of Lit 5:248 O 13 '28 670w

"The inseparable comedy and tragedy of real life are poignantly realized; the characters are all vital studies; and the literary style is a model of unobtrusive distinction."

+ Spec 140:806 My 26 '28 80w

"Mr. George Blake's new novel is conceived in a remarkably unaffected vein of realistic comedy. . . It is a story of keen observation and not unkindly humour, in which, moreover, a sense of larger issues is obvious enough to belie Mr. Blake's description of his tale as 'a chronicle of small beer.'"

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p448 Je 14 '28 380w

Wis Lib Bul 24:304 N '28

BLAKE, GLADYS. Doña Isabella's adventures. 223p $1.75 (5s) Appleton

28-19624

Doña Isabella is a very young lady-in-waiting to the Queen of Spain who has an excessive devotion to tales of damsels in distress and knightly rescue. To cure her of her romantic nonsense her father, whom she has not seen for many years, and his friend Don Miguel play an elaborate practical joke that succeeds in making Isabella laugh at herself. Don Miguel is no less a person than Cervantes who long after Isabella first met him wrote Don Quixote and "laughed chivalry out of fashion."

Boston Transcript p2 S 29 '28 250w

"An experienced writer of stories for girls, has here presented a pleasing semi-historical tale full of stirring incident and rich gaiety. Her characterization of the young soldier who was later to give the world the encounters of the sorrowful knight of La Mancha is particularly enjoyable."

+ Sat R of Lit 5:358 N 10 '28 250w

BLAKER, RICHARD. Scabby Dichson. 384p $2.50 Doubleday, Doran [7s 6d Hodder & S.]

28-7946

The adolescent years of a lonely English boy at school in the North of India are portrayed with skill in presenting the background, and with sympathy for the boy and his problems. The schoolmaster Matthieson, the Baker family, the native girl at Lal Kahn's, and to a lesser degree, certain of his schoolmates, have their influence on "Scabby's" development. It is Margaret Baker, however, who finds the key to his character and refuses to be shut out of his life.

"The novel is well written, a little too vague perhaps, a little too subtle at times, but interesting both as a story and as a psychological study." L. M. Field

+ — Bookm 67:114 Mr '28 160w

"As a book it is in its way a little classic, presenting a short futile life in all its human importance. The first part is written with all the preoccupation and accuracy of the small boy himself, the second with all the tremendous lyricism of adolescence, the end with the confusion of a fever-stricken man in a flood. Perhaps it is too confused. That seems the only criticism, except the unavoidable fact that only readers with Scabby's own repugnance for what people can do to them will sense what the book is about." Margery Mansfield

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p18 Ap 22 '28 730w

Cleveland Open Shelf p65 My '28

"One is able to overlook the steady volley of English slang, the cut-and-driedness of English public school ideals and the occasional absurdity of English schoolboy hobbies, so refreshing and individual is Scabby himself, and so likable are the few people who become his friends. Unfortunately, however, all the charm goes out of the story before half of it is finished, and it follows a very uninteresting road thereafter."

+ — N Y Times p9 F 12 '28 360w

"Mr. Blaker has created in this book a character almost as enthralling as any of Dickens's famous schoolboys. The book reveals a deep understanding of the psychology of boyhood." Kathleen Kelemen

+ Outlook 149:276 Je 13 '28 150w

Times [London] Lit Sup p841 N 17 '27 140w

BLANCHARD, PHYLLIS MARY. Child and society; an introd. to the social psychology of the child. (Longmans' social science ser.) 369p $2.25 (10s 6d) Longmans

136.7 Child study. Social psychology 28-7700

"A text treating of the social experiences of the child, viewing him in relation to all the forces that contribute to his socialization—the home, the school, religion, reading, motion pictures, etc. The latter part of the book deals with the deviations from the social norm that result in undesirable and delinquent behavior." —Wis Lib Bul

---

Booklist 24:344 Je '28

"The child as an individual scarcely appears, but the book points a finger at hundreds of facts and problems and calls them by name. Its value consists in its suggestions for further study, and in its organization of a wide scope of material within the compass of a small volume."

Bookm 68:xxxviii O '28 60w

"A valuable contribution to the literature of child development, dealing authoritatively with the socialization of the child, a phase too little understood. Especially useful are chapters on the psychology of adolescence and on its social significance. An appendix gives topics for study and a list of selected references. An author index as well as a complete subject index adds to the convenience of the book."

J Home Econ 20:509 Jl '28 60w

St Louis 26:179 Je '28

Times [London] Lit Sup p295 Ap 19 '28 40w

Wis Lib Bul 24:218 Jl '28

BLAND, EDITH (NESBIT) (MRS HUBERT BLAND). Bastable children; with a preface by Christopher Morley. 944p il $3 Coward-McCann

Three full length books for children by a favorite English author are bound together in one fat volume which deals with the amusing adventures of the six delightful Bastable children. The three titles are The treasure seekers, The would-be-goods, The new treasure seekers. The original illustrations are reprinted.

Reviewed by B. R. Redman

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 N 4 '28 250w

"It is devoutly hoped that the present book will send every one in search of all Nesbit books. The thraldom can not be withstood any more than it can be explained in so many critical words and to prove by quoting would be to to quote almost every story." Donald Douglas

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p8 N 4 '28 1000w

" 'E. Nesbit' has been a name to conjure with through several generations, both here and in England. At last an Amercian publisher has produced a great plum-cake of a book of three of her best long narratives."

+ Sat R of Lit 5:355 N 10 '28 350w

BLANDING, DON. Vagabond's house. 114p il [2] $2 Dodd

811 28-24850

Some of these verses from the Vagabond's house in Hawaii are new; others are reprinted from previous collections. The author has also made the illustrations, in silhouette.

"It is to be deplored that the author has stooped to cheap rhymes, easy repetition and popular-tune meters. But it is even more noteworthy that he has a store of joyous and rollicking retrospections and a memory list of names of places that are a tingle in the ear." M. E. M.

+ — Boston Transcript p2 D 5 '28 200w

"The author, of Hawaii, is rather a better illustrator of his own work (his decorations are fairly good) than he is a writer, though he does convey the glamour of far islands in some of his verse, in a Robert W. Service manner, and his light rhymes are technically clever. He strums in a happy-go-lucky strain and purveys local color."

— + Sat R of Lit 5:447 D 1 '28 70w

BLASCO IBANEZ, VICENTE. Intruder (El intruso); auth. tr. from the Spanish by Mrs W. A. Gillespie. 338p $2.50 Dutton

28-30263

The intruder of the title is the power of the Jesuits in a mining district in Biscay in northern Spain. Sanchez Morueta, wealthy mine owner, altho warned by his cousin Dr Aresti, is pursued by the Jesuits because of his wealth. The book culminates in a terrific scene between the starving miners and the devotees of the Virgin of Begoña under the leadership of the priests.

"There is something to be said for the novel as a revelation of the Basque character, and of the dislike for the Spaniards felt by the inhabitants of that interesting province. The translation is hardly more than pedestrian, and would have been greatly improved by judicious editing here and there." Herschel Brickell

— + Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p9 D 23 '28 580w

" 'The Intruder' is written in a vein of bitterness, and because of its daring propaganda is not wholly convincing."

Boston Transcript p7 N 28 '28 250w

"Frankly a novel of propaganda. Blasco Ibáñez's latest book has the defects all but inherent in its type."

N Y Times p7 N 25 '28 630w

BLASCO IBANEZ, VICENTE. Reeds and mud (Cañas y barro); tr. from the Spanish by Isaac Goldberg. 289p $2.50 Dutton

28-9158

In the reeds and mud of the marshland near Valencia scattered groups of villagers have for generations made their scant livelihood by hunting and fishing. Their lives are as sordid as their environment. The story—an early one of the author's—tells of the childhood and youth of Tonet, his slow-developing passion for Neleta, and the crime that came from it.

Reviewed by F. H. Martens

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p14 My 13 '28 550w

BLASCO IBANEZ, VICENTE—Continued

"There is a swampy allurement about it. It is the natural setting for a sordid tragedy which is relieved because its background is poetic and strange." R. B. C.

Boston Transcript p3 Ap 21 '28 600w

"The later works of this recent Spanish novelist, when compared with Reeds and Mud, appear trivial and unconvincing."

+ Living Age 334:844 My 1 '28 150w

N Y Times p14 Ap 1 '28 620w

"Readers who enjoyed some of the first Ibanez books which were translated into English will find in 'Reeds and Mud' a novel of sufficient artistic merit and of dramatic appeal to compensate for the lesser work of this writer which have of late been published."

+ Springf'd Republican p7f My 6 '28 480w

BLEI, FRANZ. Fascinating women, sacred & profane; tr. by S. Guy Endore. 225p il $3 Simon & Schuster

920.7 Woman—Biography 28-22543

"A group of character sketches, some of them biographical essays, some fictionalized, of a score of women, great or strange or both, whose lives were important foot-notes to history. The first lady selected is the Empress Theodora, the last Mata Hari."—Outlook

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p41 S 30 '28 650w

"The author has done a notable piece of work. His knowledge of the historical factor is obvious and adds the important element of reality to the work. The translation is on the whole excellent, although in isolated spots the reader will not approve it entirely."

+ Boston Transcript p2 O 10 '28 200w

"Most will agree, apart from personal interest, that the essays on Saint Theresa, Liselotte of the Palatine and Christina of Sweden are the best. Some of the others are insignificant, and some tawdry, but the whole makes entertaining and, to those somewhat deeply interested in history, provocative reading. Franz Blei has a biting wit but considerable humanity with it. Without having seen the original it is perhaps unfair to criticize the translation which is journalistic and commonplace in style."

+ — Outlook 150:995 O 17 '28 140w

BLISS, DOUGLAS PERCY. History of wood-engraving. 263p il $10 Dutton

761 Wood engraving. Illustrated books 28-17613

A delightfully written history and critique of the art of wood engraving, illustrated from excellent reproductions of the wood-engraver's art from earliest to latest times.

Booklist 25:109 D '28

"This is a book that one can recommend from several points of view. The illustrations are admirably chosen. . . . The author's keen interest in his subject and his personal approach to it insure a thoroughly readable style throughout the book." Walter Pach

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p7 N 25 '28 700w

"The title of this book is hardly justified, since it consists of a series of essays rather than tells a story. Mr. Bliss, himself a notable engraver on wood, is decided in his opinions, and makes many valuable remarks which might have been expanded into essays by themselves. The illustrations, particularly in the later chapters dealing with the moderns, are finely illuminating."

+ — Nation 128:24 Ja 2 '29 110w

"The material is concise, and yet complete within the range of a two-hundred-and-fifty-page book, and the many and well chosen illustrations are especially worthy of mention. The very personal interest, be it humorous or serious, which the author manifests in the works which he criticizes, makes the book worth-while reading for the layman as well as for the student of wood-engraving." Ethel Hahn

+ New Repub 56:307 O 31 '28 620w

"As an introduction, and to awaken interest in this charming art, the book deserves generous praise. Its omissions and defects are more or less inherent in its very plan. In treating woodcuts one can hardly overstress book-illustration, yet it is unfortunate to omit the large single sheets, especially the sheets from Titian's designs with their notable freedom of execution."

+ — Sat R of Lit 5:559 D 29 '28 260w

"A book so delectable in its matter and so radiant in its spirit that one would fain linger over it with many detailed praises. . . The book is superbly illustrated, and some of the modern engravings have certainly not lost the incisive attack of the old. Every page of this history exacts attention."

+ Spec 141:223 Ag 18 '28 150w

"His chapters on Dürer and Bewick have the right enthusiasm; but it is in his investigation of byways of the subject that he makes the strongest claim upon our gratitude and the examples he reproduces would alone make the book worth getting. Mr. Bliss has the courage to be critical of his own contemporaries, but what he says about them strikes us as being well considered."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p548 Jl 26 '28 780w

BLOCH, EUGENE. Thermionic phenomena; tr. by J. R. Clarke. 145p $2.50 Dutton [7s 6d Methuen]

541.2 Thermionic phenomena. Electrons. Ions [28-5777]

This translation from the French is a highly technical account of what is known concerning the emission of electricity from heated bodies.

"This subject is still developing with great rapidity; there are many experiments that must be made, and the next few years will undoubtedly bring further important results. M. Bloch's summary of the work already accomplished is meant for special students; it is not by any means what could be called 'a popular exposition'; but to anyone who is interested intelligently in the finesse of electrical science it is extremely interesting. It is admirably translated." N. H. D.

+ Boston Transcript p4 F 18 '28 380w

"On the whole, the reader will be very much disappointed if he expects to find in this volume an up-to-date discussion of the subject. It is at least six years behind the times." Saul Dushman

— Ind & Eng Chem 20:337 Mr '28 180w

Reviewed by W. D. Bancroft

J Phys Chem 32:1116 Jl '28 1000w

BLOEM, WALTER S. Son of his country; an imaginative novel dealing with George Washington's youth; tr. by Frederick H. Martens. 449p $2.50 Harper

Washington, George—Fiction 28-25553

A German author has written this romanticized story of George Washington's youth which deals largely with his hopeless love for Sally Fairfax and ends with his marriage to Martha Custis. The translation from the German has been made by Frederick H. Martens.

"Mr. Bloem has mastered not merely the technical equipment for his task, but he has gone beyond that and saturated himself in the spirit of those pioneer days. Occasionally he leans too heavily upon the fabric of sentimentality, but these moments are balanced by episodes of stirring reality."

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p25 D 9 '28 160w

"No American could have written this novel about George Washington. The weight of tradition would always intervene, one way or the other. So it has remained for a foreigner, unhampered by any consciousness of either the axe of the cherry tree or the axe of the debunker, and equipped with insight and craftsmanship, to accomplish it. The result is an excellent historical novel on an absorbing theme. . . Subtly executed, conceived with brilliant imaginativeness and understanding."

+ N Y Times p6 N 11 '28 650w

BLOM, ERIC. Limitations of music; a study in aesthetics. 172p $2.40 (6s) Macmillan

780.1 Music—Philosophy and esthetics

"This 'study in æsthetics' sets out from the statement of a principle which is self-evident in relation to craftsmanship but needs to be reasoned in its application to the fine arts. Mr. Blom has given it Exposition, Development and Recapitulation, after the manner of Sonata Form, in order to test its applicability to music. . . Mr. Blom's contention is that the artist, and more especially the composer of music, never has a new piece of cloth to cut from; his perfection depends not only on the quality of his thought 'but no less on his ability to subordinate his invention to certain limitations.' "—Times [London] Lit Sup

Reviewed by P: Bowdoin
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p22 O 21 '28 500w

"If we cannot swallow Mr. Blom's thesis whole nor accept his admittedly arbitrary award of marks for various kinds of good conduct to the several composers discussed, there is no music-lover who will not gain some profit and entertainment from his book. His judgment of contemporary composers is conspicuously sane and broadminded, while his approach to the great masters is nearly always along fresh paths of his own making."
+ Sat R 146:85 Jl 21 '28 620w

"Mozart is Mr. Blom's principal subject. In the Exposition he makes clear his doctrine of limitations by a close examination of Mozart's style, showing how he turned to account not only the limitations of current fashion and those of his musical tools (instruments and voices, but even his own personal defects. The Exposition is a valuable criticism of Mozart, apart from its contribution to the wider argument."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p499 Jl 5 '28 480w

BLUNDEN, EDMUND CHARLES. Retreat. 60p $1.75 Doubleday, Doran [6s Cobden Sanderson]

821 28-23334

Poems filled with the quiet joy of the English countryside, by the author to whom was awarded the Hawthornden prize in 1922.

Booklist 25:64 N '28

"Although technically correct, and even melodious, his verse exhibits nothing to startle or waylay. Limpid, classical, sweet and trivial —if that is what you like, you will like this."
+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p30 N 25 '28 100w

+ Boston Transcript p3 O 20 '28 320w

"Mr. Blunden's new poems frankly disconcerted me. At first sight it seems as though his muse had turned scholar and lost her native voice; as though too much reading had definitely choked the sources of his inspiration. But it is as well to remember that Mr. Blunden is a serious poet, and that his experiments, if he sees fit to make them, cannot thus lightly be dismissed." V. Sackville-West
— + Nation and Ath 43:468 Jl 7 '28 280w

"Mr. Blunden's work, we sometimes suspect, though within its limits always scrupulously honest, entirely lacking in any kind of vulgarity or charlatan taint, too well deserves such a title as Retreat. He meditates, pursues exquisite divagations. Behind a screen of pastoral fancies, he avoids the necessity of direct poetic statement."
— + New Statesman 31:456 Jl 14 '28 650w

"The choice of words is deft, the lines have been carefully polished, but one longs in vain for some major note to break the genteel, restrained mold. In this age a poet like Mr. Blunden is an anachronism." R. H.
N Y Evening Post p5 S 22 '28 100w

"In 'Retreat' Mr. Blunden tells us that he has set aside 'several verses on Japanese topics and impulses for separate or subsequent presentation.' This explanation, set out with characteristic diffidence, lightens a faint sense of disappointment due not to the quality of his verse, which is as good as ever, but to its comparatively restricted scope." Humbert Wolfe
+ — Sat R 146:19 Jl 7 '28 200w

"It is Mr. Blunden's very awareness of his limitations that keeps his eyes fixed on the familiar landscape. Never spectacular, not often arresting, his poetry rests on its appointed level—and remains poetry. Within the tradition Mr. Blunden is secure." L. Untermeyer
Sat R of Lit 5:291 O 27 '28 300w

"Mr. Blunden is essentially honest in his use of words: every verse he writes shows the mind of a poet wrestling to get at the exact truth of what is seen. This is an admirable quality. But it is a pity when, as in some of these poems, his preoccupation with detail coupled with the evident fear of losing what once was his, destroys the melody and makes the sense difficult."
— + Spec 140:915 Je 16 '28 250w

"One must admit that he appears at times to play with counters rather than with symbols, and to enjoy the intricacy of his craft for its own sake. But it is not, in general, to be laid in blame at Mr. Blunden's door that he makes us work for our pleasure. He brings substantial gifts and has the right to expect us to meet him half way. He has in him the savour by which our literature has always lived, and is one of a few to whom we gratefully entrust its future."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p409 My 31 '28 650w

BLUNT, ALFRED WALTER FRANK. Israel in world history. (World's manuals) 127p il $1 Oxford

933 Jews—History 27-27971

A brief history of the Semitic peoples from the time of the early Babylonian empire to the beginning of the Christian era.

Booklist 24:357 Je '28

"Some minor defects do not detract seriously from the value of this excellent handbook, which may be confidently recommended to those who wish to locate Israel within the great framework of international affairs which so largely determined her destiny." F. G. Ward
+ — J Religion 8:624 O '28 350w

BOAS, FRANZ. Primitive art. (Inst. for comparative research in human culture) 375p il $7.75; pa $6.75 Harvard univ. press

571.7 Art, Primitive. Design, Decorative

"The book falls into three parts. The first part, after some preliminary historical and theoretical considerations deals with the formal elements in art, representative art, symbolism and style. The second part is wholly devoted to an elaborate discussion of the art of the Northwest coast of North America, to the study of which the author has given so much talent and attention for over thirty years. Part three deals with primitive literature, music and dance."—Bookm

"Dr. Boas has provided the soundest, most penetrating, and probably most comprehensive work. . . What Dr. Boas has done in all his work is to analyze unremittingly, to examine new possibilities of explanation, to balance these one against another, to limit each with the most unsparing critical rigor. More intensively perhaps than any other student, certainly over a wider range of human phenomena, he has known how to control a highly fertile intellectual imagination by unflinching self-criticism, and has thereby led the way in the establishing of anthropology, so far as without experiment it can be a science, among the brotherhood of sciences. Primitive Art exemplifies these qualities at their purest; its comprehensive range renders it monumental." A. L. Kroeber

BOAS, FRANZ—Continued
+ Am Anthropol 31:138 Ja '29 1050w

" 'Primitive Art' fills a long felt want. In detail of treatment, in comprehensiveness, in methodological rigor, finally, the book stands unique." Alexander Goldenweiser
+ Bookm 67:583 Jl '28 780w

"For delight in pictures, or in pretty poetic phrasings, embroideries and speculations, this is not the book. It is an honest, hard piece of work, with the kind of material in it to satisfy a craftsman. There is no food for nostalgia, no fizz for the dilettante. Because it is shaped to its subject, and its subject is the sincere conscientious product of untheoried artists, it is healthy bread to chew." Anita Brenner
+ Nation 126:460 Ap 18 '28 680w

Reviewed by Walter Gutman
New Repub 56:53 Ag 29 '28 520w

"It is impossible within ordinary reviewing space to list all the practical excellencies of Dr. Boas's book. Its omissions are at any rate such as will make for simplification without at the same time, setting up any false measures of relative value. Of the studies of literary form, inadequate as they are, it can be readily admitted that nothing has been said which a more comprehensive inquiry will compel resaying." Mary Austin
+ — Sat R of Lit 4:966 Je 16 '28 730w

BOAS, FREDERICK SAMUEL. Introduction to the reading of Shakespeare. (World's manuals) 112p il $1 (2s 6d) Oxford

822.33 Shakespeare, William—Study

The author gives the chronology and sources of Shakespeare's plays, pictures the conditions under which Shakespeare worked, and the stage of his day. The two last chapters are "Shakespeare through three centuries," and "Shakespeare to-day."

Booklist 24:275 Ap '28

"His criticism is sound, and though he repeats most of the accepted judgments, he never falls into the parrot admiration of a mere scholar. His book is written with common-sense, and it is always interesting—two qualities which are essential in a book of this kind, and are rarely found."
+ New Statesman 30:56 O 22 '27 180w

"An authoritative and scholarly work in simple style."
+ No Am 225:adv Ja '28 20w

Reviewed by D. M Morton
Theatre Arts Mo 12:375 My '28 80w

"Mr. Boas's 'Introduction' appears likely to render a wide service in informing readers quickly yet soundly, and awakening them to the pleasure of a really watchful reading of Shakespeare's text with its endless wealth of almost concealed significances."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p745 O 20 '27 100w

Wis Lib Bul 24:88 Mr '28

BOAS, GEORGE. Never go back: a novel without a plot. 294p $2.50 Harper

28-21971

In his early days as instructor at Oralia university Harper passed gradually from casual acquaintance into close friendship with Violet Humphreys and John Tillingstone. At that time his two friends did not care for each other. The war came and Harper enlisted. He returned to John and Violet expecting to resume the old relationshhip with them, but found that for them, no less than for himself, time had not stood still.

"There is in Mr. Boas's first novel all the form and care and assurance that one could wish to find, and there's a good idea, too. But throughout the book there is a vague repression, the sort of restraint that saps the strength from each situation. . . Harper in college is an excellent study. Harper the soldier is unconvincing. Harper in the last few chapters is almost nothing at all."
— + Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p43 S 30 '28 220w

Boston Transcript p6 O 20 '28 350w

" 'Never Go Back' is an entertaining and, barring the dismally didactic end, sustained story of mutability in friendship and other human relations. It is, however, not an absorbing narrative and not an important piece of work. Its value lies chiefly in its freshness, its original turns of thought and expression and its lightness of touch."
+ — N Y Times p7 O 7 '28 530w

"As a means of presenting fiction, the method, not here employed for the first time, is difficult, and Mr. Boas's success in using it discloses unmistakable technical skill."
+ Springf'd Republican p7e N 11 '28 170w

BOBER, MANDELL MORTON. Karl Marx's interpretation of history. (Harvard economic studies) 370p $3.50 Harvard univ. press [16s Milford]

335 Marx, Karl. History—Philosophy

27-24309

"Besides the compact and well-written summary [of the philosophy of Marx and Engels], there is a running fire of criticism, followed at the end by five admirably-thought-out chapters of appraisal. The documentation is full and explicit, as a guide to an intricate controversial literature needs to be. Only the works consulted are found in the bibliography, which is excellent; and the absence of several familiar titles is explained by the basis of selection. Finally, there is an adequate index." —Pol Sci Q

"With a range and profundity of investigation worthy of a veritable disciple, Professor Bober has in the first two-thirds of this book provided an analysis and summation of Marxism worthy to rank with the best studies of the subject. . . The competence thus shown by the author in his preliminary work leads the receiver to regret that equal time and effort was not devoted to the critical part of the job; so that the readers might have known what is the best that could be done by a masterly opponent of the Marxian system. As things stand, however, it must be said that there is nothing distinctive about Professor Bober's criticism of the Marxian interpretation." A. W. Calhoun
+ — Am Econ R 18:275 Je '28 600w

"In this book Dr. Bober has placed students of the social sciences under a very definite obligation." F. J. T.
+ Am Hist R 34:129 O '28 560w

Am J Soc 34:410 S '28 130w

Boston Transcript p4 D 28 '27 500w

"Dr. Bober has done a magnificent job of arranging the social philosophy of Marx and Engels around their materialistic conception of history. He has come very near to packing the whole substance of their doctrine, spread in the original over more thousands of pages than anybody but a specialist has time to read, into a single volume of moderate size." M. M. Knight
+ Pol Sci Q 43:299 Je '28 850w

"For those who have not read the originals—'Capital,' the 'Manifesto,' etc.—Dr Bober's book will serve as an excellent introduction, for he has managed unusually well to give the interpretations of Marx and Engels of their own philosophy without distortion or misrepresentation. His criticisms will prove suggestive to new readers and old."
+ Springf'd Republican p5f Ag 12 '28 170w

"A lucid and readable paraphase of the Communist classic. Mr. Bober resists all temptation to improve on his original except in the matters of clearness and brevity." R. W. Bruère
+ Survey 60:182 My '28 130w

"An excellent piece of academic criticism."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p132 F 23 '28 310w

"Marxian and capitalist alike will find this critical study of value. Even the non-Marxian may incline to the view that Bober underestimates the moving power of Marx in the lives of men."
+ World Tomorrow 12:522 D '28 60w

BODENHEIM, MAXWELL. Georgie May. 272p $2 Boni & Liveright
28-15790

"Georgie May, Mr. Bodenheim's Mississippi River liebchen, is not a good girl gone wrong. She started her career with a betrayal by a boy she loved, and after that it was just one man after another. Unlike some of her colleagues, she consistently declined to turn over her wages of sin to gentlemen who subsisted on this species of revenue, and she had plenty of fighting spirit, but she was in the game, and if she wasn't proud of it, at least she didn't bother about trying to get out."—N Y Evening Post

---

"In spots his novel ceases to be a novel and becomes an untempered, if justified, social diatribe. . . In the character of Georgie May, the prostitute whose story serves for a test case, the author has done much to redeem himself as an artist. Her tragic figure stands forth with cruel clarity, drawn with ugly, sympathetic lines."
+ — Bookm 68:xviii S '28 150w

"Maxwell Bodenheim has made in this novel a noble if somewhat fruitless sacrifice of his art for his principles. The expressions of unrestrained sympathy and rage of the author constantly interrupt the flow of the story and lower it, now to a sentimental chronicle, now to an adventure in muck-raking. Had he become less passionately identified with his cause he might, by the sheer power of his sordid story, have aroused active indignation against the conditions he deplores."
— + Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p18 O 28 '28 300w

"A badly written novel, adrip with sentimental outpourings; but worth reading for a few vivid and brutal pictures of small-town coke dens and county jails."
— + Nation 127:20 Jl 4 '28 70w

"Here is Mr. Bodenheim's little weakness. He cannot leave bad enough alone. If he had been content with unfolding his tale he would have had a good one—a disagreeable but interesting and, I take it, authentic biography of a woman who was flesh-ridden. One might overlook his trick of interpolating advice to Georgie May, but his assaults on conventional hypocrisy are so hackneyed as to be irritating." R. A. Simon
+ — N Y Evening Post p8 Je 30 '28 580w

"The book is half novel, half vehicle for Mr Bodenheim's very inclusive assortment of prejudices. Unfortunately, Mr. Bodenheim is enamoured of a strange, so-called Southern dialect that sounds like a white man's imitation of a minstrel show soliloquy, and he tells most of his story in this gibberish."
— N Y Times p8 Je 10 '28 530w

"A strikingly honest and moving piece of work. Mr. Bodenheim might have been sociological if he had chosen—most American novelists are when they touch this particular problem—but he has resisted the temptation, and the result is good. Georgie May is a singularly living character, neither better nor worse than she and her sisters are likely to be." Herschel Brickell
+ No Am 226:adv Ag '28 150w

"Her story is certainly sordid and not very interesting. But it offers Maxwell Bodenheim opportunity to describe with irony and pity the daily life, the hard-boiled philosophy, and the inherent humanity of her type. He is a poet, and his poetry crops out at unexpected times. And he jumbles poetry, meditation, diatribe, narrative, and author's soliloquy into a strong mixture. He is a passionate defender of the underdog, a scorner of respectability and orderliness. But his attitude of ironic aloofness destroys the poignant tragedy of his story."
— Outlook 149:434 Jl 11 '28 160w

"It is not an agreeable story, but it is told honestly enough. Much of it is written in a Southern dialect that can hardly be said to be handled in a masterly way. . . 'Georgie May' is what they call 'unsparing realism.' But the characters have been studied at first hand; and that gives it weight as a document. Technically considered, it is not a first-rate novel but it preserves an integrity greater than that of most second-raters." W: R. Benét
Sat R of Lit 5:52 Ag 18 '28 330w
Springf'd Republican p7f Jl 15 '28 260w

BODENHEIM, MAXWELL. King of Spain. 63p $2 Boni & Liveright
811 28-9780

One narrative poem and several shorter poems in free verse and rhyme are reprinted here with occasional footnotes in which the poet jibes at his critics.

"Despite the disconcerting notes above and below some of the poems, the poems are good—brittle and glittering—and reveal that their author continues to write unhackneyed verses vibrant with imagery."
+ Bookm 67:xxiv Je '28 220w
Boston Transcript p5 My 19 '28 330w

"Mr. Bodenheim's new volume has all of his old merits and a proportionate share of his only defect—monotony."
+ — Nation 127:143 Ag 8 '28 60w

"In the title poem is a narrative peculiarly devoid of invention and motivation. The inevitableness of good writing is absent. . . Such poems as 'The Crucifixion,' however, afford chiaroscuro glimpses of a poet both passionate and compassionate." A. K. Laing
— + N Y Evening Post p8 Jl 7 '28 350w

Reviewed by Percy Hutchison
N Y Times p12 Ap 29 '28 320w

"In those days [1918], Mr. Bodenheim appeared to be a precurser of a brighter, more resourceful movement in American verse. But now—when we no longer grow as hysterical in praise or blame of free verse as such but apply standards to it; when we have grown impatient with that shirking of the difficulties of communication that used to pass for the 'freedom' of self-expression; when the Bohemian seems as undeveloped as the Rotarian—the reputation of Mr. Bodenheim diminishes under the changed light." G. B. Munson
N Y World p8m My 20 '28 400w

"The title poem of Maxwell Bodenheim's new book of verse pleases me better than much of his poetry that I have read. It is extremely well handled. . . The rest of these new poems are not so good." W: R. Benét
+ — Sat R of Lit 5:52 Ag 18 '28 400w

BOGARDUS, EMORY STEPHEN. History of social thought. 2d ed 668p $4 Miller, J.R.
309 Sociology—History

In its second edition, this book has been thoroughly revised and the addition of recent developments in social thought has almost doubled the volume in size.

"Professor Bogardus' History of Social Thought is certainly the best textbook on the subject published in the English language; for it is the only one, if we except Lichtenberger's Development of Social Theory, which is after all a different sort of thing, being composed almost entirely of studies of a relatively small number of selected writers. It will be a matter of no little satisfaction to those who have courses in this field to teach, accordingly, that Bogardus has revised and greatly enlarged his book. The new edition is a very attractive volume, pleasing in format, and ably selected and organized as to content." F. N. House
+ Am J Soc 34:231 Jl '28 280w
Booklist 24:410 Jl '28

BOGOSLOVSKY, BORIS BASIL. Technique of controversy; principles of dynamic logic. (Int. lib. of psychology, philosophy and scientific method) 266p $4 Harcourt [12s 6d K. Paul]

160 Logic. Reasoning 28-12184

The book is a "continuous effort to work out practical devices for the solutions of the concrete problems which confront us in actual everyday thinking" to reveal a method that may be applied to all intelligent inquiries.

"Most efficiently, and practically for the first time so far as any comprehensive treatment of the theme is concerned, Dr. Bogoslovsky here sets forth the methods and fallacies of modern reasoning. It should be added that the book is strongly endorsed by Professor John Dewey, liberal quotations from whose writings appear throughout the volume, as well as in the appendix at its close."

+ Boston Transcript p2 Je 9 '28 680w

"A delightfully earnest and cultivated presentation." M. J. Adler

+ Nation 127:250 S 12 '28 800w

Sat R 146:186 Ag 11 '28 600w

BOJER, JOHAN. New temple; tr. from the Norwegian by C. Archer. 341p $2.50 Century [7s 6d Hodder & S.]

28-22464

Louise and Lorentz had never seen their parents. As small children they had been adopted by Fru Alme and taken to live on her rich farmstead. On her death, Lorentz, who greatly disappointed the good old lady by turning Communist at college, received only enough to finish his studies; all the rest of the estate was willed to Louise. Brother and sister were divided for the first time. But the breach was healed by Louise's decision to find the parents they had never seen. From this simple, courageous old couple, Lorentz gathered the inspiration to devote his life to the ministry, and to the building of a new temple of spiritual service.

For biographical sketch of Johan Bojer see Wilson Bulletin 3:420 Ja '29

Booklist 25:119 D '28

Reviewed by Eugene Lohrke

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p8 D 23 '28 650w

"Johan Bojer writes in the sharp, simple, staccato style. It is effective enough. But somehow the total effect does not seem to be very powerful. At the end no great distance seems to have been gained, nor yet anything definitely established except the family reunion. At least the author is sympathetic with his own characters; and in an almost elementary style he does bring out a few fundamental truths, he does present some definite ideas."

— + Boston Transcript p3 N 3 '28 250w

"Johan Bojer tells a story as though he were talking to you in a low, modulated tone. The method is deceptive. You think this is all very simple. You may even call it stark, unadorned. Then you see that it is a complicated art of elimination, a simplicity created by choosing only the significant phrase and scene, and that is why this story leaves you with the impression that you have known the characters before, and yet never realized that so much lay behind what appeared on the surface of their lives. It is a superb evocation of the universal out of the particular."

+ N Y Times p7 O 14 '28 600w

"The whole book, with its easy flow of narrative, is full of charm like the smiling and flowery country of sun and snow which it reveals." R. A. Taylor

Spec 141:711 N 10 '28 400w

Times [London] Lit Sup p829 N 8 '28 450w

Wis Lib Bul 24:305 N '28

BOK, EDWARD WILLIAM. Perhaps I am. 386p $3 Scribner

818 28-6840

Pages from the experiences abroad and at home of a business man who, inspired by Edward Bok's example, retired while there was still time to loaf and invite his soul, and who persuaded Mr Bok to rewrite for him the book of anecdotes and philosophic musings gathered during the first year of leisure.

"It is quite the sort of thing that Mr. Bok's humorous public will relish, with its easy mixture of sense and sentiment, of anecdote and platitude. There is even a chapter filled with examples of the limerick—evidently one of the things which the author has found time to enjoy."

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p20 Mr 25 '28 200w

Boston Transcript p2 My 9 '28 250w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:289 My '28

"Save for Mrs. Grundy and a turtle called Tom there is a great deal of reading for very little of amusement or instruction in this volume."

— Spec 140:684 My 5 '28 200w

"Perhaps Mr Bok will not be chagrined if he is held responsible for the amiable but rather mediocre anecdotes and observations which fill its pages. Perhaps he will not even object to being identified with the 'successful merchant' who was inspired to retire by reading Mr Bok's 'Twice Thirty.' Mr Bok has not been inept in merchandizing art."

Springf'd Republican p10 Mr 10 '28 1050w

Wis Lib Bul 24:125 Ap '28

BOND, MRS CARRIE (JACOBS). Roads of melody. 223p $2 Appleton

B or 92 Musicians—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 27-24101

" 'Human interest' is the large appeal made by this story of struggle and poverty during the years in which a young widow attempts to provide for herself and son through publication of her songs. Her difficulties are occasionally lessened by such celebrities as Jessie Bartlett Davis, and Elbert Hubbard, but fame never really comes until the appearance of the famous End of a perfect day."—Wis Lib Bul

---

Booklist 24:279 Ap '28

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p25 Ap 1 '28 100w

"As naïve and simply expressed as her songs, Mrs. Bond's autobiography has also their quality of direct and moving appeal. The story is told with the utmost simplicity and with an engaging frankness that disarms critical purpose; but also one reads it with a feeling that is almost a sense of awe at the indomitable soul that refused to give up, that faced appalling odds with a brave front, that toiled through what must have seemed endless discouragements, labors, failures, ill-luck, poverty, with unflagging courage, and finally won through by dint of not knowing when it was beaten."

+ N Y Times p32 D 11 '27 380w

"As a study in pleasure and confidence in the worth of personal achievement the book is probably unequalled; while for those who enjoy American sentimentality in its most unbridled form it is highly to be recommended."

Times [London] Lit Sup p98 F 9 '28 130w

"The biography is told simply and intimately, but with a large share of the sentimental."

Wis Lib Bul 24:53 F '28

BONNE, MRS JOSEPHINE. Continental cook book; tr. by Edna L. Sherman. 428p $3 Minton

641.5 Cookery, European 28-26441

A thousand and one recipes from the continent, covering every course. The book is a translation from the German.

Booklist 24:388 Jl '28

"These recipes are useful, practical and easy to follow. The foremost feature to American readers is the unusualness of many of the dishes described." Lettie Gay

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p15 Jl 29 '28 450w

Boston Transcript p7 My 19 '28 180w

"Some of the recipes call for materials not easily obtained everywhere in this country and some demand somewhat elaborate and time-consuming processes, but many are quite simple and would help vary the everyday menu without adding to the time or money spent. The figured oilcloth cover is gay and practical."

+ J Home Econ 20:444 Je '28 60w

"The American housewife will need to remember that these are all Continental dishes, made in accordance with European, or, more specifically, Germanic tastes. It is also to be noted that, artistic and sophisticated and highly successful though Mrs. Bonné's cooking is, it is not scientific cooking."

N Y Times p21 Je 17 '28 450w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:387 Jl '28

BONNER, MARY GRAHAM (MRS EUGENE E. EARLY). Miss Angelina Adorable. 128p il $1.50 Bradley

Miss Angelina Adorable was the most beautiful doll in the whole world. Her mother Ada was a little girl six years old. They decided to move to a beautiful place at the edge of the woods and take all their friends with them. It was quite an adventure, and the pictures show how much they enjoyed it.

"Little girls of 5 or 6 or 7 years, and doubtless little boys of similar ages, since at that early period literary taste knows no sex, will think Miss Bonner's new story very charming indeed. Miss Bonner has caught and permeated her little story with the spirit of childhood."

+ N Y Times p20 Ag 19 '28 160w

Springf'd Republican p7e D 16 '28 80w

BONSELS, WALDEMAR. Indian journey. 273p il $4 Boni

915.4 India—Description and travel 28-18648

"Mr. Bonsels writes of what he saw in India in a way that makes you feel that you, too, are spending long days and hideous nights in a ramshackle bungalow. This is an unusual book on India, for Mr. Bonsels did not go to criticize or rule; he feels on his shoulders no part of the White Man's Burden. He accepted and was absorbed into the life of India as he found it; he can write of the animals and people, with rhythmic prose that is magically poetic. The reader is left feeling that he has seen India 'first hand from nature,' and that, more than many more serious tomes, this has penetrated her sacred essence."—Ind

Booklist 25:66 N '28

"It is not only a very entertaining account of a trip through remoter sections of Indian jungle and mountain; it is a good book in itself." T. S. Matthews

+ Bookm 68:92 S '28 350w

"His work is somewhat akin to Keyserling's, in that both see with the philosophic eye. But Keyserling is a student, solemnly seeking and investigating, while Bonsels merely lets fancies, hypotheses and conclusions flow through his mind; following no definite path toward any particular goal, but pausing to meditate with equal interest upon a mongoose or a Yogi, or the charms of a daughter of joy. . . Such is the journey, related discursively, in leisurely fashion; now with an illuminating flash of philosophy, now with some bit of deft characterization, always with a sense of beauty, and often with the quaint flavor with which such early voyagers as Purchas, Priestly, Martens, Hakluyt, Cook and Barents were accustomed to describe the lands of their explorations." Blair Niles

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p1 Jl 8 '28 1250w

"Mr. Bonsels' verbal pictures recreate the tropical color of the Malabar coast. His sensitive analyses of his impressions and reflections touch very many problems of human nature." F. B.

+ Boston Transcript p2 My 23 '28 850w

Ind 121:93 Jl 28 '28 120w

Reviewed by W. N. Brown

Nation 127:113 Ag 1 '28 430w

"Bonsels's book is decidedly interesting and individual. Richly colorful and imaginative in descriptive interpretation." F. H. M.

+ N Y Evening Post p5 Jl 14 '28 160w

"A fine piece of work. Every line of it rings with authenticity. Writers like Miss Mayo, one suspects, may be only passengers to India. They do not get beyond the railway station, the viceregal lodge and the local hospitals. Herr Bonsels, by heroic exertions, managed to see a little bit of Indian life and to get a brief space beneath the skin of an alien civilization. His book is worth many 'Mother Indias' for those who wish to understand a little of a strange people in a distant land through the eyes of a sympathetic and unselfrighteous observer." J: Carter

+ N Y Times p4 Jl 15 '28 1700w

"The German novelist and traveller went to India to try to understand its people and their customs, and the result of his observations is a pleasant relief from the various volumes of propaganda of one sort or another written about that country in the past few years. Bonsels writes beautifully, so those who recall his earlier books realize, and he has produced in An Indian Journey a real aid to international amity, as well as an engaging book." Herschel Brickell

+ No Am 226:adv S '28 140w

Pratt p34 autumn '28

"There is everywhere in his book a tendency toward the romantic, and at times it breaks almost into mawkishness. Yet, on the whole, his 'Indian Journey' is moving and charming, charged with a sense of beauty and written with genuine sympathy." Amy Loveman

+ — Sat R of Lit 4:1016 Jl 7 '28 380w

BOOK, WILLIAM FREDERICK. How to succeed in college. 192p $1.60 Warwick & York

378 Students. Colleges and universities. Education, Higher 28-4519

"Investigates the more important factors which conditions a student's success and offers methods which may lead to better adjustments." —Cleveland Open Shelf

Booklist 35:54 N '28

Cleveland Open Shelf p72 Je '28

Reviewed by R. E. Wager

El School J 28:629 Ap '28 750w

BOOTH, HENRY KENDALL. Background of the Bible; a handbook of Biblical introduction. 281p $2 Scribner

220 Bible. Whole—Criticism, interpretation, etc. 28-21661

Outlines in easily assimilated form the history of the books of the Old and the New Testaments, their sources in the thought and life of the peoples and the times which produced them, their evolution and preservation.

BOOTH, H: K.—Continued

"As a synopsis of the background of the entire Bible, this volume covers not only the literary but also the social, political, archaeological and typographical foundations of the Old and New Testaments. It is an ambitious undertaking, but is well done. It is based on sound, well-attested scholarship, and gives in outline form much information of value and interest."

+ Boston Transcript p2 O 17 '28 300w

" 'The Background of the Bible' lives up to its title. It describes in plain, readable language the lasting results of Biblical scholarship. It tells what these results are, how they were attained and who attained them. The old Bible has gone but the new Bible is better. The author opens up this new Bible so that others besides technical scholars can read it." E. B. Chaffee

+ Outlook 150:1129 N 7 '28 200w

BORDEN, COURTNEY LOUISE (LETTS) (MRS JOHN BORDEN). Cruise of the Northern Light. 317p il $4.50 Macmillan

919.8 Arctic regions. Hunting—Arctic regions. Northern Light (ship) 28-25947

Mr and Mrs John Borden of Chicago made a five months' voyage in their ship the Northern Light, along the coast of Alaska and Siberia. The party, which was in effect an Arctic expedition sponsored by the Field museum of natural history, Chicago, included eight young sea scouts, boys of from sixteen to twenty years old. This story of the cruise is taken from Mrs Borden's notes and illustrated from many photographs.

"Mrs. Borden has made no attempt to embroider the simple narrative of the trip, nor to enlarge on the uniqueness of her position as the first woman ever to write of her own adventures in the arctic. She tells of events just as if she were talking to you face to face, and the result is a book which is delightfully informal, told with zest and enthusiasm of a participant who enjoyed every minute of what she was doing." Fanny Butcher

+ Chicago Daily Tribune p15 N 24 '28 700w

"There is no hard life of the sailor in Mrs. Borden's narrative. It is the sea in silk pajamas. Because of that it annoys a little one who learned to know the sea on salt horse and weevily ship's biscuit." Arthur Warner

Nation 127:718 D 26 '28 150w

BORDEN, MRS LUCILLE (PAPIN). From out Magdala. 398p $2.50 Macmillan

27-19217

A little child is stolen by gipsies from the home of her father, Lord Hensleigh, in London. A few years later she is found and adopted by an Englishwoman, a religious, in a mountain village in France. Meanwhile in England the brother and sister of the stolen child grow up. The story of these young people and their dilemmas is written from the Catholic point of view, and incidentally defines the church's attitude toward marriage and divorce.

"Though it makes direct and continuous appeal to a Roman Catholic audience, 'From Out Magdala' is not lacking in mild interest for those of other or no creed, since Mrs Borden is too expert a spinner of tales to have omitted the abundant love affairs of the young persons involved."

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p11 Ja 8 '28 170w

Cleveland Open Shelf p65 My '28

"Mrs. Borden's tale is more than a little saccharine. Her people are almost too good for human nature's daily food. The story's principal claim to attention lies in its agreeable descriptions of the French mountain country and the devout clergy who guard the shrine of the Magdalene. 'From Out Magdala' will make its strongest appeal to those who love the Church, which it is written to glorify."

+ — N Y Times p13 Ja 1 '28 300w

"It would be almost impossible to comment seriously on such puerile twaddle."

— Sat of Lit 4:311 N 12 '27 160w

BORDEN, NEIL HOPPER. Problems in advertising. 677p il $5 Shaw, A.W.

659 Advertising 27-19726

"Deals with the subject from the standpoint of the business executive who has to use advertising as one of numerous tools, instead of from the standpoint of the advertising worker, and therefore contains little on technique. Is a collection of cases based on the actual business experience of a large number of firms, gathered by the Harvard Bureau of business research."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

Cleveland Open Shelf p85 Jl '28

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:158 Mr '28

BORDERS, KARL. Village life under the soviets. (Vanguard studies of soviet Russia) 191p 50c Vanguard press

335.4 Russia—Economic conditions. Agriculture—Russia. Soviet government 27-24086

The educational director of the Russian reconstruction farms describes the life of the Russian village of to-day, after ten years of soviet rule, and the gains that have come to the peasant from the socialization of the land and collective agriculture.

"An excellent piece of work. The awakening social and political consciousness of the village is described in a series of pen pictures written as such only can be written by one who has lived among the peasants for several years." P. H. Douglas

+ Am Econ R 18:284 Je '28 100w

Reviewed by F. R. Dulles

Bookm 66:573 Ja '28 50w

"As sympathetic, if sometimes too roseate, a study of the mujik on his native heath as I have yet encountered." Paxton Hibben

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p3 N 13 '27 120w

"Karl Borders' volume on village life is admirably done." P. H. Douglas

+ Christian Century 45:314 Mr 8 '28 90w

Educ R 76:30 Je '28 220w

"It is warm, flexible, and alive from cover to cover. Mr. Borders makes the record as plain as it can be made in a brief volume. His criticisms are acute and telling, and his praise, so far as I know anything about it, is just. He gives not only the warmth of local color but sober and penetrating observation on the whole economy of Russian agriculture." Stuart Chase

+ Nation 126:156 F 8 '28 110w

"Here is an excellent outline sketch of agriculture in a backward country, of the problems which faced the Soviets in 1917, and of the solutions they have applied." Herbert Solow

+ N Y Evening Post p13 Ja 7 '28 220w

"Gives a series of illuminating pictures which will eliminate from readers' minds most of the grosser, current misconceptions. Not so interesting or so personal as Hindus' Broken Earth, it is more comprehensive." J. G. McDonald

+ Survey 60:303 Je 1 '28 280w

BORROW, GEORGE, ed. Celebrated trials and remarkable cases of criminal jurisprudence from the earliest records to the year 1825; rev. and ed. by Edward Hale Bierstadt. 2d ed 2v $15 Payson & Clarke

343.1 Trials. Crime and criminals 28-12066

"George Borrow's 'Celebrated Trials' originally came out in six volumes, containing over four hundred cases; Mr. Bierstadt has boiled these down to two volumes, and thirty-three cases,—perhaps all that modern readers will desire. He has done this extremely well, including many state trials, trials of monarchs and statesmen, trials for treason, witchcraft, and a few for murder."—Sat R of Lit

Bookm 67:xiv Jl '28 230w

"Borrow's labor of arrangement and condensation was a series of racy narratives enlivened by brisk passages of court record. Mr. Bierstadt's judicious, frequently illuminating notes now add to the interest of the whole." B. R. Redman

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 Ap 22 '28 850w

"Not merely because of their association with the name of George Borrow, but also for their intrinsic interest these books are of no little value. While Mr. Bierstadt's selection is excellent, he might well have included more trials in his series, and this could have been done in no larger compass by issuing them in smaller volumes. As they stand, however, the volumes are dignified, weighty, and historically important." E. F. Edgett

+ — Boston Transcript p2 Ap 7 '28 1600w

"These two volumes were well worth publishing. Borrow was an extraordinarily good selecter, and his compilation is infinitely better than the dozens of 'famous crimes' books which have been published in recent years. . . It is difficult to stop reading these volumes. The language, particularly in the State trials, is often superb; the drama is tremendous and played out nobly on a magnificent stage; the strokes of character are often brilliant." Leonard Woolf

+ Nation and Ath 43:531 Jl 21 '28 1050w

"The book is admirably printed and is of much historical, literary and morbid interest, but is of little or no importance to the criminologist, except in so far as it throws some light upon the development of court procedure." H. E. Barnes

+ — New Repub 56:sup217 O 10 '28 160w

"A handsome reprint this—not only a nicely made book, but a competent piece of editing on the part of Mr. Bierstadt. . . Mr. Bierstadt's footnotes are sound and illuminating." L: Sherwin

+ N Y Evening Post p13 Ap 21 '28 350w

Reviewed by Vincent Starrett
N Y World p11m Ap 8 '28 750w

"We do not get Borrow at his best—nor even a recognizable Borrow. We get a young man in a hurry. Yet, like all collections of great trials, the book makes fascinating reading."

— + Sat R 146:185 Ag 11 '28 670w

Reviewed by Edmund Pearson
Sat R of Lit 4:821 Ap 28 '28 140w
Spec 141:107 Jl 21 '28 550w
Springf'd Republican p7f My 13 '28 1550w

BOSE, SIR JAGADIS CHUNDER. Collected physical papers. (Bose institute transactions, 1927) 404p $4 (10s) Longmans

530.4 Physics 28-21202

"Collection of 28 papers dating from 1895, a number of which are on the application of physical methods to the study of biological problems. Describes investigations on optical properties of electric waves; characteristics of metallic contact receivers; types of molecular receivers; similarity of response of inorganic and living substances; physiological response of plant; and identity of physiological mechanism in plant and animal."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

---

"The papers make very agreeable reading, for the author is never dull. Moreover they have contributed largely to develop in India an interest in physical investigations. This work was that of a pioneer and the present rapid growth in physical science in India is to a large extent the outcome of that work. This volume is a fitting record of it." A. W. Porter

+ J Phys Chem 32:800 My '28 220w
Nature 121:451 Mr 24 '28 300w
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:261 My '28

"It will be a great convenience to those who wish to consult these papers to have them collected in one volume. The illustrations are, in many cases, poor, but as the book is sold at a low price for a work of this kind, one must not complain too much."

+ — Spec 139:785 N 5 '27 250w

BOSSARD, JAMES HERBERT SIWARD. Problems of social well-being. (Harper's social science ser.) 654p $3.50 Harper

304 Social problems. Income. Hygiene, Public. Mental physiology and hygiene 27-24371

"A discussion of social problems from the point of view of three factors which the author considers the basis of social well being, income, health and mental hygiene. The emphasis is on constructive work in these fields and the book has the merits of a new approach, an abundance of facts and an interesting style. The author is Professor of Sociology in the University of Pennsylvania."—Wis Lib Bul

---

"The book is well written and will interest its readers. Furthermore, each chapter closes with a list of books for further readings; and at the end we find a considerable index of names, but a rather abbreviated general index. The test of time will be necessary to disclose whether the book will displace the excellent texts that have recently appeared, and that are being used in courses relating to social well-being." G: B. Mangold

+ Am Econ R 18:147 Mr '28 580w

"The volume contains a large amount of reliable information, well thought out and well presented." M. P. Ravenel

+ Am J Pub Health 18:830 Je '28 510w

Reviewed by E. W. Burgess
Am J Soc 33:674 Ja '28 130w

"Combining insight into the nature of social problems with a simple and easy flowing style, the author has made not only a real but a readable contribution to the understanding of social well-being viewed in its economic, physical and mental aspects." F. D. Watson

+ Ann Am Acad 137:267 My '28 250w
Booklist 24:346 Je '28

"Ably written and informing book." E. N.

+ Boston Transcript p5 D 17 '27 720w

"This is not a good book for propagandists with social panaceas, but it is an excellent reference for an instructor to use with students to orient them in a maze of disputatious opinions. This book is to be welcomed as a standard of scientific work in a field where 'wishful writing' has long held the pole position."

+ — Nation 126:495 Ap 25 '28 60w

Reviewed by Nels Anderson
Survey 60:243 My 15 '28 350w
Wis Lib Bul 24:85 Mr '28

BOSTOCK, EDWARD HENRY. Menageries, circuses and theatres. 305p il $5 Stokes [18s Chapman & H.]

791 Circus [28-10308]

The "British Barnum" writes these interesting recollections of his long career as a showman, its high lights, its vicissitudes and its triumphs. Copiously illustrated.

Booklist 24:353 Je '28

"A delightful book of the circus written by one of the best known men in the canvas world. More English than American, it but skims too lightly the many phases of circus life. It is nevertheless, of more importance than most books written on the subject. It has statistical value and is written in a gentle meandering, naïve style."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p13 Jl 22 '28 80w
Boston Transcript p1 Ap 21 '28 600w
Cleveland Open Shelf p64 My '28
St Louis 26:80 Mr '28

BOSTOCK, E: H:—Continued

"The innocent exultation with which he recounts the numerous triumphs of a long and arduous career lends a pleasing and distinctive flavour to the autobiography which he now publishes, in his seventieth year. It is full of captivating anecdotes."

+ Sat R 144:518 O 15 '27 250w

Spec 139:786 N 5 '27 130w

Times [London] Lit Sup p680 O 6 '27 680w

BOSWELL, JAMES. Hypochondriack; being the seventy essays by the celebrated biographer, appearing in the London magazine from November, 1777 to August, 1783, and here first reprinted; ed. by Margery Bailey. 2v 356;344p il $15 Stanford univ. press

824 28-12899

"Margery Bailey, assistant professor in the department of English at Stanford University, has rescued from oblivion a series of essays by James Boswell that, once generally known, will substantially strengthen the position that he holds among English men of letters. 'These essays are the seventy papers that Boswell contributed to 'The London Magazine' from 1777-1783 under the title of 'The Hypochondriack.'" —Books (N Y Herald Tribune)

"Miss Bailey has brought to light a collection that must take a high rank among English periodical essays." B. R. Redman

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 Jl 15 '28 880w

"One does not learn from them a great deal that is not to be found in Boswell's other writings. But it is instructive to have the light thrown on his character from a new angle. On the editing of the essays Dr. Bailey has expended some very solid scholarship. There is an introduction of 100 pages which gives the history of the series, a very full analysis of Boswell's prose style, and, most interesting section of all, an account of the tradition of melancholy as 'the English malady.'" Jacob Zeitlin

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p27 S 23 '28 380w

"This series of comparatively brief papers are so interesting from many angles that one cannot help marveling that their republication in book-form has been delayed for 145 years. Professor Bailey contributes an introduction covering nearly a hundred pages, giving a complete history of Boswell's undertaking and an estimate of his character. In so doing, while recognizing his weakness, she is enabled to revise and considerably to enhance the favorable qualities of his character." N. H. D.

+ Boston Transcript p6 Jl 3 '28 800w

"In a complete 'Works' of James Boswell (and how Jamie would like that!) the Hypochondriack might of course find a place—might indeed, claim one. But in that case the immense labour which Miss Bailey must have spent would be largely reduced, and the space which the results of that labour take reduced more largely still. And, to speak honestly and plainly, the book (still except as a completion of the 'Works') is not of much value. . . The stuff is sometimes very good stuff and never very bad; it is agreeably presented in all mechanical respects; and the labour spent on it is vigorous and knowledgeable." G: Saintsbury

— + Dial 85:353 O '28 1200w

Reviewed by Uffington Valentine

N Y Times p5 Je 17 '28 2050w

"For modern readers a new Boswell emerges from these pages—a critic whose work was worth reading for its own sake, and not merely a chronicler of a great patron's sayings and doings."

+ R of Rs 78:26 Jl '28 120w

"Dr. Bailey's editing is leisurely and ample, after the manner of Dr. Hill's annotation of the 'Life of Johnson.' I believe one may risk the high praise of saying that though she has made some mistakes, her percentage of error is nearly as small as in Hill himself. Her prefaces seem to me highly original, and yet among the sanest and soundest critical essays on Boswell ever written." F: A. Pottle

+ Sat R of Lit 5:88 S 1 '28 1050w

"If Boswell had reprinted these essays, we suppose they would have made two volumes duodecimo, and it is safe to assert that they would have enjoyed considerable popularity; but seven hundred pages large octavo, and fifteen dollars, may be too severe a handicap. . . Above all, the notes should not have been printed on the same page with the text. We hasten to add that the notes in themselves are good reading. The introduction is much more than readable: it is packed with knowledge, and gives a temperate and sympathetic estimate of Boswell's literary character. That his character will be raised by the rediscovery of these essays need not be doubted."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p629 S 6 '28 1000w

BOTTOME, PHYLLIS (MRS ERNAN FORBES-DENNIS). Messenger of the gods. 320p $2.50 Doubleday, Doran

27-22483

For descriptive note see Annual for 1927.

Bookm 66:lx D '27 140w

"Miss Bottome has loaded her latest ,story with emotional crises which may or may not be the ones endured by most 'modern girls.' At any rate, the tale is sufficiently moving to interest this author's large clientele."

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 Ja 8 '28 130w

Boston Transcript p7 D 7 '27 250w

New Repub 53:279 Ja 25 '28 140w

N Y Evening Post p13 D 24 '27 200w

"Miss Bottome has brought her very considerable talent to bear on the American Scene, and this is the result: a story that is utterly improbable from the first page to the last. It has brilliant moments, of course, and passages of beauty, but its relationship with life is fitful and precarious." L. P. Hartley

— + Sat R 144:743 N 26 '27 620w

"As a child Imogen is thoroughly convincing but as she grows up she tends to become a little prearranged to meet the occasion. If some more realistic writer than Phyllis Bottome permitted a heroine to do the things that Imogen does, the censor would immediately be after her, but the author of 'The Kingfisher' and other popular novels writes so calmly and idealistically of drunkenness, and free love, and the disposal by drowning of a recalcitrant lover, that the most skittish reader is lulled to sympathetic acquiescence."

— Sat R of Lit 4:440 D 10 '27 250w

"Imogen is a pagan child who, quite unconvincingly, becomes a poet-girl in a New York set. Her adventures there are quite readable; but, frankly, she seems a wanton little creature with little claim to sympathy." R. A. Taylor

— Spec 139:sup848 N 12 '27 90w

Times [London] Lit Sup p936 D 8 '27 130w

BOTTOME, PHYLLIS (MRS ERNAN FORBES-DENNIS). Strange fruit; stories. 315p $2.50 Houghton [7s 6d Collins]

28-24948

A collection of unusual, crisply written short stories. Contents: The plain case; The little red band; The miracle; The unpardonable sin; A dangerous character; The last crusader; Henry; Blue clay; The wonder-child; The napkin; The dagger; Le drame; Spellbound; A lost leader; The occult; The lesser light; Michel; The grievance; The other island; The waiting-room.

"Miss Bottome's short stories are distinguished by competence and a certain sentimental irony."

+ — Nation and Ath 43:656 Ag 18 '28 200w

"Her tales, crystallized into ice-bright prose, skirt the arctic zone of perfection. But for all that, 'Strange Fruit' lacks the vital spark. One reason for this may be found in the consistently maintained point of view. The invisible tale-teller appears to be a blend of literarified British hail-fellow-well-met, Katherine Mansfield and La Rochefoucauld. This happy combination becomes dangerous when coupled with an equally happy gift for telescoping events. It is dangerous to compress human tragedies into epigrams. The result is too tidy." E. G.

— + New Repub 57:148 D 19 '28 150w

"This collection of short stories exhibits Miss Bottome's range and facility in a difficult form of fiction. Her stories are so short that it is astonishing to find how much character is revealed in so small a compass."

+ New Statesman 31:546 Ag 4 '28 80w

"This large collection of short stories by Phyllis Bottome has not enough of unusual merit to attract attention. Had the bulk been more carefully weeded, the whole might have been something sufficiently good to remember. Each tale has some quotable epigram, clever repartee and lucid description, but the stories are so patently ready-to-wear articles that they lack distinction."

— + N Y Times p7 D 16 '28 600w

"Over-emphasis and exaggeration are among the dangers of Miss Bottome's method. She grasps her subject almost too firmly; she gives it no liberty of movement, it is always under her control. She is very intelligent and quick to see where the point lies; but her work, in this volume at any rate, is rather the fruit of her intelligence than of her artistic impulse. She can never write badly, but she has a competent second-best on to which she too often falls back." L. P. Hartley

— + Sat R 146:187 Ag 11 '28 250w

"All the stories are at once eminently readable and distinguished by the originality of their psychological points and the animated ease of their style."

+ Spec 141:171 Ag 4 '28 150w

"In spite of the apparent artificiality of construction they deserve a good deal of praise. They are brightly, often wittily, written in a manner which is sometimes romantic, sometimes pleasantly ironical and detached; the people—writers, actresses, socialist dreamers, army men, and so on—all hold the reader's interest or catch his fancy; and, in addition, the tales cover a range of subjects."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p606 Ag 23 '28 200w

BOUCHARD, GEORGES. Other days other ways; silhouettes of the past in French Canada; tr. from Vieilles choses vieilles gens [by A. H. H.]. 189p $2.50 Louis Carrier & co., 33 E. 10th st., N.Y.

917.14 French Canadians. Canada—Social life and customs 28-20232

Sketches of French Canadian country life—of the old parish priest, the sexton, the blacksmith, the school mistress, the fiddler, the bone-setter, and other types among the habitants of French Canada. They are charming pictures of a serene and simple life, decorated with woodcuts by Edwin H. Holgate.

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p21 My 13 '28 150w

"In a style of the greatest simplicity and clarity Mr. Bouchard describes these things and people and the manners and customs of which they were an integral part, his mind as he writes evidently filled with tenderness, affection and no little wistfulness for the bygone days. Now and then he comments on the wisdom out of which the old-time customs grew, the fine qualities of character which they perpetuated and the successful lives in which they resulted. And in almost every chapter there is reference to the disappearance of those old customs and characteristics and the rapidity with which they are being replaced by modern developments"

N Y Times p25 F 19 '28 400w

Sat R of Lit 4:674 Mr 10 '28 50w

BOURNE, GEORGE, pseud. See Sturt, G:

BOUTON, JOSEPHINE, comp. Poems for the children's hour; with an introd. by Carolyn Sherwin Bailey. 363p $1.75 Bradley

821.08 Children's poetry 27-16356

A new compilation of poems for children which according to Carolyn Sherwin Bailey has the characteristics of the perfect collection—it meets the everyday interests of the child, combines the old and new in poetry, and the selections are short.

"Miss Bouton may be blessed during several generations, for such a book ought to be handed down."

+ Boston Transcript p4 Je 18 '27 170w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 32:675 D '27

BOWEN, ELIZABETH. The hotel. 294p $2.50 Dial press [7s 6d Constable]

28-4075

Noticeable among the guests at an hotel on the Riviera are Mrs Kerr, a suave and handsome widow, and Sydney Warren, a moody, difficult young girl. The friendship between the two, which is the central theme of the story, is the subject of much comment. Its unhappy influence prevents Sydney's engagement to a clergyman stopping at the hotel, and rouses jealousy between the girl and Mrs Kerr's son Donald. The other guests as they pursue their leisurely pastimes, contribute, largely by inference, to the central theme.

Booklist 24:402 Jl '28

Reviewed by J: Macy

Bookm 67:431 Je '28 400w

"It sounds extremely unpleasant, but you read with excitement, and it is only after you are through with the book that you feel the author has put something over on you." Margery Latimer

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p4 Ap 8 '28 1000w

Boston Transcript p4 My 19 '28 170w

"One who has stayed at such a hotel will notice that Miss Bowen has caught its essence in her brilliant book."

+ Ind 120:509 My 26 '28 160w

"The book leaves one unsatisfied, with the feeling that an honest and clever style has been wasted on too slight material."

— + Nation 126:652 Je 6 '28 60w

"Miss Bowen's novel is good. It is impossible to read it and not feel respect for her talent and pleasure in this manifestation of it. Her first novel, it is full of promise and even of considerable achievement. For example, the poise of her work is exquisite. She has chosen a felicitous method. She seems to have let herself go in provoking in us a kind of pungent amusement, half intellectual and half emotional. The effect of this is to give the book an unusual value, because it makes it appear to have been written from the cherished feelings of a young and brilliant nature. This is altogether delightful and rare."

+ Nation and Ath 41:784 S 17 '27 220w

"Reading this novel is a painful pleasure, but one not to be missed by lovers of excellence." D. B. W.

+ New Repub 56:107 S 12 '28 220w

"This comedy avoids both sentiment and farce, though it is far from perfect. Such descriptions as that of the hotel going in to lunch, of the wet morning in the writing room, of the botanist's picnic and the clergyman's innocent appropriation of the Honourable Misses Pinkerton's private bath, belong to the very stuff of English life abroad: and we see the real thoughts, the modesty and the suspicions of all the glarers and the growlers who have perhaps menaced also us, imprisoned in an English rock-pool by the southward-flowing tide. It is the misfortune of such a witty book that the serious story should lose, in spite of the distinction with which it is related, by contrast with the humour, which is of a nature that is all its own." Cyril Connolly

BOWEN, ELIZABETH—Continued

\+ — New Statesman 29:651 S 3 '27 650w

"Although 'The Hotel' is written in a more or less light and entertaining manner, it is on the whole one of the saddest of current books. Miss Bowen brings the characters to no resolution even in the end; she leaves them in mid-air, still alive and struggling, ready to quit the Hotel and go on to the next place with the same vague, harassing problems." Tess Slesinger

\+ — N Y Evening Post p13 Ap 21 '28 960w

"It would be a mistake to leave the impression that 'The Hotel' is a gloomy or unpleasant book. The contacts of the heterogeneous colony on the Riviera are made to yield a treasure of high comedy. There is particularly a group of young people whose indiscipline, whose audacity and whose strange mixture of naïveté and sophistication are unforgetable. But the texture of the story is sombre, nonetheless. Miss Bowen seems to have an uncanny knowledge of the shadows that lurk in the subconsciousness of the post-war generation. . . Out of this knowledge she has written a novel that puts her in the first rank of the brilliant women writers whose lucidity and power to improvise fresh themes while adhering to classic mediums of speech seem to be the best defense fictional literature possesses just now against the clumsy hands that impatience and empiricism would lay upon it."

\+ — N Y Times p8 Ap 8 '28 1400w

Reviewed by J: R. Chamberlain

N Y Times p2 Je 24 '28 110w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:320 Je '28

"She achieves her aims perfectly, and criticism must concern itself with what she sets out to do rather than with how she does it. There is this much of amateurishness, however, in her novel, or if not amateurishness, incomplete liberation from the short-story writer's technique: her chapters are a little too complete in themselves, they end with a snap: so that turning to the next is rather like beginning a new book. This series of faint but perceptible climaxes in the narrative slightly interrupts the continuity of the story. And these interruptions are to be regretted because in any case the drift of the whole book is as elusive as its component scenes are distinct." L. P. Hartley

\+ — Sat R 144:311 S 3 '27 780w

"Elizabeth Bowen is a young writer. But this is not a young book, it is frugal and keen, rich with the rather desperate wisdom of maturity. It is social comedy of the most intricate merit, malicious and tender, the neat elixir of observation. Its people are dreadfully alive, so much so that you carry them on in your mind after finishing the story, wondering what will become of them. This is a book that two readers particularly would have been excited by—Jane Austen, Henry James. And I think I should add a third, our well-loved Elizabeth." Christopher Morley

\+ Sat R of Lit 4:740 Ap 7 '28 650w

"Its originality and charm lie in its varied and incisive portraiture, its excellent literary style and in the mingled sympathy and irony with which the author exposes the petty ambitions and jealousies, and the occasional redeeming virtues, of her characters."

\+ Spec 139:291 Ag 20 '27 120w

Springf'd Republican p7f My 13 '28 180w

"The question that readers will debate is whether the drama is sufficiently clear to perform its function; but all will agree that its scenes are often brilliantly contrived."

\+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p574 Ag 25 '27 380w

BOWEN, MARJORIE, pseud. (MRS GABRIELLE MARGARET VERE [CAMPBELL] LONG). Sundry great gentlemen. 361p il $4 Dodd [15s Lane]

923.1 Kings and rulers 28-16949

These six essays in historical biography deal with the following characters: Frederick II of Hohenstaufen, emperor of the Holy Roman Empire, King of Sicily and Jerusalem; Louis XII, king of France; Dom Sebastião, king of Portugal and Algarve; Gustavus Adolphus II, king of Sweden; Carlos II, king of Spain; Maurice de Saxe, maréchal of France.

Reviewed by F: H. Martens

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p15 Ap 1 '28 450w

"No history so forbiddingly dry but what she discovers and reveals to others the romance with which it is shot through and through. And even the most colorful of its incredibly colorful 'true stories' glows and gleams most entrancingly through the alchemy of her imaginative and rare gift of verbal paintings."

\+ Boston Transcript p3 Mr 17 '28 250w

Nation and Ath 42:820 Mr 3 '28 600w

"The equipment of the historical novelist which the author applies to her latest adventure in 'straight' historical writing dramatises her characters very effectively. Miss Bowen's style tends to be somewhat flamboyant, and she splits her infinitives with something of an air of sheer defiance; but she can rise on occasion to writing which is not only tense, but could not be denied a higher quality were it not so obviously open to the charge of being deliberate 'fine writing.' "

\+ — New Statesman 30:704 Mr 10 '28 700w

"Miss Bowen has paused in her career as an excellent and voluminous historical novelist to write some biographical essays which are as readable as her fiction. She has selected half a dozen subjects which will be quite fresh to the average English reader."

\+ Sat R 145:200 F 18 '28 150w

"Miss Marjorie Bowen's new book is written with all her accustomed skill; it is well documented, picturesquely expressed, the story, in each case, well told."

\+ Spec 140:652 Ap 28 '28 350w

"The rich jewelled style and wording which made their mark at once in 'The Sword Decides,' twenty years ago, appear under a different aspect in this book. They are less natural and spontaneous now; after a prolonged reading of the present book the mind tends to become fatigued by the constant sequence of staccato dramatic paragraphs. Nevertheless, Miss Bowen has in 'Sundry Great Gentlmen' produced some excellent work."

\+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p122 F 23 '28 750w

BOWER, B. M., pseud. (MRS BERTHA [MUZZY] SINCLAIR-COWAN). Hay-wire. 306p $2 Little [7s 6d Hodder & S.]

28-17203

"Hay-wire" is the term of contempt used by westerners to express shiftlessness. In this case it was applied to the Hayward family. But Lynn Hayward was determined to raise his family from poverty and derision, especially after he fell in love with the pretty school teacher. And he did.

"A pleasing mystery-Western about money, murder and Wyoming love." Will Cuppy

\+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p9 Ag 19 '28 70w

"It is a very good tale."

\+ Boston Transcript p4 Jl 21 '28 270w

Wis Lib Bul 24:255 O '28

BOWER, B. M., pseud. (MRS BERTHA [MUZZY] SINCLAIR-COWAN). Points west. 326p $2 Little

28-562

Shamed by his father's suicide and disgrace Cole Lawson leaves the ranch and strikes out for himself. He first changes the brand on four favorite horses and takes them with him. These changed brands bring him under suspicion of theft and worse difficulties beset him. But while helping mother and daughter on the Harris ranch, Cole learns some facts that clear his father's name and lead to conviction of his murderers.

"In B. M. Bower's new book there's everything that'll please them who dont know the west and them who do." Will James

+ Bookm 67:712 Ag '28 480w

"B. M. Bower tells the story, as always, with an abundance of easy, lifelike lingo and touches of humor." Will Cuppy

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p16 Ja 22 '28 100w

"A lively story that is of the familiar and always entertaining B. M. Bower type."

+ Boston Transcript p4 Ja 25 '28 90w

Cleveland Open Shelf p107 S '28

"It is a swiftly moving story, full of excitement, and if a reader who likes Western yarns once gets into its current he is not likely to lay the book down again until he is quite sure that young Cole Lawson is going to win clear of all the troubles prepared for him by those who have kept their connection with his father's death so well hidden."

+ N Y Times p9 Ja 8 '28 480w

Times [London] Lit Sup p258 Ap 5 '28 70w

Wis Lib Bul 24:90 Mr '28

BOWER, MARIAN. Gotobedde lane. 405p $2.50 Bobbs [7s 6d Mills & B.]

28-23663

Number One, Gotobedde Lane, East Anglia, is an antique shop owned by Job Orme. Job is a hard man but an honest one whose only dishonesty—for which he pays in mental torment—is that he has brought his children up in a false belief in their high lineage. Blaise, the son, fine-looking, good-natured, ordinary, finds the standard too high for him and messes up his life. Keturah, the daughter, is of finer fabric. She wears a mask of hardness like her father's to conceal a warm and passionate nature. Two men who love her know this; but the man Keturah has loved all her life is in love with her brother's neglected wife. The story of Job Orme's family has for its setting the village life of East Anglia and introduces a variety of clearly delineated characters.

"This is the work of an accomplished craftsman, even though against their convincing background the characters themselves appear faintly stylized." B. G.

+ — New Repub 57:254 Ja 16 '29 180w

"Strongly and firmly woven with colors finely blended and a feeling of purpose and of stability, Marian Bower's new novel 'Gotobedde Lane' is a book unusually rich in texture. They are real people whose lives she shows us; recognizable, imperfect, doing wrong things, sometimes for the sake of another's good, sometimes for their own selfish purposes. And from their wrongdoing, and from the fact that they are what they are, the plot develops naturally, dramatically, without any trace of sentimentality or theatricalism."

+ N Y Times p7 N 18 '28 830w

"Gotobedde Lane is marked by careful thought and scrupulous writing; for that reason it emerges from the passing printed crowd. The work as a whole has a character that is discriminating, sympathetic and painstaking, also a little heavy and rather too prone to linger lovingly on sadness. A lighter touch, and a relieving humour, applied to a book of similar personality, might well earn permanent recognition."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p616 Ag 30 '28 480w

BOYD, ERNEST AUGUSTUS. Literary blasphemies. 265p $3 Harper

820.4 English literature—History and criticism 27-24132

This critic maintains that "an attitude of appreciative irreverence toward the established reputations in literature is an essential condition of free criticism." In this spirit he approaches a group of the foremost writers in English and American literature, discussing them as freely as if they were new writers with reputations still undecided. Contents: An address to the indignant reader; William Shakespeare; John Milton; Jonathan Swift; Lord Byron; Charles Dickens; Edgar Allan Poe; Walt Whitman; Henry James; Thomas Hardy; Epilogue.

Booklist 24:241 Mr '28

"A witty, amusing, and not entirely sound attack on our over-reverent attitude toward the classics, a challenge to independence of thought. And if one finds that the least blasphemous essays—those on Shakespeare, Swift, and Hardy—are the best, one is at liberty to draw one's own conclusions." E. H. Walton

+ — Bookm 67:200 Ap '28 650w

Cleveland Open Shelf p74 Je '28

"It would be even a better book if Mr. Boyd did not ride his hobbies so hard."

Dial 84:255 Mr '28 180w

"Here he attacks the stupidity of those unimportant people who suppose any great writer to have been a perfect one. The game is easy, but in the course of pursuing it Mr. Boyd is frequently amusing, suggestive, and unanswerable. He is most often wrong in his discussion of poets. His account of Milton for instance, is quite as absurd as that of any of the idolaters he despises."

+ — Nation 126:129 F 1 '28 100w

Reviewed by R. M. Lovett

New Repub 53:224 Ja 11 '28 1450w

"No one disputes the truth, the honesty or the pertinency of his criticisms. One can only object to two things: calling such obviousnesses blasphemies and inclosing them in a book. What Mr. Boyd does is to take these critical commonplaces, dress them up in a savage and belligerent style and present them as one-man-against-the-whole-world iconoclasms." C. P. Fadiman

— + N Y Evening Post p9 Jl 7 '28 730w

"The book is colorless rather than colorful. Viewed in retrospect, it is more amusing than enlightening; and frequently most amusing when the author believes himself to be shedding most light."

— + N Y Times p10 D 25 '27 1550w

"Boyd's book as a whole is exhilarating, refreshing, sane. He does not delaureate the brow of genius, but assails incompetent and dishonest biographers, hypocritical and idolatrous critics, the ritual-droning priests of the classroom. Some of his blows are not adroitly aimed and his opponent has only to sidestep and let him sprawl on his face; and he does not guard against blows that are coming to him while he is looking the other way." J: Macy

+ — N Y World p10m Ja 29 '28 1600w

St Louis 26:41 F '28

"Mr. Boyd is less a literary blasphemer than a literary heretic. By focussing attention almost exclusively on the defects of his subjects, he has succeeded in nearly every case in producing a totally misleading impression. The best essay in the book is that on Jonathan Swift, in which Mr. Boyd courageously defends Swift against his less intelligent eulogist. A suitable sub-title for the book would have been 'Much Ado About Nothing.' "

— + Sat R 145:139 F 4 '28 280w

BOYD, E. A:—Continued

"A great many of his 'blasphemies,'—if one can forget the truculence of the manner—seem shrewd and sensible in substance. But the truculence is continuous. . . Mr Boyd may be an irreverent heretic toward one church of critical opinion, but he is a fierce devotee of another, which is more or less the contemporary one. Puritan, bourgeois, academic, orthodox, mid-Victorian, and so on, are terms of its ritualistic cursing, they are beginning to gather by repetition a faint flavor of cant."

Sat R of Lit 4:681 Mr 17 '28 1450w

"It wields a keen and brilliant scalpel, and his autopsies are performed on men who for the most part have been a long time dead."

Springf'd Republican p8 D 28 '27 550w

"The best essay in an uneven book, that on Swift, is also the most appreciative. He is at his weakest on Milton, when he seems to think Mark Pattison is with us still. But he has the great virtue of being easy to read, he is often acute, and his outlook is his own even when it is familiar; considerable virtues in a critic of great writers."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p293 Ap 19 '28 120w

Wis Lib Bul 24:88 Mr '28

BOYD, THOMAS ALEXANDER. Shadow of the Long Knives. 354p $2.50 Scribner

28-15162

By reason of his Indian upbringing Angus McDermott, frontiersman and scout, is of great use to the British as interpreter and peacemaker in their dealings with the Indians of Ohio. He rescues a young girl who has been captured by the redmen, marries her and tries to give her his own attitude of friendliness toward his foster brothers. But she is difficult to convince. McDermott continues his scouting and as the years go by, new settlers come into the Ohio country. The Revolutionary war which scarcely touches him brings McDermott's services to a crisis and a close.

Booklist 25:28 O '28

"It is interesting to find a period in our history habitually romanticized to the point of pure fiction looked upon with the enlightened eyes of post-war realism."

Bookm 67:xxi Ag '28 250w

"Except in a few striking impressions we are disappointed, for the story, told in a style which is clear, but not distinguished, moves heavily through its historicity and is enlivened only by occasional brief dramatic scenes." Garetta Busey

— + Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p4 Je 24 '28 1050w

Boston Transcript p2 Je 23 '28 730w

Cleveland Open Shelf p105 S '28

"It is a good, readable story, which one has the right to expect in a historical novel, and what is more, it presents a carefully done, seemingly accurate picture of a characteristic bit of American frontier history. The presentation is made with simplicity and genuine interest." Herschel Brickell

+ N Y Evening Post p8 Je 2 '28 580w

"Another good story by the man who wrote 'Through the Wheat.' . . Mr. Boyd pleads no cause and presents no thesis. There is a naturalness about his way of telling a story that is unaffected by changing literary modes. Once more he has shown that he is a craftsman of the first order."

+ N Y Times p8 Je 10 '28 680w

Reviewed by E. C. Beckwith

N Y World p7m Je 24 '28 180w

"The book is done with admirable restraint; it moves quietly and easily into a stirring climax, a battle between American troops and the Indians, and it makes very vivid not only the events of the period it covers, but the spiritual struggles of the times." Herschel Brickell

+ No Am 226:adv Ag '28 110w

"The characters of the story are real enough, but its scenes are not spread like life before our eyes. In the very best historical novels the reader stands as though upon a height looking out over the great panorama of a past age where men live again as they once did. The 'Shadow of the Long Knives' is not one of these. But it is good reading and kindles the imagination with the thought of great days in America."

+ — Outlook 149:553 Ag 1 '28 470w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:545 N '28

"A narrative in which the absence of romantic treatment is probably more than offset through its naturalness and realistic simplicity. 'Shadow of the Long Knives' keeps the reader's interest and leaves him with a clarified understanding of an outstanding 25 years in the history of the early frontier."

+ Springf'd Republican p7f Jl 1 '28 620w

Wis Lib Bul 24:254 O '28

BOYD, THOMAS ALEXANDER. Simon Girty, the white savage. 252p il $3.50 Minton

B or 92 Girty, Simon 28-23032

Simon Girty was an American pioneer who turned renegade and led the British and the Indians against his own people. Mr Boyd neither excuses nor defends the "white savage," but tells the truth about his violent career.

"This book will interest the general reader who loves a story of the rugged, red-blooded and cold-blooded frontier. It will not take a place with the orthodox history of the border in the Revolution. The material from which it is written has long been in print and the new angles here suggested will not alter 'the name and fame of Simon Girty.' " Avery Craven

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p2 D 23 '28 1000w

"An exceedingly valuable commentary on the ways of the white man and the Indian is Mr. Boyd's book. It is not one that makes the Caucasian American especially proud of his record in his relations with the Indians. . . Certainly Mr. Boyd has given us something to think about." S. L. Cook

+ Boston Transcript p2 S 29 '28 1500w

"Mr. Boyd, who probably discovered Girty while doing the research for his recent historical novel, The Shadow of the Long Knives, explains Girty's apparent lack of loyalty to the nation then being born, and makes an interesting narrative of Girty's life and adventures." Herschel Brickell

+ No Am 226:adv N '28 120w

"The author's writing here shows maturity beyond that of his World War stories. He employs an easy style and the lash of humor. This is an interesting, swiftly moving book: and a somewhat belated attempt to do justice to the Indian." D. L. M.

+ Outlook 150:1333 D 12 '28 250w

St Louis 26:389 D '28

BOYLE, MARY E. In search of our ancestors; an attempt to retrace man's origin and development from later ages back to their beginnings; with a preface by Henri Breuil. 287p il $3.50 Little [10s 6d Harrap]

571 Man, Prehistoric. Man—Origin 28-15137

Beginning with the iron age, the author leads us backward thru history, recounting what is known of the civilization of man in successive ages back to earliest conjectural times. Numerous illustrations complete the interest of the text.

Booklist 25:56 N '28

"It has been usual for expounders of evolutionary doctrine, especially in connection with man, to begin with his emergence from the anthropoid stock and trace him through the various 'ages' up to the time when he became distinctively human. Miss Boyle, following the counsel of her introducer, begins with the later developments and carries her survey back from its culmination at the opening of the Christian era to its commencements in the tertiary, secondary and primary periods. But this novelty of treatment in no way interferes with the interest and value of the book." E. N.

+ Boston Transcript p4 Ap 18 '28 450w

Educ R 76:71 S '28 100w

"Apart from the point of method, Miss Boyle's treatment of her subject is eminently skilful, and she has handled the mass of detail now available in a masterly fashion. She deals, however, in the main, with Europe only, and that from the cultural side. Ethnological questions are not taken into account."

+ — Nature 120:724 N 19 '27 380w

"Miss Boyle is thoroughly well equipped with the enormous but well digested amount of knowledge necessary for the writing of such an account and she achieves the difficult task of making it a vital, colorful story with great success."

N Y Times p20 Ap 15 '28 310w

"Miss Boyle has unfolded her story in a simple and direct manner. The reader is assisted by excellent reproductions in colour and many other illustrations, and the Abbé Henri Breuil contributes a striking and characteristic Preface."

+ Sat R 144:518 O 15 '27 300w

"Breuil's preface is done in a masterly manner. Miss Boyle writes entertainingly and very much in the spirit of her master. Her statements are always marked by conservatism and her conclusions logical. The work may be classed as singularly free from errors, even of a typographic nature. One cannot help wondering why, in treating a subject so evolutionary as that of prehistoric man, the author should have chosen a method that cloaks the results of evolutionary processes both physical and cultural. In other words, the book is 'an attempt to retrace man's origin and development from later ages back to their beginnings.' This method is confusing to the specialist and must be even more so to the lay reader."

+ — Sat R of Lit 5:115 S 8 '28 570w

"Miss Boyle's [method] is undoubtedly of particular value for the beginner, and for arousing the sense of the unity of culture in history. An interesting feature of her book is a preface by the Abbé Breuil, dealing particularly with the conception of evolution in history."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p830 N 17 '27 580w

Wis Lib Bul 24:249 O '28

BOYLSTON, HERBERT MELVILLE. Introduction to the metallurgy of iron and steel. 571p il $5 Wiley [25s Chapman & H.]

669.1 Iron—Metallurgy. Steel—Metallurgy 28-1057

"Elementary work for younger students and for men who work in steel mills. An historical introduction is followed by a consideration of chemical and physical principles, the raw materials, the various iron and steel processes, mechanical and heat treatments of steel, and metallography. There is a chapter on the manufacture of commercially pure iron. References at some of the chapter endings. Author is Professor of Metallurgy, Case School of Applied Science, Cleveland, Ohio."—N Y New Tech Bks

---

"The author explains in the Preface that the book is intended not only to reach students in engineering and evening schools, but also to interest the men who work in steel mills. It should prove well adapted for such readers, and will be found interesting reading for others whose knowledge of special branches of ferrous metallurgy may be profound but who do not feel fully informed on the subject in its broadest aspects." J. A. Mathews

+ Ind & Eng Chem 20:447 Ap '28 350w

N Y New Tech Bks 13:7 Ja '28

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:472 O '28

BRACKETT, OLIVER, ed. Encyclopedia of English furniture. 14,310p il $15 McBride [42s Benn]

749 Furniture [27-18625]

About 300 plates, arranged in chronological order, give a pictorial review of English furniture from Gothic times to the nineteenth century. There are fourteen pages of concise explanatory text.

Booklist 24:151 Ja '28

"A lucid and accurate exposition of the subject. The beautiful and rare plates arranged chronologically show us more vividly than any words could do the changes in style and the increasing numbers of furniture forms throughout the centuries. Everything from bible-boxes to dolls' houses is illustrated, the whole resulting in a handsome volume convenient for reference and delightful to browse over." S. M. Lockwood

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p24 N 13 '27 450w

"The text, though sound, is very brief. In any case, Mr. Brackett's astonishingly large and varied collection of fine pieces will delight the amateur and interest the expert."

+ Spec 138:330 F 26 '27 120w

BRADFORD, GAMALIEL. D. L. Moody; a worker in souls. 320p il $3.50 Doubleday, Doran

B or 92 Moody, Dwight Lyman 27-23399

For descriptive note see Annual for 1927.

Booklist 24:204 F '28

"If his latest volume does not quite match the incisiveness of his earlier and shorter pieces, at least he has produced a thoughtful and revealing study. Dwight L. Moody, evangelist and soul-saver, is made to stand clearly before us, externally vivid even though the workings of his mind remain a mystery." S. A. Coblentz

+ — Bookm 67:205 Ap '28 230w

Cleveland Open Shelf p24 F '28

"This book is an amiable and highly interesting exposition of Moody's public purposes and measures, of Moody's view of life, and of what Moody thought of his own character and motives. Mr. Bradford, writing a flowing, practiced prose, draws an impartial picture, only now and then intimating, seldom with a touch of irony, that he does not share nor very highly estimate Moodyism." Shaemas O'Sheel

N Y Evening Post p1 D 31 '27 750w

No Am 225:adv Ja '28 50w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:114 F '28

"As a character study, the book has the author's usual discernment, usual fairness, and somewhat more than usual fulness. We are given perhaps rather too elaborate a treatment of what was, after all, a very simple personality." Allan Nevins

+ — Sat R of Lit 4:570 F 4 '28 1150w

Reviewed by Leon Whipple

Survey 59:713 Mr 1 '28 580w

BRADFORD, GAMALIEL. Life and I; an autobiography of humanity. 307p $3.50 Houghton

111 Life 28-7431

The subject of Mr Bradford's philosophical study—or to use his own word, psychograph—is not himself but Everyman. He shows how man seeks to establish himself, to dominate over his fellows; and conversely, how man seeks to escape himself, to lose himself in love, or beauty, or religion.

Booklist 24:344 Je '28

"It is the autobiography of a singularly rich mind that has mellowed wide reading with meditation; and it reflects and explains the processes of evolution of earlier books that have been deemed important. Perhaps not quite 'a

BRADFORD, GAMALIEL—Continued
book for all time,' to quote from the glowing wrapper endorsement, it is unquestionably a book for next year as well as for this." Beverley Stark

+ Bookm 67:xvii Ag '28 450w

"It would require nothing less than a scientist, a metaphysician, a man of letters and a psychologist rolled into one to write a book that would do successfully what Mr. Bradford's does with wistful unimportance. Such a book might help to resolve the confusions of an age where knowledge is developing more rapidly and variously than makes possible its spiritual assimilation, and where life is so brittlely broken up into scattered moments that we have ceased to note its quality, or tempo or direction. But 'Life and I' is not such a book. It is full of generous ramblings over the scene of human longings and exigencies. It quotes suavely the very best people. It is written in Mr. Bradford's competent but often flaccid and undistinguished prose." Irwin Edman

— + Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p1 F 26 '28 1150w

Reviewed by E. F. Edgett
Boston Transcript p2 Mr 3 '28 1350w

"There is a great deal about religion and Christianity in Mr. Bradford's book, all of it eminently practical and thought-arousing, his entire work forming an admirable supplement to his direct biographical studies of men, their minds and their lives." E. F. Edgett

+ Boston Transcript p5 Mr 24 '28 220w

Reviewed by C: L: Slattery
Churchman p19 Ap 21 '28 700w
Dial 85:175 Ag '28 120w
Ind 120:461 My 12 '28 260w

"[This] latest volume summarizes his always amiable but never profound reflections on 'the general I that fills and makes the world.' And here again, as in his biographies, his writing is irritatingly adequate—so adequate that one never becomes excited enough to protest or applaud. One is mildly entertained or mildly bored."

+ — Nation 127:554 N 21 '28 70w

"For those used to rigorous mental discipline 'Life and I' will seem rather thin gruel. But as an induction for those making tentative ventures in philosophic thinking, and for those who seek to clarify confusing problems of thought and life, the book should prove immensely helpful. Mr. Bradford has been an omnivorous reader, and the fund of corroborative quotation at his command lends cogency throughout. We believe the book will find a large public."

+ — N Y Times p5 Mr 18 '28 1200w
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:436 O '28
St Louis 26:179 Je '28

Reviewed by Arthur Colton
Sat R of Lit 4:941 Je 9 '28 680w

"Unfortunately, few can express their thoughts in a style so measured and mellow. Most, therefore, will be content to let Mr Bradford do it for them; by comparing his meditations with their own, by marking the degrees of their assent and dissent, they will be brought to a fresher and fuller awareness of themselves, and their relation to the universe, alike in its knowable and unknowable phases."

+ Springf'd Republican p7f Ap 8 '28 1450w
Wis Lib Bul 24:157 My '28

Reviewed by B. W. Bacon
Yale R n s 17:805 Jl '28 410w

BRADFORD, ROARK. Ol' man Adam an' his chillun; being the tales they tell about the time when the Lord walked the earth like a natural man. 264p il $2.50 Harper
28-8136

In the racy, picturesque idiom of the colored preacher Mr Bradford tells over again some of the Old Testament stories.

Booklist 24:402 Jl '28

"In the stories Mr. Bradford has done his work well. But the Foreword throws the book out of focus. He asserts far too many things in it that are open to serious question." Herschel Brickell

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p24 Ap 15 '28 600w

"Mr. Bradford's book is one which is so full of genuine humor, of quaint phraseology and still quainter ideas, that whether or not you accept his ideas about the negroes you cannot fail to enjoy his tales thoroughly." D. L. Mann

+ Boston Transcript p4 My 26 '28 1250w

"As funny as Milt Gross, though less strident. They might have been even funnier if Mr. Bradford had not attempted to make every one of his anecdotes illustrate over-obtrusively some particular characteristic of the Negro—his irresponsibility, his antagonism to the white man's morality, his religious anthropomorphism, etc. The creators of real folk-lore are not quite so conscious of their own mental and moral set."

+ — Nation 126:493 Ap 29 '28 80w

Reviewed by T. S. Matthews
New Repub 55:50 My 30 '28 200w

"Funny as Milt Gross at his best, is 'Ol' Man Adam An' His Chillun.' Good-natured cynicism, so to say, is the note of the book; a capital volume for reading aloud." R. C. Holliday

+ N Y Evening Post p12 Ap 21 '28 70w

"The striking thing is the degree of sharpness with which the purpose, the true biblical purpose, of each episode is understood by the preacher, and the force with which that purpose is brought home for the primitive mind."
N Y Times p5 Ap 15 '28 1150w

"Here is a new slant on the Garden of Eden and the events and histories that come after, but it is so inevitably genuine that it is, in a way, the most natural of them all. . . These stories are enjoyable any way you take them, but they are particularly well adapted to being read aloud, both for the effect of the dialect, and because real humor is most pleasurable shared." Elizabeth Lemay

+ N Y World p8m My 13 '28 300w
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:577 N '28

"There is no possibility of paraphrasing these fables. Their humor lies absolutely in the telling, and it is equally impossible to excerpt particularly funny pages, since each one grows out of the one before and into the one beyond. Read 'em and laugh. The Foreword is peculiarly inappropriate in so gay a volume and will prove irritating to many readers who otherwise might find 'Ol' Man Adam An' His Chillun' highly congenial."

+ — Sat R of Lit 5:74 Ag 25 '28 140w
Wis Lib Bul 24:255 O '28

BRADLEY, EDWARD SCULLEY. George Henry Boker, poet and patriot. 362p $4 Press of the Univ. of Pa. [17s Oxford]

B or 92 Boker, George Henry 28-349

Professor Bradley of the University of Pennsylvania has written the first biography of the Philadelphia poet and dramatist, whose "Francesca da Rimini" received a tardy recognition when, twenty-seven years after it was written, the play was produced with great success by Lawrence Barrett. Boker wrote other plays and considerable verse which, tho some of it was of fine quality, was not appreciated during his time. Disappointed by the failure of his verse, he finally abandoned literature. Eight years of his life were passed as minister to Turkey and to Russia.

"It was a job worth doing, but unfortunately worth doing a good bit better than Professor Bradley has done it. It calls, indeed, for quite a different method from his dry research and his untempered enthusiasm for poetry, which has quite deservedly been forgotten." W. P. Eaton

— Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p20 Mr 4 '28 580w

"It was largely a life of disappointment, a life that did not place Boker very high in the American hall of literary fame, but nevertheless a life of considerable achievement that was well worth living. Boker is of course a minor figure, but he is an important and an interesting figure, as much for what he failed to do as for what he did. And furthermore, his biography forms a valuable additional chapter to the annals of the American stage." E. F. Edgett

Boston Transcript p3 D 24 '27 1450w

N Y Times p9 Je 3 '28 900w

N Y World p7m Jl 15 '28 220w

"An excellent example of modern, dignified, sympathetic, scholarly, well documented historical criticism." H. H. Clark

+ Sat R of Lit 4:971 Je 16 '28 400w

"The story of Boker's personal friendships is one of the most attractive features of this book, including, as it does, a reproduction of many delightful letters, especially from Leland. There are interesting references also to his association with Thackeray and with John Morley, who wanted to see him appointed Minister in London."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p349 My 10 '28 1100w

BRADLEY, HENRY. Collected papers; with a memoir by Robert Bridges. 296p $8.50 (25s) Oxford

420.8 English philology. Names, Geographical. English language—Etymology—Names

28-25506

"For forty years Henry Bradley worked for the Oxford Dictionary, at first incidentally, but for the past twenty-seven years at Oxford wholly identified with that monumental affair. He made himself one of the greatest philologists of his time, a scholar of the foremost rank. Aside from the six volumes which he contributed to the dictionary, his bibliography consists almost entirely of articles and reviews in periodicals, most of them technical. His friends have selected a few of them, suggesting the range of his interest, and published them. The essays are practically all philological."—Sat R of Lit

---

"The articles in this volume of collected papers are representative of Bradley's best work. . . The introductory biography of Bradley by Robert Bridges is notable both for its sympathy and its intelligence. To have found a friend who knew so well and could say so plainly what he was trying to do was not the least part of Bradley's good fortune." G: P. Krapp

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 N 11 '28 630w

Sat R of Lit 5:188 O 6 '28 350w

Times [London] Lit Sup p408 My 31 '28 1150w

BRADLEY, JOHN HODGDON, jr. Earth and its history; a textbook of geology. 414p il $2.60 Ginn

550 Geology

28-2257

This clearly written story of the earth is intended for use as a textbook in short elementary courses. The author has attempted to make the presentation as non-technical and as vivid as possible. It is generously illustrated.

Booklist 24:312 My '28

"The chapter on applied geology is, except in a few minor details, quite outstanding. The preceding chapter on the history of geology, while exceptional in such a book, is nevertheless an excellent and very complete treatment. With very few exceptions the photographs and diagrams set a high standard. The book will have a very strong appeal to those teachers of a short course in general geology who agree with Professor Bradley's ideas of the order of treatment of the geologic processes, and any course in general geology will be enriched by using the material in the last two or three chapters for collateral reading." D. J. Fisher

+ J Geol 36:380 My '28 780w

N Y New Tech Bks 13:6 Ja '28

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:566 N '28

BRADY, MARIEL, Genevieve Gertrude; herself and her book. 298p il $2 Appleton

28-8129

A little red-headed girl in a New England village is the un-selfconscious heroine of these stories which relate with humor the adventures and misadventures of the boys and girls of Grade 5 and the romance of the teacher.

"This volume is unique in its delicious depiction of small town school life, and the life of the adults as well. It is for grown-ups, of course, though intelligent children should enjoy it, and it is quite one of the most amusing books we have seen in many a long day." I. W. L.

+ Boston Transcript p3 Ap 28 '28 600w

"It seems probable that it will appeal less to young people than to old, as it depends for its humor on child psychology as viewed from an adult standpoint."

Sat R of Lit 4:807 Ap 21 '28 220w

Wis Lib Bul 24:126 Ap '28

BRAILSFORD, HENRY NOEL. How the soviets work. (Vanguard studies of Soviet Russia) 169p 50c Vanguard press

947.08 Russia—Politics and Government. Soviet government

27-23932

Mr Brailsford describes the machinery of the soviet government, shows how the survival of the system in Russia follows from the history of its working class and explains how the Communist party has succeeded in maintaining its dictatorship.

Reviewed by P. H. Douglas

Am Econ R 18:284 Je '28 170w

Booklist 25:22 O '28

"Perhaps the most interesting and best written of the five studies [in the Vanguard studies of soviet Russia]." F. R. Dulles

+ Bookm 66:573 Ja '28 100w

Reviewed by Paxton Hibben

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p3 N 13 '27 100w

Reviewed by P. H. Douglas

Christian Century 45:314 Mr 8 '28 270w

Educ R 76:29 Je '28 280w

"There are pages which will seem to some suffused with too much optimism but the reader will hardly question the frankness of Mr. Brailsford's mind, or the authority of his facts."

+ Ind 120:165 F 18 '28 150w

"The highly centralized government, and the part which the laborer and peasant play in its control, are admirably explained in Mr. Brailsford's study."

+ Living Age 334:93 Ja 1 '28 200w

"He attempts to tell us how the Soviet government works. I do not think he knows how it works; I do not think the members of that government know how it works; I do not think that anybody knows how it works. One cannot, however, read Mr. Brailsford's last chapter without realizing that there are few political philosophers alive in the world today who are equipped with wisdom, tolerance, and sympathetic understanding to come as close to the heart of the matter as he has come." Stuart Chase

+ Nation 126:156 F 8 '28 250w

"A rather elementary but illuminating study." Herbert Solow

+ N Y Evening Post p13 Ja 7 '28 300w

"We cannot complain that Mr. Brailsford shirks awkward facts—except in relation to the Soviet massacres—but when he has written of the wretched housing and the miserable wages, and has pointed out (as he does with great force at the end of the book) that the chief danger which besets the Soviet is that it may lapse into a kind of conventional bureaucracy, he seems to have convinced himself that the present rulers of Russia are very heroic people who have worked and suffered heroically and have a heroic achievement to their credit."

BRAILSFORD, H: N.—Continued
Spec 140:127 Ja 28 '28 920w

"Brailsford's How the Soviets Work is the least technical, the most interestingly written of the five volumes [in the series]." J. G. McDonald
+ Survey 60:303 Je 1 '28 190w

BRAILSFORD, HENRY NOEL. Olives of endless age; being a study of this distracted world and its need of unity. 431p il $3.50 (10s 6d) Harper

341 World politics. League of nations. Internationalism. Peace 28-3314

Mr Brailsford's review of world politics, the arrangements of the peace settlement and the present limitations of the League of nations leads him to certain definite proposals for making the League effective by means of police power and economic control.

Booklist 24:308 My '28

"In a fuller degree perhaps than any English writer of his kind, he combines a power of lucid and trenchant exposition with a gift of irony, which in the body of this important and challenging book he has been at some pains to hold in. Mr. Brailsford is more than a little tired of the distressing details of unsettled Europe. Consequently, when dealing with them, the pen that obeys his fine intelligence is somewhat less vigorous and pointed than usual." S. K. Ratcliffe
+ — Bookm 67:308 My '28 1100w

"One is not likely to light upon a more lucid exposition of contemporary international currents nor upon one more amply documented by direct observation."
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p20 Mr 18 '28 320w

"His grasp of existing conditions is sane, far reaching and acute. His sketches of the needs of each country bear witness to a cool and judging mind, and his suggested remedies, while modestly put forth, show keenly constructive thinking. He does not leave the reader with the feeling that after all the puzzle remains unsolved, or if a solution is considered that it is too fantastic or weak to be useful."
+ Boston Transcript p4 F 11 '28 560w
Cleveland Open Shelf p58 My '28

"Any one who is convinced that the political world, however new it may become, will never take on much more regularity of form or consistency of idea than is to be observed today will probably dismiss Mr. Brailsford's book as only one more bit of useless political speculation; but even those who care nothing for dreams will find a good deal to set them thinking in the author's keen analysis of contemporary world politics, and his severe arraignment of the wisdom of the mighty and the great from whose more recent performances all sorts and conditions of men still suffer. It is in what he has to say about national, regional, continental, and world situations at the present moment, after the seeds of a blind and criminal peace have sprouted and grown, that he makes his best contribution to political criticism." W: MacDonald
+ — Nation 126:160 F 8 '28 880w

"Mr. Brailsford's book is admirably written, with a witty, bitter prelude. As a guide, when Mr. Brailsford puts the telescope to his eye, he often fixes it upon a very distant future, and some of his suggestions are frankly 'utopian.' They are none the worse for that; our only criticism is that sometimes the intermediate stages between the harsh realities of to-day and the international millennium are not clearly envisaged."
+ — Nation and Ath 42:791 F 25 '28 350w

"Mr. Brailsford is practical above everything. He has thrown overboard a lot of dreary baggage, prejudices, myths and hesitations. He wants clean and noble thinking about the future of mankind, and has offered a stimulating example. Many able books have specified our troubles. I know of no other which has gone so far in this present crisis in laying down a program worth serious consideration." Lyman Bryson
+ New Repub 53:354 F 15 '28 780w
Reviewed by Herbert Solow
N Y Evening Post p12 Ja 28 '28 580w
Reviewed by Hiram Motherwell
N Y Times p3 F 19 '28 680w
Reviewed by Herschel Brickell
No Am 225:adv Mr '28 120w
Sat R 145:166 F 11 '28 210w
Reviewed by G. L. Dickinson
Sat R of Lit 4:756 Ap 14 '28 800w

"We would commend his excellent and well-deserved tribute to the work of Dr. Rajchmann of the Health Department of the League, and to Sir Arthur Salter. These two men, each in his sphere, have wrought miracles in the cause of the sanitary and economic rehabilitation of Europe. For the rest, the book is clever but unsound."
+ — Spec 140:123 Ja 28 '28 300w

"As a writer, Mr. Brailsford is his own worst enemy. He commands a fluent and attractive style which tempts him to expound in detail every idea which crosses his mind. He has, moreover, his full share of the superiority affected by so many members of his school."
— Times [London] Lit Sup p135 F 23 '28 350w
Wis Lib Bul 24:157 My '28

BRAIN, WALTER RUSSELL. Galatea; or, The future of Darwinism. (To-day and to-morrow ser.) 95p $1 Dutton [2s 6d K. Paul]

575 Evolution 28-26442

This small treatise is a defense of Darwinism against the criticisms and claims of Neo-Darwinism and the mechanistic theory.

"The author of Galatea outlines Darwinism and Neo-Darwinism. Much of his material is not new, and it is not arranged very interestingly." J. F. C.
— Boston Transcript p4 Ag 1 '28 90w
Nation and Ath 42:756 F 18 '28 90w

BRAMAH, ERNEST, pseud. See Smith, E. B.

BRAND, MAX. Pillar Mountain; a western story. 314p $2 Dodd

28-21894

Brought up alone on Pillar Mountain by the old man he calls uncle, Philip is a guileless youth who takes for granted his prodigious strength and perfect marksmanship. He comes down from the mountain an innocent apostle of good-will and is at once forced into a fight with a pair of cowboy bullies, and drawn into a feud over a lost mine. In the opposite camp there is the Colonel, a giant of a man with whom Philip fights a titanic battle while saving the brother of the girl he loves.

"Mr. Brand's fighting hero is freshly characterized and amusing. His friends, supporters and enemies deserve honorable mention for their line of engaging vernacular." Will Cuppy
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p18 O 7 '28 80w
Boston Transcript p2 O 3 '28 180w

"Mr. Max Brand is one of the ablest manufacturers of that somewhat standardized trade product, Western fiction. This one is a good Western and something more. Mr. Brand has injected a good deal of humor into it—an infusion which few other writers in this field manage successfully, and he has also endowed it with an atmosphere suggestive of some myth from the childhood of the race. Western fans will note one flaw in this otherwise highly interesting and satisfactory book—once Philip's great fight is won Mr. Brand turns to the required minor theme of getting his hero into his heroine's arms, and lets his villains go more or less by default."

+ — Sat R of Lit 5:253 O 13 '28 280w

BRAND, MAX. Pleasant Jim. 276p $2 Dodd 28-4069

Pleasant Jim was in need of money to pay off the mortgage on his horse farm. When Tom Rizdal offered him $1000 for an apparently easy and harmless mission, Jim undertook it and as a result landed in jail. From this his career of crime began, but if it had not been for that he would never have met Sally. And but for Sally he never would have been exonerated. Complicated but true.

"Makes grand reading for Western fans. And for a change, not a cow is in sight." Will Cuppy

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 F 5 '28 70w

"The story is not written for a thinking public. It is written for those who want to be amused, and to this public only will it make an appeal, even as a well-staged motion picture 'thriller' might, for it is direct and vigorous, never for a moment forgetting the reason for its being."

Boston Transcript p2 My 9 '28 300w

N Y Times p18 F 26 '28 180w

Times [London] Lit Sup p809 N 1 '28 120w

BRANDANE, JOHN. Treasure ship, Rory aforesaid, and The happy war; three plays. 248p pa $2 Houghton [6s Constable]

822 [28-14492]

"The title play is a four-act comedy concerned with the somewhat shady activities of a company organized to bring up the treasure supposed to have been sunk in the harbor of a Scotch Highland town when the Spanish Armada went down. Two one-act plays are also included, 'Rory afore-said' and 'The happy war.' "—Cleveland Open Shelf

— Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p19 S 9 '28 80w

Cleveland Open Shelf p116 N '28

"The whole volume is a great disappointment; the comedies are not funny, the tragedy is far from convincing or tragic. Rory Aforesaid, founded on Maître Pierre Patelin, is the best of the three, but unimportant."

— Theatre Arts Mo 12:768 O '28 170w

"It is impossible to say, on the evidence of this volume, that Mr. Brandane's work increases in strength. He has an active sense of the theatre, but is in danger of allowing his pleasure in it to sap his less spectacular merits."

— Times [London] Lit Sup p353 My 10 '28 180w

BRANDON, JOHN G. Secret brotherhood. 320p $2 Dial press 28-20345

A masked organization meets in an obscure quarter of London to draw lots for the murder of a high official. A Russian girl draws the death ballot. On the same night all fashionable London gathers at the Dowager-Duchess of Casaldon's. Her protegée, a Russian princess, arrives late in a nervously excited state. A sequence of startling events connects the first group with the second in the person of the lovely princess—or someone remarkably like her. Her English lover, Scotland yard, and a blind man share honors in the dangerous business of detection.

"Rough but rich in valid suspense." Will Cuppy

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 S 2 '28 150w

Boston Transcript p5 S 22 '28 250w

N Y Times p26 O 21 '28 200w

"A thrilling mixture of detective work, Bolshevist fanatics' plots, high society life and daring blackmailing. The reader is kept in the dark about virtually everything until the closing chapters when a great surprise is given."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e S 9 '28 180w

BRASH, W. BARDSLEY. Methodism. (Faiths: varieties of Christian expression) 207p $2 Doubleday, Doran [5s Methuen]

287 Methodism

The author begins his account of Methodism where Methodism itself began, in the life and work of John and Charles Wesley. The book is both a history of the Methodist church and an expression of its faith. The volume is one in the Faiths series, edited by L. P. Jacks.

"A most compact and capable little book."

+ Spec 141:20 Jl 7 '28 200w

"It is no discredit to an excellent book to say that it contains nothing that is strictly original. It covers old ground and it covers it well. . . The story of Wesley, of course, includes that of his family, and passes on to his successors. Mr. Bardsley Brash tells it well. Perhaps the best part of the whole book is a charming, because sympathetic, chapter on the hymnology of the Methodists, which he entitles 'A Nest of Singing Birds.' "

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p574 Ag 9 '28 540w

BRASOL, BORIS LEO. Elements of crime (psycho-social interpretation); with introds. by John H. Wigmore and William A. White. 433p $5 (25s) Oxford

364 Crime and criminals. Psychology, Pathological 27-24548

The author examines society and the individual for causes of crime, finding in the constitution of the one and the mind of the other certain conditions which engender criminal behavior. The author is former prosecuting attorney, St Petersburg supreme court.

"The multitude of algebraic formula, graphs and what not with which the book is decorated bear witness only to the inherent weakness of the author's method but, if the analysis is poor, the facts that are analyzed are well worth attention." E: H. Bierstadt

— + Bookm 67:325 My '28 350w

Reviewed by W. D. Lane

— Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p18 My 20 '28 780w

"A valuable contribution to the understanding as well as to the literature of crime is made by this book." E. N.

+ Boston Transcript p4 Ja 11 '28 720w

"The book is primarily legalistic, classificatory and artificial, in spite of no little attention to economic and social factors in the causation of crime and a chapter on mental diseases and crime. The author is characteristic of a type of Russian writer, notable for erudition, bibliographic detail and ingenious classifications, but less talented in the field of careful analytical reasoning and theoretical interpretation." H. E. Barnes

New Repub 56:sup218 O 10 '28 680w

"A remarkably learned, yet lucid, survey of conditions in our own and the principal European countries."

+ N Y World p11m Mr 18 '28 150w

R of Rs 77:30 Je '28

"M. Brasol is that rara avis, a trained prosecutor with a broad background of research, scientific rather than legalistic in nature. He is therefore able to perform the difficult and necessary feat of pointing the way to reconciling the legal aspects of crime with the social and psychological aspects. . . The work throughout has added value for Americans because of the wealth of data which the author draws from European sources not easily available to those not poly-lingual. The bibliography is unusually comprehensive and cosmopolitan."

BRASOL, B. L.—Continued
+ Sat R of Lit 4:870 My 12 '28 500w

Springf'd Republican p10 Mr 16 '28 450w

"Any one wishing to acquaint himself with the modern scientific approach to the problems of crime could hardly do better than study Mr. Brasol's book. It is difficult to recall any volume which so clearly and completely defines the fundamentals of criminology, or with such true sense of proportion arranges them in order."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p580 Ag 9 '28 1500w

BRAYBROOKE, PATRICK. Some goddesses of the pen. 156p $2.50 Lippincott [7s 6d C. W. Daniel]

823 Novelists, English [28-12904]

Mr Braybrooke forms a critical estimate of eight women writers by analysing one work of each of them. The writers are: Sheila Kaye-Smith, Rose Macaulay, Ethel M. Dell, the Baroness Orczy, Mrs Alfred Sidgwick, Cynthia Stockley, Mrs Henry De La Pasture, Mrs Baillie-Reynolds.

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:400 Jl '28

"It would be hard to name a duller, more worthless collection of essays. There is not, in the entire book, one illuminating remark about any writer whom the author attempts to criticise. . . It is incredible that any writer, and Mr. Braybrooke calls himself a professional critic, should have the temerity to offer these eight pieces of criticism. The book's one commendable feature is its brevity."
— Sat R of Lit 4:689 Mr 17 '28 180w

Times [London] Lit Sup p821 N 10 '27 130w

BRAYBROOKE, PATRICK. Thomas Hardy, and his philosophy. 167p $2.50 Lippincott [7s 6d C. W. Daniel]

823 Hardy, Thomas 28-13533

In a detailed analysis of several of Hardy's works—The return of the native, The mayor of Casterbridge, Tess of the D'Urbervilles and The Dynasts—Mr Braybrooke searches for signs of Hardy's philosophy, which he sums up in a concluding chapter.

"Though it is redeemed by an earnestness, a sincerity, and a freedom of expression, though it does convey a fairly clear conception of Hardy's philosophy of 'Determinism,' it is decidedly disappointing and often wretchedly written." Robert Kissack, Jr.
— + Bookm 67:445 Je '28 90w

"It might have been thought that his 'Considerations on Edmund Goose' reached the nadir of ineffectualness and inanity; but this book on Thomas Hardy is, if possible, feebler still." S: C. Chew
— Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p21 My 27 '28 170w

Reviewed by Ernest Boyd
Ind 120:459 My 12 '28 420w

" 'Rather unexplainable,' 'rather incredible,' 'There is always that certain kind of epic aloofness of Tess,' are typical touches of a mannerism which scarcely assists philosophic analysis." Edmund Blunden
Nation and Ath 42:816 Mr 3 '28 110w

"It would not be easy to write an uninteresting book about Mr. Hardy, and Mr. Braybrooke's summaries and extracts from the principal novels, 'The Dynasts' and the verse are pleasant enough. But he has no great insight, so it seems to us, into Mr. Hardy's philosophy; pessimist, determinist and the like are only labels of a rough-and-ready sort, and some more penetrating analysis is needed. Some of his judgments, too, are curious."
— + Times [London] Lit Sup p82 F 2 '28 120w

BRAZELTON, MRS ETHEL MAUDE (COLSON). Writing and editing for women; a bird's-eye view of the widening opportunities for women in newspaper, magazine and other writing work. 258p $2.50 Funk

070 Journalism 27-23567

Based on the author's experience in newspaper, magazine, and freelance writing these chapters cover quite thoroughly the field of writing and editing for women. To many of the chapters women writers prominent in their several fields have contributed suggestions and advice. The book, which may be used as a text, has been written by an instructor in the Medill school of journalism, Northwestern university.

Booklist 24:267 Ap '28

"The book is benevolent, informative and distinctly practical. Mrs. Brazelton knows what jobs exist and how to get them. Her title should, however, be 'Writing Jobs.' Writing is something else again."
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 F 5 '28 150w

"All sorts of sound advice and valuable information for women eager to succeed in the profession of writing are contained in this volume."
+ Boston Transcript p4 D 17 '27 350w

Cleveland Open Shelf p47 Ap '28

"A readable, exceptionally well-informed, comprehensive presentation of a subject often misrepresented."
+ J Home Econ 20:203 Mr '28 30w

St Louis 26:4 Ja '28

BREAKENRIDGE, WILLIAM M. Helldorado; bringing the law to the mesquite. 256p il $4 Houghton

979.1 Frontier and pioneer life. Tombstone, Arizona. Outlaws 28-25741

A one-time deputy sheriff of Tombstone, Arizona recalls that and other exciting passages of his life, a good deal of which was spent in "helping to tame the Indians and bad men in Colorado and Arizona."

Boston Transcript p6 N 24 '28 200w

" 'Helldorado' is a dry, terse, matter-of-fact book that breathes authenticity. Its author has tried neither for color nor glamour. He has set down only what he did and what he saw. His book is a photograph, not an imaginative painting." F: F. Van de Water
+ N Y Evening Post p9m N 17 '28 350w

BREBNER, JOHN BARTLET. New England's outpost; Acadia before the conquest of Canada. (Studies in history, economics, and public law) 291p $4.50 Columbia univ. press

971.6 Nova Scotia—History. Acadia 27-27565

Dr Brebner, who is associate professor of history in Columbia university, examines the troubled history of Nova Scotia and the Acadian people until 1763, when Canada became a British possession. He shows in detail how British colonial policy worked out in Nova Scotia, explains how the expulsion of the Acadians was brought about and accounts for the important influence exerted by New England on the history of Nova Scotia.

Am Econ R 18:285 Je '28 60w

"A scholarly but refreshingly readable history." L. S. Mayo
+ Am Hist R 33:667 Ap '28 550w

"The study itself is interesting because of the picture it draws of the way in which Great Britain administered the colony, where for forty years the garrison alone was English, and of how the wars of the mid-eighteenth century and the policies of France and England finally fatally involved the simple Acadians and brought about their expulsion."
+ Boston Transcript p4 D 28 '27 280w

Reviewed by Archibald MacMechan
Canadian Hist R 9:63 Mr '28 250w
Nation 127:49 Jl 11 '28 130w

"The author of this original and scholarly treatise, which is a valuable contribution to our colonial history, is a distinguished graduate of Toronto and Oxford, and is at present an Assistant Professor of History in Columbia University."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p65 Ja 26 '28 330w

BRETT, GEORGE SIDNEY. Psychology, ancient and modern. (Our debt to Greece and Rome) 164p $1.75 Longmans

150 Psychology—History. Philosophy, Ancient 28-16318

Short history of the beginning of psychology, stressing the best in the psychology of the Greeks. The later chapters deal with more modern psychology as it relates to the earlier ideas. Author is professor of philosophy, University of Toronto.

Booklist 25:52 N '28

"He has done his work well and made a readable book which will rarely, if ever, mislead the ordinary reader. It is not his fault that the limitations imposed by the plan of the series make it impossible for him to offer much that will be new and interesting to scholars." Paul Shorey
+ Class Philol 23:313 Jl '28 230w
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:551 N '28

BREUNING, MARGARET. Exploring New York's art galleries. 241p il $2.50 McBride

708.1 New York (city)—Galleries and museums. Art—Galleries and museums 28-12771

"Description with historical and biographical comment on a selection from the outstanding pictures in the Metropolitan and Brooklyn Museums and the smaller collections of the Hispanic Museum, the New York Public Library, the New York Historical Society and the City Hall."—Pratt

---

Booklist 25:60 N '28

"This book by the art critic of the New York Evening Post, serves a happy end by spreading out the Metropolitan, wisely and smoothly and exactly, for the visitor. The underlying interest of the writer is both human and critical, never foolish and never loose, but always easy and full of intelligence and warm choice. If to my taste there is a certain slighting of the greatness of Veronese and Tintoretto, this may in the end be the sensible thing to do, since those artists are so scantily represented in our museum. Otherwise the plan by which this guide proceeds, by schools, countries and gallery arrangement, is both workable and stimulating." S. Y.
+ New Repub 57:254 Ja 16 '29 300w

"Miss Breuning gives always a bit of background of artist's life and character and the times in which he lived, pays some attention to streams of artistic tendency and to influences that helped develop schools and eras of achievement and briefly discusses paintings and artists with insight and discrimination."
+ N Y Times p18 My 13 '28 400w

"In addition to being excellently arranged and informative, it is readable." Herschel Brickell
+ No Am 226:adv Jl '28 130w
Pratt p28 autumn '28

BREWSTER, EDWIN TENNEY. This puzzling planet; the earth's unfinished story; how men have read it in the past, and how the wayfarer may read it now. 328p il $4 Bobbs

550 Geology. Earth 28-22838

An interesting presentation of present knowledge of the earth's story, which includes in its discussion theories that have been formerly held and discarded. The book is illustrated and indexed, and a bibliography is appended.

" 'This Puzzling Planet' is propaganda for evolution. It is also a clear, often delightful, exposition of the material, history and scope of a science seldom regarded, though nearest at hand. Excellent illustrations and a selected bibliography unite to attract the reader to look intelligently in the directions where the text has stimulated his curiosity." R. O. Sawtell
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p18 N 25 '28 450w

"This Puzzling Planet is in some sense a companion volume to his other fascinating book, 'Creation, a History of Anti-evolutionary Theories,' about which this reviewer became justifiably excited a year or more ago. This new volume is a history of man's increasing acquaintance with inorganic nature, as the former one was of the organic world. But to call them histories does not do justice to the zest and sparkle with which the stories are told."
+ Christian Century 45:1107 S 13 '28 90w

"The author of this book has a notable faculty for picking our essential elements, setting them forth in cogent order with their interrelations clearly established and stating it all in lucid, simple, readable style. In fact, he has almost a genius for the popularizing of science. His approach to his subject and his treatment of it throughout have freshness, ingenuity and the sort of zest that is the outcome of his own keen enjoyment of geologic study."
+ N Y Times p12 O 7 '28 360w

"Both the author and the reading public are to be congratulated upon the appearance of this work. The method of treatment is clear and unencumbered by unnecessary details. Mr. Brewster is well read in his subject and has the faculty of expressing himself clearly without too great an attempt at profundity."
+ Sat R of Lit 5:498 D 8 '28 400w

BRIDGES, THOMAS CHARLES. Young folk's book of the sea. (Romance of knowledge ser.) 276p il $2 Little

551.46 Ocean. Ships 28-7756

Oceans and ocean life, ships of all kinds thru the course of history, the fish of the sea and their food, lighthouses, lights, and lifeboats—all these are interestingly described and illustrated for the young reader.

Booklist 24:367 Je '28

"In theory, the book is for boys and girls and it is these young folk who will profit most from reading it but many an adult, on scanning the various chapters will admit that he has learned something he never knew before."
+ Boston Transcript p3 Ap 7 '28 100w
Cleveland Open Shelf p114 N '28

"The book is well written and its narrative is garnished with many anecdotes and incidents, while the author has taken pains to have its scientific data up to date."
+ N Y Times p12 Je 24 '28 250w
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:506 O '28
St Louis 26:329 O '28

"Written in a simple, explanatory style, with a profusion of illustrations, many of them in colour, and published at an extremely reasonable price, this book should appeal particularly to young people."
+ Sat R 143:948 Je 18 '27 200w

"Children cannot begin too early to learn about the sea and yearn for it. Here, with numerous pictures and in a style which is simple and appealing they will get its history along with its atmosphere, mystery, and the hint of its tremendous allure." A. F. Loomis
+ Sat R of Lit 5:79 Ag 25 '28 950w
Times [London] Lit Sup p489 Jl 14 '27 180w

BRIDGMAN, PERCY WILLIAMS. Logic of modern physics. 228p $2.50 Macmillan

530.1 Physics 27-9657

"The author of the latest discussion of the foundations of physics, Prof. P. W. Bridgman, of Harvard University, is a highly distinguished experimenter in a branch of physics with a peculiarly difficult technique, most of which he has developed himself. His main attitude in the present work may be called a qualified phenomenalism. Bridgman discusses problems of time and relativity and the value of mathematical methods."—Nature

---

Booklist 24:52 N '27

Reviewed by Gerald Wendt

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p21 Mr 4 '28 250w

"Prof. Bridgman's points are always well made and his style is attractive. His acute, though at times too far-reaching criticism is the best example known to the reviewer of both the benefits and the drawbacks of the phenomenalist attitude, and his work can be strongly recommended to the attention of those interested in the foundations of science." Harold Jeffreys

+ Nature 121:86 Ja 21 '28 800w

"Professor Bridgman is certainly well fitted for the task which he undertakes. He is an experimental physicist of the very first order, and the book reveals him as a vigorous thinker and a writer of distinction."

+ N Y Times p38 Mr 4 '28 600w

St Louis 25:325 O '27

"Prof Bridgman's book is well worthy to rank with the essays on conceptual thought which have been furnished us in the past by European mathematicians—W. K. Clifford, J. H. Poincare and others." C. S. L.

+ Springf'd Republican p12 Mr 23 '28 480w

BRIERLY, JAMES LESLIE. Law of nations; an introduction to the international law of peace. 228p $2 (5s) Oxford

341 International law and relations. Peace

"Professor Brierly, of Oxford University, believes that international law is something more than a code of morals; that it is, in fact, a system of customary law. Violations of this system, as far as the law of peace is concerned, he believes, are rare. The defects of international law cannot be cured merely by devising a better system of sanctions; law is strong not because of a police force but because of the respect that it commands. International law is inadequate because of the smallness of its range, the uncertainty of many of its rules and the slowness of its development. . . Real progress cannot be realized without very great apparent, though not on a long view real, sacrifices of special national interests."—Books (N Y Herald Tribune)

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p27 N 25 '28 280w

"Mr. Brierly's volume is an admirable analysis on broad lines of the international law of peace, a subject on which there are few books which one can recommend to the unlearned in search of an introduction."

+ Nation and Ath 43:472 Jl 7 '28 50w

"As a guide to the study of international relations, Mr. Brierly's little book is valuable. He recognises the limitations of international law in the present stage of our civilisation."

+ New Statesman 31:400 Je 30 '28 250w

BRIGHAM, ALBERT PERRY. United States of America. 308p il $3 Oxford [8s 6d Univ. of London press]

917.3 United States—Description and travel 28-10199

This study of the geography of the United States is written by the professor of geology at Colgate university. It covers the physical, regional, industrial, and human phases of American geography, and is designed for both the student and the general reader.

Am J Soc 34:408 S '28 120w

Am Pol Sci R 22:482 My '28 50w

+ Boston Transcript p4 F 8 '28 520w

Geog R 18:518 Jl '28 180w

"Besides the students of the later secondary and the earlier university years for whom the work is specifically intended as a text, there must be a wide circle of readers who have wished for a trustworthy account—not too long, and not too technical—of the United States and its varied inhabitants as they are to-day. They need look no further: for here they will find a panoramic survey of all the leading facts; a summary which is masterly in its balance, and in its freedom from the cramped terseness of many small works on large subjects; and an outlook which is sane and unprejudiced."

+ Nature 121:9 Ja 7 '28 210w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:495 O '28

R of Rs 77:22 Mr '28 100w

"The book is especially recommended to public libraries and to the required reading of teachers' reading circles." R. G. Buzzard

+ Survey 60:242 My 15 '28 350w

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p560 Ag 2 '28 800w

BROCK, LYNN, pseud. See McAllister, A.

BROD, MAX. Redemption of Tycho Brahe; with an introd. by Stefan Zweig; tr. from the German by Felix Warren Crosse. 289p $2.50 (7s 6d) Knopf

Brahe, Tyge—Fiction 28-13908

In his castle in Bohemia, surrounded by his family, pupils and astronomical aids, lived Tycho Brahe, the famous Danish astronomer, an exponent of the old scientific school. Johann Kepler, the young German astronomer, the follower of the new and godless Copernican system, comes to Brahe as a student and assistant. And slowly the old order gives way to the new and the magnificent old leader goes his protesting way to the end of his dreams and death.

Booklist 25:70 N '28

"There is beauty in this, profound understanding, and exaltation. And yet 'The Redemption of Tycho Brahe' is disappointing. It is disappointing that a chapter from the past truthfully conceived and deeply realized should be sacrificed to a form of sentimental pleading. It is, most of all, disappointing that the life and power with which Max Brod has so ably endowed his characters should be dissipated at the end in generalities." Eugene Lohrke

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p2 Jl 1 '28 530w

"The novel has power, especially in its emotional analyses. There is an occasional let-down in some of the narrative portions, but never for long. The translation is excellent." L. S. K.

+ Boston Transcript p2 Jl 11 '28 330w

"The Redemption of Tycho Brahe has a spaciousness and eloquence which only a first-rate imagination can bring to the art of the historical novel."

+ Dial 85:356 O '28 90w

"Beside the powerful central presentation of the two personalities, the rather creaky intrigue of the tale appears dull and almost irrelevant. Like all of Herr Brod's work, the book is occasionally impeded by rhetorical overindulgence and a heavy circumlocutory prose with which the translator fights a spirited but losing battle. Nevertheless, so much original power is manifest here that one looks forward to the planned translation of Reubeni, generally considered Herr Brod's most solid piece of fiction."

+ — Nation 127:162 Ag 15 '28 200w

"An elaborate historical novel dealing with the personal relations of Tycho Brahe and Kepler, the crash between them over the Copernican system, and, as the title suggests, the redemption of Tycho Brahe through suffering. Obviously this is as good a subject as any other. But the result is not particularly interesting. As a whole the book suffers like so many historical novels, suffers from the historical and purely personal themes being inadequately welded." Francis Birrell

Nation and Ath 43:499 Jl 14 '28 130w

Reviewed by Laura Benet

N Y Evening Post p9 Jl 7 '28 330w

"Here is a penetrating study in contrasting genius, taken from historical sources and wrought into a novel of such depth and distinction that it has something of a classic air."

+ N Y Times p8 Je 10 '28 460w

Reviewed by Herschel Brickell

No Am 226:adv Jl '28 110w

BRODY, CATHARINE. Babe Evanson. 425p $2.50 Century

28-21744

The story reproduces faithfully the drab environment of a Harlem stenographer and the monotonous level of her life. There is nothing fine, or even intelligent in Babe Evanson's home life, in her friendships or in her commonplace love affairs; yet by her very faithfulness of portraiture the author invests Babe Evanson's story with actuality, if not with interest.

"As a venture in what has been called drab realism, Babe's history possesses the solid merits of credibility and cumulative interest once you are resolved to go its full length of 425 pages. . . Miss Brody brings Babe thoroughly alive and provides a sizable gallery of well studied characters."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p23 N 11 '28 230w

Boston Transcript p7 N 28 '28 250w

"However colorless her characters may be in life, Miss Brody has been able to project herself into their minds and accurately portray their feelings. She has taken upon herself the tremendous task of making interesting the uninteresting things done by uninteresting people. . . Miss Brody chose a hard task for herself and has succeeded. If the book is not remembered, it will only be because gray, however clearly defined, is still gray."

+ N Y Times p6 S 30 '28 650w

BRODY, SANDOR. Rembrandt; a romance of divine love and art; tr. out of the Hungarian by Louis Rittenberg. 257p $2.50 Globus press, 28 W. 8th st., N.Y.

Rembrandt Hermanszoon van Rijn—Fiction

28-14829

"During the last three years of his life Rembrandt van Rijn lived much with certain Jews in the Ghetto of Amsterdam; and among them the old outcast died. This series of expressionistic sketches (for it can hardly be termed a novel) occasionally conveys some of the miserable tragedy of the painter's last years."—Nation

---

Bookm 68:xxvi S '28 120w

"Accurate or not, he presents a picture that is worth having. The novel is impressionistic in form, consisting of a number of short chapters, each presenting a phase, a tableau, or an incident, with no strict continuity from one to the other, but in the aggregate forming an excellent composite picture."

+ Boston Transcript p2 Jl 11 '28 130w

"As the personalities revealed in the famous pictures slip out from behind their frames, and as the ecstatic painter inebriates himself with their life, and with the life of the inanimate things about them, one feels that, right or wrong in biographical detail, these naively impassioned pages do catch something of the vagabond frenzy of the great artist's vision."

+ Dial 85:443 N '28 150w

"It is difficult to understand why this hasty and uneven book should have been hailed as a European masterpiece; yet it is not without its moments of insight."

— + Nation 127:20 Jl 4 '28 80w

"On the whole the picture, though intensely realistic, is a macabre one. The death scene is the most moving. From the book we gather not the essence of the great painter's genius so much as his pathetic lust for his personal life." L. B.

— + N Y Evening Post p7 Je 9 '28 90w

N Y Times p11 Je 17 '28 580w

Reviewed by E. C. Beckwith

N Y World p7m Je 24 '28 150w

"The records of Rembrandt's none too orderly life give no warrant for the picture here presented under the auspices of divine love and art."

— Sat R of Lit 4:1037 Jl 14 '28 150w

BROKAW, WARREN EDWIN. Equitable society and how to create it. 374p Equitist press, R. 4, box 225-A, Phoenix, Ariz. $1.50; Vanguard press 50c

330.1 Economics. Land. Exchange 27-18515

"The book has its roots in Henry George, the single-tax movement, and a narrow concept of justice. It attempts to rule out love, to be purely 'intellectual.' It would annul by peaceful agreement all titles to exclusive possession except the exertion of individuals, basing all exchange of titles on hour for hour of adult human work regardless of its kind or nature." —World Tomorrow

---

"Scientifically the book is worthless. Its economics are fantastic and its sociology grotesque. The Equitists are a group of muddled idealists who vision an automatically adjusting social order based on a universal labor unit of one dollar an hour. Yet the printing of this book is a good thing. It gives expression to the discontent of a group of morally earnest, though ignorant, people who rebel at certain undoubted injustices of the existing social order." L. P. Edwards

— + Am J Soc 33:848 Mr '28 130w

"The reviewer is not ready to state offhand whether the author actually does show how to create equitable society; but it is certain that he makes a vigorous attempt, and that his plan for a reformed society, based upon a 'balanced land tenure,' is deserving of a widespread and attentive hearing." S. A. Coblentz

Bookm 66:693 F '28 60w

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p9 Ag 26 '28 110w

"Here is a strange, conglomerate, hasty, deep, contradictory book. Yet it is a patient and honest life work, really the work of a family, with the collaboration of countless interesting quotations." Martin Beardslee

World Tomorrow 11:471 N '28 150w

BROMFIELD, LOUIS. Strange case of Miss Annie Spragg. 314p $2.50 Stokes [7s 6d J. Cape]

Using a device made familiar by Thornton Wilder in "The Bridge of San Luis Rey" Mr Bromfield has told a dozen stories, only remotely connected but grouped around the central figure of an eccentric old maid whose death in a shabby rooming house in Brinoë, Italy, with the miracle of the stigmata upon her body, sets in motion a strange tale of religious fanaticism starting years before on the prairies of the Middle West.

Booklist 25:70 N '28

"I consider this book to rise head and shoulders above Mr. Bromfield's previous works of fiction." C. P. Fadiman

+ Bookm 68:223 O '28 350w

"It is by his abundance of material and by his lavish use of it that Bromfield succeeds in 'The Strange Case,' as he has succeeded before. Indeed, no other young American author can match him in material wealth, for a whole swarming world seems to be at his command, and from that world he summons characters as he chooses." B. R. Redman

BROMFIELD, LOUIS—Continued

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p1 S 16 '28 1350w

Boston Transcript p2 S 15 '28 500w

Reviewed by E. F. Edgett

Boston Transcript p6 O 13 '28 480w

"An exhilarating, intelligent, often brilliant book. It reveals Mr. Bromfield clearly, as reviewers sometimes like to say in moments of human frailty, as one of the most important among American novelists. This fifth and latest book is much the finest of his list." A. B. Parsons

+ Nation 127:sup374 O 10 '28 1050w

"The best religious mystery story this reviewer has ever read. . . Mr. Bromfield's psychological penetration and emotional insight are employed with consummate skill. The combination of sinister religious influences with intense dramatic situations developed as the writer's piercing emotional perception enters the lives he delineates makes for concentration of interest in the complicated design." C. B. W.

+ New Repub 56:282 O 24 '28 320w

"It is never dull and never badly written; it is fascinating from beginning to end. It will have the fashionable and literary success that it deserves, and it deserves a great deal. But it is not a great book; it is not an indictment of society like Babbitt, an experiment in form like the work of Hemingway, or in form and language like Carlos Williams' The Great American Novel, or the clumsy but promising work of lesser-known expatriates. This is a book to read and to enjoy while it still has its day." Cyril Connolly

+ New Statesman 32:191 N 17 '28 480w

"Not only has Mr. Bromfield bitten off infinitely more than he is endowed for chewing, but he is sublimely unaware of it. He seems to rest calmly on an assumption that he is an important Man of Letters. This seems the more unfortunate because at bottom he possesses, or did possess, at least a decent modicum of talent." Tess Slesinger

— N Y Evening Post p9 O 6 '28 680w

"The book lacks cohesion in theme and in style. It is redeemed by brilliant characterization and by unusual power, but it might have benefited by more time and labor than have been Mr. Bromfield's to give. As a book, it holds one's interest and attention; as a novel, it must be put down as somewhat of a disappointment." J: Carter

N Y Times p2 S 16 '28 1300w

Reviewed by Herschel Brickell

No Am 226:adv N '28 180w

"It is too bad that Louis Bromfield, instead of being satisfied with his own sterling qualities and the position in contemporary American fiction to which they have brought him, should have aspired to become an esoteric novelist. Mr. Bromfield has a fine talent for narrative and tremendous vitality. But among the qualities which he lacks are three which the esoteric novelist must have: wit, originality and an at least acceptable classic prose style."

Outlook 150:954 O 10 '28 580w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:545 N '28

"The whole narrative is an extravaganza, but behind its merry effectiveness lies a serious and philosophical view of the vagaries of human nature. Doubtless many readers will take it for a piece of lighthearted foolery, but it is something more than that; it is an able exposition of some interesting phases of human credulity, selfishness, and impulsiveness. . . . Light and dexterous as is its touch, it is never hilarious, and its best humor is of that dry sort which gives rise at most to a quiet chuckle." Allan Nevins

+ Sat R of Lit 5:143 S 22 '28 1000w

"Whatever its intrinsic value, this is a novel of general readability and of skilful management and superior workmanship. Not many writers could effect such a combination of human nature with a background of strange, superstitious and abnormal elements without making it exaggerated, bizarre and melodramatic."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e S 23 '28 300w

Wis Lib Bul 24:255 O '28

BRONSON, FRANCIS WOOLSEY. Old Nick. 337p $2.50 Doubleday, Doran

28-6521

Old Nick is the wise and understanding father of three sons. Each of the sons in turn is faced with a problem he cannot handle alone, and to each Nick gives the help that is called for. The father's attitude toward his boys is unusually sympathetic and just, and their response to it is his best reward.

Boston Transcript p4 F 11 '28 560w

— Cath World 127:251 My '28 200w

"The book is smoothly enough written, but it is unbearably sentimental and priggish—a diluted version of 'Sorrell and Son.'" E. H. W.

+ — New Repub 54:78 F 29 '28 130w

"There is nothing in the novel that might not be found in some other book; no sharp observation; no philosophy of life; not even any approach toward high poetic feeling. . . The trouble obviously is that Mr. Bronson in this particular book has found nothing to say. He writes always with ease, sometimes with intensity. The things he sets down are, though uninspired, for the most part sound." T: Boyd

— + N Y Evening Post p9 My 5 '28 680w

"As a novel 'The Old Nick' is uneven. The best parts of it are those written out of the relish of recalled personal experience. The great fault with 'The Old Nick' is the staccato quality of the prose. It is good staccato prose, but the lack of modulation through 337 pages breeds monotony. Mr. Bronson excels at phraseology implying the physical, the visual, the kinesthetic; his next book will be greatly improved if he can work this phraseology into sentences that flow more easily."

+ — N Y Times p8 Ja 15 '28 650w

"There is some fulness of life in the book. Its women characters are fairly vivid. Yet the troubles that befall the family and the web that entangles them do not interest this reviewer forcibly enough. It is the style that is not sufficiently distinguished. Mr. Bronson has a story to tell and the gift of narration. But his gift is not as yet sufficiently great truly to enthrall us. 'The Old Nick' remains a workmanlike novel, showing growth,—but falls behind the first flight of the season."

+ — Sat R of Lit 4:558 Ja 28 '28 180w

BROOKE, GEOFFREY FRANCIS HEREMON. Horse lovers. 364p il $3.50 Scribner [12s 6d Constable]

28-16631

"A story of the still extant sporting diversions of the English countryside. The hero is the horse, Crusader, and by following his career the reader can enjoy vicariously all the thrills of horse bargaining, training, fox hunting and steeplechasing."—Cleveland Open Shelf

"The literary naiveté, like the well-drawn, unaffected illustrations done by 'Snaffles,' adds to the book's charm." Marion Leland

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 Mr 18 '28 420w

Boston Transcript p4 Ja 7 '28 450w

Cleveland Open Shelf p65 My '28

"When I heard recently that the colonel had written a novel I felt sorry for him and for his publisher. But curiosity outweighted this feeling and I took up his book, to find myself impatient of every interruption until I had finished it. 'Horse Lovers' is one of the most fascinating stories of English country life that I have ever read. It ranks with the creations of Surtees and the observations of Nimrod. It sparkles with wit and humor and flashes now and then with the vigorous and vivid descriptions of a Masefieldian narrative." Owen Culbertson

+ N Y Evening Post p11 D 17 '27 560w

Reviewed by C: J. Finger
N Y World p10m D 11 '27 140w

"There is much ground for severe criticism in Colonel Brooke's book. The profiteer Potts is blatantly vulgarized. The aitches are remorselessly hacked out of his conversation, and even more remorselessly added. When Colonel Brooke speaks about horses we listen with the attention due to the expert who delights us at Olympia, but the title of this book does not prepare us for the arduous tasks before us, and his preface is tiresome."

— + Spec 139:781 N 5 '27 140w

"A sporting novel of a quality considerably higher than the ordinary."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p930 D 8 '27 370w

BROOKS, CHARLES STEPHEN. Roads to the [2] north. 375p il $3 Harcourt

914.2 England—Description and travel

28-24736

The author of "Roundabout to Canterbury" (Book Review Digest, 1926) has written a similarly genial account of a leisurely bicycling trip from Southampton northward by English roads to Scotland. As in the earlier volume Julia McCune Flory has made the drawings which fit so neatly the spirit of the text.

"Many others before have written about some or all of these places, written in varying manner and in all sorts of mood. Mr. Brooks may not have said it best but he certainly has said it differently and in a manner entirely his own, a manner that puts upon his work the stamp of individuality." F. M.

+ Boston Transcript p8 D 8 '28 1100w

"Mr. Brooks is not one of the great descriptive writers whose word-painting is memorable. On the other hand his depictions have that disjointed ease of manner which one's own letters from a strange land have, a sort of homeliness which is generally certain to make them pleasantly acceptable."

+ — N Y Times p46 D 2 '28 480w

"This charming tale of a wayfarer's adventures with inns and roads and old places is entirely in the tradition of the light essay, and readers who enjoy gracious, leisurely writing will be delighted with it."

+ Outlook 150:1336 D 12 '28 140w

Sat R of Lit 5:498 D 8 '28 130w

" 'Roads to the North' is one of the best books the reviewer has read for a long while. It possesses in a high degree that quality which can only be vaguely described as charm,' that indefinable something that makes a book a pleasant companion rather than a series of pages, or a method of conveying information or pleasure. It is attractively bound and printed, and illustrated with witty and beautiful sketches by Julia McCune Flory." H. K.

+ Springf'd Republican p6e D 16 '28 1400w

BROOKS, COLLIN. Ghost hunters. 284p $2 Sears [7s 6d Hutchinson]

Raeburn Steele, the detective, and his pretty, partner-wife, ferret out a family skeleton, solve the mystery of the death of one young girl and the madness of another, and prove that there are no ghosts at Marley Grange.

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 N 4 '28 80w

Times [London] Lit Sup p173 Mr 8 '28 120w

BROOKS, JONATHAN, pseud. See Mellett, J: C.

BROOKS, RALPH ORDWAY. Critical studies in the legal chemistry of foods; for chemists, food inspection officials, and manufacturers and dealers in food products. 280p $6 Chemical catalog co.

664 Food adulteration and inspection. Food law and legislation. Food—Analysis 27-27510

"This is a compilation of articles published in trade journals, chiefly in 1922 and 1923. It covers only a small portion of the food field: includes fruits and fruit products, condimental sauces, edible oils, cacao products, spices and maple products. The scheme followed in each chapter is to define the basic natural food materials used, to describe the technology employed in preparing these for market, and to give the tolerances (usually and improperly called 'standards') which for the information of the trade have been issued by the federal government."—Am J Pub Health

Reviewed by H. W. Redfield
Am J Pub Health 18:825 Je '28 450w

"The author's writings have an interesting and likable style but the publishers have not given the book a very pleasing appearance; considering this, its size and the predominance of previously published papers in the book, the price seems rather exorbitant." P. D. V. Manning

+ — Chem & Met Eng 35:429 Jl '28 180w

"The book will be of value to persons engaged in those industries that are concerned with the foods discussed. It will also be of interest to food-inspection chemists who desire to obtain information regarding certain trade practices not usually found in the standard textbooks on food, and information relative to abnormal analyses which are liable to result from the examination of apparently normal food products." H. C. Lythgoe

+ Ind & Eng Chem 20:664 Je '28 250w

N Y New Tech Bks 13:6 Ja '28

BROPHY, JOHN. Bitter end. 252p $2.50 Dutton [7s 6d Dent]

28-19965

The theme of the book is the forced maturity of a sensitive English youth who sees the war thru to the bitter end. Donald enlists at sixteen, partly out of nebulous idealism and partly to demonstrate his manhood to his family. He is an innocent boy whose only dream of romance has centered about a knowing little shop girl. He is unprepared for the vice and brutality of the war, but the decency of his friends gives him a standard to cling to. Invalided home to England he meets a girl who gives him a new ideal of love. Tho the leave terminates with a disastrous misconception, the Armistice seems to promise a reunion.

Reviewed by R. E. Larsson
Bookm 68:241 O '28 650w

"Mr. Brophy has written his book in the best English tradition. It is solid, informed and carefully done. He deliberately sacrifices the drama of battle to the development of a soul, although the few war scenes are written with more fire than the rest of the book. His description of the struggle for Cambrai is particularly fine." Larry Barretto

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p2 Jl 29 '28 680w

"A thoughtful and on the whole sincere story of a young man. His family life is not pleasant and the story closes on a note of rather savage despair. It is difficult to see just what it all proves. Much of the dialogue is of a rather artificial and stereotyped quality. Things do happen in life that way, but Mr. Brophy has not made them convincing."

— + Boston Transcript p3 Jl 7 '28 120w

"His analysis of the sex-scared young hero hampered by Victorian prudery is labored and long-winded, nullifying the obvious earnestness with which he writes. The blue pencil would have quickened the story's tempo and repaired its jerky sequences at the same time."

— + Nation 127:162 Ag 15 '28 80w

"It is a good novel, because the story of Donald Foster is never subordinated to the story of the war—as it might easily have been. One sees a sensitive character being shaped and molded under the stress and strain of the most searing and dynamic influences of our time. Episodes of the war, simply and vividly written, form the main part of the story."

+ N Y Times p11 Je 24 '28 580w

BROPHY, JOHN—Continued
Reviewed by Herschel Brickell
No Am 226:adv Ag '28 50w

"Excellent in its way. Nearly every writer who has tried to do what Mr. Brophy does, who complains of the coarseness of his fellows and gibes at staff-officers safe in soft jobs, defeats his own ends; shows himself a chronic grumbler and inclines our sympathy towards the sanguine animal natures whom he despises. Mr. Brophy has too much sense of humor and proportion to fall into this trap. He is not discontented but angry, and his anger rarely misses its mark. The book is as much like a work of art as a warning and an arraignment can well be." L. P. Hartley

+ Sat R 145:569 My 5 '28 210w

"Uncommonly fine novel. The unhackneyed angle from which the narrative is viewed gives the story a freshness and vigor not often equalled in war tales these days. Though the author's name is a new one to us, he writes a prose of mature, forceful eloquence of which many an established novelist could be proud."

+ Sat R of Lit 4:1038 Jl 14 '28 100w

"Donald's estrangement from his family and his love for his soldier chums are understandingly drawn with sensitive feeling. The boy's idyllic romances are woven in naturally."

+ Springf'd Republican p7f Jl 8 '28 200w

Times [London] Lit Sup p380 My 17 '28 220w

"Simple but powerful description and a clear reading of motives which are subtly operating both at the front and on the home base, combined with a fine sense of the futility of war as a method of settling international difficulties and a restraint which increases rather than diminishes one's sense of the reality of it all, make it a book which will not let its readers forget the true meaning of war in ten, twenty or even fifty years." A. B. Greene

+ World Tomorrow 12:519 D '28 250w

BROWN, ANDREW CASSELS. Dr Glazebrook's revenge. 288p $2 Dodd [7s 6d Mills & B.]

28-13909

Summoned to attend an urgent case, just as he was starting out for a much-needed vacation, Dr Liston found himself in a predicament. Here was a woman dying of extreme alcoholism, surrounded by an evident crew of criminals, and yet the dying woman's beautiful daughter, Barbara, was innocent and in need of help. So the doctor further complicated matters by falling in love with Barbara and the vacation was further delayed.

"An international financial plot involving vast amounts of mystery money, an enigmatic drug that does the work and a credible group of characters add to the fun." Will Cuppy

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 Je 10 '28 90w

Boston Transcript p4 Je 30 '28 80w

"In spite of the absurdity of the plot, this might have been a fairly good story if only the author had speeded it up a bit."

— + N Y Times p18 Jl 29 '28 150w

Springf'd Republican p7f Ag 19 '28 230w

Times [London] Lit Sup p337 My 3 '28 180w

BROWN, ARTHUR JUDSON. Japan in the world of to-day. 332p $3.75 Revell

915.2 Japan—Social conditions. Japan—Foreign relations. Japan—Religion 28-9147

"Dr. Brown visited Japan in 1901 and 1909, and has been for thirty years in administrative touch with missionary work in the East. He thinks that the Christian missions are 'the most pervasive and reconstructive of all forces.' He points to the Christian influence upon education and upon the treatment of women and he expresses his belief that Christianity is a stabilizing force in days when the props of the old faiths are tottering."—Books (N Y Herald Tribune)

"Dr. Brown writes from a warm and generous heart. Those who like both Japan and Christian missions will doubtless like his book."

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p15 Je 24 '28 200w

"During his extensive travels Mr. Brown has been in a position to observe the Asiatics with understanding. He is most fair. For the Japanese he neither apologizes nor offers condemnation. He places the facts and suggestions for our own decision." A. C.

+ Boston Transcript p2 My 23 '28 380w

Christian Century 45:858 Jl 5 '28 70w

"No American in the Far East of a religious connection can long avoid the lecturing tone. But though it narrows the circle of his readers, Mr. Brown's method provides exact facts about many of the vital international relations of Japan." Gardner Harding

+ — N Y Times p25 Je 17 '28 750w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:496 O '28

St Louis 26:357 N '28

BROWN, ASHLEY. Sicily, present and past. 188p il $2 Dodd [6s Methuen]

914.58 Sicily

A pocket-size guide book which crowds a great deal of information, descriptive and historical, in its small compass. There are two maps and many good photographic illustrations, an index, and a list of books for further study.

Booklist 25:66 N '28

"Mr. Brown's book on Sicily is a pleasant and useful one, though he keeps to the beaten track of Palermo, Girgenti, Syracuse, Catania, Taormina, and Messina."

+ Nation and Ath 42:980 Mr 31 '28 70w

"It is a strictly practical guide to places and monuments, pleasantly free from long-winded descriptions of natural scenery and national customs, and full of facts concerning the wealth of historical, literary, and psychological detail which surrounds and permeates the buildings of the island."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p415 My 31 '28 130w

Wis Lib Bul 24:190 Je '28

BROWN, BEATRICE CURTIS. Elizabeth Chudleigh, duchess of Kingston. (Representative women) 189p $2 Viking press [3s 6d G. Howe]

B or 92 Chudleigh, Elizabeth, countess of Bristol, calling herself Duchess of Kingston 28-20528

The book sketches the life of an eighteenth century society woman, beautiful and famed for her affairs, whose notoriety reached its height when she was tried for bigamy and found guilty.

"Miss Brown has not attempted anything very exhaustive in the way of research, but she has accomplished a clever piece of interpretative work. The Duchess of Kingston shows through the sifted mass of contemporary burlesque and libel a definite and captivating personality."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p17 S 23 '28 450w

Boston Transcript p3 O 20 '28 300w

"We are never dull in a world where good jokes are as common as bogus maids-of-honour and bad debts. Miss Brown, with her command of tiny, telling detail, makes the most of all this; but the most does not amount to much." Barrington Gates

+ — Nation and Ath 42:360 D 3 '27 170w

New Statesman 30:212 N 26 '27 250w

Reviewed by F: H. Martens

N Y Evening Post p8m O 20 '28 160w

Spec 139:sup836 N 12 '27 360w

Times [London] Lit Sup p856 N 24 '27 240w

BROWN, BRIAN, ed. Story of Buddha and Buddhism: his life and sayings. 209p il $2.50 McKay

294 Buddha and Buddhism 27-25821

The story has a threefold purpose—to tell the story of Buddha's life, explain the doctrine of Buddhism, and give selections from the teachings of Buddha and from the legends about him.

"This is perhaps the most satisfactory single volume on the Buddha." Edna Kenton

+ Bookm 67:198 Ap '28 80w

"Although Mr. Brown mentions a list of works, many of them by distinguished scholars, which he is 'indebted to,' the present book as 'edited' by him is not a scholar's book. Just what kind of book it really is would be difficult to say. But those who trust to it for facts about the Buddha or Buddhism do so on peril of dire confusion."

— Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p19 Mr 11 '28 90w

Boston Transcript p5 Ja 14 '28 280w

No Am 225:adv Ja '28 30w

Reviewed by C: S. Brown

Survey 59:782 Mr 15 '28 110w

World Tomorrow 12:522 D '28 50w

BROWN, BRIAN, ed. Story of Confucius, his life and sayings; with introd. by Ly Yu Sang. 265p il $2.50 McKay

181.1 Confucius and Confucianism 27-25822

As in his similar book on Buddha, the author tells the story of Confucius, outlines the Confucian philosophy, and gives selections from his sayings.

Booklist 24:268 Ap '28

Reviewed by Edna Kenton

Bookm 67:198 Ap '28 80w

"The editor of this compilation has performed a real service to those who are interested in the study of Chinese antiquities by making available much material that has been out of print for some time. It is to be hoped that it will interest more of the intelligent reading public in a scholarly account of Confucius and his teaching."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p16 F 26 '28 140w

Boston Transcript p5 Ja 14 '28 300w

"This is not a dry discourse, but is intended to give the average reader a clear and comprehensive outline of the known facts about Confucius together with his own sayings taken from The Analects, and other writings."

+ No Am 225:adv Ja '28 30w

Reviewed by C: S. Brown

Survey 59:782 Mr 15 '28 110w

World Tomorrow 12:522 D '28 50w

BROWN, CLARA M., and HALEY, ALICE H. Teaching of home economics. (Riverside home economics ser.) 395p $2 Houghton

640.7 Home economics—Study and teaching 28-14801

"Considers the place of home economics in the general scheme of modern education, deals with organization of work in various types of schools and presents methods of teaching."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

---

"Superintendents and principals wishing to acquaint themselves with the rapidly developing subject of home economics in day, evening, and part-time schools will find a wealth of information in a compact, concise form. Teachers, supervisors, and teacher-training departments will welcome the book because of the vision of home economics portrayed and because of the many practical helps given." L. M. Welch

+ El School J 29:316 D '28 400w

"It is exhilarating to find a book to which one can give a hearty endorsement such as this text so thoroughly deserves. It has been written as a textbook for special-methods courses in colleges and universities, but will be found readable and suggestive by the teacher already in the classroom. . . The text gives evidence of careful, discriminating consideration of many materials and points of view, and there is ample evidence that the writers are at home in the fields considered." A. L. Edwards

+ J Home Econ 20:768 O '28 320w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:629 D '28

BROWN, CLARA M., and others. Clothing construction. 236p il $1.72 Ginn

646.2 Dressmaking. Sewing 27-20019

"A handbook on clothing construction. Beginning with 'bands' and ending with 'tucks' each of the major problems involved in garment making is considered in alphabetical order. Detailed instructions are given not only for performing the ordinary sewing processes but also for such essentials as pattern alteration, the blocking of simple patterns, fitting, and repairing."—J Home Econ

---

Booklist 24:270 Ap '28

"Throughout the book no words have been wasted. The discussions are beautifully clear, concise, and very much to the point. The profusion of excellent diagrammatic drawings helps to make the explanations clear and, happily, both these and the half tones have been so carefully selected that changing styles will not affect them . . Its encyclopedic style will appeal greatly to this class of readers who always turn to books on clothing in search of definite answers to specific problems." Ruth O'Brien

+ J Home Econ 20:595 Ag '28 280w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:265 My '28

BROWN, EDNA ADELAIDE. Three gates. 205p il $1.50 Lothrop

28-10793

A story for little children of a little girl who lived in a New England village and who had for playmates, besides Carola, a dog and a kitten and a much loved doll. The doll, Fair Rosamund, disappeared one day and came back after a long, long time as mysteriously as she went, but all dressed up in a brand new dress.

Booklist 25:32 O '28

"It is mildly original and will probably appeal to little girls between the ages of six and ten. An attractive touch is contributed by the antics of Polly's pet animals."

Boston Transcript p2 S 12 '28 90w

Springf'd Republican p7f Je 17 '28 90w

BROWN, HENRY COLLINS. In the golden nineties. (Valentine's manual) 422p il $5 Valentine's manual, inc., Hastings-on-Hudson, N.Y.

974.71 New York (city)—History 27-20444

"An account of high and low life, art, literature, sports, the stage, inventions, reforms, finance, politics and every other phase of the city's life, in the last years before it ceased to be old New York and became the Borough of Manhattan. This is number 12 of the Valentine Manuals, a series chiefly remarkable for its numerous illustrations reproducing the times through contemporary prints and magazine illustrations."—Cleveland Open Shelf

---

Reviewed by Will Irwin

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p5 D 25 '27 460w

Cleveland Open Shelf p50 Ap '28

BROWN, H: C.—Continued

"Perhaps Mr. Brown mourns a little too frequently and loudly the passing of the old days and is a little too sure that they were better and more interesting than those of the present time. It is, of course, the conventional attitude; but it no longer impresses as once it did. His style is careless, sometimes a bit reckless. The copious illustrations, which include a hundred reprints of contemporaneous pictures in black and white and several pages in color, add much to the value and interest of the book."

+ — N Y Times p32 N 27 '27 450w

"Mr. Brown has a good chapter on the literary life of the period, with some first-rate matter about Stevenson and Kipling, Gilder, Brunner, and others, and also about the famous illustrators of a day when magazine illustration was at its best in America." Herschel Brickell

+ No Am 225:adv F '28 300w

Pratt p33 spring '28

"Mr. Brown has copiously illustrated 'In the Golden Nineties.' Pictures and text together furnish a lively and panoramic survey of a period that still dwells in the memory of many, that to some has already become 'the good old times,' and to others seems amusingly old-fashioned. To all, this portrayal of it should prove interesting." Amy Loveman

+ Sat R of Lit 4:340 N 26 '27 300w

BROWN, KATHARINE HOLLAND. The father. 368p $2 Day

28-29428

Katharine Holland Brown's $25,000 prize novel is a semi-historical story of an abolitionist whose ardent activities in the cause force him out of his New England home to a new beginning in Illinois. There his fiery editorials attract Lincoln, who becomes his friend and co-agitator. Back home in the East, Emerson, Hawthorne and Horace Mann remain the editor's staunch friends and admirers, but the chief and dearest of his partisans is his daughter Mercy Rose. This lively and lovely young thing and her romance share equal interest with her father and his sufferings for the cause of anti-slavery. The time of the story is just before the outbreak of the Civil war.

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p14 N 18 '28 350w

Reviewed by W: E. Harris

Boston Transcript p5 D 1 '28 1500w

"The novel moves very slowly and is unnecessarily long. . . Nevertheless, there is a fairly vivid picture of the experiences of an emigrant family in the troubled year preceding the Civil War."

— + N Y Times p6 N 25 '28 580w

Wis Lib Bul 24:306 N '28

BROWN, WILLIAM ADAMS. Beliefs that matter; a theology for laymen. 333p $2.75 Scribner [8s 6d Hodder & S.]

239 Christianity 28-11222

" 'Beliefs That Matter' is a plain statement of what the author believes 'may be a practicable faith for the men and women of today.' The beliefs in question concern ourselves and the world we live in, Jesus, God, the Church, the Bible, the Sacrament and Immortality. They are the faiths of orthodox Christianity restated in such form as should most commend them to thoughtful and well informed readers of today." —New Repub

---

Booklist 25:7 O '28

Reviewed by J: H. Holmes

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p16 My 27 '28 520w

"One of the fairest, frankest statements of faith for the modern man who thinks, who knows modern science and modern thought." T. C. R.

+ Boston Transcript p2 Jl 28 '28 300w

"The discussions in this book are probably exactly what will be welcomed by the many persons who think of religion in terms of the traditional theological schema. It enables the reader to keep on using all the terms prescribed by orthodoxy, while giving to them a reasonable, non-polemic, spiritual value. Readers who are more trenchant in their mental processes will find that some of the beliefs advocated do not 'matter' very much for them and that the stretching of terms to include altered meanings does not always conduce to clear thinking."

— + J Religion 8:659 O '28 100w

"Professor Brown gives more than a mere history of doctrine, more than compromising apologetic. He explains. He tells why the faiths he holds have won the loyalty of his heart and mind." B. W. Bacon

+ New Repub 56:sup222 O 10 '28 250w

"This book is timely. It will be of inestimable worth to those men and women who demand that religion should satisfy the reason as well as the emotions, who worship God with the mind as well as the heart." E. B. Chaffee

+ Outlook 149:356 Je 27 '28 700w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 32:552 N '28

"While Dr Brown's position is somewhat conservative, his whole tone is moderate and conciliatory."

Springf'd Republican p10 Je 12 '28 60w

BROWN, ZAIDEE MABEL, ed. Standard catalog for high school libraries; a selected list of 2600 books; cataloged by Polly Fenton and Dorothy E. Cook. (Standard catalog ser.) 222; 346p price on application Wilson, H.W.

028.5 School libraries (high school). Children's literature—Bibliography 28-22698

Part one, first published in 1926, consisted of a classed catalog of books selected for junior and senior high school libraries, arranged according to the Dewey decimal classification. Part two, is a dictionary catalog with entries under author, title and subject. The two are now bound together in one volume. Part two is not sold separately.

"Useful in any library, and indispensable for high schools."

+ Booklist 24:267 Ap '28

"An invaluable tool for high school book selection."

+ Wis Lib Bul 24:157 My '28

BROWNE, LEWIS. Graphic Bible; from Genesis to Revelation in animated maps and charts. 160p il $2.50 Macmillan

220.9 Bible. Whole—Geography. Palestine—Historical geography. Bible. Whole—History of Biblical events 28-20143

In a large attractive volume that will be a boon to Sunday school teachers and to youthful and older students of the Bible as well, Lewis Browne supplies a simplified version of the Bible narrative to accompany the main feature of his book, his pictorial maps of Bible lands and times.

Booklist 25:52 N '28

"As it stands, maps and text together, this book triumphantly fulfills the promise of its title. Innumerable attempts have been made to make the Bible 'seem real,' but we know of none so 'graphic,' and therefore so successful, as this." J: H. Holmes

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p7 O 7 '28 600w

Boston Transcript p6 Ag 29 '28 1000w

Reviewed by E. F. Edgett

Boston Transcript p7 O 20 '28 800w

"It is vivid, but it is also judicious. There is not too much on the page. The central features stand out clearly, and the graphs illumine the important and the crucial moments in history. Even the very frequent milestones, found in the corner so often giving the passing dates to the wayfarer, are as and where and when they should be. Accuracy may be added as one of its virtues." I. G. Matthews

+ Crozer Quarterly 5:493 O '28 360w

Ind 121:261 S 15 '28 150w

"Mr. Browne has done a unique piece of work that will be of the greatest help to all those who want to be familiar with the dramatic story of the Bible but who, in this crowded and demanding age, have not the leisure and patience necessary for extracting its essential facts from the complicated and more or less cluttered narratives of the book itself."

+ N Y Times p18 S 23 '28 480w

"His narrative is as simple and graphic as his maps and charts are illuminative. There are some illustrations that seem a bit muddy, a little over-weighted with printed detail. Nevertheless, I believe that this little book will make much of the Bible meaningful and interesting to the young readers and Sunday school pupils for whom it was primarily intended." Harry Salpeter

+ N Y World p11 Ag 29 '28 780w

"Dr. Browne's maps are clear and simple, uncluttered with superfluous detail. At a glance you have a clear picture of the geographical conditions which determined so much of the historical action of the Old Testament, as well as of the journeys of Jesus and Paul. A short narrative of the events goes with each map of which there are about one hundred. This is by no means a substitute for the Bible, but a very useful and interesting supplement to it." W. R. Brooks

+ Outlook 149:717 Ag 29 '28 130w

St Louis 26:346 N '28

"This reviewer is convinced that the greatest value of his work is offered to those who already know something of the Bible without understanding its structure or discerning in all its diversity a unity and progression of movement. Not that it fails as a book for children. . . The ten-year-old boy of the household volunteered that he had looked at all the maps, found them interesting, and wanted to read the whole book." Gilbert Loveland

+ Sat R of Lit 5:83 S 1 '28 750w

"Quaint art, in merry patterns of maps and charts that capture the imagination with their dolphines and galleons, mountains and trees, pictures the Bible story in terms of space and makes it real. Historical narrative, compact and forward-moving, simplifies the Bible story, retells it in terms of understandable time and makes it vivid." Gilbert Loveland

+ Sat R of Lit 5:149 S 22 '28 450w

Springf'd Republican p7e D 23 '28 220w

BROWNE, MAURICE. Recollections of Rupert Brooke. ltd ed 64p $10 A. Greene, 803 Fine Arts bldg., Chicago

B or 92 Brooke, Rupert 28-1169

"Mr. Browne's account of Brooke deals with their meeting in Chicago, their passage to England together, and the hospitality shown to Mr. Browne and Miss Van Volkenburg in England by Brooke and other literary friends. The artistic ties between Mr. Browne and Rupert Brooke were poetry and the theatre."—Sat R of Lit

---

"Here we have Brooke, the man, as portrayed in captivating style by one to whom he took an instant liking, and who reciprocated this high regard." G. H. S.

+ Boston Transcript p6 F 25 '28 460w

"He paints a vividly human portrait, with hardly any sentimentality—which is unusual, considering the fact that he cherished for Brooke a friendship approaching adoration. This book, presenting casual correspondence and diary extracts, gives the full flavor of the fortunate youth—his obtusenesses are implicit in it as well as his amazing charm."

+ Sat R of Lit 4:801 Ap 21 '28 380w

BROWNELL, WILLIAM CRARY. Democratic distinction in America. 270p $2.50 (10s) Scribner

917.3 National characteristics, American. Democracy 27-25380

"In considering this vast subject of American characteristics, the author, in a manner somewhat historical, traces the trend of democratic feeling, shows our basic traits, temper, humor, sentiment, and tradition; and, with these factors as a basis, he points the way towards better educational training and popular culture." —Boston Transcript

---

Reviewed by W. Y. Elliott

Am Pol Sci R 22:458 My '28 100w

Booklist 24:318 My '28

Reviewed by L: Mumford

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p1 N 27 '27 1650w

"Here is no book for the casual reader; but one that should stimulate the mind and broaden the scope of cultural attention. Mr. Brownell is profound. He has written a book that is in more than adequate keeping with his excellent suggestions."

+ Boston Transcript p4 Ja 14 '28 300w

Cleveland Open Shelf p132 D '28

Dial 85:268 S '28 150w

"If the title-phrase promises to become classic in its sphere, the book as a whole deserves also to remain as a standard work on our contemporary civilization, for it is the summing-up of a lifetime of observation and reflection on the part of the most interesting and discriminating of our older critics." Van Wyck Brooks

+ Nation 126:164 F 8 '28 750w

"There is such a peculiar 'distinction' about the book as to render it unreadable and practically incomprehensible for the plain man. The problem which underlies Mr Brownell's disquisitions is both important and interesting." L. B. Namier

— + Nation and Ath 42:783 F 25 '28 400w

Reviewed by E. H. Walton

New Repub 54:329 My 2 '28 310w

"A book of sound sense and high ideals. We wish, having said this, that we might go on to say that Mr. Brownell, as a writer, displayed the same clarity of thought and utterance so greatly the distinguishing and distinguished traits of all that Stuart Sherman wrote. Unfortunately, we cannot. But for one who is willing to work a little at the text, to masticate the words and phrasing, so to say, the fare should prove invigorating." Percy Hutchison

+ — N Y Times p2 Ap 22 '28 1500w

Springf'd Republican p8 F 25 '28 130w

"Stimulating and helpful book."

+ Springf'd Republican p7f F 26 '28 1000w

Springf'd Republican p8 Mr 3 '28 450w

BRUCE, HAROLD ROZELLE. American parties and politics; history and rôle of political parties in the United States. (Am. political science ser.) 412p $3.75; student's ed $3 Holt

329 Political parties—United States. United States—Politics and government 27-20204

Intended as a text for an introductory course of instruction or reading on American political parties, the book covers the historical development, organization and activities of parties in our governmental system. The author is professor of political science in Dartmouth college.

Reviewed by H. D. Lasswell

Am J Soc 34:235 Jl '28 40w

Booklist 24:268 Ap '28

"It is forceful in explanation and not clogged with extraneous matter; it reveals a wide and sane appreciation of the development of parties, their organization and activities. Best of all, it is unbiased."

+ Boston Transcript p5 Ja 14 '28 250w

BRUCE, H. R.—Continued
No Am 224:adv D '27 20w
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:144 Mr '28
Pratt p10 spring '28

"It is a text book not intended for popular reading. But it is clear, concise, and contains a rather extraordinary assortment of logically arranged facts. Good for reference, even for the seasoned student. One of those inconspicuous books mighty handy to have around—especially in the coming pseudo-election." D. A.
+ World Tomorrow 11:135 Mr '28 120w

BRUMMITT, DAN BREARLEY. Shoddy. 337p $2 Willet, Clark & Colby, 44 S. Dearborn st, Chicago
28-7495

The story follows the careers of two men, friends from boyhood, who become ministers in the Methodist church. Bartelmy is a finished pulpit orator and a diplomat. He marries the daughter of an influential judge and his rise to the bishopric is automatic. Peter, on the other hand, is a man of the people. He espouses the cause of man and is dangerous enough to be shunted from one ministry to another in the effort to curb his power. Yet when in middle life, the bishop compares his record with that of his less honored friend his honors are as dust to him, and he realizes the full worth of the man he has tried to patronize.

"The editor of the Northwestern Christian Advocate wields a facile pen, but he makes it a fine sword before he ends. Incidentally, he writes an excellent story, some good character sketches as well as fearless criticism and drastic exposures." T: C. Richards
+ Boston Transcript p3 My 26 '28 1150w

"Although it is a novel with a purpose it is none the less a novel that possesses dynamic force and vital appeal to the mind and soul as well as to the desire for dramatic interest in a story." E. F. Edgett
+ Boston Transcript p5 Je 30 '28 270w

"To ask a Methodist bishop to review Dan Brummitt's 'Shoddy' is almost like asking him to deliver his own funeral oration. If I followed by official instinct, I would denounce the author and deny all the implications of the book. But that would convince no one, least of all, myself. Every official, local and general, of every American church, ought to read it from cover to cover. My own church, along with other American and European bodies, is clearly portrayed. The book will sting our pride and disturb our complacency." F. B. Fisher
+ Christian Century 45:509 Ap 19 '28 1200w

"Regarding Mr. Brummitt's sincerity of purpose; regarding his knowledge of his subject matter; regarding the forcefulness of certain passages, there will be no question; yet one cannot help wishing that he were a little less of a preacher and a little more of a writer."
N Y Times p9 Ap 22 '28 450w
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:427 O '28

"The story is brightly written and of some dramatic interest." J. S. C.
+ Springf'd Republican p8 Jl 10 '28 730w
Wis Lib Bul 24:163 My '28

"Brummitt's characters have the ring of reality about them. They are sharply delineated and maintain their integrity throughout. . . While the story is steeped in Methodism and while some of its most interesting aspects have no universal significance, the book in general is a ray of illumination for the whole Protestant scene." R. N.
+ World Tomorrow 11:310 Jl '28 450w

BRUNNER, MRS EMMA BEATRICE (KAUFMAN). "My wife, poor wretch;" uncensored episodes not in the diary of Samuel Pepys. 261p $2 Stokes
Pepys, Elizabeth (St Michel) (Mrs Samuel Pepys)—Fiction 28-3330

Here is told Elizabeth Pepys's side of the story which her husband set down in the pages of his famous diary. "Half-French and wholly woman," married at fifteen to the gay and faithless Samuel, the story presents her as a lively and beautiful heroine, jealous and quarrelsome, but loving her husband to the end of her twenty-nine years and loved by him.

Booklist 24:321 My '28

"A sparkling, wholly delightful comedy of Restoration London." L. M. Field
+ Bookm 67:113 Mr '28 170w

"It is a delightful piece of work. One has the impression that the seventeenth century of Charles and his famous bevy of mistresses, the court, the filthy, rollicking, disreputable city of London, did not pass in due course, but was transferred to a plane somewhere out in the ether, and for the moment we have been conducted to a peephole and permitted to see it palpitate once more and gaze our fill." Gertrude Atherton
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p5 F 5 '28 1200w
Boston Transcript p2 My 12 '28 280w
Cleveland Open Shelf p68 My '28

"The pictures and 'atmosphere' are true to the spirit of the days of the diary, and the story is quite exciting and perhaps no more misleading than Samuel's own cryptic allusions to his lady. The author has indulged in some delightful constructive imaginings."
+ Ind 120:344 Ap 7 '28 60w

Reviewed by R. C. B. Brown
N Y Evening Post p12 F 4 '28 160w

"Miss Brunner writes with one eye on the famous diary, but, if a slightly academic quibble is permissible, the facts as set forth in it do not always bear her out. Nevertheless, her characterization is good, if a little too self-conscious, and her reproduction of the air and manner of the Restoration period is wholly satisfying."
+ — N Y Times p19 F 12 '28 450w
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:643 My '28

"Anyone who cares to form an acquaintance with the Pepys family will be much better entertained by the Diary itself." G. H. Gerould
— Sat R of Lit 4:914 My 26 '28 500w
Springf'd Republican p7f Mr 4 '28 100w

BRUNT, DAVID. Meteorology. (World's manuals) 112p il $1 (2s 6d) Oxford
551 Meteorology 28-18383

"By the Superintendent, Army Meteorological Services at the Air Ministry, this little book is one of the excellent series of 'The World's Manuals.' The author's aim is to give a brief sketch of the physical principles underlying weather phenomena in an elementary way. A discussion of weather forecasting is intentionally omitted, as that would have greatly increased the size of the book."—Times [London] Lit Sup

Booklist 25:13 O '28

"Mr. Brunt presents an interesting little work for the lay reader, dealing with a technical subject in a manner which will be easy for all his readers to understand."
+ Boston Transcript p2 Je 27 '28 80w

"The absence of mathematical formulæ and the small size of the book, together with a certain simplicity of style, may combine to give the impression to a meteorologist who may casually glance at it, that he has before him one of those entertaining little handbooks in which the presence of numerous inaccuracies is regarded by the author, if he should happen to be aware of them, as a matter of small importance, seeing that few readers will be likely to detect them. A more careful perusal of the book will dispel this impression: not only will he find a high standard of accuracy, but he will see also that a serious effort has been made, and with a considerable degree of success, to give a picture of the development of meteorology as a branch of physics and some suggestion of the lines along which it may advance in the future."

+ Nature 121:668 Ap 28 '28 250w

Times [London] Lit Sup p275 Ap 12 '28 40w

BRYAN, JOHN THOMAS INGRAM. Civilization of Japan. (Home univ. lib. of modern knowledge) 256p $1 Holt [2s Williams & N.]

915.2 Japan—Civilization 28-7764

The course of Japanese culture from pre-historic times to the present is traced in easily assimilated fashion by one who has been professor for sixteen years in Japanese colleges, and is extension lecturer for the University of Cambridge in Japanese history and civilization.

Booklist 24:397 Jl '28

Boston Transcript p3 Je 16 '28 250w

Reviewed by Edmund Blunden

Nation and Ath 42:542 Ja 7 '28 250w

"The book is brief, clear, well-proportioned and to the point. . . When Dr. Bryan says that 'Confucianism stereoptyped, and Buddhism darkened the Japanese mind, and to that extent arrested its natural development,' he is reverting to missionary prejudice, and is misprising two of the chief formative influences in Japanese culture. Lapses such as this and the use of the indefensible word 'sinoization' are the chief faults of an excellent and readable little book."

+ — New Statesman 30:supxxii D 3 '27 150w

St Louis 26:357 N '28

Times [London] Lit Sup p895 D 1 '27 1050w

Wis Lib Bul 24:252 O '28

BRYAN, JOHN THOMAS INGRAM. Japanese all. 250p $2.50 Dutton

915.2 Japan—Social life and customs 28-23235

An observer with a sense of humor writes these sketches of everyday life in Japan, finding his subjects in the house, the garden, and on the street.

Boston Transcript p5 Ag 18 '28 180w

"The papers are not particularly searching in their observations, nor are they meant to be. Candor compels the statement that some of them are too long. But the book will be illuminating to all those who do not know Japan and find fascination in contemplating cherry blossoms and capacious kimonos."

+ — Ind 121:45 Jl 14 '28 200w

"Pleasant essays on the better known idiosyncrasies of the Japanese nation."

+ Living Age 335:156 O '28 20w

"This new volume on Japan is a book of essays, and a very charming one. The author does not set out to instruct, but to offer a real intellectual entertainment."

N Y Times p22 O 14 '28 380w

Sat R of Lit 5:287 O 20 '28 150w

"Dr. Bryan knows his public, he has something to say and he knows how to say it. He gives twenty essays on as many aspects of Japanese life, and when the end is reached it is difficult to say which proved most interesting. All are good."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p587 Ag 15 '28 350w

BRYANT, MRS LORINDA (MUNSON). Children's book of American landmarks. 106p il $2.50 Century

917.3 United States—Historic houses, etc. Monuments—United States 27-20894

Photographs and descriptions of some of the houses, landmarks, and monuments famous in America's history.

Booklist 24:165 Ja '28

"One of those dreadful miscellanies which should be ruthlessly suppressed. The text bristles with information and high purposes; but it is as chaotic as the items of information in an almanac; and the habits of mind this sort of book fosters are deplorable." L: Mumford

— New Repub 52:sup361 N 16 '27 300w

Wis Lib Bul 24:93 Mr '28

BRYANT, MRS LORINDA (MUNSON). Children's book of European landmarks. 106p il $2.50 Century

914 Europe—Description and travel 28-23073

As in other books in the series, a brief story of the famous landmarks appears on one page and the photographic illustration on the page opposite. While the fifty illustrations represent most of the European countries, at least half of them are devoted to landmarks in England and Scotland.

Booklist 25:126 D '28

"Comments on famous places which would deter any intelligent child from traveling, with or without a guidebook."

— Living Age 335:156 O '28 20w

BUCHAN, ANNA (O. DOUGLAS, pseud.). Eliza for common. 338p $2 Doubleday, Doran 28-14317

The simple tale of a Scotch minister's family who live in a Glasgow suburb. It is a great day in the manse when Jim, the eldest son, goes up to Oxford. While he is winning laurels there, parish joys and sorrows occupy the minister and his wife, Eliza the daughter grows up, and the two younger boys harass their elders as small boys can.

Booklist 25:28 O '28

"Simple as it is, it is a delightful tale, and the author shows no little ability at character portrayal."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p14 Ag 5 '28 250w

"Her characters are all extremely well visioned and the humorsome viewpoint upon Glasgow life affords one many smiles of pleasure. Her plot, however, is of the slenderest, with almost no real complication."

+ — Boston Transcript p4 S 1 '28 100w

"The book is pleasantly written, and if there were a good deal less of it would not be altogether unentertaining."

N Y Times p7 Jl 29 '28 350w

"The Laidlaws are pleasant, homely folk, but after over 100 pages devoted to their most ordinary sayings and doings, one has grown not a little weary of the amiable, interminable 'chronicle of small beer.'"

— + Times [London] Lit Sup p618 Ag 30 '28 120w

BUCHAN, JOHN. Half-hearted. 383p $2.50 Houghton 28-26456

Lewie Haystoun, Scotch gentleman and adventurer to the East, was cursed by the fault of indecision. It cost him success in politics, but worse than that it cost him the woman he loved. Then on a far Eastern frontier, tho he lost his life in accomplishing it, he retrieved his honor.

For biographical sketch of John Buchan see Wilson Bulletin 3:422 Ja '29

"An early work of John Buchan's, but it will be a new one to most of his large American audience. It is a simpler and at the same time a more ambitious tale than some of his later stories."

Bookm 67:464 Je '28 120w

Boston Transcript p6 Jl 18 '28 180w

"The trouble is, that while the jacket promises 'Adventures in the Wild Border-Lands of India,' you have to yawn over fully 250 pages of nothing wilder than the bonny braes of Scotland before Lewis ever gets the idea of going to the East. I wouldn't have minded reading more about the adventures on the Indian frontier. Mr. Buchan does this part of his story well. He catches decisively the lawless, menacing spirit of these border tribes in the heart of the Punjab. The action of the tale has real backbone here, and the excellent dramatic tension doesn't break until the end is reached." Ruth Lechlitner

BUCHAN, JOHN—Continued
+ — N Y Evening Post p8 Je 23 '28 270w

BUCHAN, JOHN. Montrose; a history. 385p il $5 Houghton [21s Nelson]

B or 92 Montrose, James Graham, 1st marquis of 28-24618

Mr Buchan's biography of the Scottish statesman and soldier who started as Covenanter and then, as Cavalier leader, won a series of brilliant victories, is a eulogy of Montrose and a fine story of adventure. Mr Buchan depicts Montrose as a "candidate for immortality," a character worthy of the attention of the modern reader, and ranks him as soldier with Marlborough, Wellington and Lee.

"It is a bold eulogy. But one likes in these tepid times to see a man really excited about a hero, and one fears to come between Colonel Buchan and his national vision with commonplaces of proportion and actuality." E. B.
+ — Nation and Ath 44:58 O 13 '28 630w

"Mr. Buchan regards his career as 'among the marvels of history.' It was, in truth, very remarkable, and its story is narrated by Mr. Buchan in prose of a quality which few historians achieve. . . Some of Mr. Buchan's assumptions are disputable, but he has given us a fine piece of writing, based on very long and very careful research."
+ — Sat R 146:436 O 6 '28 630w

"This study is a thrilling human story told in Mr. Buchan's masterly way, as well as an historical record of importance. The Great Marquis has found a great chronicler."
+ Spec 141:405 S 29 '28 650w

"Mr. Buchan presents Montrose to us in a fascinating book. So fine a man—'the foremost Scottish man of action'—deserved a fine biography. And now he has received it."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p695 O 4 '28 1800w

BUCHAN, JOHN. Runagates club. 306p $2.50 Houghton [7s 6d Hodder & S.]

28-17202

Over their wine and cigars the members of a London club, notable adventurers all, regale each other with tales of their varied experiences. These adventures of the physical and metaphysical worlds, are humorous, romantic, or weird.

"I am sorry to report that this latest volume of Mr. Buchan's contains few of the qualities which brought him so great a circle of readers." C: M. Purdy
— Bookm 68:234 O '28 50w

"Mr. Buchan arouses the less obvious emotions with practised pen, scorning the inexpensive formulas of the cruder mysteries. He mostly omits explanations, which seems proper enough in this sort of baffiement." Will Cuppy
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p9 Ag 19 '28 100w

"It is not unfair to Mr. Buchan to say that as a short story writer he does not come near his best work as a novelist. Here are a round dozen stories well thought out, concocted with ingenuity and possessing more than a modicum of merit and yet they do not stir one." S. L. C.
— + Boston Transcript p6 Jl 18 '28 580w

"A series of short stories, most of them first-class reading for a first-class carriage. Mr. Buchan has considerable invention, a good narrative style, and a pleasing affection for the aristocracy." Raymond Mortimer
+ Nation and Ath 43:564 Jl 28 '28 60w
N Y Evening Post p5 Ag 11 '28 90w
Reviewed by W. R. Brooks
— + Outlook 149:638 Ag 15 '28 80w

"Colonel Buchan is frankly not on his more serious plane in this pleasant volume. His intention is to divert; and in such episodes of humour and queerness as 'The Frying Pan and the Fire,' 'Divus Johnston,' and the gently malicious 'Fullcircle,' he admirably succeeds." R. A. Taylor
+ Spec 141:60 Jl 14 '28 110w
Springf'd Republican p7f Ag 26 '28 170w

"Mr. Buchan's short stories have that compactness which is so desirable, and are pleasingly diverse in subject, incident and treatment."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p518 Jl 12 '28 420w
Wis Lib Bul 24:254 O '28

BUCHAN, SUSAN. Sword of state; Wellington after Waterloo. 298p $4 Houghton [10s 6d Hodder & S.]

B or 92 Wellington, Arthur Wellesley, 1st duke of

It is with Wellington's career as statesman, not as soldier, that his great-great niece is concerned. Her careful study of the later years of his life shows him in his pomp of power as "conqueror of the conqueror of the world," as Prime minister and Foreign secretary, in his private life and his friendships with women.

Boston Transcript p7 N 21 '28 560w

"It is the unpopular aspect of his nature that Mrs. Buchan, without the aid of spurious glamour or false postures, brings out for admiration. . . Mrs. Buchan's memoir probably throws more light on Wellington's characters, with its consistencies and contradictions, than most of his contemporaries were ever privileged to see."
+ Nation and Ath 44:116 O 20 '28 500w

"Mrs. Buchan's account of the years between 1815 and 1852, between Paris and St. Paul's, is admirably clear and well proportioned; and to her picture of the Duke as a statesman she adds many anecdotic touches which fill out the portrait of the man in a very living fashion."
+ New Statesman 32:supv N 3 '28 700w

"The first and last chapters of Mrs. Buchan's book about Wellington after Waterloo are perhaps the best. They are, however, so excellent, so delightfully written, so packed with interest and entertainment, that to single them out for especial admiration is no disparagement to the bulk of the volume."
+ Spec 141:334 S 15 '28 700w

"No one must go to this book expecting a new picture of Wellington. What we get is the story of his life after 1815, well put together and well told, and an account of his character illustrated by the familiar stories—which, however, well bear repetition—from such writers as Stanhope, Greville, Maxwell, Fraser, Lady Shelley and others. Most of the book is given to politics . . . but the book is not all politics, and the freshest thing in it is the discussion of the Duke's relations to his Duchess and to other women."
Times [London] Lit Sup p657 S 20 '28 920w

BUCHANAN, SCOTT MILROSS. Possibility. (Int. lib. of psychology, philosophy and scientific method) 198p $3.50 Harcourt [10s 6d K. Paul]

121 Possibility. Philosophy, Modern

27-23708

This essay is concerned with the far-reaching problem involved in the relation of actuality and possibility. "One lives," writes the author, "in one world and believes in another, suffering this and at the same time expecting or desiring that." Three kinds of possibility are assumed: artistic creation, science and metaphysics. The author distinguishes these three fields and then goes on to define possibility and show its place in our knowledge, applying the definition to two great historical philosophies, Kant's and Aristotle's. Finally a project of critical scholarship is stated, based upon the method thus derived.

Reviewed by Jerome Rosenthal
Bookm 67:439 Je '28 650w

"Mr. Buchanan is a good thinker and able to present his thoughts lucidly. To those who at different periods have poured over the various scientists and philosophers from Aristotle to Hegel, with some resulting mental confusion, Mr. Buchanan's book is recommended. He makes a running story of systems and comparisons which enables one to pick up half forgotten threads, straighten them out and then go on and think for yourself."
+ Boston Transcript p2 Ap 21 '28 300w

"One expects an abstract treatise on epistemology, and one discovers with delight the record of an intellectual adventure and the breadth of personal inspiration." B: Ginsburg
+ J Philos 25:217 Ap 12 '28 2600w

"Mr. Buchanan is to be congratulated on having done a first-class piece of much needed intellectual work. Even those who do not accept Mr. Buchanan's proposals and conclusions should find his method a solvent of many ambiguities and an eliminator of many confusing irrelevancies. There is meat in the book for immediate consumption; it offers seeds with which to sow many a flourishing intellectual garden." J. Dewey
† Nation 126:449 Ap 18 '28 1300w

"Different readers will find in 'Possibility' different philosophies. But all readers will find in it the same intellectual incisiveness and literary charm, and the same high qualities of an earnest mind grappling in a fundamental way with fundamental philosophical problems." Joseph Ratner
+ New Repub 55:154 Je 27 '28 480w

BUCHNER, GEORG. Plays; tr. with an introd. by Geoffrey Dunlop. 274p $2.50 Viking press [7s 6d G. Howe]
832 [28-15831]

These plays by a German playwright little known outside his own country are offered in the first English translation. They are Leonce and Lena, and Danton's death, which was produced in this country by Reinhardt. There is a biographical note on the author by Geoffrey Dunlop.

Reviewed by W. P. Eaton
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p18 Je 10 '28 150w
Boston Transcript p3 My 19 '28 200w
Dial 85:174 Ag '28 80w

"Mr. Dunlop is to be congratulated in translating and Mr. Howe in introducing a name absolutely unknown. Even Brandes in his Young Germany, a volume that deals at considerable length with Büchner's contemporaries, does not mention Büchner. That name can no longer remain obscure." Robert Nichols
+ New Statesman 30:564 F 11 '28 1100w

Reviewed by Jane Dransfield
Sat R of Lit 5:468 D 8 '28 1900w

"Mr. Dunlop has performed a useful labour in bringing together the dramatic works of Georg Büchner and in writing to them an historical and biographical introduction. . . It is greatly to Mr. Dunlop's credit that the original gusto survives in translation."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p64 Ja 26 '28 180w

BUCK, OSCAR MACMILLAN. "Our Asiatic Christ." 181p $1.25 Harper
294.5 Jesus Christ. Christianity and other religions—Hinduism 27-25030

The people of India come easily to an understanding of the nature of Jesus and the meaning of his teachings. To them He is "Our Asiatic Christ." Dr Buck shows how Christianity is not inimical to the concepts of religious life found in the highest teachings of Hinduism, but is rather a fulfillment of them.

"Here is a book indispensable to lovers of India, especially to students of religion in that most religious of all countries. Mr. Buck, who knows India from many years of residence in the country, does again what P. C. Mozoomdar did a generation ago in his famous book, 'The Oriental Christ.' He shows how essentially is Jesus an Eastern figure and how uniquely are his teachings an embodiment of Eastern ideas and attitudes."
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p11 Ag 26 '28 400w

"Five lectures, delivered at Ohio Wesleyan University, dealing in a descriptive way with the attitude toward Jesus that has manifested itself during recent years in India."
J Religion 8:324 Ap '28 30w

BUCKLEY, FREDERIC ROBERT. Way of sinners. 385p $2 Century
27-18772

Medieval Italy is the setting for this story of a youth who is apprenticed to a merchant, is married at a duke's whim, becomes a soldier in the same man's guard, and at the climax of his career of love and war enters a monastery to write this tale.

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 Ja 15 '28 150w

"If you are seeking glamor and bloodletting of a virtuous sort, love and romance of northern Italy and wit and brilliance and the kind of mischievous fun that Robin Hood delighted in, turn to 'The Way of Sinners,' which is certainly a silly title for so excellent a story."
+ Boston Transcript p8 D 17 '27 200w

"Though the author obviously knows how to write, and how to get the utmost out of his theme and materials, the story gives one an impression of remoteness and monotony incompatible with any potent hold upon the reader."
— + Sat R of Lit 4:286 N 5 '27 170w

"Mr. Buckley's tale is decidedly a good tale of its kind."
+ Springf'd Republican p7f D 25 '27 220w
Wis Lib Bul 23:288 D '27

BUDDEN, JOHN. Jungle John; a book of the big-game jungles. 304p il $2.50 Longmans
27-18477

These extraordinary adventures of a small boy who goes to spend a cold season with his father in the jungle country of India are, the author tells us, based on fact. The animated illustrations of jungle life are exceptionally good.

"It is written by a person who knows the jungle and knows boys and has no small aptitude for story-telling besides."
+ Nation 125:546 N 16 '27 70w

"It is soon clear to the reader that very little in the life of the jungle escaped John's alert senses and you may be prepared to be thrilled from his first encounter with a tiger until the last page in the book has been read." M. Van R. King
+ N Y World p11m D 18 '27 170w
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:506 O '28

"Any normal boy after reading 'Jungle John' should lament that fate had not provided him with a parent in the Indian Forest Service."
+ Sat R of Lit 4:492 D 31 '27 180w

BUELL, RAYMOND LESLIE. Native problem in Africa. (Bureau of international research, Harvard university and Radcliffe college) 2v 1045;1101p il $15 Macmillan
916 Africa—Politics. Africa—Civilization. Africa—Race question. Africa—Native races. Africa—Economic conditions 28-11639

This exhaustive account of a year's travel and close study in Africa is contained in two large volumes writen by the former assistant professor of government at Harvard university. The author takes into account problems of government, labor, agriculture, and education thruout Africa, giving the text of significant documents and state papers. The work is completed with maps, statistical tables, a bibliography, and an index.

BUELL, R. L.—Continued

"The book is planned and annotated in a scholarly way and should be invaluable as a source book of material hitherto scattered and difficult to obtain." Edith Hilles
+ Ann Am Acad 140:342 N '28 850w

"This is a two-volume work, the fruit of an immense amount of research. In no sense is it light reading. Its circulation will undoubtedly be limited, but as a source book for writers who aim at reaching a wider public it will indirectly exercise a great influence." Keith Hutchison
+ Bookm 67:453 Je '28 650w

"From the point of view of information this work is a Baedeker of Colonial Africa. . . But the final worth of the book is as an analysis and criticism of modern colonial administration, in which it achieves a triumph of liberal, constructive scholarship." Alain Locke
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p11 Jl 1 '28 1150w

Boston Transcript p2 My 9 '28 980w

"The real Africa has had, so far as I know, no other such comprehensive or careful presentation." Stanley High
+ Christian Century 45:854 Jl 5 '28 980w

"Vast as the book is, no one with a preliminary acquaintance with the provinces dealt with will find a sentence superfluous. Indeed the enormous subject is handled with real economy. The writing is never tedious." Lord Olivier
+ Nation 127:43 Jl 11 '28 1100w

"These two volumes are undoubtedly the best source of information about the conditions among the natives south of the Sahara. The account is so full and objective that you can draw your own conclusions. The bibliographies are splendid." C. H. Grattan
+ New Repub 55:309 Ag 8 '28 1600w

N Y Evening Post p5 Ag 11 '28 100w

"Even a cursory examination leaves one amazed at the thoroughness with which Professor Buell has covered the essentials of an exceedingly complex, far-flung, and multiform subject. More careful reading enforces also the impression of objectivity and restraint in the presentation of well-buttressed facts nevertheless comprising in their ensemble a terrible indictment of 'white supremacy' in the black continent." J: P. Gavit
+ Sat R of Lit 4:1032 Jl 14 '28 1350w

Reviewed by H. L. Warnshuis
Survey 61:180 N 1 '28 1150w

Times [London] Lit Sup p563 Ag 2 '28 950w

"With one fundamental omission, we have here a fair and, up to the present, the most complete statement on the present condition of African Negroes and of their relations to the governing European empires, and to the resident whites. Nevertheless, this one fundamental omission is serious: Mr. Buell apparently is not a student of economics or a critic of modern industry. In Africa, modern industry is working untold ill and the difficulty with Mr. Buell's otherwise excellent work is that he either does not realize this or does not think it wise resolutely to face this aspect of the problem." W. E. B. Du Bois
+ — World Tomorrow 11:420 O '26 1250w

BUFFALO CHILD LONG LANCE (Siksika chief). Long Lance; foreword by Irvin S. Cobb. 278p il $2.50 Cosmopolitan bk.

970.2 Indians of North America 28-20565

The book is less an autobiography than a vivid recounting of the tribal life and ceremonies of the Canadian Blackfeet by Chief Long Lance who as a boy of the tribe watched or took part in the experiences he describes. Photographs of his Blackfeet friends illustrate Chief Long Lance's story.

For biographical sketch of Long Lance see Wilson Bulletin 3:374 D '28

"The book, written in simple, vivid English, is a genuine contribution to the literature of the American Indian. It is a comparison of two ways of life—the white man's and the Indian's, by one who has known them both."
+ Bookm 68:xxiv N '28 80w

"I cannot think of any work that could act as a better corrective of the ridiculous notions still prevailing about the Indians than this autobiography of Long Lance. Although in many respects we are treated here only to the external side of the Blackfoot culture, the glimpses we get are altogether unusual." Paul Radin
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p7 O 14 '28 700w

"The book really is fascinating from start to finish. It might very properly be recommended to boys, for the figures depicted are all heroic, sturdy types of robust, fearless manhood." J. H. W.
+ Boston Transcript p4 S 22 '28 500w

Reviewed by Elsie Weil
New Repub 57:sup123 D 12 '28 280w

"Written with vigour and clarity, if occasionally marred by clichés."
+ — New Statesman 32:300 D 8 '28 220w

"Interesting in its subject matter and told with a notable mastery of vivid and forceful English, this volume of Indian recollections should take high rank among the books dealing with the life, manners and customs of the American Indians before they had been modified by contact with the white man."
+ N Y Times p2 S 2 '28 480w

"The first-hand story of an Indian boyhood among the Blackfeet of the Northwest before the coming of the white men. The author, a chief of his tribe, is also a college graduate and a writer of distinction." W. R. Brooks
Outlook 149:753 S 5 '28 170w

"It is a narrative of real distinction."
+ R of Rs 78:26 S '28 50w

"The autobiography of Chief Buffalo Child adds another and by no means the least, to the list of life stories of primitives by which here in America new and freshly informed concepts of the beginnings of human society are built up. . . Never has that social organization of the human hunting pack been more pleasingly and precisely portrayed than by Long Lance." Mary Austin
+ Sat R of Lit 5:184 O 6 '28 980w

BULLEY, MARGARET HATTERSLEY. Simple guide to pictures and painting. (Simple guide ser.) 240p $3 Dutton [7s 6d Chatto & W.]

750 Painting 28-14486

"The first part deals with the principles of construction—design, personality, craft, tradition and the various ways in which a painter's work is conditioned by his materials. In the second part the author outlines the development of painting from the Byzantines down to the modern Frenchmen."—Books (N Y Herald Tribune)

Booklist 25:17 O '28

"The book is exactly what it purports to be, a simple guide, but a guide written with scholarship, concision and good sense."
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p13 Je 10 '28 110w

"The foremost virtue in this new history of art to many of its readers will be that the author is sufficiently revolutionary in her ideas as to state that it is better honestly to admire bad or counterfeit art than to stimulate admiration for some famous work."
+ Boston Transcript p4 Je 2 '28 200w

"She writes clearly and interestingly, explains and criticizes with intelligence and lucidity, and does not trouble the head of her reader with a greater number of names and dates than are necessary for following her as she traces the thread of great painting through different schools and in different countries."
+ Nation and Ath 42:366 D 3 '27 430w

"Her taste is impeccable. Her book can be recommended to anyone who wants to know what this mysterious pleasure is which entices their friends into the gloomy portals of museums and picture galleries."
+ New Statesman 30:534 F 4 '28 60w

St Louis 26:354 N '28

"Mrs. Bulley's 'Pictures and Painting' is an exceptionally good book of its kind. The sophisticated would not find her recapitulation of first principles tedious, and many who are in no need of a 'simple guide' will be grateful for her sketch of the history of painting. Attention is drawn, largely through the means of anecdote and quotation, to various personalities who have especially enriched both art and criticism, but the author is very successful in her own descriptions of character; she has restraint in writing, and uses epithets without awkwardness."
+ Sat R 144:864 D 17 '27 180w

"A reviewer's issue with this vivacious and generally well-informed book will be chiefly with the title. The book really is not simple at all, but implies a considerable culture in the reader. It is originally conceived and enriched by apposite citation from the writings of artists and critics. There are rather more inaccuracies than one accepts from an author of talent."
+ — Sat R of Lit 4:1023 Jl 7 '28 100w

"An excellent introduction to an understanding and appreciation of painting."
+ Springf'd Republican p10 Ag 2 '28 140w

Times [London] Lit Sup p303 Ap 26 '28 650w

BULLIET, C. J. Apples and madonnas; emotional expression in modern art. 235p $3.50 Covici, P.

709 Art—History. Painting—History. Painting, French 28-1436

"Mr. Bulliet's essay takes its title from this aphorism: 'An apple by Paul Cézanne is of more consequence artistically than the head of a Madonna by Raphael.' One by one he examines all the bewildering 'isms'; he writes a most illuminating chapter on Matisse, 'a Fauve in process of canonization'; honors each in turn of the outstanding modern French painters; considers Archipenko and the sculptors; analyzes German 'expressionism'; glances at the efforts of Italian and English artists imbued with the new spirit, and surveys the American scene in a mood of succinct thoroughness. The book is a critical history of modern art."—N Y Times

---

Booklist 24:273 Ap '28

"Like all critics who set out to proselytize and persuade, Mr. Bulliet is often guilty of sweeping statement and exaggeration, yet on the whole his chapters on the pillars of the modern movement and on more controversial figures are straight-forward and entertaining." R. M. Fisk
+ — Bookm 67:328 My '28 250w

"It is only because Mr. Bulliet's theme is of such vital interest that one is led into criticism of what seem to be shortcomings in the book. The well sustained vivacity of its style makes it readable from cover to cover; the author's wide research among original sources of information makes his accounts of the artists valuable as history (except, for example, where he accepts an unnamed journalist's garbled interview with Matisse); and Mr. Bulliet's fine appreciation of his subject frequently leads him to an exactitude of phrase that is a better thing I believe, than all the racy, intellectual entertainment which seems at first to characterize the book." Walter Pach
+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p5 F 12 '28 580w

Boston Transcript p7 D 10 '27 750w

"Mr. Bulliet may write terribly, but his artistic taste is surprisingly fine and his illustrations remarkably well chosen." P. E. Rush
+ — N Y Evening Post p13 Ja 14 '28 210w

" 'Apples and Madonnas' reads like a novel. It keeps the reader's mind racing. Perhaps excessive exuberance would attach to one's saying that it has the breathless flavor of a detective story; but to put the book down is certainly not easy." E. A. Jewell
+ N Y Times p9 D 25 '27 660w

"An admirable handbook on modern painting and sculpture. This is a combination of catalogue and criticism; it contains some mention of just about every figure of any consequence in the Modernist movement here and abroad, and is written for the layman. Mr. Bulliet is an enthusiast, but it is not at all necessary to accept his judgments as final in order to enjoy his appreciations." Herschel Brickell
+ No Am 225:adv Ja '28 140w

St Louis 26:319 O '28

Springf'd Republican p10 Ag 2 '28 730w

Times [London] Lit Sup p52 Ja 26 '28 160w

BUNDY, WALTER ERNEST. Religion of Jesus. 361p $3.50 Bobbs

232 Jesus Christ 28-22164

Professor Bundy is seeking to discover the personal religion of Jesus as distinguished from the religious systems built up by the followers of Jesus. He studies the synoptic gospel for light on the religious genius of Jesus, his faith, his works, his demands upon his followers, and his authority.

"This is the latest addition to an interminable list and seems to be unnecessary. It is admirably written except for a repetitiousness which makes it all too bulky; it is the fruit of thoroughgoing and enlightened scholarship; it is liberal in viewpoint and reverent in spirit. Yet it presents nothing new. All that Dr. Bundy has to say has been said before at least as well and in some cases better." J: H. Holmes
— + Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p23 N 25 '28 400w

"Many will differ with the emphasis that the professor puts on the religion of Jesus, but certainly it is a reverent, inspiring and refreshing emphasis that any one who believes in Jesus as human, historic and religious can follow with deep interest." T. C. R.
+ Boston Transcript p2 O 17 '28 430w

"Bundy's 'Religion of Jesus' is the best book on the subject. It does not discuss the religion which has made Jesus its object, but describes with competent knowledge of gospel criticism the psychology of Jesus as revealed in Synoptic story. Bundy is reverent, critical, sane." B. W. Bacon
+ New Repub 56:sup222 O 10 '28 70w

BURBRIDGE, BEN. Gorilla; tracking and capturing the ape-man of Africa. 323p il $3.50 Century

799.2 Hunting—Africa. Gorillas 28-12054

Capturing gorillas is only a part of Mr Burbridge's story, which covers African big-game hunting in general, chiefly with the motion picture camera. On his four expeditions to British East Africa the author has had encounters with lions, buffaloes, and elephants, as well as gorillas. Of the latter Mr Burbridge has brought out living specimens.

Reviewed by A. B. Maurice
Bookm 67:460 Je '28 100w

BURBRIDGE, BEN—Continued

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p13 Ag 26 '28 120w

Boston Transcript p3 Ap 21 '28 480w

"Mr. Burbridge's book, which has many interesting photographs, catches much of the variegated appeal and exotic spell of 'the savage soul of Africa.' It is the type of book Theodore Roosevelt might have written and certainly would have enjoyed reading immensely. Its colorful chapters throw into bas-relief the exhausting pressure of tropical nature, with its compensatory haunting fascination." Halsey Paines

+ N Y Times p11 My 20 '28 920w

Sat R 146:552 O 27 '28 340w

Reviewed by Dale Warren

Sat R of Lit 5:88 S 1 '28 50w

"If his book serves to stimulate our reverence and wonder for life created, it will do good. Even more good will it do if public opinion crystallizes out on the subject of keeping wild animals in captivity at all. If captive apes and monkeys are amusing as a spectacle for an idle afternoon, would that justify the cost and cruelty of exhibiting them? Why not the cinema and the sound recorder to let us see and hear what they are really like in their jungles? Why all the misery and massacre of which Mr. Burbridge tells? His book is a dreadful commentary on our civilization." F. Y-B.

Spec 141:493 O 13 '28 1500w

Springf'd Republican p10 Jl 11 '28 280w

Wis Lib Bul 24:188 Je '28

BURDETT, OSBERT. The Brownings. 345p $4 [2] Houghton [15s Constable]

The author of other literary biographies here pictures the contrasting home life and early environment of Elizabeth Barrett and Robert Browning, and gives a sympathetic account of their meeting, their romance, their marriage and their joint careers. "In their life and in their work," he writes, "they were the complementary opposites of one another."

"The plan of the book is new, but it presents nothing very new in actual criticism. Mr. Burdett is at his best in comments and asides, as he dusts over again very conscientiously the fragile and often exquisite bric-à-brac of the Barrett-Browning letters and the poems of personal significance. We have grown so used to acidity in biography that his level sympathy cloys a little, though perhaps to the healthy palate it should not cloy. He unfolds admirably that able and impeccable performance which was Browning's life, and does full justice to his vigour and alertness."

+ — Nation and Ath 44:sup392 D 8 '28 850w

"With the elopement from Wimpole Street the main interest of Mr. Burdett's book is inevitably over. But it remains as a whole a sincere and interesting piece of criticism (perhaps, at times a little too indulgent, but all the more sympathetic for that) which will do for the Brownings what Mr. Nicolson has done more brilliantly for Tennyson." F. L. Lucas

+ New Statesman 32:157 N 10 '28 1650w

"It is an excellent book and one that no lover of the Brownings can possibly afford to miss. Mr. Burdett makes skilfull, and sometimes brilliant, use of his opportunity to compare and contrast the two minds. His criticisms are always suggestive and usually convincing." Christopher Hollis

+ — Sat R 146:612 N 10 '28 1000w

"The author has fulfilled the true functions of criticism. He has treated the lives of his subjects not in exhaustive and irrelevant detail, but in their relations on each other and on their poetry. He has treated their poetry not as an antiquarian tract to be dissected and annotated and pedantified, but as something to be experienced: and he has helped the reader to enjoy what is good in it, even as he has himself enjoyed. . . It is the highest praise to Mr. Burdett that while we enjoy his quotations, his appreciations, and here and there an excellent aphorism of his own, we are conscious only of the personalities of his subjects." A. C. C.

+ Spec 141:662 N 3 '28 1000w

Times [London] Lit Sup p824 N 8 '28 1350w

BURDETT, OSBERT. W. E. Gladstone. 307p $4 Houghton [12s 6d Constable]

B or 92 Gladstone, William Ewart [25-5678]

A recent biographer of Blake presents here a "partial portrait of a character," quarrying material from Morley's life of Gladstone, and other records and memoirs. There is a short bibliography and an index.

Booklist 24:361 Je '28

"Relying mainly on Morley's stupendous 'Life,' his study is a sympathetic but keen analysis of the great statesman's character. His style is a trifle awkward in the early chapters, but he warms to his subject and his account of the Home Rule struggle is a fine piece of narrative." Keith Hutchison

+ Bookm 67:316 My '28 900w

"His style is justly attuned to his subject, relieved by a latent and kindly humor, and he has a fine sense of proportion." Isabel Paterson

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p4 F 5 '28 1250w

Boston Transcript p6 Ap 7 '28 1050w

"Well worth a place even in small libraries." B. C. A. W.

+ Cath World 127:372 Je '28 680w

Cleveland Open Shelf p63 My '28

Dial 85:359 O '28 160w

Reviewed by Ernest Boyd

Ind 120:310 Mr 31 '28 1200w

"Mr. Burdett has done a competent job, although it would not be difficult to argue that, falling into an all-too-common trick of the hour, he has repeated and emphasized far more than he should have done the supposed point of a casual remark of the young Gladstone to the effect that he was without the inner light. Mr. Burdett has been regarded as a member of the Squirearchy—that is, the group of younger writers revolving about the London Mercury. They are understood to have set for themselves a standard of correct and lucid writing. This being so, it is an odd circumstance that Mr. Burdett's monograph should contain a large number of sentences, not at all abstruse, which are virtually unintelligible at first reading."

+ — Nation 126:462 Ap 18 '28 200w

"Those who desire to enjoy the travesty of a great but fallible man may find this book amusing, but as 'an important study of his character and achievement' it is worthless."

— Nation and Ath 42:188 N 5 '27 880w

"A more labored work—but not less skillful—than M. Maurois'. This is inevitable, since he works through exposition rather than narrative, and makes himself fully responsible for the interpretation." R. M. Lovett

New Repub 54:73 F 29 '28 700w

"This book which is written with admiration but not with gullibility, with style but not with one superior to the subject, is one that many people will like to read and like more when they read it."

+ New Statesman 29:822 O 8 '27 170w

"It is an engaging book and one that classes its author with Hugh L. Anson Fausset, Harold Nicolson and other keen interpreters of human motives and reliable judges of human conduct. Had Mr. Burdett not said in a preliminary note that all he had attempted is a partial portrait of Gladstone, the just reviewer would have to comment upon omissions which are obvious even to one who is neither particularly keen on Gladstone tradition nor a student of Gladstone literature. The self-imposed task of the author was to shape a profile in relief from a handful of other men's clay. He has done it quite masterfully." Joseph Collins

+ N Y Evening Post p12 F 25 '28 1450w

"A very illuminating work. It may not speak the final word on William Gladstone. But it presents him in convincing fashion to a pragmatic world from which the faculty of indignation seems to be seeping away, and which has scant respect for the 'crusades' that succeeded one another in the great leader's long and strenuous life." H: L. Stuart

+ N Y Times p7 F 5 '28 820w

Reviewed by L. F. Abbott

Outlook 148:474 Mr 21 '28 1100w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:406 Jl '28

Pratt p34 summer '28

Spec 139:731 O 29 '27 180w

"As a literary production the book has in it much to admire. It is sensitively wrought and has style and flavor; the style is not only spirited but mellow, and is the work of a writer who does not have recourse to distortion of phrase, to excess of raciness or pungency, for artistic effect. . . The political career of Gladstone is rather meagerly sketched. Mr Burdett is obviously more interested in personal reactions than in external events. It must be thought that Mr Burdett has expended his skill on a work of far too small scale."

+ — Springf'd Republican p10 F 17 '28 820w

Times [London] Lit Sup p723 O 20 '27 1050w

Wis Lib Bul 24:90 Mr '28

Reviewed by S. K. Ratcliffe

Yale R n s 17:794 Jl '28 150w

BURGESS, WARREN RANDOLPH. Reserve banks and the money market; with an introd. by Benjamin Strong. 328p $3 (12s 6d) Harper

332.11 Federal reserve banks. Banks and banking—United States 28-909

"Senator Glass, Dr. Willis and Mr. Harding, formerly Governor of the Reserve Board, have described the origin and early history of our notable experiment in centralized banking and elastic currency; Dr. Kemmerer and numerous other writers have described the system's machinery. Dr. Burgess's discussion concerns itself little with the theoretical side of these considerations; it undertakes to show practical results in actual instances and the reason for them."—N Y Times

---

"An entertaining and readable book on the Federal Reserve System has appeared at last. Dr. Burgess has written a book which the lay reader can understand, and that, too, without sacrificing all value to the financial expert." W. C. Harris

+ Ann Am Acad 138:196 Jl '28 250w

Booklist 24:346 Je '28

Reviewed by E: H. Collins

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p22 F 26 '28 1200w

"That Mr. Burgess is well prepared to write such a book is evidenced by his intimate command of the facts and the results achieved by the Federal Reserve System. The wealth of material offered in illustration and substantiation of the Reserve banks' work could hardly be duplicated by an outsider. The material presented is particularly timely in the present position of the money market."

+ Harvard Business R 6:368 Ap '28 2800w

"Dr. Burgess in his book has for the first time given a clear and accurate account of what is now the controlling system of not only our own but of the world's banking." S: Crowther

+ N Y Evening Post p10 F 18 '28 1000w

"This book is a valuable contribution to the literature, already considerable, that has grown up around the Federal Reserve System. None of the other books treats so clearly and completely as Dr. Burgess does the actual working of its mechanism, its relations with and effect upon the general money market, its actual policies in such matters as discount rates, gold reserve and prices. His discussion throws light on many controverted problems of policy, though the book is itself not controversial." A. D. Noyes

+ N Y Times p3 Ja 22 '28 1900w

"It is not, in any true sense, an account of the 'Reserve Banks,' as the title indicates. It is a defense and explanation of the conduct of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York, especially within recent years—an apologia pro vita sua. . . What is thus so glibly set forth as ideal practice is just the reverse of safe banking or of the situation for which the Reserve Act intended to provide and is widely different from that which exists abroad. . . Those who devote themselves to the development of 'economic science' should study the work of Mr. Burgess and the words of the Governor of the Reserve bank of New York with care and should make their own analyses and draw their own conclusions." H. P. Willis

Pol Sci Q 43:608 D '28 1850w

St Louis 26:97 Ap '28

BURLINGAME, ROGER. High Thursday. 334p $2 Scribner

28-3171

Jane Madden had been married to her painter-author husband nearly twenty years when she established her highly successful "Thursdays" at the Madden apartment on Irving Place. At one of these Thursdays Tom Madden met a flapper in search of thrills and presently eloped with her to Europe. Jane, being an exceptional woman merely closed the door of his workroom, leaving his papers undisturbed, and waited for Tom to come back. He came back sure enough, on one of her Thursdays.

Booklist 24:364 Je '28

"The book is hackneyed, and therefore dull."
— Bookm 67:xl Mr '28 150w

"The book is written with an enthusiasm and verve which make it amusing, if one can manage to laugh at what the author takes so seriously. It is an unconscious parody built around the theme that genius, as Mr. Beverly Nichols once remarked, is an infinite capacity for having pains." Marjorie Johnson

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p16 Mr 11 '28 450w

"The problems of this triangle are worked out by Mr. Burlingame to a somewhat disappointing and conventional conclusion. The process, however, affords entertaining reading. The author of 'Susan Shane' has a gift for conversation and for sympathetic handling of his women characters, while Tom Madden is limned with a genial Rabelaisian relish."

+ — Boston Transcript p4 F 8 '28 300w

"Again, as in 'Susan Shane,' Roger Burlingame has come close to writing a good novel, and again a perfunctory style, a certain superficiality, and a weakness for mechanical plot have proved his downfall. . . Mr. Burlingame has made genius fairly credible, but he might perhaps produce more satisfactory results by choosing characters more commonplace and endeavoring to explore them more profoundly" E. H. W.

— + New Repub 54:79 F 29 '28 170w

"It is really pretty terrible." L. T.
— N Y Evening Post p13 F 4 '28 250w

" 'High Thursday,' being a superficial exploration of the troubles between man and wife during what modern novelists call the 'dangerous age,' is very good writing when it focuses on frothy events, such as the Bohemian party which opens the tale. But when it takes Tom Madden away from his wife to Europe with Hope Birge it degenerates to 'quick flash' writing that fails to express what Mr. Burlingame quite evidently had lurking at the back of his mind."

— + N Y Times p14 Ja 22 '28 650w

"Pleasantly diverting always, and if we are inclined occasionally to wish for events rather than conversation, we soon forget our restiveness in a delight at some surely-developed incident or at a moment of brilliant sympathy with these seriocomic slaves to Art. The novel is intelligent, disciplined, and worthy of adult reading."

BURLINGAME, ROGER—Continued

+ Sat R of Lit 4:656 Mr 3 '28 130w

"A pleasantly intelligent if not very deep or altogether convincing narrative of love and art."

Springf'd Republican p7f F 19 '28 400w

BURNS, ARTHUR ROBERT. Money and monetary policy in early times. (Hist. of civilization. Pre-history and antiquity) 517p il $7.50 Knopf [25s K. Paul]

332.4 Money 27-21334

"This book is a detailed study of the first thousand years of coinage history and of the motives which dominated the monetary policies of that period."—Am Econ R

Reviewed by J. J. Senturia
Am Econ R 18:537 S '28 380w

Reviewed by Max Lerner
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p15 S 9 '28 600w

"To those who are interested in monetary history and policy, we recommend this most interesting and complete account." S. H.

+ Boston Transcript p4 F 4 '28 450w

"It is a fascinating story, pieced together from scanty and scattered data, and it is a welcome substitute for the works of imagination that have too largely held sway in this field. It will doubtless be a standard authority until our knowledge of pre-history is greatly increased."

+ Nation 126:463 Ap 18 '28 80w

Times [London] Lit Sup p776 N 3 '27 1950w

BURNS, ARTHUR ROBERT, and BURNS, MRS EVELINE MABEL. Economic world; a survey. 304p il $2 Oxford

330 Economics L28-62

"We endeavour to present the economic world as a machine, and to examine it as we might any other machine. What does it do? Whence comes its energy and driving force? What are its parts? What is their relation to each other? How do they work together? What is the result?"—Preface

---

"A new and interesting attempt by two prominent British economists to solve the apparently insoluble problem of writing a thoroughly satisfactory text for elementary students of economics. The outstanding merit of this book is its readability and unusual clarity. On the other hand, in their approach to the general problems of production and distribution, the authors are disappointingly conservative." J: Fennelly

+ — Hist Outlook 19:294 O '28 150w

Survey 61:247 N 15 '28 50w

BURNS, CECIL DELISLE. 1918-1928; a short history of the world. 473p $3.50 Payson & Clarke [16s Gollancz]

909.82 History, Modern—20th century. World politics. International law and relations. Reconstruction (European war) 28-28379

A review of world trends and developments in the ten years since the war. Part one surveys the years of the transition to peace in Europe and Russia, and the position of the League of nations. Part two discusses the new system at work, beginning with the revival of Russia and following with the restabilization of Europe. Part three interprets the new issues arising in Turkey, Asia, and Africa, and closes with an indication of the next act in the world drama.

"Professor Delisle Burns, who is Stevenson Lecturer in Citizenship at Glasgow University, has achieved a remarkable measure of success in a difficult task. . . This is a book no self-respecting citizen should miss."

+ Sat R 146:730 D 1 '28 320w

Times [London] Lit Sup p946 D 6 '28 900w

BURNS, ELMER ELLSWORTH. Radio; a study of first principles for schools, evening classes and home study. 255p il $2 Van Nostrand

621.384 Radio communication 28-16372

A text book for class study of the fundamental principles of radio which may be used, tho it is not primarily so intended, as a handbook in radio construction. Illustrated with diagrams.

Booklist 25:56 N '28

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:572 N '28

BURNS, ROBERT. Letters; sel. with an introd. by R. Brimley Johnson. 188p $2.50 Dodd [6s Lane]

B or 92 28-24762

Following a long introduction by the editor, which gives a sketch of the life of Robert Burns, are over seventy letters written by the poet between 1781 and the year of his death.

"I cannot think the editor of this volume has added to the debt of gratitude we already owe him for so many of his labours. . . Much as we could wish it otherwise, for our love of Burns and our admiration for some of his letters hardly stops short this side of idolatry, we cannot believe that this selection can do his memory anything but injury." Augustine Birrell

— Nation and Ath 43:675 Ag 25 '28 1620w

"The letters chosen are varied and representative. Mr. Johnson has, as usual, done his work efficiently, if without distinction. But it is doubtful whether Burns repays this kind of treatment. He was not a letter writer par excellence. If one were interested in the poet, one would read his letters to know the man; and it is to admirers of Burns who do not possess Chambers's book that this volume will appeal."

New Statesman 31:492 Jl 21 '28 150w

"The most spontaneous and unaffected of poets, his style becomes stilted, forced and unnatural whenever he sits down to write a letter to a friend. He conveys the impression of having the Polite Letter Writer always at his elbow."

— Sat R 146:90 Jl 21 '28 220w

BURR, MRS ANNA ROBESON (BROWN). Palludia. 407p $2.50 Duffield

28-24946

The best friend of Amory's boyhood in Maine was a charming enigmatic uncle who came and went mysteriously, and once, on one of their excursions, showed the boy the hiding place of some valuable paintings. The uncle disappears, the boy grows up and sets out to find him. He goes to England, and crosses to the continent. A fresh mystery is added to his search in the appearance of a steady stream of paintings by the unknown Palludia. The paintings Amory recognizes and believing his uncle to be the artist, he continues his hopeful search.

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p22 N 11 '28 120w

"Palludia is one of the most remarkable figures in recent fiction." D. L. Mann

+ Boston Transcript p6 N 3 '28 1550w

"Where was ever such extravagance of material? The story starts in New England. To New York, England, France, Italy and where not the story leaps, dragging an ever-increasing plot and mystery in its wake. Art, archeology, politics, and international intrigue bestrew its pathway. . . . All sorts of international secrets are told and many more hinted at. If action for its own sake and pre-arranged mysteries intrigue, then 'Palludia' is recommended."

Sat R of Lit 5:410 N 24 '28 200w

BURR, MRS ANNA ROBESON (BROWN). Portrait of a banker: James Stillman, 1850-1918. 370p $5 Duffield

B or 92 Stillman, James 27-23631

For descriptive note see Annual for 1927.

Booklist 24:280 Ap '28

"The painting of this portrait by Mrs. Burr might almost be the work of one of the old masters, so skillfully does she delineate and color her figure, James Stillman, and merge it into the background of the period which produced him." M. P. Waite

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p5 Ja 15 '28 1050w

Reviewed by A. S. Will

N Y Times p8 Ja 1 '28 1250w

"The book is valuable as much for its background as for its presentation of an unusual character, unusual even among a number of highly exceptional figures." Herschel Brickell

+ No Am 225:adv F '28 110w

"Any book written about him fairly and with access to inside information would be historically useful. But Miss Burr has done more than this: she has really drawn a vitalized portrait of a complex human being—a difficult task."

+ Outlook 148:32 Ja 4 '28 1150w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:296 My '28

R of Rs 77:8 Ja '28 100w

Reviewed by J: A. Fitch

Survey 59:591 F 1 '28 130w

BURRELL, MRS CAROLINE FRANCES (BENEDICT). Our girls and our times. 159p $1.25 Wilde

173 Girls 28-28017

"An uncommonly rational and practical spirit is shown in this treatment of the young girl and her problems, and bewildered parents may find such chapters as the 'Girl and boy' the 'Girl and freedom,' with their frank presentation and sensible suggestions, a real aid."—Wis Lib Bul

Booklist 24:344 Je '28

Wis Lib Bul 24:85 Mr '28

BURROUGHS, JOHN. Heart of Burroughs's journals; ed. by Clara Barrus. 361p $3 Houghton

B or 92 28-23950

Extracts from the journals, notebooks and other writing of John Burroughs from 1854 to 1921, arranged chronologically and edited by his physican and confidant, Dr Clara Barrus.

"Dr. Barrus worshiped the man whose biographer she became; but she has been honest in her selections from his journals; they reveal the man, as she puts it herself, 'warts and all.'" L: Gannett

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p7 O 21 '28 800w

Reviewed by J. W. Maury

Boston Transcript p4 O 13 '28 2150w

Reviewed by E. F. Edgett

Boston Transcript p7 N 10 '28 100w

"Here is fresh material from the very fountain head of that stream which copiously flowed for more than half a century and in its current carried many to a land of keen joy and sweet refreshment." A. F. Gilmore

+ Christian Science Monitor p13 O 24 '28 440w

Reviewed by C: K. Trueblood

Dial 86:72 Ja '29 1400w

"The book is good, eminently readable, the true record of a long and many-colored life." C: Johnston

+ N Y Times p5 N 4 '28 1100w

Reviewed by H: S. Canby

Sat R of Lit 5:393 N 24 '28 650w

BURROW, TRIGANT. Social basis of consciousness; a study in organic psychology based upon a synthetic and societal concept of the neuroses. (Int. lib. of psychology, philosophy and scientific method) 256p $4 Harcourt [12s 6d K. Paul]

126 Consciousness. Psychoanalysis. Neuroses 27-16967

"The reader who has the hardihood to grapple with a difficult style, mystifying terminology, and speculative premises will find in this book an interesting extension of Freudian psychology. After sixteen years devoted to psychoanalytic work, Dr. Burrow has come to view the neurosis as a social rather than as an individual phenomenon. He maintains that what is commonly accepted as normal indicates a disease-process no less than do the reactions presented by the individual neurosis; and that the unwitting psychoanalyst who accepts as normal the sexual attitudes of a conventional and organized society stands quite as much in need of being psychoanalyzed as does his patient."—J Philos

"This is an important book. In it psychoanalytic theory abandons the traditional individualistic psychology underlying Freud's system and seeks a biological, organic and social basis. . . In addition to a consistent and clever use of psycho-analytic dialectics, Dr. Burrow enforces his argument by abundant application and illustration." H. W. Schneider

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 My 6 '28 380w

Cleveland Open Shelf p86 Jl '28

"The book speaks throughout with a modesty and sincerity that at once invite the reader's sympathy, and it is singularly free from the muck-raking that characterizes the usual run of Freudian literature. The author's arraignment of present-day psychoanalytic method, his indictment of the self-conscious and ego-centric striving that pervades our social life, and his contention that normality is a neurosis born of moral pretense and sham will no doubt provoke the interest of a large circle of readers." Arthur Jersild

+ — J Philos 25:301 My 24 '28 1750w

BURSTEIN, ABRAHAM. Ghetto messenger. 302p $2 Bloch

"The author, who is a Jewish rabbi, knows the east side well. Sixty of these stories which appeared each Sunday morning for six years on the English page of The New York Jewish Daily News have been chosen for this reprint. All show evidence of haste in writing and have the flavor of the syndicate."—N Y Times

"They are quite without literary pretensions, but they are substantial and life-like in characterization, and the plots, though slight, are often ingenious."

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p18 S 9 '28 110w

"Mr. Burstein has an enormous vein of gold to mine. If he can add to his profound knowledge of the east side and his keen understanding of the Jew the ability to write dialogue such as his people speak instead of Abie's stilted perfection, and acquire a style that makes an honest attempt at beauty, he will create characters that may live and become a real contribution to Anglo-Jewish literature instead of turning out tales, many of which are little more than pedestrian 'funnies'—done on the typewriter."

— + N Y Times p7 Jl 1 '28 530w

BURT, EMILY ROSE. Shower book; seventy-seven showers for the engaged girl. 165p $2 Harper

793 Entertaining. Amusements 28-10014

The story goes that long ago an obstinate parent did not like the man of his daughter's choice and refused her a dowry. So her friends gave her a bridal shower and thus showers for the engaged girl had their beginning. The book gives ideas for seventy-seven kinds of showers,

BURT, E. R.—Continued
some entirely original, but others variations of the well-known kinds. They are divided into the following: Kitchen and pantry; House furnishings; Linens; Lingerie and hosiery; Variety showers; Specialty showers; Featuring holidays; Outdoor showers.

Booklist 24:391 Jl '28

"Emily Rose Burt has written other books along 'party' lines, and all have individuality and originality."
+ Boston Transcript p6 My 12 '28 90w
Wis Lib Bul 24:220 Jl '28

BURT, KATHARINE (NEWLIN) (MRS MAXWELL STRUTHERS BURT). Cock's feather. 327p $2.50 Houghton
28-22358

David Cray is a burden-bearer. At sixteen he assumed responsibility for his family,—a charmingly helpless mother, an irresponsible artist brother, and a sister with romantic ideas. The passing years brought increasing responsibilities, mental, moral and financial, and David, stifling his own desires, assumed them all. He had always loved Sophie Copley, who was also greatly desired by his cousin Roger. Sophie marries David to be safe from herself, but because she was not one of the meek of earth, and David's burden-bearing dismayed her, she left him and went to New York. Roger was very near to winning her then, when suddenly Sophie's eyes were opened and she saw the meekness of David in its proper chivalric light.

"David's development, the finely drawn struggle of circumstances with desire, combine to make this Mrs. Burt's best novel."
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p17 O 28 '28 100w

"This is by far the best thing Mrs. Burt has done. It sets her, like David, in the class of eternally valiant souls." I. W. Lawrence
+ Boston Transcript p3 O 27 '28 1450w

"David is no goody-goody. Life, for him, is something fine and glowing and the book, for the reader, is also something fine and glowing because of this spirit which infuses it."
+ N Y Times p6 O 14 '28 600w

BURT, MAXWELL STRUTHERS. The other side. 329p $2 Scribner
814 National characteristics, American
28-15042

To American and foreign detractors of things American Mr Burt shows the other side of the argument: that Europe itself is not above criticism in matters social, political, and otherwise; and that there is more of good and more promise of good in the United States than her critics, foreign or domestic, are willing to acknowledge.

Booklist 25:19 O '28

"If you are fed up with 'the apologetic American' you will enjoy this call to arms. You may enjoy it anyway." T. S. Matthews
+ Bookm 68:93 S '28 250w

"His contentions are generally sound, although exceptions may be taken to some of his arguments. I do not believe, for instance, that we have had very few second-rate cabinet officers or presidents." Garreta Busey
+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p5 Jl 8 '28 880w
Boston Transcript p2 Jl 11 '28 1000w

"Mr. Burt is suave, ironical, witty, and intelligent. He gives ample ground to the assailants of Babbitt and to the critics of America; he uses the tu quoque only to indicate the frailty of the method; and he indicates the possession of a standard and a point of view. As an indication that all wit and intelligence are not on the side of the book-haters, the book is an omen."
+ Dial 85:267 S '28 100w
Reviewed by Ernest Boyd
Ind 121:115 Ag 4 '28 1200w

"Almost everything he says is reasonably true and salutary and 'gently bred'—to use Mr. Burt's favorite and most-looked-up-to word. It is slightly unfortunate that his sweet humanism should occasionally be a bit irritating, like so much of Matthew Arnold and Anatole France.
+ — Nation 127:23 Jl 4 '28 100w

"He has written one of the most lively, candid, fair and accurate discussions of international psychology which has yet appeared. His book presents 'the other side' to all the questions which are involved in that 'certain condescension' on the part of foreigners and the equally vicious self-contempt on the part of some Americans." J: Carter
+ N Y Times p2 Je 17 '28 1650w

"If there is a society for the promotion of Franco-American understanding, it should reprint and circulate the paper on France, 'Gallic Calm,' in this book. It is the only short, wholly sound estimate and appreciation of the French which we have ever read. Mr. Burt is not at his best as a writer in these papers, which suffer a little from hurry, repetition, and combativeness, so that at times one feels that a more detached attitude would have been of more service to the excellent causes espoused. But the foreword, which should be read, explains some of these things." F. C. L. R.
+ — Outlook 149:437 Jl 11 '28 230w
St Louis 26:386 D '28
Times [London] Lit Sup p773 O 25 '28 250w
Wis Lib Bul 24:221 Jl '28

BURT, MAXWELL STRUTHERS. They could not sleep. 323p $2 Scribner
28-9650

These stories by the author of "Delectable mountains" are of wide range in subject and style. They have previously appeared elsewhere. Contents: Beauty and the Blantons; Buchanan hears the wind; The man who grew a beard; Pepper's ghost; Stumbling feet; Flamingoes; You are all pardoned; C'est la guerre; The inheritors; Grandpa.

"Remembering great writers of short stories from whose class Mr. Burt must be clearly excluded, I promptly state that this 'literary' quality is a limitation because I wish to make clear that Mr. Burt is not a fine or important short-story writer before I make clear that he is a clever and charming one. It is only right that I do this; for though it is a limitation for a short-story to be 'literary' it is not a fault. In his own sphere Mr. Burt deserves genuine recognition." L: Kronenberger
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p17 My 20 '28 530w
Boston Transcript p8 Je 30 '28 150w

"The skeletons of these stories do not, perhaps, appear very promising; but when Mr. Burt pads them, clothes them, and infuses them with his high commands, they become even duller. None of them, however, is altogether dull, though all of them are boring in spots. For Mr. Burt never can let well enough alone. Time after time he spoils with his chatter a scene which, if simply presented, would be dramatic, which only silence on his part could sufficiently emphasize." T. S. Matthews
— New Repub 54:354 My 9 '28 1450w

"The value of this book springs out of a very subtle virtue. You notice immediately that the English is excellent, that the images are hard and bright, that the characters are people; but it was several days after finishing the book before I could decide why it was so ingratiating. The reason is, it's a friendly book. There are the coolly snobbish books and the warmly patronizing books, but this middle ground of friendliness is rarely trod." Robert Hyde
+ N Y Evening Post p13 Ap 28 '28 300w

"Even in the less important pieces there is merit above the ordinary run of magazine stories; there is narrative skill and beauty. And the opening tale, 'Beauty and the Blantons,' comes close to being a short-story masterpiece."
+ N Y Times p14 Ap 8 '28 620w

Reviewed by Herschel Brickell
No Am 225:adv Je '28 60w
Springf'd Republican p7f My 13 '28 280w

BURTON, BEATRICE PAYNE. Little yellow house. 310p $2 Doubleday, Doran
28-21584

Emmy, the eighteen-year-old heroine, is very tired of poverty. She refuses her steady, hard-working lover and takes a position in an office. Her employer falls in love with her but does not mention that he is married. Reaction at his dishonesty sends Emmy back to the little yellow house and the trustworthy lover, with a new set of values.

Booklist 25:120 D '28
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p16 O 7 '28 130w

"There is not an overdrawn character in the novel. They are all real personalities, living their story in an ordinary manner, amid surroundings that may be met with any day in any city in the country." H. F. M.
+ Boston Transcript p4 Jl 28 '28 500w

BURTON, ERNEST DE WITT. Education in a democratic world; ed. by Harold R. Willoughby. 165p $2 Univ. of Chicago press [15s Cambridge univ. press]
370.4 Education, Higher 28-7839

"The addresses published in this volume represent a few of the speeches made by Dr. Burton during his administration as president of Chicago University. They are the expression of his convictions regarding the function and purpose of education, coming from a wide range of experience, the crystallization of a liberal personality active in the cause of his ideals. The obligation of the educated, a school of politics, education and religion, etc., are some of the chapters herein."—Survey

Reviewed by J. E. Kirkpatrick
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p17 Mr 4 '28 300w
Christian Century 45:737 Je 7 '28 50w
Cleveland Open Shelf p71 Je '28
Educ R 76:26 Je '28 420w
N Y Evening Post p12 Ja 28 '28 30w
N Y Times p13 Je 17 '28 350w
Survey 59:656 F 15 '28 70w

"They give us an insight into the personality of a man at once sincere, intelligent and tolerant; and their simple style, lightened by occasional almost unconscious epigram, provides a charming contrast to the sound and fury traditionally associated with Chicago."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p97 F 9 '28 90w

BUSH, IRVING T. Working with the world. 315p $2.50 Doubleday, Doran
330.973 Bush terminal company. United States—Economics conditions. Business
28-8360

For the encouragement that it may give to the young men of America, the founder of the Bush terminal company tells the story of his own business success, and picturing the position of America in the world today, points out the opportunities that await the American youth on the threshold of his career.

Booklist 24:346 Je '28

"There are the ideas of a liberal and successful business man, a mingling of shrewd observation and good common sense, together with the usual banality and success stuff. The most interesting part of the book is Mr. Bush's account of some of his early experiences in developing the Bush Terminal."
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 O 21 '28 70w

"Sane, tolerant and admirably lucid in statement and discussion, Mr. Bush brings light into various dark places, shadowed by the tangled economic problems of a post-war world." F. B.
+ Boston Transcript p2 F 21 '28 760w

"A story as thrilling as any 'Arabian Nights' tale of enchantment and well worth the perusal of anybody for whom human endeavor and human achievement are interesting. It is told with modesty and a certain shyness that leads the author to hurry on to that which he deems more important, his message to those to whom he dedicates the book, 'the young men of America, who have before them the Golden Age of our nation.' "
+ N Y Times p12 F 12 '28 420w

Reviewed by Arthur Strawn
N Y World p11m Mr 4 '28 500w
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:446 O '28
Pratt p11 autumn '28

"About one-fourth of the book is autobiographical. These chapters are vividly written and afford a rational basis for much of the optimism that pervades all of Mr. Bush's writing."
+ R of Rs 77:18 Mr '28 100w

BUSH-BROWN, MRS LOUISE (CARTER). Flowers for every garden. 194p $1.75 Little 716 Flowers. Gardening 27-22540

"The author makes no pretense to new discoveries nor to heralding new varieties; rather she has made her garden book as simple as possible, listing only the old favorites and best tried newcomers—fifteen perennials (without exhausting lists of marvelous named varieties); a score of annuals; a few shrubs which will grow even in a smoke-soiled city yard; her own selection of a garden to cost ten dollars flat; notes on manuring that even a city-bred newsboy could understand, and a garden calendar so composed as almost to persuade the reader that there are garden chores in January and that the season's work will not heap on him in midsummer."—Books (N Y Herald Tribune)

Booklist 24:151 Ja '28
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p15 N 13 '27 170w
Cleveland Open Shelf p48 Ap '28
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:38 Ja '28

"A practical garden book that at the same time is interesting to read."
+ Springf'd Republican p7f D 18 '27 300w

"So many books on flower gardening are merely pleasant reading with here and there a hint of practical worth, that there is a welcome waiting this book which is chock full of practical advice given in a pleasing manner."
+ Wis Lib Bul 23:285 D '27

BUSWELL, ARTHUR MOSES. Chemistry of water and sewage treatment. (American chemical soc. Monograph ser.) 362p il $7 Chemical catalog co.
628.16 Water—Purification. Sewage—Purification 28-1293

"Up-to-date work embracing recent applications of physical chemistry, with numerous references to original literature. Presents a general survey of the mechanical steps involved and discusses the general layout of the various types of treatment plants, covering this phase with pictures, diagrams and descriptive text, but does not discuss in detail the construction and operation of mechanical devices. Analytical methods have also been omitted. Author is Professor of Sanitary Chemistry in the University of Illinois."—N Y New Tech Bks

"While written primarily for chemists, this book is of much interest to the sanitary engineer and the biologist interested in water purification and sewage treatment. The author prefaces the more technical discussions with two introductory chapters dealing with recent developments in chemical theory and with the chemistry of colloids. Although to the chemist, it may seem almost absurd to discuss the subject of colloids in 20 pages, such a condensed and well written presentation is a boon to the bacteriologist." J: F. Norton

BUSWELL, A. M.—Continued
+ Am J Pub Health 18:687 My '28 240w

"The subject matter is well presented, meets a crying need in its field, and deserves to be on the book shelves of all interested in water and sewage." W. D. Hatfield
+ Ind & Eng Chem 20:337 Mr '28 220w
N Y New Tech Bks 13:9 Ja '28
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:207 Ap '28

BUTTERWORTH, JULIAN EDWARD. The parent-teacher association and its work. 149p $1.25 (5s 6d) Macmillan
371.103 Parents' and teachers' associations 28-10088

"Discusses the opportunities before the Association and its place in our educational scheme. Practically the only material in book form on the subject, the study has been recommended by the U. S. Commissioner of Education at two recent conferences in Cleveland."—Cleveland Open Shelf

Booklist 24:384 Jl '28
Cleveland Open Shelf p96 S '28

"The author has made the most thorough investigation yet available of the problems arising from the functioning of the parent-teacher association. . . Although a number of conclusions are based on a limited amount of data which may or may not be representative and although the work is open to other criticisms, the author has written a sane, readable book, which should be of service to parents, teachers, principals, superintendents, and other parent-teacher workers." H. G. Richey
+ El School J 29:73 S '28 480w
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:451 O '28

BUTTS, MARY. Armed with madness. 238p $2 Boni [7s 6d Wishart]
28-11396

Several young people are summering together in a house on the English coast. Each of them—a girl, her brother, her lover and three other men—is at least a little mad, as their highly sophisticated divertissements prove. Toward the end, the artist goes completely mad, and fashioning a statue of the lover of the girl, binds her to it and pierces her with arrows. The style of the book is elliptic, and the atmosphere Freudian.

Reviewed by G. B. Munson
Bookm 68:84 S '28 380w

"It is far more than average. It is beautiful and admirable prose. And if she were not so obviously of a group that thinks it thinks because it can give names to things, she might some day tell an interesting story." Eugene Lohrke
+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p16 Je 10 '28 480w

Reviewed by Marianne Moore
Dial 85:258 S '28 900w

"Mary Butts is clearly a talented and almost blindingly clever writer. As in her previous novel, 'Ashe of Rings,' she continues to blunt the edges of her perceptions with a foolish and unconvincing fable dealing with magic rings, superstitions, amulets, and other paraphernalia impossible to stomach. There is something perverse in this medieval mumbo-jumbo. Miss Butts appears to have committed a cardinal sin: that of including material in a work of art merely because that material happens to interest her."
— Nation 126:652 Je 6 '28 80w

"Miss Butts, in her book of short stories, 'Speed the Plough,' showed such fresh qualities of style and imaginative approach, that it is disappointing to find her new novel off-key in every possible way. With oppressive seriousness, she has set characters acting in the wrong way for the wrong reasons." Louise Bogan
— New Repub 55:311 Ag 8 '28 480w

"Throughout the whole book runs a note of cruel and decadent sophistication oddly in contrast to the freshness and brightness and beauty of the writing, with its amazing imagery, its clean, natural sensuousness, its occasional pregnancy of significance. There is no question that Miss Butts is a poet, and hardly more that she is a writer of often distinguished prose. And once you enter her world, if you can accept and appreciate it as a world unto itself, what goes on becomes exciting and unpredictable, Aldous Huxley and William Blake walking hand in hand, with what results one can perhaps imagine."
N Y Times p9 My 13 '28 620w

"We cannot help wishing Miss Butts had given us less of her private vision. She has so much talent, particularly for conveying the aspects of things, that it is a great pity she should unlearn her thinking and let herself run to seed in incoherence, as here, in 'Armed With Madness.'" L. P. Hartley
— + Sat R 145:604 My 12 '28 120w
Times [London] Lit Sup p397 My 24 '28 140w

BYE, RAYMOND TAYLOR, and HEWETT, WILLIAM WALLACE. Applied economics; the application of economic principles to the problems of economic life. 655p $3.75 Knopf
330 Economics 28-10378

"This 'attempt to apply the principles of economics to the problems of economic life' is designed to follow a course in principles of economics, the authors apparently holding the belief that in the teaching of economics theory should precede application. The customary division into consumption, production, exchange and distribution is followed, although the material presented and the manner of presentation are in many respects original."—Am Econ R

"Altogether this volume appears to be one of the very best texts available for the use of college freshmen and sophomores." J: Ise
+ Am Econ R 18:500 S '28 520w

Reviewed by E. B. Reuter
Am J Soc 34:547 N '28 380w

"The reviewer wishes to state that he regards this as the best book he has seen on the subject of Applied Economics. It is well written, well balanced, sane, and comprehensive." T. N. Carver
+ Ann Am Acad 138:187 Jl '28 600w

BYRD, RICHARD EVELYN. Skyward. 359p il $3.50 Putnam
629.13 Aeronautics—Voyages 28-9367

Commander Byrd's story of his flying career since training days at Pensacola reaches its natural climax in the polar and transatlantic flights. It is generously illustrated with photographs, and contains a good deal of aviation history during the period of Byrd's interest in flying.

Booklist 24:350 Je '28

Reviewed by F. E. Hill
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p3 Ap 15 '28 1350w

"The most interesting and instructive book on aviation that has been published. It is well written, well rounded and filled with authoritative information which is spiced and developed by the quick succession of fascinating events in the life of the man." D. C. Lunt
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p8 Jl 15 '28 700w

"Byrd's book, 'Skyward,' is a full-length view of Byrd the man. And it is the entire court trial and acquittal of the possible charge against Byrd that he makes modesty a false fetish and is insincere in his modesty." D. R.

+ Boston Transcript p6 Ap 7 '28 900w

Cleveland Open Shelf p132 D '28

Reviewed by Raymond Mortimer
Nation and Ath 43:619 Ag 11 '28 100w

Reviewed by R. C. B. Brown
N Y Evening Post p12 Ap 21 '28 300w

Reviewed by Russell Owen
N Y Times p1 Ap 1 '28 1900w

"An interesting and revealing volume. To the thousands who know Byrd only by association with these exploits the story will bring many new facts about a career, wrought both by happy circumstance and dogged determination to overcome obstacles, a career which is a curious mixture of bitter and sweet." C. B. Allen

N Y World p11m Ap 8 '28 600w

"Easily one of the most fascinating of recent books."

+ No Am 225:adv My '28 90w

" 'Skyward' deserves to be widely read. It is a heartening book. Like Lindbergh's, it is the story of achievement made possible only by courage, fortitude, the intelligent use of scientific knowledge, and vast common sense. With such equipment, these young men do not fly in the face of Providence."

+ Outlook 149:30 My 2 '28 280w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:342 Je '28

R of Rs 77:15 My '28 110w

"His experiences have been so varied that, at the conclusion of the book, we find it to be not alone one man's story but, also, a review of the growth of American aviation since before the war."

+ Sat R of Lit 5:195 O 6 '28 300w

"Would that a cheaper edition of Skyward could be published rendering it obtainable in every school in England." F. Y.-B.

+ Spec 140:912 Je 16 '28 180w

Springf'd Republican p7f Ap 8 '28 780w

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p389 My 24 '28 1000w

BYRD, WILLIAM. Journey to the land of Eden, and other papers. (American bookshelf) 367p $2.50 Vanguard press

917.55 Virginia—Description and travel. North Carolina—Description and travel

28-23035

Colonel William Byrd of Westover was one of the most famous of early Virginians. Born in 1674, at the time of his death he owned "179,440 acres of the best land in Virginia." In 1728 he served on a commission appointed to run a boundary line between Virginia and North Carolina. Twice later he made trips to certain mines on the frontier. Each of these trips has its account, written for his own amusement. They are collected here under the titles: History of the dividing line; A Journey to the land of Eden; and A progress to the mines.

———

"To me the most interesting volume that has yet been published in 'An American Bookshelf.' " B. R. Redman

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 S 10 '28 750w

"Mr. Van Doren has carefully edited this fascinating account of a survey in the Dismal Swamp, preserving its original well-flavored content. Being written by Colonel Byrd for his own record and amusement, the three expeditions are treated more frankly than they would have been if intended for publication. The result is often racy, always entertaining and withal, one feels, the observations of a scholarly gentleman."

+ Boston Transcript p4 S 15 '28 230w

"Colonel William Byrd was undoubtedly a jovial person with a keen and sometimes sardonic sense of humor and a humanly tolerant but clear-eyed insight into human nature. He wrote these accounts of his three journeys for his own record and amusement and so he spared no details in making them complete and realistic."

+ N Y Times p18 S 9 '28 420w

R of Rs 78:38 O '28 70w

"Not merely do these papers constitute one of the earliest important contributions to American literature, they are also models of graphic and human narrative. Col. Byrd has humor, gusto, and freshness of observation. He puts something of Fielding into his racy and outspoken picture of Carolina society two centuries ago." Allan Nevins

+ Sat R of Lit 5:163 S 29 '28 300w

BYRNE, DONN. Crusade. 250p $2 Little [7s 6d S. Low]

28-7871

An Irish solidier of fortune joins the crusade. In a misadventure on the Syrian desert he is captured by the Saracens, succored by Kothra, the "little sister of All," and set free. He incurs the enmity of the Templars, but escapes with his life and Kothra.

———

Booklist 24:321 My '28

"Donn Byrne has revelled again in an historical background, and superimposed upon it figures that would be delightful in any setting, but profit by the glamor of distance."

+ Bookm 67:464 Je '28 80w

"A rare, qualitative flight into romance in which adventure, externally influenced by the fixations of an historical ambient, becomes actual without losing its authentic flowering of beauty, a beauty due to its fidelity to the inner truths of human character and feeling. From whatever angle one may take it the tale is a fascinating one, in which imagination touches historic truth with glowing color, and humanizes figures of the past with authentic emotions." F: H. Martens

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p3 Mr 18 '28 600w

"We get thrilling episodes galore, given with a fine and delicate touch, romance at its intelligent best, and here being the most striking quality of 'Crusade,' we ponder as we read, and quite without effort, on some of the qualities of man's spiritual needs and his spiritual faith." S. L. Cook

+ Boston Transcript p10 Mr 31 '28 1650w

Cleveland Open Shelf p122 N '28

"He has plowed and harrowed his talent for delicate and fanciful writing; the surface soil of his work is thin and prettily sterile. What would George Moore, Bernard Shaw, James Joyce, or Æ think of Mr. Byrne's exploitation of the charm of Irish character?"

— Ind 120:557 Je 9 '28 220w

Nation 126:494 Ap 25 '28 70w

"There are passages reeking with oriental honey. The book is coarse enough and obvious enough to attract a large public. This includes the morals of the hero, which are stainless. The Boy Scouts will welcome him." C. A. C.

— New Repub 54:279 Ap 18 '28 210w

"The incidents throughout and particularly the climax are exciting."

+ New Statesman 30:804 Mr 31 '28 120w

Reviewed by R. C. B. Brown
N Y Evening Post p12 Mr 31 '28 180w

" 'Crusade' as a story is not so well told as some of Donn Byrne's earlier books. The thread of the tale is lost at times, because of a system of stopping and going back to recount episodes which happened in the past. That is all right when the past lies beyond the time scope of the book. But to apply the system to episodes which occur within the time scope of the book is unnecessarily confusing. One sees that Donn Byrne is capable of a far better way in the second half of the book, when the story sweeps with admirable clarity and simplicity to the conclusion."

+ — N Y Times p8 Mr 18 '28 800w

BYRNE, DONN—Continued

"'Crusade' is a pleasant romance and is made so wholly by Donn Byrne's ability to catch hold of the mystic unreality of romantic spirit and to set it down in a style that, while it irritates any who favor the plainness of more modern manners, continually is busy building soothing and slightly hypnotic rhythms." Lloyd George

+ N Y World p11m Mr 25 '28 600w

"A story of adventure and love through which Donn Byrne's humanity and his moving understanding of character and feeling and motive glow warmly."

+ Outlook 148:511 Mr 28 '28 220w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:427 O '28

Reviewed by R. B. MacDougall

Sat R of Lit 4:760 Ap 14 '28 430w

"If he occasionally overdoes, it is through an excess of zeal. Few writers have his energies or his sense for the dramatically effective massing of material. 'Crusade' is credible and persuasive throughout, and if it is in places too highly documented to be easily readable we forgive the fault almost at the instant of its commission."

+ — Sat R of Lit 4:849 My 5 '28 330w

"Crusade is the kind of novel which feeds the mind, the heart, the inward eye and the inward ear." R. A. Taylor

+ Spec 140:329 Mr 3 '28 280w

Springf'd Republican p7f My 26 '28 130w

"No episode lacks its lovely or pointed phrase; for it is hardly necessary to say that Mr. Byrne's glittering style is peculiarly his own, even to the alloy which has speeded its currency."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p128 F 23 '28 300w

Wis Lib Bul 24:126 Ap '28

BYRNE, DONN. Destiny Bay. 350p $2.50 Little [7s 6d Low]

28-22581

Stories of the MacFarlanes of Destiny Bay, a family of proud, gallant Irish gentlefolk. The stories are told by young Kerry MacFarlane, heir to Destiny Bay, and concern the romantic adventures of his kinsfolk, cousin Jenico, blind aunt Jenepher, uncle Valentine, and the trusted old family retainer, James Carabine.

Booklist 25:70 N '28

"It is not easy to call 'Destiny Bay' a novel, although the same characters run through its stories, long and short; but give it what name you like, it is excellent Donn Byrne. Those who do not know his work may use it as a testing-stone, for it is highly romantic. On the whole, 'Destiny Bay' appeals to me as one of Byrne's best books. Which means that if you like romantic fiction you will enjoy the latest work of Donn Byrne." Herschel Brickell

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p5 S 9 '28 1250w

"Charming as his other stories may be, and they are charming, they can none of them come up to the delight of his latest. It is full of folk as real as they are odd. It is set lightly on true soil. It is blown upon by breezes which have known all men in passing. It is fantastic and strange and rare, but it is as true as truth and beauty, as the truth which is beauty eternal." I. W. Lawrence

+ Boston Transcript p4 S 15 '28 1600w

Boston Transcript p4 O 10 '28 120w

"Here Byrne is at his best—dealing in a series of half a dozen connected anecdotes with one of those inimitable Irish families which he so loved to write about. There is here a richness and pungency which 'Crusade' could not muster; a vitality of characterization which 'Brother Saul' quite failed of. And here is Destiny Bay itself—a region in the northeast of Ireland which the author has made as soul-satisfying as even he could have wished. One does not review this book—one absorbs it, and remembers it long afterwards."

+ Ind 121:285 S 22 '28 230w

N Y Times p6 S 16 '28 700w

"It is a delightful book to read, Donn Byrne at his best. No lover of romance should overlook Destiny Bay, which is written in the lilting prose that was so much Byrne's own." Herschel Brickell

+ No Am 226:adv N '28 130w

"A book of short stories, as good as any he ever wrote."

+ Outlook 150:956 O 10 '28 450w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:545 N '28

"In 'Destiny Bay' we see Donn Byrne at his best writing about the things he loved most of all: horse races, prize fights, and, above all, graceful courtships, between gallant gentlemen and lovely ladies." Thurston Macauley

+ Sat R of Lit 5:141 S 22 '28 520w

"It would be hard to find a more lovable book than Destiny Bay. Not so perfect in construction as the haunting Blind Raftery, nor so profound and far-imagined as Brother Saul, the new volume is a radiant successor to Hangman House. It is more unequal, for it consists of several stories strung together, the lives of the group that inhabits Destiny Bay; but it is richer and more various." R. A. Taylor

+ Spec 141:340 S 15 '28 320w

"The stories show sad signs of haste and improvisation. The glittering style, suitable for swift action, is scarcely in accord with these studies in characterization; we may surmise a transitional stage of development, hindered by the novelist's acceptance of his popular audience. His defects as a storyteller are obvious. In the story of 'Jenico at Spanish Rest,' as in other stories, the emotional motives are blurred, and the outlines are confused by episodes brought in solely for effect. But the transitional book confirms one's sense of tragic loss."

— + Times [London] Lit Sup p706 O 4 '28 350w

Wis Lib Bul 24:255 O '28

C

CABLE, MILDRED, and FRENCH, FRANCESCA L. Through Jade gate and central Asia; an account of journeys in Kansu, Turkestan and the Gobi desert; with an introd. by John Stuart Holden. 304p $3.50 Houghton [10s Constable]

915 Gobi desert. China—Description and travel. Turkestan—Description and travel

[28-10213]

"An account of the first trip across the Gobi desert by western women. The authors were missionaries, who, assigned to a distant post, made their way through the Chinese country, infested though it was by bandits, and accomplished their journey only after many adventures and much excitement."—Sat R of Lit

"Three white-haired British spinsters, preaching as they went—and they tell their story without cant or affectation, simply and well. It takes its place among the minor epics of Central Asian travel." L: S. Gannett

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p13 Mr 25 '28 650w

"The simple faith with which the three undertook the whole matter is written simply but nonetheless surely into the fabric of their story. One gains an unusually sharp photographic picture of the country through which they toiled, but one gathers also something of their spiritual trials and experiences."

+ Boston Transcript p3 F 18 '28 150w

"The style in which the authors write is sober and a little plodding; but those who are interested in the few remaining mysterious regions of the world will find this account thrilling for its completeness, its very devotion to details. The fact that the authors know the Chinese and have lived with them, and have a thorough knowledge of their subject, makes it more than a casual adventure book."

+ — Ind 120:317 Mr 31 '28 80w

Nature 122:129 Jl 28 '28 100w

N Y Evening Post p13 Ap 21 '28 100w

"Their chronicle has room for much interesting discussion of native manners and customs, and is the record of heroic spirits."

+ Sat R of Lit 4:674 Mr 10 '28 120w

CABOT, ELISE (PUMPELLY) (MRS THOMAS HANDASYD CABOT). Balloon moon. 99p il $2 Holt

811 27-24426

Sixty or more little poems about the fancies and quaint imaginings of a child of five or six.

"Just as the Kate Greenaway books set a fashion for a certain type of text and drawing, so has A. A. Milne started a school. But as both are charming, both can bear quite a number of pupils, especially when the lines run along as delightfully as do Mrs. Cabot's, and the drawings are as dainty as are Dorothy Lathrop's."

+ Boston Transcript p3 Ap 14 '28 350w

"So surely does she enter into the workings of the childish mind that the verses all have the seeming of childish thought and feeling. The illustrations by Dorothy Lathrop are delightfully done, sketchily but accurately drawn with every line expressive."

+ N Y Times p14 Mr 11 '28 80w

CALKINS, CLINCH. Poems. 69p $2 Knopf

811 28-7709

"Her most impressive poems are 'I Was a Maiden' and 'Tu ne Quæsieris.' They possess the most promise because they have passion and convey forcibly a sense of spiritual disaster. The former is like haunting legend, the latter is, for the first time, an actual poem using the atmosphere of the night-clubs."—Sat R of Lit

Booklist 24:355 Je '28

"The excellence of Miss Calkins's work lies in her combination of a fine melodic equipment with an austere irony. Where the two qualities are equally matched, as in 'Tu Ne Quaesieris,' in which she strings the bronze wire of the Roman poet's admonition upon her own new and lustrous instrument, she is admirable. Seldom a poem lacks the seal of authenticity. Her fault is that she allows herself to be betrayed by her gift of melody, and that she permits her meaning to be blunted and even obscured by the requirements of rhyme." Babette Deutsch

+ — Bookm 67:441 Je '28 550w

"A rich emotional intensity is felt in all Miss Calkins's poems. Perhaps the outstanding piece in the volume is the one called 'I Was a Maiden.'" Ruther Lechlitner

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p2 My 6 '28 900w

Boston Transcript p3 S 8 '28 200w

"Although a voluptuous defiance, pontifical not discursive, weights them and hauteur sometimes pervades too unhaughty a fabric, these poems are poems."

+ — Dial 85:172 Ag '28 50w

Reviewed by Mark Van Doren

Nation 126:382 Ap 4 '28 580w

"There is in these 'Poems' of Miss Calkins an unmistakable indication of the poet's own full understanding of language: intuitive and in a passionate, deep sense, scholarly. There are other things as well. This comes, first, because of the extraordinary color, tone and architecture of the poems; and because, although a comparable craftsmanship is fairly common among minor poets, it tends to escape the contemporary major voice." M. P. Levy

+ New Repub 54:199 Mr 28 '28 630w

"Sometimes, it may be, Miss Calkins pulls too tight the strings of her instrument and thins its tone to something not unlike hysteria. But these infrequent wrong pitches are easily recognizable as only the too great intensification of her best qualities. One is willing to pardon them, even to welcome them, not for themselves but as the indications of those qualities which are producing one of the finest bodies of American poetry today." Lionel Trilling

+ — N Y Evening Post p12 Mr 24 '28 720w

"There is the simplicity of utterance that adumbrates deeper things, which is the mark of true lyricism; there is also in this book mysticism concealed by words, and sharp reading of life. And there is that economy of phrase which leaves the reader wondering that so much can be said in so little space." Percy Hutchison

+ N Y Times p2 Ap 1 '28 480w

"Although no one of Miss Calkins's poems is without significance, a few of them strain the muscle of meaning in an effort to display brawn."

+ — N Y World p11m Ap 22 '28 100w

Reviewed by G: O'Neil

Outlook 149:33 My 2 '28 200w

"Miss Clinch Calkins possesses many of the gifts of a true poet. And yet, upon laying down her book and pondering it, this reviewer, at least, is pursued by the feeling that, for all its fluidity, for all its flashes of originality, her book as a whole too much lacks precision of phrase and complete finish. There are lines of genuine loveliness or of genuine power. There are two longer poems distinctly memorable—and perhaps that is enough. There are felicitous titles, interesting turns of thought. But the meaning of what this poet is saying, sometimes arrived at with unnecessary difficulty, often disappoints as to depth."

+ — Sat R of Lit 4:692 Mr 17 '28 400w

Survey 60:305 Je 1 '28 820w

"For a first volume her work has perhaps rather a dangerous certainty of utterance, but it is a creative certainty which arouses real interest in her future."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p567 Ag 2 '28 380w

CALKINS, EARNEST ELMO. Business, the civilizer; with an introd. by John Cotton Dana. 309p il $3 Little

659 Business. Advertising 28-10800

The book is an effective defense of the methods of modern business and of the part that advertising has played, not only in raising the standards of business but in ameliorating life by educating the public about the things that have become a part of our daily machinery of living.

Booklist 24:388 Jl '28

Bookm 67:xiii Jl '28 330w

"Physically this is a well made book, with its fine, broad type page and with the decorations of René Clark. If there is to be a literature of business, as John Cotton Dana prophesied in 1894, the place of honor on that shelf should go to 'Business—the Civilizer.'" R. S. Durstine

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p3 My 13 '28 950w

"Mr. Calkin's book on the whole is an illuminating exposition of the art of advertising." E. F. Edgett

+ — Boston Transcript p5 Je 30 '28 380w

"Although he does not fulfill the promises which his subject implies, Mr. Calkins has none the less written a volume of considerable interest to business men." W. E. H.

+ — Boston Transcript p2 Jl 14 '28 800w

"It has all the compelling motion, vivid color and sharply pointed phrasing of a full-page

CALKINS, E. E.—Continued
spread plus the richer background of anecdote and detail which 300 pages allow to an urbane man mellowed by experience. It paints the romance, the adventure, of advertising in vivid tints; with wide and bold strokes it attempts to refute the critics. But, like the advertising pages of the latest million-reader weekly, what it gains in readability it loses in sustained and objective argument." Evans Clark
+ — N Y Times p3 Ap 22 '28 1850w

"In attempting to construct an iron-bound case for advertising, Mr. Calkins becomes unduly prejudiced. . , He is at his best when he points out the lack of vision of some of our bigger corporations. His chapter on the insurance companies and their failure to exploit a worthwhile idea is to the point." G: Joel
+ — N Y World p9m My 20 '28 250w

"As a view of [the advertising] profession, written pleasantly and entertainingly, this book will interest you. But may we say that we do not look forward with pleasure to the day when all artists and all writers will put their best work into advertising copy, when a first edition of Shaw's great four-inch double-column ad for Listerine will be eagerly sought by the British Museum, and when dealers and collectors will bid furiously against one another at the Anderson Galleries for some contemporary da Vinci's Mona Lisa whose smile owes its charm to Pebeco?" W. R. Brooks
+ — Outlook 149:75 My 9 '28 250w
Pratt p19 summer '28
R of Rs 77:30 Je '28 40w

"The text is illustrated, appropriately enough, with designs by Rene Clark, one of the most influential of the artists working in advertising, whose fine simplification and sense of pattern in the handling of common, utilitarian objects is in itself an indication of that new flowering of the arts in industry which has been so expectantly awaited by the prophets." Gerald Carson
+ Sat R of Lit 4:777 Ap 21 '28 950w
Springf'd Republican p7f Ap 22 '28 1400w
Wis Lib Bul 24:188 Je '28

CALLAGHAN, MORLEY. Strange fugitive. 264p $2.50 Scribner
28-20420

A foreman in a Toronto lumber-yard tires of domesticity, and while not entirely out of love with his wife, proposes a year's leave of absence from her. He is drawn into the bootlegging game, makes a fortune, and wearied of other women, is about to return to his wife when a gangman's bullet puts an end to his life.

"Mr. Callaghan is a good writer, even a fine one. His first book is sufficiently fine to convince me that he will one day write exceedingly well, indeed. But 'genius' he is not." R. E. Larsson
+ — Bookm 68:239 O '28 680w

"The style is a triumph of harmony; simple, natural, idiomatic, wholly in keeping with theme and character. The desire for honesty and solidity, the furious distaste for hokum and blah has so far most fully expressed itself in the short stories of Ernest Hemingway and in this novel by Morley Callaghan." R. N. Linscott
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p7 O 7 '28 600w

Reviewed by C. B. Palmer
Boston Transcript p4 S 1 '28 1050w

" 'Strange Fugitive' is a hard, bludgeoning novel, and at the same time a work of art. It represents the school of Dreiser and Anderson at its best."
+ Ind 121:237 S 8 '28 220w

Reviewed by C. P. Fadiman
Nation 127:sup370 O 10 '28 360w
New Repub 57:51 N 28 '28 90w

"No one interested in what is really alive and vital in the writing of the younger generation of novelists can afford to be ignorant of Mr. Callaghan's work. He has a clear, deep, slightly hard-boiled comprehension of the people he writes about; if he can maintain that quality in describing characters with deeper natures he will give us some superb fiction. He uses words freshly and with precision; his dialogue is swift, sharp and rich in colloquialisms. He has a great gift for selecting the significant incident. So well does he write that he almost makes dull and boring characters interesting." C. B. Chase
+ N Y Times p7 S 2 '28 1050w

"This tale of action and adventure is related in a lean and sinewy prose. It is quite outspoken in its realism and it has the interest of a sincere—and successful—attempt to depict a phase of life about us. Mr. Callaghan is a short story writer of parts and his début as a novelist is a highly creditable one." Herschel Brickell
+ No Am 226:adv O '28 180w
Springf'd Republican p7e O 14 '28 350w

CALLOW, A. BARBARA. Food & health; an introduction to the study of diet. (World's manuals) 96p $1 (2s 6d) Oxford
613.2 Food. Diet 28-26619

"One of a series of inexpensive manuals published in England and intended to give popular but accurate statements as to the subject in question. The discussion follows the classical method of presenting the chemical nature of foodstuffs, the process of digestion, fuel value, and vitamins, then discusses general and special food selection."—J Home Econ

Booklist 25:13 O '28
J Home Econ 20:361 My '28 50w

"This little book, comprising 96 pages of compact trustworthy information and advice, is calculated to preserve a steady view and balance in matters of food and health, and what may be reasonably expected to follow should prudent counsel prevail."
+ Nature 122:93 Jl 21 '28 180w

"There is some useful advice to the corpulent in this book and much which will enable anyone to plan a sensible diet for the household."
+ Spec 140:84 Ja 21 '28 70w

CALTHROP, DION CLAYTON. Hyacinth; an excursion. 176p il $2 Duffield [7s 6d Williams & N.]
27-23609

An immortal from the lower slopes of Mount Olympus visits London on May Day in 1914. It is his first visit since 1745. He meets a dejected youth about to commit suicide, puts new hope in him, and in the person of an unhappy French girl provides his protegé with a cause. In watching over the affairs of the young people Hyacinth finds opportunity to help others too.

Boston Transcript p7 F 25 '28 800w

"This book is a general potpourri of whimsy and drollery and phantasy. At times it has a capacity for being sugary with too much sweetness and too little wit and imagination that is pretty awful."
— + N Y Times p19 F 12 '28 450w

"The author has treated his subject with an appropriately playful fantasy. He has written this delightful 'excursion' with sunny humor, gracefully submerging the probable in the improbable. And, above all, he has not committed the unforgivable sin of making a Greek god in the image of an English gentleman."
+ Sat R of Lit 4:802 Ap 21 '28 330w

"There are pretty sentiment and light-heartedness in this fantasy of a London transformed by the magical green of spring in park and railed garden."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p441 Je 23 '27 210w

CALVERTON, VICTOR FRANCIS. Bankruptcy of marriage. 341p $3 Macaulay

392 Marriage. Sexual ethics. Social conditions. Moral conditions 28-24707

Mr Calverton is author of "Sex expression in literature" (Book Review Digest, 1926). In "Bankruptcy of marriage" he discusses the changing moral order which in nearly every country in the world is giving rise to a new attitude toward marriage and sex relationship. Against the background of marital conventions of the past, the author sets his discussion of the new morality in Europe, America and Soviet Russia.

"The book is a good one to read, if you have already read a good many others on the same subject, and if you have some experience of human beings with which to check up its calculations—for instance, to make a guess of your own at how apt college boys would be to answer with exact statistical truthfulness very intimate questions on matters known only to them; and to make your own estimate of the value of conclusions drawn from such information." D. C. Fisher

Survey 61:171 N 1 '28 550w

CAMBRIDGE ancient history; Macedon, 401-301 B.C.; ed. by J. B. Bury, S. A. Cook, and F. E. Adcock. 8v v 6 648p $9.50 Macmillan [30s Cambridge univ. press]

930 History, Ancient (23-11667)

"This volume, which almost exactly covers the fourth century B. C., starts with the morrow of the Battle of Ægospotami and leaves the next volume to start with the morrow of Ipsus."—Nation and Ath

"Taken as a whole the volume will stand comparison with the corresponding portions of Meyer's Geschichte des Altertums and Beloch's Griechische Geschichte. Less unified than these masterpieces of German historical scholarship, it surpasses them in the expertness of its treatment of art, philosophy (we wish we could say literature), and political theory." W. S. Ferguson

+ Am Hist R 33:366 Ja '28 1500w

"The central figure is of course Alexander the Great, and Tarn who has long specialized in Macedonian history, has here produced some of his best writing in following Alexander's bold adventures through Asia. Without following into hero worship, he has entered so sympathetically into the spirit of this romance that he will hold the attention even of devotees of the 'new history.'" Tenney Frank

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p2 D 11 '27 840w

"As in the preceding volumes, the separate chapters are developed by experts in historical research and they are not only authoritative, but well co-ordinated."

+ Boston Transcript p6 D 3 '27 230w

Cath World 126:704 F '28 250w

Living Age 333:940 N 15 '27 220w

"Mr. Tarn's chapters on Alexander give this volume of the Cambridge Ancient History its character; but it would be wrong to pass over without mention Dr. Cook's chapter on the inauguration of Judaism or Professor Bury's on Dionysius. It is a worthy example of his scholarship—though it is hardly possible to take any particular piece of work as an example in the case of a historian whose range of interest was so varied and whose achievement was so wide." A. J. Toynbee

+ Nation and Ath 41:641 Ag 13 '27 860w

"Oddly enough, I find myself feeling for this later volume much more affection than for any of its predecessors. So far as this volume goes, much credit for a heightened temperature in the reader must be given to Professor Beazley's exquisite dozen pages on sculpture and painting in the fourth century before Christ, perhaps the best single essay that the history has so far contained." E: Shanks

+ Sat R 144:133 Jl 23 '27 1250w

Reviewed by M. Rostovtzeff

+ Sat R of Lit 4:908 My 26 '28 1800w

Spec 139:262 Ag 13 '27 230w

Springf'd Republican p8 F 23 '28 300w

"The volume is well documented and well written, though the necessary condensation clips the authors' periods. We have few criticisms and these are details."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p946 D 15 '27 1650w

CAMERON, EDWARD HERBERT. Educational psychology. (Century educ. ser.) 467p il $2.50 Century

150 Psychology, Educational 27-22417

A textbook on educational psychology designed to treat the subject comprehensively, for mature students.

Educ R 75:250 My '28 350w

"The treatment is balanced, and the selection of material throughout the book gives evidence of the author's familiarity with the field. The style of writing is exceptionally clear. As a whole, the book is a sane and reliable presentation of the data of educational psychology." G. T. Buswell

+ El School J 29:70 S '28 480w

"The book offers a clear-cut classification of learning and an intelligent study of the subjects found in the curriculum of the modern high school. The treatment is simple and direct, and the book will appeal as being thorough without being verbose."

+ Springf'd Republican p10 F 8 '28 140w

CAMERON, JOHN. John Cameron's odyssey; transcribed by Andrew Farrell. 461p il $4.50 Macmillan

910 Voyages and travels. Seafaring life 28-25332

John Cameron sailed the seas for thirty years. From his voluminous writings of those epic days Mr Farrell has condensed and transcribed a stirring narrative of fair days and foul, of shipwreck and mutiny, and of strange places and tribes on the Atlantic, Pacific and Indian oceans.

"To the man who likes his literature, like his whiskey, served straight and without overmuch epigram, 'John Cameron's Odyssey' holds a fascination that is almost magical. As it goes along it develops a lovable old character a man is glad to know, and to whose yarning he is happy to be able to turn again and yet again." J. W. Maury

+ Boston Transcript p4 D 1 '28 1200w

"It is a grand yarn and Mr. Farrell seems to have preserved its original flavor to a high degree." Arthur Warner

+ Nation 127:718 D 26 '28 320w

"This is a book one does not feel like criticizing or classifying—one merely reads it, if it is to one's taste, with absorbing attention. . . Put Melville at one end of the South Sea shelf and Cameron at the other, and neither the great, sad-hearted mysticist nor his lesser comrade, the plain and practical sailor, need feel ashamed of his company."

+ N Y Times p5 N 11 '28 1050w

CAMPBELL, MRS ALICE ORMOND. Juggernaut. 349p $2 Doubleday, Doran [7s 6d Hodder & S.]

28-23463

A Crime club book. Dr Gregory Sartorius of Paris assigns his new English nurse to the care of Sir Charles Clifford, ill of typhoid fever. Esther discovers collusion of some sort between the doctor and the sick man's wife. She suspects a poison plot, and her suspicions, which she confides to Sir Charles's son, are only too well confirmed.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p9 Ag 12 '28 100w

CAMPBELL, A. O.—Continued

"Miss Campbell deals squarely with her readers, and she writes with a hand seemingly experienced in novel-making. The Cannes background is capitally painted, the characters are interesting as people rather than as the puppets of a synthetic mystery yarn."

+ Boston Transcript p10 Ag 8 '28 300w

N Y Times p18 Jl 29 '28 300w

N Y World p11m O 7 '28 120w

"The strange reluctance of the author to kill off Sir Charles Clifford turns the first two hundred pages of this story into the slow movie of a murder, but the last third is full of suspense and excitement." W. R. Brooks

+ — Outlook 149:598 Ag 8 '28 90w

"The seeker of somewhat crude thrills gets full value for the price of the book."

Springf'd Republican p7f Ag 26 '28 280w

Times [London] Lit Sup p634 S 6 '28 180w

CAMPBELL, DUGALD. On the trail of the veiled Tuareg. 282p il $6 Lippincott [21s Seeley, S.]

916.1 Tuaregs. Africa, North—Description and travel

An interesting first hand account of the veiled Tuaregs, nomadic warriors of North Africa whose villages and encampments stretch across the Sahara from Egypt to Morocco. Numerous photographic illustrations and a map of the region crossed by the trail are included.

"Not only is it extremely interesting to read of Professor Campbell's experiences, but his conclusions about the importance of the Tuaregs are worthy of attention." B. G.

+ Boston Transcript p2 O 6 '28 380w

Cleveland Open Shelf p131 D '28

"Dugald Campbell treats of the Tuaregs enthusiastically, is enchanted by their manhood and mystery, and gives a very readable account of his long and arduous following of their paths of action and their ruins of old." F: O'Brien

+ N Y World p9e O 28 '28 280w

CAMPBELL, EVELYN. Survival. 306p $2 Dial press

28-25025

After her acquittal of the murder of her husband Maza Grey goes to the only sanctuary left her, a cabin high in the Carolina mountains. She is a mystery and a grievance to the mountain folk, and becomes a source of secret misery to Clem Strang, whose harsh and narrow righteous convictions nearly cause the death of his young sister. Maza befriends her, and Clem's heart is softened.

"Its sincerity of purpose cannot quite raise it above its jejune material and mediocre writing. Like so many young writers, the author tackles a tremendous problem unhesitantly, quite fearlessly and very evidently without the power and perception to make the most of it. She responds with platitudes where she should have spoken fresh courageous thoughts; she is content with characters as well worn as those of a local stock company."

— Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p21 N 4 '28 180w

"The author has planned her story well and has told it forcefully."

+ Boston Transcript p5 N 10 '28 150w

"This book is remarkably uneven. The first 100 pages are written with a certain sensitiveness, a delicacy, an insight, which produce an occasional passage of real worth and beauty. The remainder of the book is painfully marred by false characterization, melodramatic writing and a lack of self-criticism which is surprising in one who patently can do better."

+ — N Y Times p6 D 9 '28 340w

"The novel has an unusual and interesting beginning. . . [But a] surface evaluation of life mars the latter part of the book and leads only to a coming together of the woman and a man which is replete with the stereotyped, even to movie captions about finding life together."

— + Sat R of Lit 5:491 D 8 '28 220w

CAMPBELL, JOHN LORNE. Bible under fire; with an introd. by Robert Dick Wilson. 285p il $2.50 Harper

220.1 Bible. Whole—Criticism, interpretation, etc. Modernism. Religion and science. Evolution 28-13454

A defense of the Bible against the attacks of modern criticism. Dr Campbell argues for the historicity of the Bible, the virgin birth and deity of Christ, the authenticity of the miracles, and the truth of the atonement, and opposes the theory of evolution.

"This volume is from Tennessee, and it would have rendered the prosecution excellent service in the 'monkey trial' which recently brought notoriety if not fame to a certain town in that state. The Bible is shown to be not only a verbally accurate historical record, but also an authoritative treatise on geology and kindred sciences."

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p8 Ag 26 '28 130w

"While in many instances the investigation is not profound, yet the assurance of the author as to the soundness of his vision carries a goodly degree of conviction. He sometimes forces agreement with his point of view by the strength of his assertions rather than by logic and the power of persuasion." A. F. G.

Christian Science Monitor p10 Jl 11 '28 320w

St Louis 26:346 N '28

CAMPBELL, NORMAN ROBERT. Account of [2] the principles of measurement and calculation. 293p $5 Longmans

530.8 Physical measurements 28-14934

"In the belief that the subject of measurement deserves more than the brief and perfunctory attention accorded it in textbooks and treatises on physics, author attempts a presentation of the principles, processes, uses, and errors of measurement."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

Nature 122:598 O 20 '28 1400w

N Y New Tech Bks 13:36 Jl '28

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:623 D '28

CAMPBELL, THOMAS BOWYER. Black Sadie. [2] 303p $2.50 Houghton

28-24063

"This story of 'Black Sadie' is an account of the progress from babyhood to womanhood of a negro girl, who beginning about as near the bottom as possible of the stratum of mediocrity, attains to distinction of a sort, as a model for artists, and a talented entertainer and dancer in a night-club in New York City." —Boston Transcript

"The author writes with evident understanding of the Southern Negro, and his lively sense of fun makes quite as free with the white leaders of fashionable Bohemia as with the sons and daughters of the Ethiopian eunuch." Juana Nelson

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p4 O 28 '28 350w

Boston Transcript p2 D 8 '28 300w

"As long as his heroine remains obscure, Mr. Campbell is highly successful. But as Sadie rises to New York and notoriety, her story dwindles into insignificance." E. G.

+ — New Repub 57:148 D 19 '28 150w

" 'Black Sadie' is Mr. Campbell's first novel. It is rather amateurishly handled in spite of a wealth of interesting material and an undeniable feeling for his subject. The style is jerky and overmannered and the characters jumbled and indistinct. One feels, however, that Mr. Campbell has not spent all his shot on the first volley."

+ — N Y Times p48 D 2 '28 400w

CANNAN, EDWIN. An economist's protest. 438p $5 Adelphi co. [16s P. S. King]

330.4 Economics [L27-374]

"This volume is a collection of papers written during the past fourteen years. Most of them are reprints. Some are lectures herein set down for the first time. All of them spring from problems of the particular moment in which they were written. But Professor Cannan dives from them into the pools of theory, past history, and human nature, for proof of the fallacies in popular discussion about them." —Boston Transcript

---

Reviewed by J: H. Sherman

Am Econ R 18:498 S '28 900w

"The sturdy but eminently sane economic internationalism of this book makes it welcome reading in these days of still crazy nationalism. . . . A conservative book, essentially in the hard-headed classical English tradition, this work is calculated to make the economist proud of his profession and to make every one wish that such economists as its author might become kings." H: R. Mussey

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p14 Ag 12 '28 530w

Boston Transcript p2 Ap 7 '28 200w

"Such a volume as this is charged with a vitality and with an intensity of conviction as satisfying as they are rare. There is much in the views which Dr. Cannan holds with such tenacity, and which he expresses with such vigour, with which critics may well disagree. But his statement of them, in its freshness, its terseness, and its now Puckish and now mordant humour, is a perpetual joy."

+ Nation and Ath 42:128 O 22 '27 750w

"One of the most attractive and valuable books on economic questions that have appeared of late."

+ Spec 139:428 S 17 '28 400w

Reviewed by Roger Baldwin

Survey 61:99 O 15 '28 350w

"Nothing that has been published in recent years will do so much to clarify doctrine and promote a grasp of essentials in Economics; while amateurs of literature, who are commonly repelled by an economic title, will find in the collection much that will hold its own among the classics of controversial literature."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p160 Mr 8 '28 1200w

CANNEY, HEYWARD EMERSON. Sentry. 287p $2 Harper

28-23041

Down South before the Civil war, Stephen kissed and rode away, and Nancy married Abel. When the time came, Abel went away to war and Stephen, profiting by his absence, came to live with Nancy. When Abel returned and found them together he built a little sentry box in front of the house and went on duty with his gun, keeping the lovers virtual prisoners for more than fifty years. The three grew old together, the second and the third generation came along, and still the trio retained their curious relations—the lovers even in their happiness shadowed by the sentinel figure outside.

"The story stretches itself out over too long a period. One is fatigued long before Mr. Canney tells us, by way of an aside, what a blow it was to stanch American hearts when the 'good President Harding' died."

— Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p21 O 28 '28 280w

"Side by side with the individual human story, goes the nation-wide history. Mr. Canney sees life, and sees it whole, and we congratulate him on a fine, scholarly piece of work."

+ Boston Transcript p4 N 3 '28 250w

"It is an incredible situation to write about, and almost impossible to make at all believable. If Mr. Canney has not wholly succeeded, it is probably because he didn't wholly mean to. Nevertheless, he has shown considerable imagination, and carried the idea out to its most ultimately logical conclusion, sparing no eventuality. Read it and see."

+ — N Y Times p6 O 21 '28 700w

CANNON, CORNELIA JAMES (MRS WALTER BRADFORD JAMES). Red rust. 320p $2.50 Little

28-5165

Matts Swenson, a young Minnesota farmer of Swedish stock, has one great hope. He longs to produce a species of wheat able to withstand the blighting "red rust." Experimenting early and late and caring meanwhile for five foster children and their mother, whom he has married more out of kindness than love, Matts is finally successful. But he does not live to witness the triumph of his wheat.

"Mrs. Cannon is too much mistress of the situation. One wishes she would not hold her characters by such tight reins, not drive them with such curbed bits. If they could just once get away from her, if they could move more freely and act for themselves, we should close the book with a more satisfied feeling. . . Yet there are admirable things about Red Rust. The book never slumps. It goes steadily on its way, evincing as much care and thought in the last as in the first chapter. It is never dull, in spite of the fact that neither its characters nor its incidents are in themselves engrossing. It is built around the only idea or ideal of life worth having. It is a patient and an honest book born in an age so largely dedicated to parades and ballyhooing on the part of authors and critics alike." M. E. Chase

+ — Atlantic Bookshelf p48 Ap '28 350w

Booklist 24:282 Ap '28

"A first novel of some distinction." L. M. Field

Bookm 67:113 Mr '28 200w

"There is an excellent idea behind this novel, but the trouble is that it gets in the way of both the characters and the story. . . This hero is one of the washed-out variety. His life is one of unrelieved noble sweetness. His mate—as usually happens in these hero cases—is far more interesting than himself. There are glimpses of a tragic intensity about this woman that at times belie the discrepancies in her story." Ruth Suckow

— + Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p4 F 12 '28 780w

"It is not a story to be read and forgotten. The characters are carefully outlined, the steady ascending march of events is described without one single unconsidered word."

+ Boston Transcript p4 F 11 '28 1850w

"Mrs. Cannon has done an excellent piece of work."

+ Ind 120:285 Mr 24 '28 250w

"An unpretentious, slow-moving tale, relieved by honest beauty in the description of the million meticulous details of nature by one who knows her Minnesota."

Nation 126:274 Mr 7 '28 150w

N Y Evening Post p9 My 12 '28 70w

"The accurate knowledge of pioneer life would make a novel as well written as 'Red Rust' necessarily engrossing. And the intentional analogy of the superior hybrid wheat to the American hybrid nation makes an encouraging current meditation. But Mrs. Cannon has introduced, unconsciously or not another strangely moving quality. . . An ancient myth has been retold. The dark agricultural god of a foreign people has been reincarnated as the dying savior of another alien race."

+ N Y Times p14 F 26 '28 320w

"This is an important addition to the growing mass of 'regional literature.' Mrs. Cannon has written a rounded, solidly wrought story

CANNON, C. J.—Continued
that should stand the hard test of time." Herschel Brickell
+ No Am 225:adv Mr '28 130w

"An example of strong material in weak, if bravely well-meaning hands." F. L. Robbins
— + Outlook 148:475 Mr 21 '28 450w
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:192 Ap '28

"Mrs. Cannon knows her section and her people; her book never flags in interest, and its sincerity impresses the reader; yet it falls short of the precise effect at which she aimed. On the whole, our final impression is of an excellent theme and excellent materials marred through the author's failure to let the work mature in her mind, and through lack of expert technical mastery." Allan Nevins
+ — Sat R of Lit 4:630 F 25 '28 750w

" 'Red Rust' is too substantial to be called a pastoral, but the pastoral element is in it. So, too, is simplicity, and the sense of that strength of ideals which prevents squalor and suffering from reducing existence to the hopelessness it sometimes seems to have in realistic writing unenriched with vision. However one may rate the character drawing, the work is to be classed among the new season's outstanding books of fiction."
+ Springf'd Republican p7f Mr 11 '28 280w
Times [London] Lit Sup p738 O 11 '28 200w
Wis Lib Bul 24:90 Mr '28

CANOT, THEODORE. Adventures of an African slaver; being a true account of the life of Captain Theodore Canot, trader in gold, ivory & slaves on the coast of Guinea, as told in the year 1854 to Brantz Mayer; now ed. with an introd. by Malcolm Cowley. 376p $4 Boni
B or 92 Slave trade 28-18373

These hardy and frequently lurid adventures of a captain in the African slave trade were transcribed from the captain's own yarn by one Brantz Mayer, in 1854. Born in Italy of a French father and an Italian mother, brought up in America, Captain Canot sailed under the flag of nearly every nation. He fell in, and out, with pirates, engaged in smuggling and slave running, and, known as Mr Gunpowder on the trading coast, held for a time a name to conjure with.

"One of those fascinating autobiographies of a practical adventurer of which there have never been enough, of which there can never be too many. This edition, to which Malcolm Cowley has written an able introduction, has been illustrated by that ever-improving young Mexican artist, Miguel Covarrubias." T. S. Matthews
+ Bookm 68:90 S '28 550w

"An extraordinary man, Theodore Canot, whose name, I believe, will not be so easily forgotten again. Whether the reader cares to know of the romantic side of the slave trade, with a few unavoidable horrors thrown in, his story is worth reading for the sheer excitement of the narrative and for the revelation of the character of this curious human being." Harrison Smith
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p1 Jl 29 '28 1950w

Reviewed by E. F. Edgett
Boston Transcript p3 Jl 21 '28 1550w

"A supremely interesting autobiography of a man who was either a glutton for adventure or, as one suspects, ascribed to himself whatever adventures seemed most interesting."
+ Dial 85:358 O '28 100w

"To be sure, the price is not small for so venerable subject as the slave-trade, but the yarn is good."
+ Ind 121:213 S 1 '28 120w
Nation 127:sup379 O 10 '28 160w

"Canot's reminiscences, pompously set down by Mayer and varying considerably in interest as the scene shifts from Africa to the sea and from the sea to the Guinea coast, yield some real thrills of horror."
+ Nation and Ath 44:270 N 17 '28 280w

"This story, edited here by Malcolm Cowley and brilliantly illustrated by Covarrubias, is fascinating."
+ Outlook 149:513 Jl 25 '28 420w
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:581 N '28
St Louis 26:326 O '28

"One does not read this book with delight—rather with abhorrence. It is not good literature for squeamish souls or children."
Springf'd Republican p10 S 5 '28 400w

"There is not a dull line. Without emotion and with the candor of a man who sells cattle, Canot tells of sea fights, throwing men overboard, losing slaves to the sharks, leaving men to starve, of outwitting the native chiefs." Nels Anderson
+ Survey 61:172 N 1 '28 260w
Times [London] Lit Sup p971 D 6 '28 300w

CANTON, WILLIAM. Poems. 172p $2 Harcourt [5s Harrap]
821 28-12288

A new and revised edition of the work of an English poet whose poems were much enjoyed in Victorian times and by several critics likened to Matthew Arnold's. His poems have a deeply religious feeling and some of the best are about children.

"Reading Canton's poems through again in this charming edition, the reader will be faintly attracted by the poet's gracefulness of expression, and that is about all. The inspiration is never very pronounced, and much of the work that may have seemed fresh in its day has faded. It is like looking at old pictures."
— Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p15 F 5 '28 400w
Boston Transcript p5 F 4 '28 350w

" 'Suspirium' and 'Laus Infantium' and 'Heart-ease'—to mention only three of these exquisite songs of childhood—will surely find a place in the rich heritage of our poetry. . . He is essentially a poet who can hear in bud and bird and star some little crystal note in the music of the spheres." C. H: Warner
+ Spec 138:sup863 My 14 '27 400w

"William Canton could not in any sense be described as a great poet, but there is in all his work a deep and reverent sense of the beautiful and the good, touched here with pathos and there with humor, and instinct always with a ready sympathy for men, that makes his work more than interesting." H. K
+ Springf'd Republican p6 F 27 '28 1000w

"The preoccupations of a busy life left him small leisure for poetry, and the wonder is that a volume of nearly two hundred pages should be forthcoming of verse that claims to live. By its earnestness and downrightness, its often troubled but always surviving faith, it may indeed live its term; yet not as poetry. Canton's perceptions lacked delicacy, and the fluency of his singing would have been swiftly checked, if he had had a gift of clear self-criticism."
Times [London] Lit Sup p560 Ag 18 '27 480w

CANZIANI, ESTELLA. Through the Apennines and the lands of the Abruzzi. 339p il $7.50 Houghton [25s Heffer]
914.5 Italy—Description and travel

"Miss Canziani, in search of landscapes and of peasant life, made her headquarters at Aquila. . . It was not history or buildings, not castles or cathedrals which lured her to the Abruzzi, but the study of the primitive peasant folk in those parts. . . By mule or horse-cart she made her way, and explored such little-known villages as Castel del Monte, S. Stefano, Castelvecchio, and, later, Scanno and the Albanian settlements about Sulmona. With admirable perseverance she picks up the trail of the werwolf and the vampire and all the legendary lore of that secluded peasantry."— Times [London] Lit Sup

"As this happily described journey was made before the Great War, and even the isolated lands of the Abruzzi have changed with a changing world, the lovers of history and of folklore will be grateful for the conservation of memories of medieval Italy, yes, of ancient Rome, these sketches, verbal and painted, hold. Little has been written about the mountainland, and until now absolutely nothing in English. The many color-plates are of rare beauty. Indeed the illustrations of this book of enchantment deserve a review of their own."
+ Boston Transcript p3 D 8 '28 300w

"It has all the sincerity and simplicity of her earlier books. . . The book is fully illustrated with colour-plate and black-and-white drawings by the author; she is most successful in her portraits of peasants, which are also portraits of costumes and there are some very attractively composed landscapes."
+ New Statesman 31:supxiv O 6 '28 150w
Times [London] Lit Sup p699 O 4 '28 980w

CAPART, JEAN. Lectures on Egyptian art. 290p il $5 Univ. of N.C. press

709.32 Art, Egyptian 28-27219

"Jean Capart, the noted Belgian Egyptologist, came to America a year or so ago to tell what he knew about Egypt, and the lectures delivered at that time are now available as Lectures on Egyptian Art, a handsome book with a large and well selected list of illustrations. M. Capart's emphasis is not upon sphinxes, pyramids, or hypostile temples, but upon domestic architecture, and upon the extremely high attainments of Egyptian sculptors, painters, metal-workers, and so on."— No Am

Booklist 25:60 N '28
Boston Transcript p3 Jl 21 '28 1120w

"An excellent primer of Egyptian culture." Herschel Brickell
+ No Am 226:adv S '28 200w

CAPLIN, JESSIE F. Knitting; its products and processes; a concise survey of knit goods manufacture, from the raw material to the finished merchandise. 93p il $2 Textile pub. co.

677.661 Knit goods 27-3714

"Briefly characterizes wool, silk, cotton, linen, rayon, and fiber combinations and describes the fundamentals of knitting. Useful to the educational departments of large stores, to home economics departments of schools, and to the general reader who desires a simple comprehensive outline."—N Y New Tech Bks

Booklist 24:103 D '27

"A clearly-arranged, well-illustrated description of a subject which is becoming increasingly important to students of textiles and clothing and regarding which many standard books have hitherto been nearly silent for lack of such information as is here given."
+ J Home Econ 19:283 My '27 50w
N Y New Tech Bks 12:32 Jl '28
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:266 My '28

CAPUANA, LUIGI. Nimble-legs; a story for boys; tr. by Frederic Taber Cooper; with an introd. by Faith E. Smith. 191p il $1.50 Longmans

27-18538

Cuddu was an eight-year-old Italian boy who was nicknamed "Nimble-legs" because he could run so fast and far. This little story translated from the Italian by Frederic Taber Cooper and illustrated by I. B. Hazelton, tells how Nimble-legs once was of service to Garibaldi.

Booklist 24:165 Ja '28

"It is a vigorously written little book and moves along with the rapidity that a book with such a title should move." M. G. Bonner
+ Bookm 66:331 N '27 120w

"Here is the tale of a Sicilian boy old enough to run with a message from his own village to Palermo, three or four days away; old enough to cross Sicily on foot with Garibaldi's men, yet it is given a title that makes it seem a story for little children, while the type, large as that of a primer, increases the false impression. . . This story will make a good foundation for an interest in 'Garibaldi and the Thousand.' The reader gets a clear picture of Sicily, too, as he climbs the mountain paths with Cuddu and crosses the vast tracts of bare, uninhabited countryside." Helen Forbes
+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p8 Ja 8 '28 250w

"The author has artfully told a tale which incidentally will make its little readers eager to improve their knowledge of Italian history. The translation has been well done by Frederic Taber Cooper."
+ Cath World 126:428 D '27 80w
Reviewed by M. Van R. King
N Y World p11m O 16 '27 100w
St Louis 26:14 Ja '28

"It gives a very vivid picture of Sicilian village life in those early days of ferment, and the author was happily content not to make a sentimental little hero of his chief character. The story of Nimble-Legs's war experience and how he won his medal without knowing it is very amusing. This is an excellent story and the translator has presented it in all its original color and character." M. W. Bianco
+ Sat R of Lit 4:305 N 12 '27 110w
Springf'd Republican p7f D 11 '27 110w

"The translation is good, and it is an attractive story."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p879 N 24 '27 50w

CARCO, FRANCIS. Last Bohemia; from Montmartre to the Quartier latin; tr. by Madeleine Boyd. 297p il $3 Holt

914.436 Paris. Montmatre. Paris. Quartier latin 28-11511

Frank and mellow reminiscences of the Latin Quarter in the student days of the author and his artist friends, with illustrations from sketches and paintings.

"This is a glamorous book, a reminiscence of affectionate friendships and tender miseries. How many readers will feel about it as I do is something I cannot, of course, know, but I have read it with that sentimental melancholia that is so soothing and caressing when the mind is off duty and the emotions are allowed to have their way." L: Galantiere
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p7 Ap 15 '28 1100w
Boston Transcript p2 Ag 4 '28 200w
Reviewed by Ernest Boyd
Ind 120:435 My 5 '28 1250w

"To this assemblage of piquant characterizations, amusing mots, tag-ends of apt verse, and witty decoration there is a wistfulness, a freshness, inexpressibly touching and diverting."
+ Living Age 334:1112 Jl '28 300w

"A delightful, splendidly sentimental ragbag of reminiscences by one of the most picturesque of the group of pre-war Bohemians who once ruled Montmartre and Montparnasse."
+ Nation 127:69 Jl 18 '28 100w

"It is a book to be cherished, for it is written with utter sincerity and unaffected frankness, exhibiting characters and places of boundless fascination." Arthur Herman
+ N Y Evening Post p9 My 26 '28 700w
N Y Times p2 Jl 15 '28 900w
Sat R of Lit 4:1023 Jl 7 '28 260w

CARCO, FRANCIS. Perversity; tr. by Ford Madox Ford. 278p $2.50 Covici

28-14556

"'Perversity' deals with life in the lower depths. It is the story of a boy, his sister who is a prostitute, and her sustainer in a mean street in Paris. It is a story of abnormalities, of hideous and distorted lives, and yet there is enough of simple humanity in it to make it a drama in which the most blameless can feel the emotion of recognition."—Bookm

Reviewed by Burton Rascoe

Bookm 67:184 Ap '28 380w

"Such roaming in pathological fields has its uses, but for the purposes of the novel it is not only a dubious but an unnecessary business: ordinary human beings are still the proper study of ordinary human beings, and we can gladly leave the perverts and the monsters to themselves and the doctors." T. S. Matthews

— New Repub 55:337 Ag 15 '28 300w

"A lean and ugly bit of naturalism, done in the pseudo-Flaubert manner, dealing with the brutalities of Apache sexual life and the one emotion which Carco is always able to delineate —craven and hysterical fear. Despite Ford Madox Ford's generous laudation, this book is not half as powerful as its author's 'L'Homme Traqué'; but it is distinctly worth reading if only for the genuineness of its prostitutes." C. P. F.

— + Nation 126:414 Ap 11 '28 70w

"Few novelists could support the strain of inspecting such an apparently highly coloured world without forgetting their duty as plain historians of the emotions. But M. Carco does not make this world highly coloured; he is not in the least sentimental. His objective attitude is sustained and admirable. Nor does he attain this objectivity only by reducing his story to the flatness of a police court report. He makes the most of his characters' emotions and attempts to understand and explain the springs of their actions."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p488 Je 28 '28 500w

CARDOZO, BENJAMIN NATHAN. Paradoxes of legal science. (Columbia univ. lectures. James S. Carpentier foundation 1927) 142p $2.50 Columbia univ. press [12s 6d Oxford]

340 Law. Justice. Liberty 28-11455

Lectures on certain problems of liberty and the law, delivered at Columbia university by the chief judge of the Court of appeals of New York.

"The book is well documented with references to the pragmatic philosophers and recent court decisions. It is not too technical for a layman and is an important book for the sociologist and any one interested in the philosophy of law. As a literary work it is to be commended to admirers of a fine prose style." James Marshall

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p6 Jl 8 '28 1450w

"One of the most brilliant dissertations on existing legal problems penned in our day." A. S. R.

+ Boston Transcript p6 Je 9 '28 180w

Reviewed by Simeon Strunsky

N Y Times p4 My 27 '28 1950w

CARFRAE, ELIZABETH. Devil's jest. 299p $2 Harper

Jilted by a girl at home, Derry goes off to the West Indies to manage Rosemary Carteret's estate. On the way out he meets Lois Graves and marries her. He has never really loved her, and when she bears him a black child he turns in horror from her. Lois goes native, and is engaged in the merry business of making voodoo to win Derry's love or kill him, when Rosemary comes out to the plantation and brings the melodrama to a crisis.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p9 Ag 12 '28 60w

"The situation is a tragic one, but as a story it is full of excitement and mystery. The story is made convincing by the very vivid picturing of this out-of-the-way spot to which Derek Temple comes, and by the romance which develops there."

+ Boston Transcript p6 Ag 22 '28 200w

"The pretense to a shallow plausibility sustained through the first hundred-odd pages of this bleary romance is swamped in the flood of raving idiocies which the author then proceeds to turn loose."

— Sat R of Lit 5:91 S 1 '28 200w

Springf'd Republican p6e D 16 '28 170w

CARPENTER, GEORGE HERBERT. Biology of insects. (Biological handbooks) 473p il $6.50 Macmillan [16s Sidgwick & J.]

595.7 Insects—Biology 28-14366

A well illustrated volume written by the keeper of the Manchester museum, University of Manchester. There are chapters of popular interest on behavior of insects, family life, social life, adaptations to haunts and seasons, and insects and mankind. The style is fairly technical.

Boston Transcript p2 Jl 14 '28 180w

New Statesman 31:334 Je 16 '28 320w

"The entomologist, in reading the volume, may feel that many important and interesting facts have been ruthlessly omitted, but the general biologist will find much material of the utmost interest on every page."

+ — Sat R of Lit 5:498 D 8 '28 380w

"Dr. Carpenter shows an extraordinary knowledge of the work done in many countries by many competent workers. He has hit upon the significant things and has explained them in such a way that they are readily understood. And he has brought into logical form and in proper juxtaposition the work of isolated individuals so as to place before the busy worker in biology a comprehensive and readable whole." L. O. Howard

+ Science 67:467 My 4 '28 650w

Spec 140:428 Mr 17 '28 300w

"A work which will perhaps satisfy the needs of the teaching zoologist, but which is not sufficiently detailed to be of much value to the professional entomologist." E. A. C.

Springf'd Republican p7e S 9 '28 520w

CARR, HERBERT WILDON. Unique status of man. (New era lectureship, Univ. of Southern California, 1927.) 216p $1.75 (7s 6d) Macmillan

234.9 Free will and determinism 28-2518

These lectures, delivered by Professor Carr at the University of Southern California, form a philosophical interpretation of the problems contained in the Christian doctrine of free will. Professor Carr is Professor of philosophy in the University of London.

Boston Transcript p4 Ap 11 '28 250w

"For those who get satisfaction out of believing that the universe must be what they want it to be, this will be a very satisfying book. Its philosophy will not appear to them as literary gossip nor its psychology wishful thinking. But there will be those who cannot but observe that even if the material universe be disclosed as centers of ultimate activity (rather than as hard lumps of stuff), human activity, of which freedom is predicated, lives precariously in the earthly house of its friendly cosmos." T. V. Smith

Christian Century 45:315 Mr 8 '28 480w

"It is a discussion of the problem of 'free-will'; but not by any means a mere rehearsal of the older forms and reasonings. For one who has read and reread the older arguments this is decidedly fresh and invigorating, as well as convincing." S. B. M.

+ Crozer Quarterly 5:250 Ap '28 900w

Reviewed by E. F. Mettrick

Int J Ethics 39:124 O '28 200w

J Religion 8:501 Jl '28 50w

Reviewed by E. S. Brightman
J Religion 8:643 O '28 650w
St Louis 26:179 Je '28
Sat R 145:704 Je 2 '28 660w
Times [London] Lit Sup p328 My 3 '28 960w

CARR, ROBERT S. Rampant age. 330p $2 Doubleday, Doran
28-7956

A high school boy's story of a high school boy's life in small town and city in a round of jazz parties and gin, joy rides and dance halls, and adolescent experimentations in love.

"Many readers of 'The Rampant Age' may be predisposed against it by visions of too much gin and jazz, too many 'red hot mammas.' . . The maturity of composition, the grace of style, together with the cool, detached survey Mr. Carr makes of his contemporaries, renders the assertion that he is himself but a high school lad almost incredible."
+ — Boston Transcript p5 Ap 25 '28 950w

Reviewed by Raymond Mortimer
Nation and Ath 43:735 S 8 '28 300w

" 'The Rampant Age,' like all these now-it-can-be-told books, has a certain amount of sensationalism in its make-up. Yet it has a realistic portrayal that smacks often of the authentic. Mr. Carr has a talent for story-telling, and the novel, though long, is sustained."
+ — N Y Times p8 F 12 '28 550w

"There must be grounds, one supposes, for Mr. Carr's damaging indictment, otherwise he could hardly have made it carry so much weight. But surely these unlovely juvenile vagaries are more suitable as material for a treatise on pathology than for a novel." L. P. Hartley
Sat R 146:277 S 1 '28 60w

"The worst thing his elders have done to this author is to teach him how to write a book like this, for its skill in narration and its emphasis on the high spots prove precisely how this technique can be misused. It seems dubious whether the information to be gained from the volume is worth the risk of implanting in young readers the idea that 'hot parties' are the rule nowadays, and that they must go and do likewise." Leon Whipple
— + Survey 60:177 My 1 '28 250w

"The most pleasing thing about the novel is that it really is a novel; indeed, for a young man of eighteen, as the author, Mr. Robert S. Carr, is said to be, it is a work of striking penetration and accomplishment. The story is developed naturally, unaffectedly, and with considerable vigour; it displays sensitiveness and an acute power of observation. The novel is written throughout in the purest American idiom; inevitably it is rather overpowering at times."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p706 O 4 '28 520w

CARR-SAUNDERS, ALEXANDER MORRIS, and JONES, DAVID CARADOG. Survey of the social structure of England & Wales as illustrated by statistics. 264p $3.50 (10s) Oxford

314.2 Great Britain—Social conditions. Great Britain—Population. Great Britain—Statistics L28-63

"Professor Carr-Saunders of the University of Liverpool is already well known for his books on the population question, and Mr. Caradog Jones is a statistician. The book is a summary of writing statistical evidence on population in England and Wales, housing, occupations, trade-unions, religious bodies, the national income, education, health and unemployment insurance, etc. It is therefore an advisable basis for the study of contemporary England. There are many tables and figures, and the comments and explanations of the authors provide the necessary guidance through the mass of material."—Int J Ethics

Reviewed by A. P. Usher
Am Econ R 18:729 D '28 450w
Ann Am Acad 139:220 S '28 80w
Boston Transcript p5 F 18 '28 350w
Int J Ethics 38:359 Ap '28 150w
New Statesman 30:770 Mr 24 '28 1000w

"This highly readable work only lacks an index to make it an invaluable reference book."
+ — Spec 139:1155 D 31 '27 1050w

"Professor Carr-Saunders and Mr. Caradog Jones, of the Liverpool University School of Social Science, disclaiming the intention of providing a work of reference, have nevertheless succeeded so well in measuring and illustrating the different factors in social and economic life, and summarized so adequately the statistical material, official, and unofficial, available for this purpose, that their book is indispensable to the serious student of economic and social problems. . . The book is a model of cautious statement."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p50 Je 26 '28 1400w

CARSON, RUSSELL MACK LITTLE. Peaks and people of the Adirondacks. 269p il $2.50 Doubleday, Doran

917.475 Adirondack mountains 27-27563

Stories and legends from local history concerning the forty-six peaks of the Adirondacks over 4,000 feet in height located in Essex and Franklin counties, New York state. Herbert S. Kates has made the pen and ink sketches which illustrate the book, and Jerome S. Kates drew the map which forms the end papers.

Booklist 24:244 Mr '28
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p18 Mr 18 '28 70w

"A study all lovers of mountains and of mountain-climbing will welcome."
+ Boston Transcript p4 Ja 4 '28 200w
Cleveland Open Shelf p89 Jl '28

"He has collected a mass of valuable information that was not previously accessible. His book is a worthwhile addition to Adirondackana."
+ N Y Times p21 Ja 22 '28 300w
Pratt p35 autumn '28

"While Mr. Carson brings to his task zeal, a love of nature, and a simple but adequate style, his book is not one that will appeal to the average reader who has no special interest in the region described."
Sat R of Lit 4:543 Ja 21 '28 230w

CARSWELL, DONALD. Brother Scots. 237p $3.50 Harcourt [12s Constable]

920 Scotland—Biography. Biography [28-10537]

"The six biographical interpretations reveal an admirable breadth of mind and certainty of design, for, though they are six entire studies, they collectively form a kind of historical survey, 'a cultural picture of Scotland in the late years of the nineteenth century.' Henry Drummond, William Robertson Smith, John Stuart Blackie, Keir Hardie, Lord Overtoun, and Robertson Nicoll—these are the principals whose careers are estimated."—Nation and Ath

"Ronald Carswell is to be congratulated. He has chosen six Scots of the last generation for a series of graphic studies—not at all (it seems necessary to say) like Lytton Strachey." S. K. Ratcliffe
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p11 Je 3 '28 60w

Reviewed by Edmund Blunden
Nation and Ath 42:330 N 26 '27 500w

"Two of these six are masterpieces; two are excellent and two noteworthy. In twenty brief pages he draws the picture of a pious hypocrite,

CARSWELL, DONALD—Continued
Lord Overtoun, which will stick in the reader's mind as El Greco's 'Agony in the Garden' sticks there. The other masterpiece of the book is devoted to John Stuart Blackie." Joseph Collins
+ N Y Evening Post p12 F 11 '28 1400w

"The value of his book does not rest on any immediate, contemporary interest. It consists rather in three elements quite apart from timeliness of theme. First is the brilliance, intellectual as well as verbal, with which the studies are conceived and written. Second is the attitude, rather cynical, superior and self-assured, with which Georgians view all things Victorian, as from a pinnacle. Third is the inherent and enduring interest of the men whose characters are so keenly and discerningly set forth."
+ N Y Times p12 My 27 '28 1050w

Reviewed by R. C. B. Brown
N Y World p11m F 26 '28 150w
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:300 My '28
Pratt p38 autumn '28

"Mr. Donald Carswell is undoubtedly at his wittiest when he is also at his most malicious. The reader who likes to begin with the best will pass straight on to the only one of Mr. Carswell's characters whom he really despises —Keir Hardie. It is a most brilliantly clever and amusing sketch. All the others are good, and all have a biting wit; but this with the barbs on it is the best."
+ Sat R 144:864 D 17 '27 220w

"Mr. Carswell walks very deftly in the footsteps of Mr. Strachey, and it must be confessed that the English 'debunkers' do their work, when they do it well, with a lighter touch than the American. Whether they are any more essentially just may perhaps be doubted."
+ Sat R of Lit 4:745 Ap 7 '28 250w

"Unquestionably the most brilliant series of biographical essays that has appeared since Mr. Lytton Strachey's Victorian studies, and they are much in the same vein and treat of much the same age."
+ Spec 139:614 O 15 '27 850w
Times [London] Lit Sup p725 O 20 '27 1000w

CARTER, HUGH. Social theories of L. T. Hobhouse. (Univ. of North Carolina. Social study ser.) 137p $1.50 Univ. of North Carolina
301 Hobhouse, Leonard Trelawney. Sociology 28-7529

"This is the story of how a vigorous, rationalist, philosophic mind, dissatisfied with the current misinterpretations of evolutionary theories, turned to a factual examination of the evolutionary process itself and its bearing on human progress and political liberalism. Dr. Carter follows somewhat the chronological method and begins his analysis with Hobhouse's studies of mind in evolution and then proceeds along to his more recent work on morals in evolution. He points out that the main reason why Hobhouse is not better known in the United States is that his work is usually identified with the field of philosophy, and concludes that his greatest contribution is in the field of social ethics."—Am J Soc

---

"This study is slight in content and outlook. It reveals an honest, faithful reading and analysis of Hobhouse's writings, but with no trace of the style, for example, made popular by Maurois, Strachey, and others." A. J. Todd
Am J Soc 34:562 N '28 220w

"Dr. Carter emphasizes Hobhouse's social theories. He paints with vivid strokes a picture of the Englishman bridging the gap between philosophy and the social sciences. . . The style is excellent, and the text highly readable throughout." A. F. M.
+ Ann Am Acad 137:269 My '28 90w

"Dr. Carter has made an unsophisticated study of a difficult subject and has presented his conclusions with almost elementary simplicity. His book merits attention only as a preliminary discussion of the work of one who has been neglected personally but who, indirectly, has had a profound influence on sociological thought in America."
— + Nation 126:726 Je 27 '28 110w

CARTER, JOHN FRANKLIN. Conquest; America's painless imperialism. 348p $2.50 Harcourt
327 United States—Foreign relations. United States—Economic policy. World politics 28-24816

The impenetration of the rest of the world by American methods and ideas is what is meant by the "painless imperialism" of the subtitle. Mr Carter, author of Man is war (Book Review Digest, 1926), defends this unconscious conquest of Europe and Asia by such policies—industrial, economic, or political—as have proved successful at home, and may prove to be of equal advantage if applied to problems of other countries.

Reviewed by R. L. Buell
New Repub 57:48 N 28 '28 550w

"His conclusions are fair and interesting, because he has reached them by using human understanding and common sense, and they are fair because they do not seem to have been dictated by a blindfold test. He sees America as a great, immature power, free to choose its own way and to set its own goal." Joseph Collins
+ N Y Evening Post p9m N 3 '28 400w

"The argument is logical and lively and Mr. Carter is well armed with facts."
+ N Y Times p3 N 18 '28 1400w

CARTWRIGHT, ZACK. Wapoose. 311p $2 Holt 28-7497

The new telegrapher at Athabasca Landing is a young lad avid for romance. He finds it in the country and in the people—Indians, traders, half breeds, and Constable Lynch of the Mounted police, who tells the story. Chiefly the newcomer finds the romance he seeks in Captain Duncan and his dark-eyed daughter, tho the unaccountable actions of the pair are a puzzle to his chivalrous soul until explained by Constable Lynch.

Booklist 24:402 Jl '28
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 My 13 '28 80w

"If one likes to read of the North West, with its out door life, its snows and blizzards, its brief summer, its Indians and woodsmen, its lawlessness and its Mounted Police to repress disorder and crime, one is sure to enjoy this story and to hope that there may be others to follow, for Mr. Cartwright writes of the outposts vividly and as one with authority."
+ Boston Transcript p7 Je 23 '28 280w
Cleveland Open Shelf p107 S '28
Wis Lib Bul 24:255 O '28

CARUSO, MRS DOROTHY (BENJAMIN), and GODDARD, MRS TORRANCE (BENJAMIN). Wings of song; the story of Caruso. 218p il $3.50 Minton [16s Hutchinson]
B or 92 Caruso, Enrico 28-8737

In collaboration with her sister, Mrs Caruso has written of meeting Caruso, of her father's opposition to their engagement, and of her marriage and life with the famous tenor in America and in Italy. Her story throws into relief intimate and engaging aspects of Caruso as family man and friend.

Booklist 24:361 Je '28

"Altogether this 'Story of Caruso' is a document of real value in the further light that it sheds on the ways of one of the greatest singers whom the world has known, and it is also engaging in its own right, told with a charming limpidity and a welcome absence of all surplusage. Handsomely printed, the book gathers additional importance from the well chosen illustrations, which include reproductions of some of the aptest of Caruso's caricatures." P: Bowdoin

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p17 My 20 '28 800w

Cleveland Open Shelf p134 D '28

— Nation and Ath 43:825 S 29 '28 600w

"An excellent character sketch of Caruso. Those who want to know what it really means to be married to a celebrated opera singer will find out from 'Wings of Song,' which is frank but never hysterical." R. A. S.

+ N Y Evening Post p8 My 19 '28 80w

"The mighty army of Caruso's admirers will find in it the sort of thing that admirers of celebrities always want to know about them—their daily occupations in private, their personalities, their interests, how they seem to those who know them best. It is a very lovable human being whom Caruso's wife and sister-in-law portray."

+ N Y Times p15 Ap 1 '28 460w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:342 Je '28

"This is one of the biographies that deserves to endure both as a record of the life behind the scenes of a great artist and as a powerful human document. It is never overstressed or maudlin, sensational or insincere. It has warmth and color and richness as a prose fabric. And yet it is told in simple, forthright language."

+ Sat R of Lit 5:109 S 8 '28 280w

"It is an affectionate book, written with a good deal of simplicity and charm."

+ Spec 141:310 S 8 '28 150w

Times [London] Lit Sup p633 S 6 '28 60w

CARVER, THOMAS NIXON, and LESTER, HUGH WETZEL. This economic world, and how it may be improved. 432p il $4 Shaw, A.W.

330 Economics 28-7152

"Rather loosely connected and abstract essays in defense of the present industrial system, which it is predicted will in the near future result in the same average return for all occupations and economic classes. The first-named author is one of the leading older economists of the country; the second a lawyer who supplies citations to many legal decisions of interest to economists."—Wis Lib Bul

Reviewed by M. G. Smith

Am Econ R 18:718 D '28 650w

Booklist 24:346 Je '28

Reviewed by H: R. Mussey

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p15 Ag 26 '28 1150w

"The authors write in oracular vein. They employ the style of the profound thinker who speaks from the pinnacle of a great pyramid of knowledge. Yet what they say is less distinguished than the manner in which they say it." Horace Taylor

+ — New Repub 55:311 Ag 8 '28 550w

"The book is done in an unexciting and conservative vein. Readers will find much information within its covers." G: Joel

N Y World p9m My 20 '28 70w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:557 N '28

R of Rs 77:12 My '28 50w

St Louis 26:181 Je '28

Wis Lib Bul 24:157 My '28

CASE, ROBERT ORMOND. Riders of the Grande Ronde. 373p $2 Doubleday, Doran 28-15625

There were two men to be watched in the valley of the Grande Ronde. There was LeVeq, charming in looks and courtly in manner, and there was Sam Delaney, slow and awkward, but mighty in battle. Ruth Hamilton watched them both and altho she knew one of them was the greatest criminal in the northwest, could not decide which was the one. But as she was a pawn in the game she finally discovered the truth.

"Mr. Case's account of the rodeo alone is worth the money, not to mention the forest fire, the escape by airplane and an eminently satisfactory finale." Will Cuppy

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p14 Jl 22 '28 100w

"The chief attraction to the reader of this story lies in the inherent honesty of its motives. Mr. Case sets out to tell a simple story that will amuse. He accomplishes neither more nor less. He does not go in for extensive backgrounds or highly psychologized characters, but in a quiet way manages to be effective at all times."

+ Boston Transcript p2 Je 23 '28 150w

Cleveland Open Shelf p107 S '28

Reviewed by W. R. Brooks

Outlook 149:277 Je 13 '28 120w

CASEY, ROBERT JOSEPH. Baghdad & points east. 300p il $5 Sears [18s Hutchinson]

915.6 Bagdad—Description. Syria—Description and travel 28-4403

"In a frame work of travel itinerary the author, with interspersed stories and legends recalls in live, verbal color the dead glories of Baghdad and other wonder cities of the Mesopotamian East—Babylon and Nineveh, Palmyra and Damascus."—N Y Evening Post

"Although Mr. Casey in his earliest pages refers to himself as a troubadour, it is in the impersonal manner that persists throughout his book. He writes well, if a little too much, and the sentimentality is slight in comparison with the simple effect and the salty flavor of such bits as the rescue of the camel-bitten Miriam and MacPherson and the Beautiful Persian."

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 O 7 '28 120w

Cleveland Open Shelf p52 Ap '28

Nation and Ath 44:sup228 N 10 '28 130w

"This vivid account of travel in the Near East is interesting enough to make us regret the omission of a map. It is more than mere tourist gossip. The tales Mr. Casey tells are true traveller's tales, and not anecdotes jotted down from the dragomen. His flowery style is perhaps to be deprecated as an effort to make still more romantic and picturesque that which already possesses those qualities in abundance. But his fact is always trustworthy and 'he gives fresh news.' "

+ New Statesman 32:supxvi N 3 '28 220w

"His text is thoroughly enjoyable because, while it evokes vanished splendors, these lavish visions are offset by happy humorous incidents drawn from the life of the present-day native." F. H. M.

+ N Y Evening Post p13 Ja 28 '28 90w

Reviewed by P. W. Wilson

N Y Times p11 Mr 18 '28 80w

"Mr. Casey, with one eye on the Sheikh Public, has done his best with his material even when he found it most disillusioning, for three hundred pages he strives hard to make a gaudy style lend life to a trivial and commonplace narrative. It is not easy to understand what can have led the author to believe that such a book was really worth writing, or the publishers that people can be induced to pay the price of three good books for it."

— Sat R 146:400 S 29 '28 220w

"This is a good book, but it is pretentious, planless, careless, and has clichés about Zenobia, Balkis, Semiramis, Sennacherib, which would have made this reviewer's blood boil, if he had not long ago become immune to twaddle." F. Y.-B.

+ — Spec 141:sup783 N 24 '28 250w

"Mr. Casey has been at pains to get his facts right; his book is a pleasant and informing guide to the places he has visited, and no one going to the Near East would regret taking it. He has a keen sense for a good yarn, and repeats one excellently."

CASEY, R. J.—Continued

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p739 O 11 '28 380w

CATHOLIC FOREIGN MISSION SOCIETY of AMERICA, incorporated, Maryknoll, New York. Maryknoll mission letters: China; extracts from the letters and diaries of pioneer missioners of the [society]. v 2 402p il $3 Macmillan

266 Missions—China. Roman Catholic church—Missions

"A collection of extracts from letters and diaries of the pioneer representatives of the Roman Catholics in missionary work among the Chinese. A former volume presented documents for the years 1918-21, and the present volume covers another three years."—J Religion

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 F 5 '28 90w

"To those who would visit, or read of the Orient, these letters will prove valuable and interesting. Written by missionaries, men and women, working among the people in places far off the beaten traffic of ordinary travel, they give an intimate view of the life of a people radically departing from a two-thousand-year-old background. The letters are written humorously, vividly, yet with truth and plain fact."

+ Boston Transcript p2 Mr 24 '28 200w

"The volume partakes of the defects and of the advantages of its epistolary form. No attempt is made to expound missionary principles or methods. There is a needless accumulation of incidental details which fail either to interest or to inform the general reader. But withal, some of the authors are entertaining and versatile writers, with real human interest, apostolic zeal for the salvation of souls, and a keen sense of humor." A. G. Baker

+ — Christian Century 45:443 Ap 5 '28 380w

J Religion 8:327 Ap '28 30w

Springf'd Republican p7f Ap 8 '28 170w

CAVAN, RUTH SHONLE. Suicide. (Univ. of Chicago sociological ser.) 359p il $3 Univ. of Chicago press

394.8 Suicide 28-7420

"Dr. Cavan treats of suicide as the resultant either of social disorganization or personal disorganization, or both. The first part of the book approaches the problem from the standpoint of the group, 'of the customs and institutions which constitute the social organization and through which the individual members of the group organize their interests and wishes.' The second part of the book, which deals with the individual and personal sides of the problem, is largely filled with case histories derived from coroner's records, newspaper accounts, etc."—Sat R of Lit

"Mrs. Cavan's volume is an admirable example of careful, patient, and methodical work. The facts are presented in a lucid and straightforward manner, the analyses and comments are shrewd, and the generalizations and conclusions are within the compass of the data presented. The volume is a valuable contribution to the sociological method of research as well as to our knowledge of suicide." E. B. Reuter

+ Am J Soc 33:1018 My '28 580w

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p20 My 20 '28 60w

Boston Transcript p3 F 4 '28 750w

"The training of the author, the methods of collecting data, the quality and arrangement of the material, in addition to the author's attractive style make the book of more than ordinary interest to student and layman alike. The research student will find in it an excellent example of methods in social research; the student of human nature will discover recent theories of human nature and social phenomena in general; and the practical worker—teachers, preachers, social workers—will find a mine of vital and usable information." J. A. Jacobs

+ Christian Century 45:1079 S 6 '28 580w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:368 Jl '28

"Dr. Cavan's lack of complete success in this promising field seems to be due more to a failure of literary skill in presenting her results in logical, unified progression to an unescapable conclusion than to lack of insight and power in analysis of the evidence. In short the book smells like the doctoral thesis of an unusually able and brilliant student, who will do better later on. Even so, it is a useful contribution, well worth reading. Every teacher of sociology will find it extremely valuable for reference, and as a catalyser of discussion." Raymond Pearl

+ — Sat R of Lit 4:822 Ap 28 '28 950w

Reviewed by Abraham Myerson, M. D.
Survey 61:44 O 1 '28 520w

CAVANAGH, DERMOT, pseud. Tammany boy; a romance and a political career. 297p $2 Sears

28-21983

Thomas Jefferson Gentry, novice at law, loses his first eleven cases in a row. A bit of wire pulling from Tammany Hall wins the twelfth for him and makes him a Tammany man. As he rises to prominence in politics Thomas Jefferson finds out how Tammany stands back of its candidates, exacting like loyalty of them, and what happens to a man who tries to buck the machine. The progress of his love affair with Peggy McShane is incidental to the political interest of the story.

Boston Transcript p4 S 29 '28 580w

N Y Times p32 N 25 '28 580w

"The book tells nothing new about Tammany, but the picture is a lively, colorful one, painted without visible bias."

+ Sat R of Lit 5:281 O 20 '28 300w

Springf'd Republican p7e S 16 '28 270w

CECIL, ALGERNON. British foreign secretaries, 1807-1916; studies in personality and policy. 378p $4.50 Putnam [15s Bell]

923.2 Great Britain—Biography. Great Britain—Foreign relations. Statesmen, British [27-19252]

Studies of the personalities and policies of England's leading foreign secretaries from 1807-1916. The men portrayed are Castlereagh, Canning, Aberdeen, Palmerston, Clarendon, Granville, Lord Rosebery, Salisbury, Lord Landsdowne and Viscount Grey of Fallodon.

Reviewed by A. L. Sachar

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 Je 3 '28 500w

"It is written in dignified but not pedantic style; and cannot fail to win innumerable friends among the students of the field." A. S. R.

+ Boston Transcript p7 F 25 '28 780w

"He is a little overburdened by his own style and his obvious desire to say things as cleverly as possible; but his book is an instructive lesson in the art and achievements of British statesmanship." Leonard Woolf

+ — Nation and Ath 41:263 My 28 '27 300w

"Few people who take up this book will put it down without an effort. It is exceedingly entertaining; it abounds in information; its personal sketches are vivid and happy; it runs easily and if its metaphors sometimes get a little out of hand it is free from the straining for effect which ruins so many books of this kind." J. L. H.

+ New Statesman 29:217 My 28 '27 1300w

"The studies in personality and policy now issued should increase his reputation among candid students of history. Well informed if not based on new information, they show independence of judgment, they are written with distinction, and are rather more outspoken than is common in works of this kind."
+ Sat R 143:872 Je 4 '27 900w

"Mr. Cecil makes his history of a century's work in one department of the British Government exceedingly attractive. The biographical form allures readers who have not the seriousness needed to study solid diplomatic history, but he adds with considerable art an historical continuity by which his figures are as threads woven into the larger whole."
+ Spec 138:954 My 28 '27 480w

"Mr. Cecil has many wise things to say; he is always interesting, and his judgments, though downright enough, do not offend against good taste. In only one instance does he lapse in this respect."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p327 My 12 '27 1700w

CENDRARS, BLAISE, comp. African saga; tr. from l'Anthologie nègre, by Margery Bianco; with an introd. by Arthur B. Spingarn. 378p $5 Payson & Clarke

398 Folklore—Africa 27-24330

For descriptive note see Annual for 1927.

"It is surprising that so little has been written of the folklore of Africa. The general reader in English may have run across a smaller collection of this same material without acknowledgment of sources in the Little Blue Book Series under the title 'African Folk Tales.' In the present sumptuous volume he will find the best available compilation." W. R. Crawford
+ Ann Am Acad 140:348 N '28 300w
Booklist 24:309 My '28
Reviewed by H. A. Potamkin
Bookm 66:702 F '28 180w

"His work will bring joy to any one who likes a good story well told, and his publishers have added to it by the imagination which has gone into the printing and binding of these tales. One is thankful that M. Cendrars has included a few, if only a very few, of the proverbs which embody so much of the wisdom of the Africans, and regretful that their conundrums, with their dry implications and subtle comments on life, were neglected." M. J. Herskovits
+ Nation 126:351 Mr 28 '28 780w

"This is a spirited translation of a French anthology of tales, for the most part gathered from a score of black races, speaking widely different tongues, yet with the same lurid and gorgeous coloring, the same grim humor, and the same magical extravagance running through them all. The stories are in texture quite primitive."
N Y Times p14 My 6 '28 1250w

"Off-hand one would much have preferred that all the materials drawn from any one tribe or district or race or linguistic group (any such division) might have been united; and certainly, were the book meant for scholars, the sources should have been given for each selection. There is, to be sure, a bibliography of some hundred fifty titles, but it is not related to the text, and there are no notes. All this makes the book unusable except in the one use which is known as that of the 'general reader.' But apart from all such reservations the collection does make a kind of whole impression that is not unjust, and from which the contours of a mind seem to emerge." H. B. Alexander
— + Sat R of Lit 4:572 F 4 '28 800w
Springf'd Republican p7f Ja 29 '28 230w
Reviewed by M. H. Bradley
Yale R n s 18:188 S '28 280w

CHADOURNE, MARC. Vasco; tr. by Eric Sutton; with a preface by Ford Madox Ford. 282p $2.50 Harcourt

28-20838

Vasco is a young Frenchman, a hopelessly disillusioned victim of the war, who seeks escape from his despair in the Pacific isles. He is content for a while with love in idleness and the almost incredible beauty of the islands, but thru his friendship with the strange Plessis, he reaches an even blacker despair. Vasco's momentary dream of renunciation in a leper colony gives way to reason and he returns to France and the inescapable dilemma of existence.

"It is not a stoic's book; it is morbid. But its dispassionate strength gives its author a definite place among the finer French writers of today."
+ Bookm 68:xxx N '28 100w

"The book is quick with vitality and as deeply serious in its intention as it is variegated and brilliant in its color. Monsieur Chadourne has written a saga of restlessness. All those who are possessed of this spirit, be it god or devil, will feel here a throb of discovery much the same as when they meet and make friends with someone whom they understand without need of explanation." V. P. Ross
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p2 S 23 '28 750w
Boston Transcript p2 S 26 '28 160w

"For a first novel this is a brilliant and poetic performance."
+ Ind 121:237 S 8 '28 230w

"An extremely interesting novel which is unfortunately spoiled by a misty-mystic conclusion. Here is perhaps the clearest presentation in modern fiction of the deracinated post-war young Frenchman."
+ — Nation 127:sup377 O 10 '28 100w
Reviewed by Raymond Mortimer
Nation and Ath 43:564 Jl 28 '28 200w

"The psychology of Vasco is not as good as the fine descriptions of the South Seas, and the account in particular of the Marquesas Islands, so remote and so lovely, with a race of dwindling natives of legendary beauty, whose existence soon will only be a legend too. Vasco is admirably translated by Mr. Sutton. It is a good story of adventure written from an intellectual point of view. Most people will find it an interesting book in spite of the mystifications and the dramatic Watson-wonder of the narrator, which does not ring very sincere." Cyril Connolly
+ — New Statesman 31:615 Ag 25 '28 350w
Reviewed by Ruth Lechlitner
N Y Evening Post p8m O 27 '28 850w

"Here is a new writer worth watching. He has substance, he has a distinct point of view, and he is the most distinguished stylist in his generation." C: Poore
+ N Y Times p8 S 2 '28 880w
No Am 226:adv O '28 80w

"Vasco is one of the modern young men whose physical adventures—and they are very, very physical—are meant to be a mere shadow of the superhuman conflict in their minds. Vasco, searching incessantly for escape from himself, leaves France for Tahiti, leaves Tahiti for the Marquesas, leaves his business, leaves the very decencies of life, only to find himself forever the slave of himself, if you see what we mean. Any well-trained modern reader will see at once, and will find it all only too familiar. The book depends for its effect on distinctive writing, but this is necessarily obscured in a translation." Harriet Hastings
— Outlook 150:794 S 12 '28 200w

"It is full of atmosphere, but rather turgidly written; and the hero's motives, which are the pretext for a good deal of rhetoric, puzzle us as they puzzled the narrator. As in many French novels, the emotions are so much intellectualized that they are hardly credible." L. P. Hartley
— + Sat R 146:187 Ag 11 '28 60w

CHADOURNE, MARC—Continued

" 'Vasco' is an enigmatic, puzzling book, particularly in its presentation of Plessis, who seems to be under some special curse, after the fashion of the Flying Dutchman, which he bestows on others. The merits of M. Chadourne's style are considerable. His descriptions are lacking in romance and equally devoid of sensational realistic details. They are sober accounts of what the author saw when he lived in the islands, pervading the whole book with an air of genuineness."

+ Sat R of Lit 5:336 N 10 '28 580w

"This is a striking example of the disintegrating kind of novel; and the translator has finely preserved the limpid and passionate beauty of the style." R. A. Taylor

+ Spec 141:60 Jl 14 '28 170w

Springf'd Republican p7e O 14 '28 500w

CHAFEE, ZECHARIAH, jr. Inquiring mind. 276p $2.50 Harcourt

323.44 Liberty. Liberty of speech 28-12891

The author, who is professor of law in Harvard university, here brings together some essays on liberty, freedom of speech and other constitutional problems which originally appeared in the Harvard law review, the Nation and other periodicals. Most of the essays are attempts to ascertain the proper scope for liberty in various concrete situations, such as the Gitlow and the Bimba case, the Interchurch steel report, and the California I.W.W. injunction.

Am Econ R 18:525 S '28 40w

Reviewed by C. D. Clark

Am J Soc 34:555 N '28 420w

Booklist 25:9 O '28

Boston Transcript p6 Je 9 '28 1200w

"On the whole, it is to be doubted if these miscellaneous articles deserved the permanence of book publication. Some of them represent issues that are no longer urgent or alive; and all are easily available in the files of current magazines."

Nation 127:49 Jl 11 '28 150w

Reviewed by Malcolm Cowley

New Repub 55:204 Jl 11 '28 700w

"Mr. Chafee keeps his emotions under restraint and is content to offer the intellectual appeal of his examination and discussion of the principles and facts involved in each of these cases. But there is no question about the quality of that intellectual appeal, for his mental action is penetrating, sure and logical, his common sense sound and reassuring and his presentation persuasive. Nor is there any doubt either of the depth and ardency of his faith in the value of liberty."

+ N Y Times p5 Jl 8 '28 520w

"Supplement the fire of Mr. Hays's pen with the cold steel of Mr. Chafee's. 'Let Freedom Ring' is written for popular reading; 'The Inquiring Mind,' for special. Both deal with the greatest danger to the future of America as her founders conceived her that can exist—the danger that the country, in 'exalting order at the cost of liberty,' has forgotten the ideals which underlie her institutions. No one whose interest in America goes beyond his own immediate fortunes should leave such books as these unread."

+ Outlook 149:110 My 16 '28 190w

Pratt p10 autumn '28

Sat R of Lit 5:159 S 22 '28 220w

Reviewed by Leon Whipple

Survey 60:558 S 1 '28 140w

Wis Lib Bul 24:219 Jl '28

CHALMERS, HELENA. Clothes on and off the stage; a history of dress from the earliest times to the present day. 292p il $3.50 Appleton

391 Costume 28-4399

"A combination of the history of costume, practical suggestions on dressing for the stage (many of them equally useful off), and hints on making costumes of various types; with many drawings, charts, and silhouettes. Includes periods from the stone age to the present, nationalities from the Hindu to the Scandinavian, headdresses as well as garments, and masculine as well as feminine attire."—J Home Econ

---

Booklist 24:309 My '28

Boston Transcript p4 My 12 '28 430w

Cleveland Open Shelf p101 S '28

"Valuable both for students of costume and for dramatic groups."

+ J Home Econ 20:361 My '28 70w

"In the presentation of her material she has so condensed it that she has been able to compress into one volume of moderate size an enormous amount of information. Her book ought to be sufficient for the ordinary needs of the general reader, while it will be of great value to those interested in amateur theatricals, little theatres and community entertainments, and also for professional actors."

+ N Y Times p21 F 26 '28 250w

St Louis 26:276 S '28

Sat R of Lit 4:674 Mr 10 '28 20w

"The materials available in every age and country are listed, and modern substitutes suggested. But the book is too practical a textbook to be entertaining and the sadly wooden little drawings lack life and imagination." Frances Park

— + Theatre Arts Mo 12:371 My '28 430w

Wis Lib Bul 24:84 Mr '28

CHAMBERLAIN, GEORGE AGNEW. Stranger at the feast. 352p $2 (7s 6d) Putnam 28-8408

Returning to Paris after nine years' isolation in Africa, Cornell Tappen plunges into an exciting friendship with a woman reticent about her past. They fall in love. She tells him then of a war marriage, the disappearance of her lover, and the birth of a daughter. Tappen proposes to pose as the missing man and "remarry" Paula. They carry out the plan and are happily installed in the country with Paula's parents and her daughter when the lost "husband" is found.

"If his central situation rather strains one's faith for the moment, most of his readers can set all right in less than that time with the classical gesture of suspending their unbelief in the interests of swift, go-getter romance."

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p14 Ag 19 '28 130w

"To the jaded reader, longing for a book full of suspense, action and above all naturalness, 'The Stranger at the Feast' appears like an oasis in a desert."

+ Boston Transcript p5 Je 9 '28 100w

"It is an interesting situation and makes very entertaining and anything but heavy reading. The only criticism is that all the characters except one are much too nice."

+ Ind 120:509 My 26 '28 80w

"An improbable, but by no means unentertaining, after-the-war story . . . is ingenious and well told."

+ N Y Times p16 Ap 15 '28 430w

"Mr. Chamberlain tells his story vigorously and with delicacy; his characters are as a rule convincing. Only once or twice the coincidences are just a little overdone."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p337 My 3 '28 110w

CHAMBERLAIN, GEORGE AGNEW. The taken child. 374p $2 (7s 6d) Putnam 28-23101

A small boy escapes from an orphanage in Birmingham in a truckload of hay destined for a circus. Captain Bill admires his pluck and gives Harry a job. But at Trenton the boy is picked up again by the authorities and is this time adopted by John Galloway, a bluff and kindly horse-trainer, and his wife. They bring him up to the life of the race tracks and Harry loves it. He also loves Doris Kent, daughter of the owner of the horses he rides, but before he can marry her an unsuspected mystery concerning his birth must be solved.

"The homeliness of straw and farm lands, the healthiness and exhilaration of sleek-muscled horse bodies leaning to the sureness of expert hands, and among the people, gruff, unspoken loyalty and affection form the simple, direct and appealing atmosphere of the story. It is decidedly refreshing."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p19 O 28 '28 200w

"It is really a delightful book. . . All these interesting people stand out against a fascinating background, the travelling show, and the race track, which have always had a lure of their own. The book comes as a welcome interlude among the many novels of mystery and crime, of adventure and of sex, with which the shelves of the bookshops and the libraries are crowded." G. B.

+ Boston Transcript p6 O 27 '28 500w

"The tale of Harry's birth is woven by means of a series of palpable fabrications and farfetched coincidences. The rest of the book, however, is written more convincingly, the narrative proceeds interestingly upon the whole, the atmosphere of the traveling show and of the race courses is depicted with apparent fidelity, and the characters have at least as much reality as one finds in the average novel."

+ — N Y Times p7 N 18 '28 450w

"Day dreamers and folks who believe in fairies will find 'The Taken Child' very pleasing to the palate."

N Y World p9e O 28 '28 100w

Sat R of Lit 5:493 D 8 '28 170w

CHAMBERLIN, CLARENCE DUNCAN. Record flights. 286p $2.50 Dorrance

629.13 Aeronautics—Voyages 28-7061

"A dealer in motorcycles and automobiles, a student of aviation in an army training camp, a barnstorming aviator, a flying photographer and a test pilot—such is the summary of Chamberlin's activities before he was selected to pilot the 'Columbia' on the two flights which set records for duration and distance. Chamberlin's account of his relations with Charles A Levine, his companion on the transatlantic flight to Germany, is candid and dispassionate."—N Y Evening Post

---

Booklist 24:388 Jl '28

"Allen went to Germany and was with Chamberlin and Levine during their sojourn there after their flight and his hand is visible in that part of the book. But the great bulk of the book is true Chamberlin. It is one of the most easily told, frankest, personal narratives at present on the retail bookshelves of the nation." D. R.

+ Boston Transcript p11 Mr 31 '28 1200w

Ind 120:606 Je 23 '28 160w

"With the aid of a collaborator, Mr. C. B. Allen, he tells his story simply, unaffectedly and humorously. From internal evidence, one would say that the greatest part of the text is in the flyer's own words." R. C. B. Brown

+ N Y Evening Post p12 Ap 21 '28 320w

Reviewed by Russell Owen

N Y Times p5 Mr 11 '28 1100w

"Pleasing for its author's extreme modesty and for what he has to say about the future of flying, as well as for his account of the famous flight with Charles Levine to Germany."

+ No Am 225:adv My '28 50w

"It seems the most detailed and intimate story of a flight yet written. You learn the things you have wanted to know, both human and thrilling." Leon Whipple

+ Survey 60:397 Jl 1 '28 300w

CHAMBERS, ROBERT WILLIAM. Rogue's moon. 275p $2 Appleton

28-19239

Thruout these true and lusty tales of piratical adventure runs the love story of Nancy Topsfield, tap-boy at the villainous Lost Sail Tavern where her sex goes undiscovered, and Jack Ross, younger son of a fine English family who is turned from piracy by this same Nancy, and joins the king's men in their fight to drive the cutthroats from colonial waters.

"A grand upstanding tale of desperate sea wolves and love as ever was, by a very connoisseur of pirates and piracy." Will Cuppy

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 Ag 26 '28 140w

"If one of the lofty organizations that distribute annual bay leaves among novels decided to anoint the year's easiest novel to read, this ought to be the winner."

+ N Y Times p7 Ag 19 '28 520w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 35:545 N '28

"The story as a whole is so violent and puerile a concoction that it seems to be suitable diversion for imaginative adolescence rather than for its elders."

— Sat R of Lit 5:252 O 13 '28 170w

Wis Lib Bul 24:306 N '28

CHAMBERS, ROBERT WILLIAM. Sun Hawk. 342p $2 Appleton [7s 6d Cassell]

Frontenac, Louis de Buade, comte de—Fiction 28-9649

Frontenac is the real hero of this tale of the New France in Canada, in which the youthful Richard Stanhope, natural son of Prince Rupert of England, recounts his adventures in love and war in the new country which becomes his own.

Booklist 24:402 Jl '28

Reviewed by F: H. Martens

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p23 My 6 '28 600w

"Rarely has Mr. Chambers given a more brilliant picture or one more surely drawn than this of an era of kaleidoscopic colors. A love story is it of the intense kind Mr. Chambers stamps with his own seal. But a true historical romance whose background is authentic history." F. B.

+ Boston Transcript p2 Ap 25 '28 820w

Cleveland Open Shelf p105 S '28

"It is exciting to follow up the war trail with his forest runners; his pages are filled with the magnificent French and Indian names. He has also given a lively picture of Frontenac, the Sun-Hawk, both on the domestic and heroic side. Admirers of the Chambers-Sabatini school of historical fiction will enjoy this book."

+ Nation and Ath 43:598 Ag 4 '28 200w

"A little flamboyant in manner, the novel is nevertheless one of the best Mr. Chambers has written."

+ New Statesman 31:678 S 8 '28 100w

N Y Times p9 Ap 22 '28 720w

"He is not the writer he was, and his story is tedious."

— Outlook 149:72 My 9 '28 70w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:320 Je '28

"This is a lively and vivid narrative; the solid research the novelist has performed enriches it, the poet in him make it glow with romance."

+ Sat R of Lit 5:41 Ag 11 '28 250w

Reviewed by R. A. Taylor

Spec 141:110 Jl 21 '28 100w

Times [London] Lit Sup p606 Ag 23 '28 110w

CHAMPION, FREDERICK WALTER. With a camera in Tiger-land. 226p il $5 Doubleday, Doran [30s Chatto & W.]

599 Zoology—India. Photography of animals. Tigers 28-11573

An officer in the Imperial forest service of India who is also a keen naturalist and an animal photographer has produced this book of studies and photographs of tigers, elephants and smaller wild game of the jungles of upper India. There are more scientific data here than in Martin Johnson's Safari, and the photographs are more varied.

Booklist 24:391 Jl '28
Bookm 67:460 Je '28 80w

"The magnificent photographs of wild animals in their native surroundings which adorn this volume would in themselves, be sufficient justification for its existence. But the text is often as exciting as the photographs and Mr. Champion has a love of nature and the jungle which gives to his pages a charming quality of enthusiasm and freshness." R: Curle

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p8 Jl 29 '28 420w

"A study of rare scientific as well as illustrative value." F. B.

+ Boston Transcript p3 Ap 25 '28 550w
Cleveland Open Shelf p133 D '28

"His book is really interesting and the animal photographs are as fine as any which have been published. It is a book for everybody."

+ New Statesman 30:334 D 17 '27 100w

"A noticeable feature of his text is his extreme and quite unaffected modesty. Much of it is straight-field zoology, with some account of his own adventures; he makes them very readable." H. E. D.

+ N Y Evening Post p15 Ap 14 '28 120w

"Throughout the material is well-arranged, scientific in tone, and should evoke an especially eager response from those lovers of animal life who object to the death toll involved in ordinary big game hunting." Halsey Raines

+ N Y Times p11 My 20 '28 800w

"Doubleday, Doran & Co. is to be congratulated upon book and author: seventy-three illustrations, and most of them of jungle creatures, a theme that is new, a story told with freshness and enthusiasm, a fine binding, a price that is reasonable; these make a handsome combination." C: J. Finger

+ N Y World p10m Ap 22 '28 280w
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:479 O '28

"Among the seventy-three plates which are here reproduced we find elephants and bears, monkeys and leopards, porcupines and kingfishers, all represented in the natural conditions of the wild. Mr. Champion writes in a simple and charming fashion, and his book is a worthy record of the jungle which he evidently loves almost as well as he knows it. No more amazing record of the kind has come to our notice."

+ Sat R 145:17 Ja 7 '28 450w

"Redoubtable photographer and most charming author. As a last word we can say, without fear of exaggeration, or even of dissent on the part of anyone who knows India, that this is the best book on the jungle since Kim." F. Y.-B.

+ Spec 139:sup821 N 12 '27 1100w

"His photographs are not only exceptionally clear but represent animals going about their jungle business undisturbed. One of them, of a jungle cat in a tree, identifies fiction once more with truth—pose and smile and disappearing outline, it is the Cheshire cat."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p858 N 24 '27 850w

CHANCELLOR, JOHN. Dark god. 291p $2 Century [7s 6d Hutchinson]

28-10871

Mrs Dace, an eccentric and wealthy old lady, is killed in her sleep. Suspicion attaches to the suitor of the old lady's niece and heiress. He clears himself of incriminating circumstances, however, and by devious ways Clawson of Scotland Yard discovers the real criminal.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 My 6 '28 80w

"The detective, Mr. Clawson, is reasonable rather than super-normally intuitive. The clues are reasonable too, and, after an impressive opening are designed to clarify, not to confuse. The real interest of the story depends upon the numerous thrills which in turn are due to a cleverly developed atmosphere of supernaturalism. In one or two places the story becomes really vigorous. The style is like the characters, commonplace but satisfactory."

+ Boston Transcript p4 My 19 '28 80w

"The weak point in the story is that the crime has been too elaborately planned. The perpetrator could have accomplished his main purpose much more easily and with infinitely less danger to himself. Notwithstanding this 'The Dark God' is an absorbing yarn."

+ — N Y Times p17 Je 10 '28 220w

"We rather liked the inspector and his methods, but we hope the next criminal he pursues will dispense with Hallowe'en tricks." W. R. Brooks

+ — Outlook 149:35 My 2 '28 90w

"In this story the villains are an unusual and interesting pair and in Clawson we have a human and attractive detective."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p626 S 15 '27 90w
Wis Lib Bul 24:307 N '28

CHAPMAN, MRS MARISTAN. Happy mountain. 313p $2.50 Viking press

28-19621

There is a species of enchantment about this simple story which gives it a fairy-tale quality. It describes in the vernacular of the Tennessee hill-folk the going forth of Wait-Still-on-the-Lord Lowe to "far 'n' beyond" where cities are and books, where "outsiders" think and do new things. Waits's mother and Dena, his girl, wait with feigned patience till he comes "full circle" to tell the story of his wandering and to settle an old score.

For biographical sketch of Maristan Chapman see Wilson Bulletin 3:324 N '28

Booklist 25:28 O '28

"Although the story makes no very great demand on the emotions, it has a quality of clarity and restraint, an unspoiled charm, which justifies its selection by the Literary Guild." E. H. Walton

+ Bookm 68:98 S '28 150w

"A dewy idyll of mountain life, fit to restore our faith in the classical canon of Romanticism, that to be rustic is to approach perfection... The style of the book deserves comment. Many familiar mountain words and phrases I recognized with delight, but sometimes the conversation seemed crowded to exaggeration with localisms. This effect may have been intensified by Mrs. Chapman's incorporation in her own narrative style of the archaic idiom of her characters. In that idiom many echoes may be heard. Its legacy from the king James's Bible is well known, and Mrs. Chapman adds the Iliad to the background of her hero." Garreta Busey

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p3 Ag 12 '28 1300w

"It is a simple story, but beautiful in its simplicity and naivete. Rich in the idiom of the language of the mountains, and fragrant with pungent native wit, it contains lovable anecdotes and more lovable characters."

+ Boston Transcript p7 S 8 '28 280w

"One feels the mountaineers saying 'How Shakespearean I speak and how odd I am.'"
Dial 85:441 N '28 70w

"'The Happy Mountain' is spun of poetic simplicities which are pointed by the mountain idiom, and brought to life by mountain philosophy. The weakness of the tale is the overemphasis on the poetic, the overemphasis on the suggestion of the metaphysical."

+ — Ind 121:189 Ag 25 '28 160w

Reviewed by C. P. Fadiman

Nation 127:248 S 12 '28 1050w

New Repub 56:80 S 5 '28 180w

" 'The happy mountain' through sheer seasonal lack of competition, stands a good chance of being overrated. The prettiness may be hailed as beauty, its slight significance accorded profundity. Actually, most stress should be laid upon the author's skill with language and her ability to turn out a finished and readable book." Tess Slesinger

+ — N Y Evening Post p5 Ag 4 '28 800w

"Miss Chapman knows her mountain folk and loves them, and her novel is sympathetic and often charming. She is not the first to venture into the Southern mountains for her material by any means, but she promises to be one of the best." Herschel Brickell

+ No Am 226:adv S '28 90w

" 'The Happy Mountain' is such a good piece of work that it challenges the reader to find out why it isn't better still. A story of the Tennessee Mountains, it is written, both in and out of the quotes, in a sturdy and expressive mountain dialect. Although we ourselves dislike dialect, we reiterate the words, sturdy and expressive. Mrs. Chapman's skillful use of this mountain language is one of the great charms of her book and even reconciled us to the necessary glossary at the end. But this very charm has proved the most unmanageable thing about the work. The clean, bright-colored words, and the consequent startling 'presentness' of everything they describe, has interfered with the proportion of the book as a whole." Harriet Hastings

+ — Outlook 150:794 S 12 '28 350w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:546 N '28

Pratt p43 autumn '28

"Mrs. Chapman's work displays an original style. She has taken the mountain-talk for her own, and woven its odd words, some of them seventeenth century English, some of them Scotch, and some 'homemade,' into her writing, giving it a peculiar quality. Added to the use of these unusual words, there lingers through the writing an unmistakable flavor of King James Version and balladry, which goes even further to give it complete individuality and to make it fascinating per se." Herschel Brickell

+ Sat R of Lit 5:20 Ag 4 '28 650w

Springf'd Republican p7e D 23 '28 300w

Wis Lib Bul 24:305 N '28

CHAPOT, VICTOR. Roman world; [tr. by E. A. Parker]. (Hist. of civilization) 444p $6.50 Knopf [16s K. Paul]

937 Civilization, Roman. Rome—History

28-16567

The volume is divided into three parts: The expansion of Rome, which is a sketchy review of Rome's territorial expansion outside of Italy; The machinery of provincial government, explaining Rome's manner of governing her colonies; and Life in the provinces, which surveys the cultural and economic conditions of the empire. The last section takes the colonies in turn: Italy, Sicily, Corsica and Sardinia, Spain, Greece in Europe, Asia Minor, Syria, Palestine and the Eastern frontier, Egypt, the Gauls and the frontier of Germany, Britain, the Danubian regions, and the Latin provinces of Africa, and gives in each case an analysis of the life, history and culture of the colony.

Reviewed by Van Wyck Brooks

Ind 121:140 Ag 11 '28 1100w

"Professor Chapot's work on the Provinces is admirable in detail and arrangement and uses skilfully the new sources available since Mommsen. The maps are excellent and the references to learned sources numerous."

+ New Statesman 31:740 S 22 '28 350w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:498 O '28

"It is Chapot's first essay in popularization and will perhaps make stiff reading for Americans accustomed to diluted and dramatized history. But it is sound, intelligently proportioned, and well-written." Tenney Frank

+ Sat R of Lit 5:56 Ag 18 '28 400w

"This is the fullest account of the Empire which has appeared in English since the translation of Mommsen's two volumes on the provinces, nearly fifty years ago. It is enriched by the discoveries that have been made in the meantime, and its excellent bibliography brings the sources up to date."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p613 Ag 30 '28 700w

CHAPPLE, JOSEPH MITCHELL. To Bagdad and back. 298p il $6 Century

915.6 Levant—Description and travel. Bagdad—Description. Egypt—Description and travel. Arabia—Description and travel. Syria—Description and travel 28-12174

This travel narrative of a sixteen-thousand mile journey to Bagdad, Palestine, Egypt and back, is written in easy style, is full of information and incident, and is illustrated from photographs and drawings, many of the latter in color. The author is editor of the National magazine.

"Mr. Chapple visited not only Bagdad, but paid proper tribute to Egypt and the Holy Land. He collected much information, which he imparts in readable fashion, and many photographs, which are sprinkled through the text."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 Je 24 '28 170w

Boston Transcript p2 Je 13 '28 600w

"We can never understand why 'travel' books of this kind are published, unless it be for the photographs, which are good, as in this case."

— + Times [London] Lit Sup p1015 D 20 '28 260w

CHARNWOOD, GODFREY RATHBONE BENSON, 1st baron. Tracks in the snow. 284p $2 Dial press [7s 6d Benn]

28-2383

The rector of Long Wilton tells the story of the murder of his friend Peters by some unidentified member of the household which comprised at the time, besides the servants, two friends who were visiting Peters, and a third who, tho he had access to the house at all times, was actually staying at the village inn. One of the few clues discovered are the tracks in the snow which turn out to be no clue at all. After one false guess the rector comes to a fresh conclusion about the crime and proves himself right.

Booklist 24:322 My '28

" 'Tracks in the Snow' is all wool and two yards wide by virtue of the sense of reality it imparts." Will Cuppy

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 F 5 '28 120w

"It is possible that Lord Charnwood was writing to amuse himself fully as much as to amuse his readers. At any rate he has produced a detective story which does not seem to be either real or fantastic. He has wasted good material."

— + Boston Transcript p2 Mr 7 '28 220w

Cleveland Open Shelf p68 My '28

"Distinguished by clear simple writing; by a murder which is really mysterious; and by the presence of three or four possible criminals, one of whom, at least, is studied as a character. The blemish is in the irruption of an old story

CHARNWOOD, G. R. B.—Continued
from the Antipodes; but it is not a bad old story; and the mechanism of the final pages is excellent."
+ Dial 84:522 Je '28 50w

"Efficiency and fine clarity of style give his story real distinction."
+ Nation and Ath 41:715 S 3 '27 120w
N Y Times p16 F 5 '28 500w
N Y World p11m Mr 18 '28 180w

"Perhaps the last person from whom such a book as 'Tracks in the Snow' might be expected is Lord Charnwood. But here it is, and, moreover, it is a good one; perhaps not so thrilling as some, but certainly much better written than most, and telling a story of sufficient complexity to satisfy even the exacting taste of the mystery-novel addict, who craves action and suspense and is little concerned with literary craftsmanship or the niceties of style and phraseology." Herbert Asbury
+ Outlook 148:674 Ap 25 '28 550w
Pratt p36 spring '28

" 'Tracks in the Snow' opens excellently; and to the end we enjoy Lord Charnwood's graceful, leisurely style, his endeavour to furnish the detective-story with the whole armour of the novelist's art." L. P. Hartley
+ Sat R 144:172 Jl 30 '27 100w

"The uncommon distinction of the book lies in its incidental scenes of country life, its portraiture, its strong literary style, and the charm with which Lord Charnwood has invested the Rector's own personality."
+ Spec 139:227 Ag 6 '27 160w
Times [London] Lit Sup p594 S 1 '27 220w

CHASE, CLEVELAND BRUCE. Sherwood Anderson. (Modern Am. writers) 84p $1 McBride

B or 92 Anderson, Sherwood 27-24407

A brief critical biography which in 84 pages sketches the life of the novelist and discusses each one of his books.

"There is no space here to elaborate Mr. Chase's clear, serene argument. It is enough to say that he does not leave one of Mr. Anderson's weaknesses untouched. . . After a process of rejection which is probably over-kind Mr. Chase is forced to conclude that 'Winesburg, Ohio' is the only one of Mr. Anderson's books which can definitely be called a contribution to American literature." C. P. Fadiman
+ Nation 126:189 F 15 '28 300w

Reviewed by R. P. Warren
New Repub 54:sup400 My 16 '28 300w

"If Mr. Chase has not completely fulfilled the critical function, he has at least made a number of acute and pertinent observations, and presented a plausible synthesis of Sherwood Anderson's work to date."
+ — N Y Times p2 F 19 '28 1100w

Reviewed by D: Karsner
N Y World p11m Mr 4 '28 580w
Pratt p26 spring '28

"In a critical biography one hopes to find spirited enthusiasm balanced by intelligent appreciation of failings as well as virtues; one expects pervasive sympathy accompanied by intellectual integrity; and one absolutely demands thorough comprehension. Mr. Chase's book shows little of these qualities and is flagrantly lacking in the most essential of them. In fact, as one reads this study of Sherwood Anderson the wonder grows as to what could have possibly prompted Mr. Chase to undertake so painful a task as this work seems to have been for him. Within the brief space of eighty-four small pages he reiterates at least thirty times the same vague praise and the same scornful strictures, hoping perhaps to attain by repetition the conviction inherent in a straight-forward statement, but achieving merely a tiresome redundancy." Johan Smertenko
— Sat R of Lit 4:632 F 25 '28 730w

CHASE, ELEANOR. Pennagan Place. 336p $2.50 Sears

Old Giles Pennagan is the genius of Pennagan Place. The hearty, wicked old convivial is the terror and the secret admiration of his family which is gathered unto the third generation under his roof. The story pictures them all, with their family likenesses and individual differences, and centers on the love affair of Giles's grand-daughter Curtis, in which the patriarch interferes when another granddaughter makes trouble.

"Not since we were introduced to the Sanger circus have we been thrown in quite so tumultuous and individualistic a family. 'Pennagan Place' has a riotous pace and a wealth of characterization which make it outstanding among recent fiction. The portrait of old Giles, sturdy drinker and sarcastic commentator on the women of his family, is a rare piece of work, and there are half a dozen other figures done with equal vigor. Miss Chase has produced a work of fiction which is continuously exciting; there is evidence here of a talent which must be reckoned with."
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p24 D 9 '28 300w

"The portraiture though not always persuasive is very vivid; the dialogue though a little bookish and English, flows gracefully and freely; and there is an abundance of event and material. If 'Pennagan Place' seems at times only the facile work of a very talented girl, there are also times when it seems rather more; and one hazards the guess that the appearance of Miss Chase's third or fourth, or possibly even her second novel, will be a considerable event." J. F. S.
Boston Transcript p5 D 1 '28 850w

"There are no dull pages to skip. The only fault to be found is that Miss Chase, with so much vastly entertaining material at her disposal, did not make the book longer." M. E. U.
+ New Repub 57:51 N 28 '28 100w

"The zest which keeps the story continually entertaining yields too often, perhaps, to the indulgence of farce, but it is a farce sufficiently varied. The book will appeal especially to those who liked 'Jalna.' " H. S.
+ N Y Evening Post p9m D 29 '28 220w

" 'Pennagan Place' is the product of a lively wit and an almost too vigorous invention. There is material in it which might have furnished a half-dozen novels without dangerous dilution. Its mere excess of energy is an asset, however, when the matter of the narrative is so uniformly enjoyable in character."
+ N Y Times p22 N 11 '28 450w

CHATTERTON, EDWARD KEBLE. Old ship prints. 182p il $15 Dodd [£5 5s Lane]

769 Naval prints. Ships [28-10944]

" 'Herein will be found prints of every kind of sailing ship which the engravers of the past sought to illustrate,' says the author of this volume. 'Galleys, carracks, merchantmen and men of war, clippers, fore and afters, yachts, all are presented as they appeared to contemporary masters.' There are fifteen illustrations in color and ninety-five in black and white—from the famous Macpherson collection in England—reaching from Erhard Reuwich's drawing of a pilgrim galley at Rhodes in 1483 to a photograph of the Defender beating the Valkyrie III in the America's Cup races in 1895."—Books (N Y Herald Tribune)

"Among the earliest and most fascinating prints are the maps and illustrations of Theodore de Bry, 'one of the most skillful line engravers of the whole sixteenth century.' De Bry not only graved the ships of his time with accuracy of detail but had a brave fancy which filled his drawings with vitality and narrative power."
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 F 19 '28 180w

"The subject is one which needs and amply repays the lavish illustrations with which Mr. Chatterton, drawing upon the great resources of the famous Macpherson Collection has been able to provide it. But his text might have been better. It hovers uncertainly between giving the reader a history of ship prints, which it does reasonably well, and telling the history of ships and seafaring in its human significance, at which it makes a far less satisfactory showing."

+ — New Statesman 30:86 O 29 '27 520w

"It would be difficult to name a better informed commentator upon sea history as revealed in these prints than Mr. Chatterton. It is a happy circumstance that one so well versed in sea lore should combine with it a knowledge of the many processes of pictorial representation, and be able to comment upon ship prints from both points of view." D: W. Bone

+ Sat R of Lit 4:859 My 12 '28 980w

"We need not emphasize Mr. Chatterton's qualifications as an author, nor the charm of his subject. The text is as good as the illustrations."

+ Spec 139:932 N 26 '27 100w

"Though Mr. Chatterton does not allow himself to be as trustworthy a guide as he might be, we can forgive him much for his genuine enjoyment of his subject and for his knack of hitting on rare pictures. Even those familiar with sea-prints will find something new here."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p779 N 3 '27 880w

CHATTERTON, EDWARD KEBLE. Ventures and voyages. 218p il $3 (10s 6d) Longmans

910.4 Voyages and travels 28-6185

True stories of adventures on the sea from pioneer voyages of the sixteenth and seventeenth century to submarine activities during the World war.

New Statesman 31:234 My 26 '28 210w

"He does not indulge in purple patches, or try to embroider with rhetoric incidents that are impressive enough in themselves, or show skill in eloquent description. On the contrary, his style is quiet, restrained, in good taste; but his narrative flows along easily, while the stories that he tells are in themselves so full of color and action that they become much more interesting by the very fact of being presented so simply and straightforwardly."

+ N Y Times p15 Jl 15 '28 360w

"This is the kind of workmanlike book which we may expect from Mr. Chatterton, written with the enthusiasm which he always brings to his chosen subject. He has taken a series of authentic sea-adventures and re-told them in a racy and exhilarating fashion."

+ Sat R 145:740 Je 9 '28 60w

Spec 141:105 Jl 21 '28 220w

CHEKE, MARCUS. Papillée. 160p $1.75 Morrow [5s Faber & G.]

[28-4883]

" 'Papillée' is a fantastic story about a ballet dancer, old, legless (she lost her legs in a parachute descent into a public gardens of Weimar), who lives in post-Revolution Paris in great luxury, and by the beauty of her voice and the skill of her tongue can still captivate men."—Nation and Ath

---

"All in all, Mr. Cheke's intention of amusing one mightily is only partially realized. One is reminded by his book of certain elaborate costume balls, to which come people who have put so much energy, so much wit, into the designing of the costumes they wear that they find themselves, arrived at the ball, with nothing to say except that such and such a stock has risen three points." F. E. Larsson

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p33 Ap 15 '28 600w

"Mr. Cheke's little book fits exactly into the category of those designated as 'gift volumes.' It ought utterly to charm almost anyone except the most obdurate of matter-of-fact people who have not yet discovered the arts." G. K.

+ Boston Transcript p7 Ap 7 '28 380w

"Most of the incidents are quaint or impossible; the style is elaborately archaic, and the atmosphere eighteenth century. Nevertheless, the book is original, genuine, and delightful, and in places of great beauty. For certain tricks of style Mr. Cheke is indebted to writers of over a century ago; but his invention, and the strange and arresting atmosphere which suffuses his record of adventures in themselves trivial, are his own, reminding one only distantly of E. T. A. Hoffman here, or there of Aubrey Beardsley." Edwin Muir

+ — Nation and Ath 41:19 Ap 9 '27 250w

"It combines the improbable with the characteristic in those proportions which literary fantasy demands. Of course, style must give you pleasure, and, though duly precious, Mr. Cheke's style is never obtrusive. The narrator himself has perfect manners, and he has an eye for the bad manners of the short extravagant period he describes."

+ New Statesman 28:635 Mr 5 '27 300w

"This delightful little tale, wittily, subtly, madly exaggerated, with lurid verve and brilliance, makes real impossible people and situations." F. H. M.

+ N Y Evening Post p12 Mr 24 '28 120w

N Y Times p16 F 26 '28 400w

"The headdresses, costumes, and appurtenances of the period are described with a delight in the preposterous. The little book is brilliant with color and its plot an excellent travesty. The style is in keeping with the period, save for several odd grammatical lapses. On the whole this is a most engaging trifle, delicate amusement for an idle hour—an absurd state of society depicted with the richest appreciation. We hope for more books from Mr. Cheke; he is an excellent author for the light-minded."

+ Sat R of Lit 4:671 Mr 10 '28 200w

"A remarkably fresh, picturesque, and piquant account of life in Paris in the fourth year of the Republic. The colour is perhaps overloaded, but is essentially convincing, and the author combines a modern economy of technique with a delightfully old-world flavour in his writing."

+ — Spec 138:567 Mr 26 '27 80w

"This extravaganza affords a picture of Paris taking a breath after years of stress but is not particularly convincing."

Springf'd Republican p7f Je 17 '28 250w

"Neither Georges, Papillée's granddaughter, nor Robin Arlington, the young English gentleman who loves Georges and goes through weird adventures to win her, nor any other of the figures particularly moves us. They caper rather as in Oscar Wilde's tales, though Mr. Cheke's embellishments are too gaudy to bear out the comparison."

— Times [London] Lit Sup p281 Ap 21 '27 150w

CHENEY, SHELDON WARREN. Stage decoration. 138p il $10 Day [42s Chapman & H.]

792 Theaters—Stage setting and scenery 28-5580

The essays that form the first part of the book place the art of stage decoration in historical perspective, and indicate the rise and direction of modern tendencies. The second half of the book consists of more than one hundred plates illustrating the development of stage forms and decoration from their beginnings to the twentieth century.

Booklist 24:314 My '28

"The plates are well selected. With its parallel text and illustrations, it is a valuable hand-book for the layman who wishes to understand something of the history of the stage,

CHENEY, S. W.—Continued
as well as of what the moderns are trying to do with stage decoration." Axton Clark
+ Bookm 67:581 Jl '28 130w

"Clear and scholarly historical survey, thoughtful comments and sound conclusions." Claude Bragdon
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p1 My 6 '28 1350w

Cleveland Open Shelf p101 S '28

"Mr. Cheney's handsomely printed volume is perhaps the most comprehensive and informing conspectus which we have of the history of the mise en scène with special reference to recent events." J. W. Krutch
+ Nation 126:296 Mr 14 '28 850w

"His treatment is generous, enthusiastic and steady. He has no violent inclination of his own to advance or make a noise about, and yet he has at the same time a peculiar gift of warm and contagious response to whatever has power and sincerity within it. As you read, you sense the degree to which the spirit behind an idea or style was alive and essential; and you know what has been at bottom trivial and subversive in the theater, however engaging, ecstatic, brave, sumptuous or startling it may have been." Stark Young
+ New Repub 54:75 F 29 '28 1250w

"In this work, Mr. Cheney has become simple and lucid. All this, of course, is technical stuff and appeals principally to those whose interest in the theatre is professional or academic. As such, a useful and valuable book." L: Sherwin
+ N Y Evening Post p12 Mr 10 '28 200w

Reviewed by H. I. Brock
N Y Times p38 Mr 18 '28 620w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:403 Jl '28

Sat R 146:580 N 3 '28 500w

"Though all of his material has been treated by other authors in various books and articles, it has never been brought together with such comprehensive understanding. The book is made doubly valuable by Mr. Cheney's fine selection of illustrations with excellent captions that present a vivid pictorial growth of the theatre from the Greeks, and a fine record of modern stage decoration in Europe and America. Such a book cannot fail to appeal to all who are theatre-conscious."
+ Sat R of Lit 4:802 Ap 21 '28 250w

"Stage Decoration is obviously indispensable for the student of theatre design or for the architect of the theatre who desires to build in modern terms. It will be found equally useful to the regisseur, the playwright and the actor who want to understand the bounds and the freedoms of stage art." F: Morton
+ Theatre Arts Mo 12:302 Ap '28 550w

CHER, MARIE, pseud. (MARIE SCHERR). Door unlatched. 241p $2 Minton [7s 6d Howe] 28-10877

Being an account of the extraordinary obsession of Roger Darrington, student of the French revolution, tutor to little Fan and friend of her mother, Evelyn. Thru a strange door of his mind Roger enters the life and experiences of one Raoul of Revolutionary days. He confuses Evelyn and Fan with two similar figures in Raoul's life. Becoming hopelessly enmeshed in these two existences, Roger finds a way to close the door permanently on one of them.

"It is seldom there appears an unheralded story as well conceived and told as The Unlatched Door. The story is pleasantly written, a happy variation on the usual first novel."
+ Bookm 67:xl Mr '28 180w

"Fine metaphysical implications are woven into the texture of the prose; they are not propounded as a crass theory of reincarnation, but interfused in the emotional relations of Roger, Evelyn and Fan. . . Making no effort at sensational effect, this slight novel has great charm, a lyric quality seldom met with in contemporary fiction; it belongs by right under the head of belles-lettres." Isabel Paterson
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p3 F 19 '28 680w

Boston Transcript p4 Ap 7 '28 200w

"Miss Cher's novel is one of the best we have read for some time. The authoress of 'Life in Still Life' shows her hand more surely in this story than she did in that sequence of fine-spun essays. Besides bringing to her second effort the lucidity of prose and the precision of beautiful images which graced the first and, in our opinion, constituted its charm, she adds a human interest—if so fastidious a writer will forgive the phrase. Evelyn and Fan are delicately but surely drawn."
+ Nation and Ath 41:528 Jl 16 '27 230w

"This is a first novel, and an extraordinarily good one." T. S. Matthews
+ New Repub 55:314 Ag 8 '28 200w

"Miss Cher has told her story extremely well. Writing boldly and economically she has achieved both vividness and delicacy, and to some extent has color and fire. These, together with technical competence and fidelity and thoughtfulness in character portrayal, make this a novel of unusual quality."
+ N Y Times p26 F 19 '28 350w

No Am 225:adv Ap '28 80w

"This story is told with sympathy, imagination, and skill. Marie Cher writes with real distinction of style. Her prose is jeweled; the artistry of her use of sound and cadence is deliberate, but never precious. Of the incidental pleasures, she offers to her readers, the greatest, perhaps, is in her picture of Paris, full of atmosphere, very moving to a lover of that lovely city." F. C. L. R.
+ Outlook 148:398 Mr 7 '28 400w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:364 Jl '28

"Miss Cher has already won distinction for herself as an essayist. Her style is a little too ponderous and coloured and slow-moving for a novelist, and her phrases are not always happy. These blemishes apart, there is much that is interesting and profound in 'The Door Unlatched.' Miss Cher warms to her theme. It comes to life in the last chapters, and Henry James, to whom perhaps it owed its existence, would have been pleased to see it make so good an end."
— + Sat R 143:914 Je 11 '27 250w

"There are passages of real beauty in this strange book, which recalls Berkeley Square."
+ Spec 138:1028 Je 11 '27 140w

"Fan gives charm as well as a vital link to the book. Its dramatic elements do not get enough room, but in its creation of atmosphere and its sense of personal relations it is a delicately expressive piece of work."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p438 Je 23 '27 360w

CHESSER, MRS ELIZABETH MACFARLANE (SLOAN). Youth; a book for two generations; with an introd. by Angelo Patri. 112p $1 Dutton [2s 6d Methuen]

173 Youth. Adolescence 28-23962

A clear and succinct statement of the case of the youth of today, by a Harley Street doctor. The author combines a knowledge of medicine with sensible views on psychology and psychoanalysis, and treats the subject under the headings: Youth in rebellion; Conflict between the generations; Problems of education; Health in adolescence; When youth is unhappy; Food and adolescence; Self-expression; Love and marriage; The hygiene of marriage and birth control; Young mothers of today.

Sat R 145:532 Ap 28 '28 130w

"Above all, this is a book for young women, for it should do much to prepare the mothers of the future for the civic and political responsibilities they are about to accept."
Spec 140:506 Mr 31 '28 520w

Survey 61:247 N 15 '28 80w

CHESTERTON, GILBERT KEITH. Judgment of Dr Johnson; a comedy in three acts; foreword by C. C. Martindale. (Reader's theatre) 121p $1.50 Putnam [2s 6d Sheed & Ward]

822 Johnson, Samuel—Drama 28-3408

John Swift of Virginia, revolutionist and theorist, goes to London with Mary his wife to spread propaganda for the American revolution. Dr Johnson grows fond of the young wife, and when Swift's theories threaten to dissolve the marriage, Dr Johnson intercedes and persuades the couple to return to America, together.

Reviewed by W. P. Eaton
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p4 F 19 '28 280w

"Witty and delightful little play."
+ Spec 139:1020 D 3 '27 280w

"Underneath the amusement of the play there is a continued current of stimulating thought, and it is one of Mr. Chesterton's triumphs that the subjects of this thought are of considerable contemporary interest, without being anachronistic in the 18th century background of the play." H. K.
+ Springf'd Republican p7f Ap 8 '28 900w

"The play might hang heavily in the theatre, but its boldness and sincerity make it attractive to read, and certainly, as Father Martindale says, it leaves you with an impression of 'having mixed in a world that troubled to talk good English.' "
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p29 Ja 12 '28 260w

CHESTERTON, GILBERT KEITH. Robert Louis Stevenson. 211p $2 Dodd [6s Hodder & S.]

B or 92 Stevenson, Robert Louis 28-6224

Mr Chesterton believes that too much has been written about Stevenson the man and not enough about his work, that the outline of his life "has cut across and confused the very sharp and lucid outline of his art." This little book is therefore a study of Stevenson's books, with illustrations from his life.

Booklist 24:361 Je '28

Reviewed by S. A. Coblentz
Bookm 67:314 My '28 550w

"This is a curious, uneasy book; a sort of negative of a negative. . . Mr. Chesterton, who could have punctured the Stevenson legend better than anybody else (if he had set himself to do so), has apparently been reading all the reactionary critics, from Mr. E. F. Benson to some unnamed writer in 'The London Mercury,' and he has come to the conclusion that reaction has gone far enough. Bravely, he has essayed the extremely difficult task of putting the stuffing back into a body after it has been extracted by these others. This is an almost superhuman job, much more exacting than the one he generally undertakes, and it has been too much for him." Frank Swinnerton
— Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p7 Ap 1 '28 1000w

Reviewed by E. F. Edgett
Boston Transcript p3 F 18 '28 1850w

"As a whole, Mr. Chesterton's book on Stevenson is sound and sensible, far more so than might have been expected. Sometimes, it would seem that those who are the most unlike in literature are the best able to judge each other. Certainly Chesterton knows his Stevenson, and certainly we may profit by reading his biographical study." E. F. Edgett
+ Boston Transcript p5 Mr 24 '28 800w

Dial 84:526 Je '28 100w

Living Age 334:277 F 1 '28 800w

"In this diffuse, dissipated, but not at all stupid book Mr. Chesterton wastes a good deal of time. He is concerned in part with attacking misconceptions which we had not heard of and in which we are not interested; and in the process supplies some new misconceptions of his own. . . He has much sound appreciation and defence of Stevenson's style; this part of the book is concise and to the point. And when he stops to expound a Roman Catholic point of view towards 'Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde' he is extremely interesting. How illuminating his observation that though this story is nominally set in London, it is really taking place in Edinburgh! And, in any case, Stevenson is an author well enough established to survive Mr. Chesterton's approval." T. S. Eliot
— + Nation and Ath 42:516 D 31 '27 850w

Reviewed by Conrad Aiken
New Repub 54:sup169 Mr 21 '28 880w

Reviewed by H. E. Dounce
N Y Evening Post p12 Mr 3 '28 1000w

"It is not a biography he has written, in the sense commonly understood, no matter what impression the publishers may attempt to convey. Chesterton tells in his individual way what constitutes the message, the moral of Stevenson, from what and to what he escaped, the large sense in which he expressed a reaction to the spirit of his age, the limitations of his craft, the significance of his style, the terms of his contract with posterity, the subconscious influences on his development as a story teller, what in the boy and youth made the man and writer, the spiritual autobiography which Stevenson unaware, wrote into his romances." Harry Salpeter
N Y World p10m Mr 4 '28 1300w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:297 My '28

Reviewed by Arnold Whitridge
Sat R of Lit 4:864 My 12 '28 880w

"This is only a little book; but that is not why one has a certain disappointment in reading it. The blithe anticipation is partly fulfilled; for the pages do gleam with sudden paradoxes of truth like swiftly unsheathed swords or unfurled flags, though not so richly as in the days when Mr. Chesterton was less doctrinaire. It is the many half-truths and the oddly unclarified impressions that may trouble even a reader whose taste for G. K. C. is almost a weakness. For this time he is not sure of his ground: the 'Keith', after all, has not made him free of Scottish soil." R. A. Taylor
— + Spec 140:21 Ja 7 '28 1050w

Times [London] Lit Sup p928 D 8 '27 350w

Wis Lib Bul 24:161 My '28

"It is a brilliant interpretation of the man and his books, seen against the background of his time, but sub specie aeternitatis." H. E. Woodbridge
+ Yale R n s 18:401 winter '29 520w

CHEVALIER, JACQUES. Henri Bergson; auth. tr. by Lilian A. Clare. 351p $2.50 Macmillan

194 Bergson, Henri Louis. Philosophy 28-20651

The seven chapters of the book represent seven lectures on Bergson's philosophy by the Professor of philosophy at the University of Grenoble. According to the publishers, the "work has the benefit of Bergson's personal counsel beforehand and his full approval when completed."

"After an unfortunately dull sketch of the intellectual background, M. Chevalier gives us about the most intimate and fascinating picture of 'Bergson the man' which has ever appeared. Then in four competent and penetrating chapters he outlines the main features of Bergson's thought. But in his last and longest chapter M. Chevalier turns to the enthusiastic, the rapturous, philosophy of religion with which he would crown the Bergsonian edifice. He is one of a group of zealous Catholics who claim to find in Bergson's books an irresistible summons to a renewed religious faith. . . It is difficult for some of us to find in Bergson's books the constructive religious attitude that M. Chevalier finds." S. P. Lamprecht
+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p2 D 16 '28 1400w

Boston Transcript p2 O 10 '28 1000w

CHEVALIER, JACQUES—Continued

"Professor Chevalier's is an objective work written by a partisan. It is accurate and well documented, while offering a most sympathetic interpretation. Besides, it is colored throughout by the quality of its author's independent personality. Altogether, it is the most valuable general study of Bergson that we have. Lilian A. Clare has translated it carefully and very readably." Axton Clark

+ N Y Times p3 N 18 '28 700w

CHEYNEY, EDWARD GHEEN. Matu, the Iroquois. 303p il $2 Little

28-11167

At the same time that Matu, a young Iroquois warrior, sets out for the land of the Ojibwas to avenge the death of his father, John MacKenzie sails from Scotland to Montreal to seek his father who also disappeared among the Ojibwas. Following dangerous paths in the Canadian woods the Indian and the Scotchman meet in the camp of the cruel old chief, Saganaga.

"It is a good tale with plenty of action for those who like adventure stories."

+ Boston Transcript p3 My 5 '28 130w

"Our criticism of 'Matu the Iroquois' is that it is not convincing. The mode of conversation is anachronistic. There was far more formality in the colonial days than this modern dialogue suggests. The adventures themselves are not breath-taking. There is one exception. The stampede of the buffaloes is gripping, and is the most robust writing in the book."

— + Sat R of Lit 5:254 O 13 '28 200w

CHEYNEY, EDWARD POTTS. Law in history, and other essays. 173p $2 Knopf

904 History—Addresses, essays, lectures

27-20943

"These six essays by a historian whose competence is generally recognized were delivered as addresses before various learned bodies, and several of them have been printed before in the American Historical Review and other learned journals."—N Y Evening Post

"To the historian Professor Cheyney's volume offers through its essays, distributed over a period of twenty years, the record of a significant progress of thought of one fellow-historian regarding the science of history. This book is the work of a scholar who knows life about him, open-minded yet cautious, painstaking yet enjoyable to read." E. E. Aubrey

Am Hist R 33:618 Ap '28 650w

"One lays the book down with the sense of having left an admirable counselor and a charming companion." Max Radin

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p18 Ja 8 '28 750w

"These six essays add little to knowledge or theory of history, but are interesting as specimens of the liberal democratic historian, prewar model." Herbert Solow

+ N Y Evening Post p12 D 24 '27 650w

CHIDSEY, DONALD BARR. Bonnie Prince Charlie. 330p il $3.50 Day

B or 92 Charles Edward Louis Philip Casimir Stuart (Young Pretender) 28-23226

An informal biography of Prince Charles Edward Stuart, the Young Pretender, which shows him in the early days of his romantic career and from that height slides down the scale to his sad, defeated old age and death in Italy.

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p6 S 30 '28 110w

"A careful, honest life, written with a literary grace and liveliness which well becomes the personal grace and liveliness of its subject. It is an honest book. Charles Edward is very human in it." S. L. Cook

+ Boston Transcript p4 S 8 '28 1800w

Cleveland Open Shelf p118 N '28

"An excellent first book as well as a modern biography." F: H. Martens

+ N Y Evening Post p8m O 20 '28 120w

"Donald Barr Chidsey's first venture is one of altogether unusual promise." C: J. Finger

+ N Y World p8e O 28 '28 580w

"His narrative has life and go to it, but he writes as a very young man to even younger men. It would be an excellent boy's book but for a certain flippancy and smartness."

+ — Sat R of Lit 5:436 D 1 '28 150w

CHILDERS, JAMES SAXON. Hilltop in the rain. 305p $2 (7s 6d) Appleton

28-17813

"The tale unfolds against the background of a small Southern college town. It is the story of Morgan Henley, a young man with ambitions caught in a dragnet of prosaic circumstances which seem to forbid realization of his dreams. He is a man married and struggling forward on the meager pay of a distasteful occupation. He is hemmed in by a mountain of small things, introspective doubts, and financial difficulties. After years of quiet acquiescence in the forces of circumstance Henley revolts—and the revolt means his salvation."— Sat R of Lit

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p20 O 28 '28 280w

Boston Transcript p4 Ag 1 '28 450w

" 'Hilltop in the Rain' is a book the literary qualities of which are only average. The theme —man struggling against circumstances—is as old as 'Œdipus.' Yet, in the final summing up, it is more satisfying than many a more finished and more original novel. Quite probably this is because the author deals with life as it is and not life as he imagines it to be."

+ Sat R of Lit 5:57 Ag 18 '28 280w

"Morgan's irksome duties are described with a surety and an insight that may well be the outcome of actual experience. It is impossible not to feel sympathy for this man toiling year after year at work that is just interesting enough to remind him of his own creative powers. The other people in the book all serve as a background. It is Morgan, losing his boyish gaiety and his happiness as his aspirations slowly become stifled, who is made to absorb the reader's attention, and who gives this story, so simple in outline, its moving quality."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p688 S 27 '28 380w

CHILTON, ELEANOR CARROLL; AGAR, HERBERT; and FISHER, WILLIS. Fire and sleet and candlelight. 73p $2 Day

811 28-11649

In this selection of poems from the work of three poets, Eleanor Carroll Chilton, Herbert Agar and Willis Fisher, another poet, Elinor Wylie, has acted as sponsor and has chosen the title.

"The verse contained in this volume has, all of it, a certain high seriousness, a rather self-conscious dignity, and a great deal of monotony, both in cadence and epithet. There is more candlelight than fire, and more noise than storm. Mr. Fisher's 'Hill-top' I found the most appealing piece in the collection." Babette Deutsch

— + Bookm 67:443 Je '28 80w

"Mr. Fisher has more melody than the other two, but he does little with it except to lay hold of a modest lyric certainty. His 'Theology' in ten little divisions, has charm. Why do these poets use the sonnet? In the end, only the best sonnets will do; whereas the exactly said poem in an invented form always has an interest and a value. These sonnets are workmanlike, but they are at the same time uninteresting." Genevieve Taggard

— + Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p3 Jl 8 '28 700w

"A pleasantly emotional, uniformly poetical book." F. B. B.

+ Boston Transcript p4 Je 2 '28 450w

"In my opinion, both Eleanor Carroll Chilton and Herbert Agar have much further to go before they can be recognized as individual poets. Each has mastered the externals of poetic form to a considerable degree before really learning to write felicitous English. The case is very different with Willis Fisher, whose poetry has lightness and charm born of deft artistry. I do not remember having seen his name before in print. Yet he already is an individual and skilled poet. His is the most promising new voice that I have heard during the past year." A. K. Laing

— + N Y Evening Post p8 Jl 7 '28 300w

"They are practiced sonneteers: they are moved by the sharp, burning or chilling sentiments of love, loneliness, pain and beauty: each has a distinct quality, but they also have a general resemblance to each other." G. B. Munson

+ N Y World p7m Jl 8 '28 160w

"Unfortunately for us we cannot find in Miss Chilton's poetry the intense individuality that marked her prose. She is accomplished in the sonnet. She writes good lyrics. Her poems have sincerity, movement, grace. But they do not precisely 'startle and waylay.' Herbert Agar's 'A Year's Burden.' is more arresting. In fact, we have found it the best thing in this dignified book, though Willis Fisher's sequence in "Theology' is also to be mentioned. All of these three poets are undeniably talented and are quite certain to surpass their first flights." W: R. Benet

+ — Sat R of Lit 5:222 O 13 '28 180w

CHIROL, SIR VALENTINE. Fifty years in a changing world. 351p $4 Harcourt [16s J. Cape]

909.8 Europe—Politics. World politics
[28-10421]

This record of fifty years' travel and international politics is not an autobiography but a series of essays in which Sir Valentine Chirol reflects upon public affairs as he has watched them during that period. His earliest memories go back to 1871, when as a mere boy he saw the German armies make their victorious entry into Paris.

"This is emphatically not a book for the casual reader. But the serious student of foreign affairs will find it packed with interest."

+ Nation and Ath 42:324 N 26 '27 560w

"Sir Valentine writes with a knowledge and competence which few men living can equal, and consequently there is something valuable and fresh in every one of his twenty-three chapters, the book as a whole providing a broad picture of the East as the author has seen it in continuous change."

+ New Statesman 30:414 Ja 7 '28 320w

"The style of his narrative is easy and graceful. He has plenty of humor and not the slightest trace of egotism. He can paint a picture, and often does; for by no means all of his book is concerned with affairs of State. He had adventures, some exciting and some laughable. Everything he writes is readable; nothing is dull."

+ N Y Times p16 My 20 '28 1200w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:588 N '28

"Sir Valentine probably knows more about the political history of the East during the last century, as it affects Great Britain, than any man living. From this fact alone his book would be interesting; but it has other virtues which are all its own, and it should enjoy a big public. It is one of the best volumes of reminiscences published in recent years."

+ Spec 139:781 N 5 '27 420w

"The record is a very remarkable one, told with skill and modesty, and we know no book which gives in a more sympathetic and living form the great events with which it deals."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p725 O 20 '27 1300w

CHITTENDEN, RUSSELL HENRY. History of the Sheffield scientific school of Yale university, 1846-1922. 2v 610p il $10 Yale univ. press [45s Oxford]

507 Yale university. Sheffield scientific school 28-16109

The man who was for twenty-four years its director, tells the history of Yale's scientific school from its establishment in 1846. The able and devoted scholars who made up its faculty and assured the success of an enterprise which was in its beginnings a bold educational idea, have a large place in the history as well as the financial and administrative affairs of the school.

"Dr. Chittenden's work, exhaustive, almost monumental in its research and appreciation, takes its place among the valuable educational documents of the country. Dr. Chittenden tells as no one else could the part Sheffield played in the times and its approximate status today." C. B. P.

+ Boston Transcript p2 S 12 '28 450w

"No one else could have related the story of this enterprise with the clearness and authority of Doctor Chittenden, who for over forty years has enriched the School by his distinguished scholarship and by his clear-headed and vigorous administration. Although filled with details of financial affairs, some of which seem somewhat trivial, and with biographical sketches of many of the teaching staff, both living and dead, the main outline of the narrative is almost tragic, at any rate dramatic, in its development. . . These volumes will remain a definitive account of one of the boldest and most successful adventures in American educational history." H. E. Hawkes

+ Sat R of Lit 5:317 N 3 '28 1350w

CHIU, CHANG-WEI. Speaker of the House of representatives since 1896. (Studies in history economics and public law) 347p $5.25 Columbia univ. press [21s P. S. King]

328.73 United States. Congress. House
28-8479

A detailed study of the three-fold function of the Speaker of the House; as presiding officer of the House; as titular leader of his party, and as private member of the House. A previous study by Miss Follett was published in 1896. Dr Chiu brings that work to date covering subsequent changes both in organization and rules of the House. He follows the method of presentation used by Miss Follett

---

"Mr. Chiu has been painstaking in his research, temperate and lucid in his statements and has produced a work of excellent historical caliber."

+ Boston Transcript p2 My 26 '28 180w

"The Chinese capacity for patiently accomplishing tasks of infinite drudgery is illustrated once more by Dr. Chiu's monograph, which is the result of the diligent exploration of masses of official documents of the dreariest character."

Times [London] Lit Sup p383 My 17 '28 230w

CHRISTIE, MRS AGATHA (MILLER). Mystery of the blue train. 306p $2 Dodd [7s 6d Collins]

28-17812

When Rufus Van Aldin bought the string of rubies containing the famous "Heart of fire," a flawless stone of great value, he made the mistake of his life. For he gave the necklace to his daughter, who was the only being whom he loved more than himself, and Ruth was murdered and the jewels stolen. The task of finding the murderer and the thief was given to Hercule Poirot and he solved the case with finesse but very little speed.

CHRISTIE, AGATHA—Continued

"As in all her stories, Mrs. Christie is a bit slow in getting under way, sacrificing speed to characterization, but in the end her technique justifies her delay. If the tale does not attain the high quality of Roger Ackroyd, the reappearance of Detective Poirot will more than compensate the reader. And the murderer, by the way, does not commit suicide." C: M. Purdy
+ — Bookm 68:232 O '28 180w

"Here is none of your fly-by-night dreadfuls, but a truly notable thriller in the right classic tradition, warranted to restore the jaded reader's faith in clews." Will Cuppy
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p9 Ag 12 '28 150w

"This time Miss Christie pursues conventional detective story methods, and by following conventional guessing you will probably discover the murderer."
Ind 121:93 Jl 28 '28 130w

Reviewed by Raymond Mortimer
Nation and Ath 43:146 My 5 '28 70w

Reviewed by H. E. Dounce
N Y Evening Post p5 Ag 11 '28 90w
N Y Times p17 Ag 12 '28 220w
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:546 N '28

"Enthralling mystery story, in which she reintroduces Hercule Poirot, the fascinating little French detective."
+ Spec 140:742 My 12 '28 80w
Springf'd Republican p7f Jl 29 '28 230w
Times [London] Lit Sup p337 My 3 '28 170w
Wis Lib Bul 24:254 O '28

CHRISTIE, OCTAVIUS FRANCIS. Transition from aristocracy, 1832-1867. 348p $3.50 Putnam

914.2 Great Britain—Social life and customs. Great Britain.Parliament—Reform. Great Britain—Politics and government 28-4515

"An account of the passing of the Reform bill of 1832, the causes which led up to it and its far-reaching consequences on the life and manners of all grades of society."—Subtitle

Reviewed by A. L. Sachar
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p18 O 14 '28 1250w
Boston Transcript p3 My 26 '28 260w
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:413 Jl '28
Sat R 144:401 S 24 '27 680w

"I do not remember a more balanced picture of England before 1832 than that contained in Mr. Christie's opening chapter. His picture of the splendor of the English nobles, and of the power which accompanied it, is excellently done. The book has a good beginning, a solid middle, but it is not rounded to an end. It merely stops. I have suggested that the title is one weakness, and would support this by proposing a final chapter that Mr. Christie has not written." Osbert Burdett
+ — Sat R of Lit 4:943 Je 9 '28 850w

CHRISTLIEB, MARIE LUISE. An uphill road in India. 253p $2 Houghton [6s Allen & U.]

915.4 India—Social life and customs. Missions—India 28-13385

"A series of letters sent by a lady in India to her friend at home [in England], formerly her colleague in missionary work, in which the writer is still engaged. She presents her record of life in the villages of India with literary skill, and there is a lightness of touch which commends the deeply religious spirit which is evident throughout the volume. The letters, full of the zest for human life in its strangest manifestations, reveal more of the conditions of work among the women and children of India than many a more elaborate book."—Times [London] Lit Sup

"An answer to anyone's effort to indict the whole of western civilization is found in such a book as Miss M. L. Christlieb's. Here are devotion and heroic faith." Lyman Bryson
+ Bookm 67:312 My '28 60w

"The preface states that the book pretends to be only 'a simple human recital of daily experiences among a much-loved Eastern people.' In this purpose it succeeds admirably. Miss Christlieb's easy, vivid style, her dramatic sense, her gift of word portraiture build up our interest and keep it unlessened." H. H. Brown
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p13 Je 17 '28 850w
Christian Century 45:828 Je 28 '28 20w
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:438 O '28

"The book as a whole is written in a subdued tone. It is a mistake not to give the correct names of places or districts, but as a modest record of self-denying work it is wholly admirable."
+ Sat R 143:986 Je 25 '27 130w

"The author has a gift for language powerful in its simplicity. Her story is more thrilling than a novel, with adventure as the warp and truth as the woof."
+ Springf'd Republican p10 Je 5 '28 580w
Times [London] Lit Sup p475 Je 7 '27 60w

CHUDLEIGH, ELIZABETH, countess of BRISTOL, calling herself duchess of Kingston (defendant). Trial of the Duchess of Kingston; ed. by Lewis Melville. (Notable English trials) 328p il $3.50 Day [10s 6d Hodge]

343.1 Trials [28-6970]

The trial in 1776 of Elizabeth Chudleigh, the notorious widow of the Duke of Kingston, for bigamy, was attended by London society and alluded to by letter-writers of her day, including Horace Walpole. A full account of the proceedings of the trial is given, prefaced by a narrative account of the life and adventures of the duchess.

"I am not sure that inclusion of The Trial of the Duchess of Kingston was a happy selection for this Notable British Trial series. It is true enough that the Duchess, or Countess, was an amusing adventuress and that some of her adventures are singularly entertaining, but her life would make for better reading than her trial."
— Bookm 68:xl O '28 50w

"The trial itself, in which the charge was bigamy, is not particularly engrossing, for even the farce element fails to sustain the interest of the proceedings, but the character of the 'Duchess' herself, as presented by Lewis Melville in his lengthy introduction, and as revealed in flashes by the testimony, is well worthy of acquaintance." B. R. Redman
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 Ap 22 '28 150w

Reviewed by Leonard Woolf
Nation and Ath 42:751 F 18 '28 220w
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:255 My '28

Reviewed by E: Shanks
Sat R 145:134 F 4 '28 1250w

Reviewed by Edmund Pearson
Sat R of Lit 4:821 Ap 28 '28 200w

CHURCH, EDWIN FAYETTE. Steam turbines. 273p il $3 (15s) McGraw

621.165 Steam turbines 28-1292

"Condensed text dealing with basic principles and their application."— Pittsburgh Mo Bul

Booklist 24:350 Je '28

"This book, although not a complete treatise on steam turbines, is one of the best available for American colleges and will also prove valuable and instructive to practicing engineers." A. G. Christie

+ Eng N 100:636 Ap 19 '28 400w
N Y New Tech Bks 13:27 Ap '28
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:271 My '28
Pratt p15 summer '28

CHURCH, RICHARD. Mary Shelley. (Representative women) 177p $2 Viking press [3s 6d G. Howe]

B or 92 Shelley, Mary Wollstonecraft (Godwin) (Mrs Percy Bysshe Shelley) 28-29524

The mind and heart of Mary Godwin Shelley, her life as wife of Shelley with all that it entailed of pain and ecstasy, are set forth in a vivid piece of portraiture in this volume of the Representative women series.

"Mr. Richard Church's sympathy with his subject is subtle and complete. His study of Mary Shelley's life is clear, sensitive, scrupulous. Mr. Church has woven the prologue, the drama, and long-drawn epilogue of her life into a well-conceived whole. Within its limits, his little book could hardly be improved upon."

+ New Statesman 31:132 My 5 '28 150w

"Mr. Church has elected, not very wisely, to simplify his task. He begs the question of the psychological enigma of Mary Shelley and interprets her story largely in terms of her association with her restless and volatile husband. It is a strange and charming story as Mr. Church tells it; brief, to be sure but packed with swift and tortuous events. And yet there was that in Mary Shelley's nature which merited a more separate and personal consideration." Margaret Wallace

+ — N Y Evening Post p9m D 29 '28 260w

"The book has the virtue of sympathy, clean easy style, and, above all, of complete absence of mawkishness. . . Mr. Church is unaffected by superficial emotion. He is too much of a poet himself to write sentimental nonsense about another poet, and too intelligent to believe that genius, however flame-like, justifies and makes beautiful all it touches." Humbert Wolfe

+ Sat R 145:469 Ap 14 '28 480w

"Mr. Church's study of Mary and Shelley is a steady and solid piece of work, here and there breaking out into flashes of insight. He has kept close to the sequence of events, and only occasionally allows himself to imagine what must have happened or to put a personal interpretation on facts. Where he does give himself more liberty he is generally convincing."

+ Spec 140:538 Ap 7 '28 100w

"Mr. Church's little monograph, in form a short and admirably phrased narrative, interesting by its divination of all the characters concerned, is as persuasive a tribute as has been paid to Mary Shelley."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p309 Ap 26 '28 1050w

CLAIRMONT, ROBERT. Quintillions. ltd ed 104p $3.50 Dial press

811

"Quintillions are so simple, after all; they stick together so; you pack them about in bunches; you move them and they move and move; you divide them by two, or four or six.

See, how simple quintillions really are."—Author

"Here is a book of verse unusual in both contents and format. Mr. Clairmont has a sense of values that enhances his work and make it worth while reading."

+ Boston Transcript p4 Mr 24 '28 50w

"When he is at his best, he is delightful. He carries humor into poetry unruffled, with all its wings and feathers." Conrad Aiken

+ New Repub 54:253 Ap 11 '28 200w

"Few of the poems in this book come off. The fumbling is persistent, and the result is a welter of ineffectual repetition that sometimes verges on gibberish. All this is too bad, because out of the jumble there springs a distinct personality. Both in idea and approach, Mr. Clairmont is original: he is a modern by instinct, finding his subject matter in the current American life about him and twisting it to his own uses with a fantasy that must at least be called clever and sometimes amusing." J. M. March

— + N Y Evening Post p9 Jl 7 '28 250w
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:579 N '28

CLARK, FRANK LOWRY. Study of the Iliad in translation. 354p $3 Univ. of Chicago press [15s Cambridge univ. press]

883.1 Homer 27-24175

Professor Clark of the University of Chicago has chosen for translation those passages from the Iliad which seem to him most memorable and beautiful, and has connected the excerpts with brief explanatory notes. The book concludes with an analysis of the Iliad in outline form, a bibliography and an index.

Boston Transcript p2 Ja 21 '28 330w

"The frequent interruptions together with the titles inserted at the beginning of each Iliad passage disturb the continuity of the story very materially and will, I believe, seriously hinder the student in getting the sense of uninterrupted sweep which he should feel in the epic. It is desirable that students read more Iliad and fewer of Professor Clark's rather uninteresting connecting passages." Gertrude Smith

Class Philol 23:88 Ja '28 270w

"The translation is in prose of a very plain and simple kind, very faithful, following the original line by line, and so arranged in the English. For English students under the direction of a professor, who can explain to them how much is added to the bare thought of Homer by the glory of his language and versification, this work will be useful. But for the reader who has no Greek, and no professor at hand to tell him what it is like, prose is prose, and exceedingly simple prose is occasionally pedestrian, which Homer seldom is."

Times [London] Lit Sup p377 My 17 '28 380w

CLARK, GEORGE ROGERS, and HAMILTON, HENRY. Capture of old Vincennes; the original narratives; ed. with introd. and notes by Milo M. Quaife. 231p il $2.75 Bobbs

977.2 Vincennes, Indiana—History. Northwest, Old—History 27-18950

The story of the capture of Vincennes in 1779 is given in the words of the leader of the campaign on both sides. George Rogers Clark tells of his attack, repulse, and capture of Vincennes, and in Part two is given Governor Henry Hamilton's official report of his defense and surrender.

Booklist 24:277 Ap '28

Reviewed by F: H. Martens

Bookm 66:327 N '27 80w

"Makes very good reading indeed, whether as adventure simply, or as history, less simply, or as a rather easy lesson in the psychology of war. It is too bad that Dr. Quaife, the editor of this little volume, did not dare all for the sake of 'the sense of the past,' and boldly give us General Clark's really 'original' narrative with all its startling capitalization, delightful misspelling, singular verbs for plural subjects, and rambling sentence structure." Edna Kenton

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p17 Ja 22 '28 730w

Reviewed by E. M. Coulter

Hist Outlook 19:238 My '28 450w
Nation 127:114 Ag 1 '28 200w

CLARK, G: R., and HAMILTON, H:—Cont.

"It is more than a record of Clark's campaign to conquer the Northwest. The memoir, which begins with Clark's advent into Kentucky throws a great deal of light upon pioneer conditions, upon Indians and Indian life in the Wabash country and upon the French habitants and their ways. It gives the reader a vivid impression of Clark's own mind and personality. Incidentally, Hamilton's narrative of his imprisonment by the Americans shows how inhumane the patriot policy of the Revolution could sometimes be." Allan Nevins

+ N Y World p10m N 6 '27 520w

CLARK, GLENN. Fishers of men. 101p $2 Little

253 Evangelistic work 28-7960

Out of his own great faith and warm humanity Professor Clark offers encouragement and inspiration to those who would become "fishers of men."

"This is not the evangelism of the sawdust trail, but of the individual. There are no masses, only a man. It is all personal in the finest and most direct sense. The evangelism is personal and Professor Clark is so personal. He is just talking to you, and nobody else as you read his book. Out of his heart to yours comes a personal message. Then it is not all over, you feel that you ought to go out and 'catch men.'" T. C. R.

+ Boston Transcript p5 Je 2 '28 380w

Reviewed by C: L: Slattery

Churchman p18 Je 30 '28 100w

"A few years ago Prof. Glenn Clark's 'Soul's Sincere Desire' met with instant and widespread attention. His 'Fishers of Men' is of the same high order as the former volume. Intensely personal and highly human, the author writes a book which he confesses he never believed could be written. 'A fisher of men' cannot afford not to read and profit by Prof Clark's book, for it is really helpful in its suggestions."

+ Springf'd Republican p8 Ag 7 '28 200w

CLARK, IMOGEN. Old days and old ways. 296p il $2 Crowell

917.3 United States—Social life and customs. Children in the United States. United States—Biography 28-22303

Stories of colonial days in North and South, and biographical sketches, with illustrations, of famous figures of colonial times. For boys and girls.

"Crowded with entertaining particulars of the manners, customs, ideas, and living conditions of Americans of colonial times." R. J. Davis

+ Sat R of Lit 5:346 N 10 '28 100w

"Designed for young readers, but not to be scorned by their elders. . . The stories are told in delightful style, sure to win their way to juvenile minds and hearts."

+ Springf'd Republican p8 N 30 '28 160w

CLARK, IMOGEN. Suppose we do something else; a collection of indoor and outdoor games for young and old. 268p il $2 Crowell

790 Games 27-19020

"A book of games to play ranging from children's amusements to pencil-games, puzzles, and letter-games that will tax adult ingenuity." (Sat R of Lit) Contents: A dozen to be done gaily; Travellers' joy; Tying knots; Shadow-pictures on the wall; How to make things; How to bake things; Sweets-a-plenty; Let's play some more; What to do on special occasions; Riddles; Indoor merrymaking; Mostly tricks.

Booklist 24:210 F '28

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:67 Ja '28

St Louis 25:377 D '27

"This particular collection is for the most part well chosen and really worth while, as well as unusually wide in its range. And there is a full and clear index which will save time in making plans. A section on riddles and on simple tricks and home-made puzzles should be specially mentioned, for it will start any aggressive small boy on a delighted career of conquest."

+ Sat R of Lit 4:331 N 19 '27 110w

CLARK, JAMES LIPPITT. Trails of the hunted. 310p il $4 Little

799.2 Hunting. Taxidermy 28-22413

Mr Clark is a naturalist, taxidermist, and sculptor of wild life. He has hunted rather with the camera than the gun and in the latter case chiefly to secure specimens for the American museum of natural history. This unusually graphic story covers hunting experiences in America, Africa and Asia, and carries a pictorial record of many of the incidents described.

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p30 S 30 '28 600w

Cleveland Open Shelf p133 D '28

" 'Trails of the Hunted' is a story of a unique life. James L. Clark has told such a story as few men these days can equal, and he has written it with such simplicity, such modesty, and such charm, that no one can fail to read this handsome volume from cover to cover." Martin Johnson

+ Sat R of Lit 5:370 N 17 '28 500w

CLARK, MRS MABEL MARGARET (COWIE) (LESLEY STORM, pseud.). Head in the wind. 379p $2 Harper [7s 6d Cassell]

28-22061

Stephanie and her father have been unusually intimate and she resents his marriage to Anne, his housekeeper. To Richard's grief over his daughter's attitude is added a bitter disappointment in his son Roy. For Roy's sake Richard performs an illegal operation; the girl dies and Richard goes to jail. Stephanie, passionately loyal to her father, means to wait for his return, but life moves on—the home breaks up, Roy goes about his own devices in London, David, Anne's son, woos Stephanie and almost wins her but marries her sister instead. When Richard comes home the situation between wife and daughter has still to be cleared.

"In her second novel Lesley Storm suggests that perhaps, after all, there is some solution to the question with which she entitled her first book, 'Lady, What of Life?' She draws another candid picture of modern English youth in its quest for happiness against the callous odds of reality, but with a keener sensibility she now stresses not so much the futility as the value of life."

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p15 O 28 '28 400w

"There is good story material here and the book is written well, often very well written. On the other hand one does not carry away from it that sense of vivid character drawing which is needed to make such a story live."

+ — Boston Transcript p6 O 20 '28 200w

"A striking and agreeable story. The author has a sense of character and power of revealing it in dialogue."

+ New Statesman 31:768 S 29 '28 90w

"All this is told in just about the ordinary fashion, with a moderate degree of interest, a considerable earnestness of purpose, but no particular point of vividness or distinction. Thus, while the characters appear to be definitely outlined in the author's mind, she fails to picture them in that revealing detail which would make them definitely outlined in the reader's mind; thus, again, while their problems are doubtless real to the author, they are in most cases rather blurred and shadowy for the reader."

— + N Y Times p22 O 7 '28 400w

"Miss Storm knows definitely what she wants to do. Already she has developed a style; she sees her characters clearly and firmly; she has a knowledge of structure. Precipitating Robin Christopher Orme into the novel, near the end, is the major disturbing fault."

+ — Sat R of Lit 5:281 O 20 '28 250w

"There is a good idea in this novel, but Miss Storm is not altogether successful in getting her proportions right. Miss Storm presents a very credible and creditable portrait-gallery; the trouble is that while our sympathies, presumably, are meant to be with Stephanie and her acute sensibilities, they insist on straying away to Laura."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p761 O 18 '28 140w

CLARK, THOMAS CURTIS, and GILLESPIE, ESTHER A., comps. Quotable poems; an anthology of modern religious verse; prologue by Joseph Fort Newton. 374p $2.50 Willett

821.08 Poetry—Collections. Religious poetry 28-12708

This compilation of 500 inspirational poems is made especially to serve preachers and other public speakers. There are four indexes: subject, author, title and first line. One section is devoted to poems for the great days of the year and another to poems on immortality.

"Inspirational quality seems to have the cachet of admission to this anthology. More specifically, it is the inspirational quality of which Edwin Markham is the shining light, that poet oustripping all competitors in the number of entries. Second honors go to Thomas Curtis Clark possibly due to the advantages which he enjoyed as one of the compilers of the collection."

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p16 Jl 1 '28 110w

"Every poem is inspirational and is good to read aloud. The book will prove a vade mecum to ministers and other public speakers. It is one of the best collections of inspirational poems in print."

+ Boston Transcript p4 Je 23 '28 180w

"If it is a good poem, not too long, and of the sort that warms the heart, quickens faith, and promotes a hopeful view of the world, the chances are that you will find it here." W. E. G.

+ Christian Century 45:955 Ag 2 '28 300w

"Among the 500 poems from 300 poets one finds a reasonable number of familiar verses from the standard poets of recent centuries, but also much that has been gleaned apparently from periodical literature and is here presented on merit alone."

+ Springf'd Republican p10 Ag 15 '28 280w

Wis Lib Bul 24:221 Jl '28

CLARKE, BEVERLY LEONIDAS. Romance of reality; the beauties and mysteries of modern science. 225p il $2.25 Macmillan

504 Science 27-21392

"Brief, popular account of recent ideas in science, with particular attention to physics."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

Booklist 24:350 Je '28

"His romance cloys a bit and his 'reality' is limited to those subjects which interest the physicist of to-day. It would be pedantic to object to his using the microscope to see electrons and a knife to cut a strip of wood into atoms. But his grammar-school English—well, I should advise publicity for this book in the tabloids. Within that limitation the book is admirable." Gerald Wendt

— + Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 Ja 8 '28 90w

Cleveland Open Shelf p2 Ja '28

N Y New Tech Bks 13:9 Ja '28

"What he purposes to do here is to make not only understandable for the proverbial man-in-the-street—whose intelligence quotient is always supposed to be of the medium sort—but also interesting and fascinating the fundamental discoveries and accepted principles of modern science. Each scientific conception he explains in his peculiarly luminous style, with illustrations and comments and now and then a humorous aside that help to make it stand out clear and convincing, but they are all so related and bound together as to make the reader feel that modern physical science is a whole, in something the way that the solar universe is a whole, and as such can be looked at with appreciation of its majesty, mystery, order, beauty and awesomeness."

+ N Y Times p15 Ap 1 '28 400w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:91 F '28

St Louis 26:98 Ap '28

Wis Lib Bul 24:122 Ap '28

CLARKE, ISABEL CONSTANCE. Strangers of Rome. 372p $2.50 Longmans [7s 6d Hutchinson]

28-25177

Two young English girls, sisters, spend some time in the palace of the Duke and Duchess of Roccasecca in Rome. Enid, the elder, falls in love with the duke, while Jean is initiated into Catholicism by the lovely duchess. When Enid's baby is born the duchess, unknown to her, adopts the boy, knowing him to be her husband's son, and names him Piero. Enid returns to England and marries. She sees very little of Jean, now a devout Catholic, busy bringing up her family. Years later Enid's daughter and Piero meet in Rome and fall in love.

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p16 N 18 '28 220w

"The story is interesting all the way through, but could be more quickly told. The omission of repetitions, not only of ideas but of phrases, would have tightened up the thread of the narrative, and made 'Strangers of Rome' much better reading."

+ — Boston Transcript p4 N 3 '28 130w

Times [London] Lit Sup p432 Je 7 '28 170w

CLARKSON, RALPH PRESTON. Hysterical background of radio. 257p $2 Sears

621.384 Radio communication 27-21214

The author ranges far into history, searching for discoveries which have contributed in greater or less degree to the development of radio. His book is an encyclopedia of facts expressed in non-technical language.

"His book has the fascination of human interest together with the merit of scientific accuracy."

+ Boston Transcript p6 Je 2 '28 180w

St Louis 26:352 N '28

"Mr. Clarkson takes us back to the first observations and guesses, at least 2600 years ago and the numerous false dawns of the knowledge of magnetism, electricity, and radio. Along with superstitions, wild guesses, absurd speculations, and false observations, Mr Clarkson traces the observations and investigations of more logical and substantial merit."

Springf'd Republican p10 Ap 4 '28 280w

CLELAND, HERDMAN FITZGERALD. Our prehistoric ancestors. 379p il $5 Coward-McCann

571 Man, Prehistoric 28-21795

"A trained geologist here attempts to picture for us moderns some of our very remote ancestors. He makes his descriptions more concrete and definite, and for that reason more interesting, than has usually been the case in scientific writings. He emphasizes the Neolithic or New Stone Age because greater progress was made then than in other ages. At that time great changes took place in man's physical well-being as well as in his mental attitude. Then came the Bronze Age, with the expanding use of metals, and after that the Iron Age, in which our present civilization began."—R of Rs

Booklist 25:107 D '28

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p19 O 21 '28 600w

Boston Transcript p6 S 29 '28 720w

CLELAND, H. F.—Continued
Reviewed by Elsie Weil
New Repub 57:199 Ja 2 '29 480w
Reviewed by Herschel Brickell
No Am 226:adv N '28 30w

"A beginner should find the whole book valuable. But almost anybody in the world, male or female, old or young, would pore for hours over the illustrations in this book. There are scores of them, and except for the comic Neanderthal family of the colored frontispiece, they are all grand."
+ Outlook 150:1336 D 12 '28 150w
R of Rs 78:38 O '28 90w

CLEMEN, RUDOLF ALEXANDER. By-products in the packing industry. 410p il $4 Univ. of Chicago press
660 Packing-house products. Meat industry and trade 28-1442

While the by-products of the meat packing industry yield but a small percentage of the total returns, the industry is itself so huge that the income even from the by-products mounts to a considerable item. The achievement of science in transforming waste into profit is described here by Dr Clemen. Numerous illustrations and an index.

Reviewed by J. Ise
Am Econ R 18:292 Je '28 160w
Booklist 24:269 Ap '28

"A well-illustrated, readable volume which includes good reference material for students of foods and food production."
+ J Home Econ 20:127 F '28 30w

CLENDENING, LOGAN. Human body. 399p il $5 Knopf
612 Physiology. Anatomy, Human 27-21152

For descriptive note see Annual for 1927.

"It is first and last an epitome of medical knowledge, with just enough anatomy and physiology to enable the reader to comprehend the normal body in health, whose disorders in disease and old age are the main theme of the work. The treatment is refreshingly frank and not a few medical idols of confiding patients are tumbled off their pedestals." C: A. Kofoid
+ Am J Pub Health 18:529 Ap '28 600w

"This book has style and entertainment. Clendening has the urbane, tolerant insight of the best of his profession. The tender-minded will not read Clendening happily. He is the realist, the satirist, more concerned with puncturing superstition than with genuflecting before the sacred cows of sentiment."
+ Bookm 67:xxxiv Mr '28 250w
— Cath World 128:117 O '28 650w
J Home Econ 20:50 Ja '28 80w

"Lucid, engaging and full of valuable information. It seems really the body itself talking, a very old, very certain, distinctly Rabelaisian and absolutely unflustered body, looking out through two eyes, a quick brain back of them, at some of the shows of the world." W: C. Williams
+ N Y Evening Post p12 D 31 '27 1550w

"With all his charm of style Dr. Clendening cannot make the human body a less complicated instrument than it is, nor does he propose—he being a practitioner himself—to carry out so ambitious a project as making physicians dispensable to his readers. But he does succeed in clarifying to the lay mind—the reviewer's mind, for example, is very lay—some of the processes of the human body and in conveying various common-sense conclusions." Harry Salpeter
+ — Outlook 148:155 Ja 25 '28 550w
R of Rs 77:14 F '28 80w
Reviewed by H. G. Rowell, M.D.
Survey 59:527 Ja 15 '28 780w
Times [London] Lit Sup p65 Ja 26 '28 180w

"Among the most notable contributions to public education in health in recent years. The historical background on which the volume is based gives it an authenticity not available in similar works. Doctor Clendening has viewed his patients both subjectively and objectively as actual human beings, and from them he has derived a conception of healthful living that has thus far not been available in print. 'The Human Body' is therefore an epoch-marking volume." Morris Fishbein
+ Yale R n s 17:595 Ap '28 30w

CLEUGH, MRS SOPHIA. Common cheat. 282p $2 Macmillan [7s 6d T. Butterworth]
28-21189

A young and handsome Arab prince come to grief in an English village, meets the local belle and a mutual attraction develops. Without revealing his identity he departs. The girl takes a position as companion in an important French family which, quaintly enough, is the family of her recent charmer. The story moves with all the principals to Morocco, where the girl, despairing of winning her hero, gets into and out of perfunctory engagements with two other men. Prince Zeid then springs his surprise.

"The story of Charlotte's quest is lively, amusing and refreshingly different from most idyls of the camel belt."
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p21 N 4 '28 170w

"The real charm of the story lies not so much in the romance of Charlotte Manisty and the way in which despite her cheating she gets what she wants most, as it is in the humor and worldly wisdom with which the story is told. Through it all runs a piquant pungent comment which is a constant delight." D. L. M.
+ Boston Transcript p3 S 8 '28 520w
Cleveland Open Shelf p137 D '28

"A lightly amusing story which might tax credulity, if one were unkind enough to take it seriously."
N Y Times p16 S 2 '28 380w
Sat R of Lit 5:440 D 1 '28 120w
Wis Lib Bul 24:304 N '28

CLUTTON-BROCK, ARTHUR. More essays on religion; with an introd. by B. H. Streeter. 215p $2 Dutton [6s Methuen]
204 Religion [28-10410]

The papers in this small volume were written in an earlier, more buoyant phase in the author's religious thinking than those of the companion volume Essays on religion. Contents: Crashaw's Christmas poems; Christina Rossetti; Rev. Robert Herrick; Ecclesiastical art; "Restoration and Renovation"; Problem of evil; Creative religion; Unborn Catholicism; Pursuit of happiness; Problem of Martha; On Jonahs; Remedy; Sheep without a shepherd; Kingdom of heaven.

Booklist 24:355 Je '28
Boston Transcript p5 Ap 14 '28 200w

"Some of the essays I have read several times and marked, and read again. There is in them a buoyancy and zest, in both thought and style, that give them unusual distinction."
+ Christian Century 45:637 My 17 '28 80w

"This later volume consists of essays originally published when Arthur Clutton-Brock had a much sunnier outlook and happier vision of religious progress. If he himself declined from the height of these hopes this book nonetheless holds much inspiration; and, unlike too many books concerned with similiar high themes, it is, as literature, delightful throughout." S. O'S.
+ N Y Evening Post p5 Jl 28 '28 110w

"These essays present no extended statement of Mr Clutton-Brock's position. Rather they are casual and little connected. But they will be read for their wide range of literary and artistic understanding; though at times irritating and futile in pursuit of subtlety, their undoubted substance is informed with an individual style as well as an individual point of view."

+ — Springf'd Republican p10 F 7 '28 160w

"His vision is not likely, even when set forth with his own charm of style, still less in a bare sketch of it, to win the born authoritarian. Mr. Clutton-Brock would incline, as in the essay 'An Unborn Catholicism,' to seek a psychological reason for this recalcitrance, though, to be sure, psychological pellets can be shot from both sides in any argument. A spirit of peaceableness breathes through this book; its conviction is passionate, with no taint of fanaticism."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p761 O 27 '27 830w

"Thought provoking and stimulating. It is a worthy companion to his 'Essays in Religion.' " A. A. S.

+ World Tomorrow 11:228 My '28 250w

COALFLEET, PIERRE. Meanwhile. 360p $2.50 Duffield

27-22952

"Grover Thanet leaves Harvard for Paris . . . to study painting and to 'save his soul.' The shy, idealistic boy, who had moved quietly between Harvard and his own home, and who had seen most of life through the eyes of his mother or Rhoda Marple, the girl who obviously loves him from the first pages of the book, is thrust into an environment which gradually strips from him all of his illusions, and he finds himself, a conservative and an aristocrat, trying to appear a radical and a bohemian."—Boston Transcript

---

"The book is able to boast a very superior style. The author presents his character with sufficient detachment to make him amusing. In this Grover Thanet we find at last a college graduate who lives as one would expect a boy of that sort to live—a little tentatively. . .There is no lower level in the book. No matter how perverse or decadent the author chooses to make his Parisian characters, there is an atmosphere of sympathy and an even balance of values." Elizabeth Sanderson

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 Ja 1 '28 700w

Boston Transcript p4 Ja 7 '28 250w

Cleveland Open Shelf p39 Mr '28

"The novel is very real, a vision of eager, romantic youth, fervently believing that life will begin 'tomorrow.' A novel in which weary, disappointed middle age will see reflected many of the hopes and aspirations of its own lost years."

+ N Y Times p22 O 30 '27 530w

"The novel is garrulous and, on the whole, piffling."

— Sat R of Lit 4:538 Ja 21 '28 130w

COBB, BERTHA BROWNING (BARNES) (MRS ERNEST COBB), and COBB, ERNEST. Pennie. 194p il $1.75 Putnam

Pennie was an only child and very anxious for a baby sister, so it seemed providential when the lady wanted to rent the spare room, for accompanying the lady was Jo Anne, who was really a darling baby. But when the lady disappeared and the money to pay for the room did not come each week Pennie's mother was afraid she would have to give Jo Anne up. Right then Pennie had a plan, and the plan, tho poor in itself, brought good results and Jo Anne stayed.

Booklist 24:367 Je '28

"Underneath the story there lies a streak of sentiment and pathos which will not fail to have an unconscious effect upon every child reader. Simplicity of language, the adventures of Pennie with the baby, and the eleven colored illustrations combine to make it an attractive book for a large class of young readers."

+ Boston Transcript p2 Je 23 '28 100w

COBB, IRVIN SHREWSBURY. All aboard; saga of the romantic river. 338p $2 Cosmopolitan bk.

28-20336

Tales of Mr Cobb's own Tennessee River, the steamboats which plied up and down its course in the days before the Civil war, and the people who used those boats.

Booklist 25:120 D '28

Boston Transcript p3 S 15 '28 180w

"Most of us have laughed at his stories before, and most of us will laugh at them again in this book. The tale of the steamboat that got religion, and the litany of Mr. Red Ham Gravy Jones's interests, for instance, are excellent. They have form to govern their substance. But too many of the stories seem to be padded out for no other reason than to fill space—little jokes blown up into chapters."

+ — N Y Times p6 Ag 12 '28 700w

COBB, IVO GEIKIE. Glands of destiny; a study of the personality. 295p $3 Macmillan [7s 6d Heinemann]

612.4 Glands, Ductless. Personality

[28-13654]

Dr Cobb devotes a chapter to each of the ductless glands, describing its structure and function, its effect on the physical and mental life of the individual, and its contribution, thereby, to his personality.

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p13 O 7 '28 300w

Boston Transcript p2 Ap 14 '28 300w

N Y Times p16 Mr 11 '28 320w

St Louis 26:351 N '28

"Dr. Cobb does not appear to have anything which is new to tell us in his latest volume, but his work is frankly popular and is to be welcomed as such, for the subject is one on which the public should have the guidance of qualified men, rather than essayists or 'quacks.' " F. Y.-B.

+ Spec 140:122 Ja 28 '28 380w

Springf'd Republican p7f My 13 '28 180w

"Accurate and scientific in its treatment, the book should nevertheless appeal to that section of the public which likes its reading to be sensational. A concise and carefully chosen bibliography enhances the practical value of this very readable little book."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p965 D 15 '27 150w

COBB, STANWOOD. New leaven; progressive education and its effect upon the child and society. 340p $2.50 Day

370.1 Education of children. Education—Experimental methods. Psychology, Educational

28-11839

"Progressive education . . . is a spontaneous movement, springing up here and there, in Europe as well as in this country, in response to the demand . . . for a type of education better adapted to modern times and to the modern child." (Author) The president of the Progressive education association describes here the working of this new leaven in progressive schools thruout the country.

"As president of the Progressive Education Association, and headmaster of the Chevy Chase School, Mr. Cobb must be constantly examining the development of progressive schools with a critical as well as a friendly eye. The lay parent to whom the book is addressed wants more than a rosy survey of the progressive field . . . It would have been more profitable to have had from Mr. Cobb a critical appraisal of the work of progressive schools for the last ten years, say, a frank facing of failures as well as gains, and an equally frank facing of future needs." Agnes de Lima

— + Bookm 67:706 Ag '28 680w

COBB, STANWOOD—Continued

"His book will doubtless be useful to the growing number of intelligent parents who, convinced of the futilities of the old system, are taking an aggressive hand in effecting educational reforms. Mr. Cobb's volume, which one wishes had been written with a little more vivacity, is in a sense a co-operative effort. He called upon a notable list of progressive educators throughout the country and asked them to define the essential features of the movement." Agnes de Lima

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p17 Je 17 '28 780w

Cleveland Open Shelf p96 S '28

"The book will make a greater appeal to the popular reader than to the scientific student of education. It is almost completely lacking in objective evidence to support the various recommendations made. It is essentially a hypothesis of one method of conducting schools rather than a convincing body of material in support of that method. It is interestingly written and is stimulating. It should be provocative of experimental studies which will provide objective evidence of the validity of the proposals made." G. T. Buswell

El School J 29:232 N '28 700w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:377 Jl '28

St Louis 26:276 S '28

"In spite of the abundance of split infinitives and the occasional awkward constructions, the book is very readable; it is useful for professional readers as well as non-professional readers in giving a general view of certain experimental attempts that are being made at individualized instruction at the lower school levels and at better articulation at higher levels." H. H. Punke

+ — School R 36:792 D '28 560w

COBLENTZ, STANTON A. Marching men; the story of war. 496p il $5 Unicorn

355 War. Military art and science 28-28052

"We have spread before us a fascinating panorama of war from the days when it was fought with primitive battle-axes and slings from which were hurled red-hot stones wrapped in burning rags, to the period of machine guns and poison gas."—Bookm

---

Reviewed by F. R. Dulles

Bookm 67:106 Mr '28 170w

"When we have finished this book we have supped full of horrors (with insistent emphasis on what happens to the ladies), but we have learned next to nothing about the causes of war, the technical evolution of armaments, changing principles of strategy, battle tactics, the organization and supply of armies, the economic results of warfare, or what applied science is now doing in the interest of mass destruction." H. K. Motherwell

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p24 F 19 '28 100w

"At the close of one of the most impressive polemics against war ever written, little as it was intended to be such, Mr. Coblentz sets forth the kind of war which will result when the interatomic energies are at last utilized for human slaughter, foretelling the day when, after man has been eliminated from the earth, 'even the war-god will be dead, since there will be none to worship him.' " E. N.

Boston Transcript p4 D 28 '27 1050w

"Mr. Coblentz is a competent writer, and has, moreover, a nice constructive imagination, but his book slips over into the realm of emotion and is, one suspects, not altogether reliable in its forecast of the battles of the future."

N Y Times p11 My 13 '28 180w

"The story is interestingly told, and is informative, even if it lacks authority. Both the layman and the soldier will obtain something worth while from it."

+ Springf'd Republican p10 O 25 '28 450w

Reviewed by R. P. Barnes

World Tomorrow 11:423 O '28 270w

COCKRELL, STEPHENA. Hinge of heaven. 284p $2 Morrow [7s 6d Chatto and W.]

28-21057

"The Hinge of Heaven deals with the romantic America of the mountains of Virginia. No plot could be nicer than this, in which one scion of a Southern family marries the man of her choice by proving to her parents that their family was no better than his, while the other, reduced to selling furniture, is too proud to give way to her wealthy admirer till the very last page."—New Statesman

---

"This custom-made romance has all the ingredients for easy reading. An agreeable enough tale, if you like your fiction cut to this pattern."

— + Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p45 S 30 '28 200w

"As a felicitous sample of light fiction the novel will prove enjoyable reading."

+ Boston Transcript p6 O 20 '28 150w

"Despite the ethics of the Saturday Evening Post, this novel has a certain distinction. It is well and not too obviously written and describes in addition a lovely clearing in the American jungle: the old-fashioned country life of the poorer Virginian families." Cyril Connolly

+ — New Statesman 32:257 D 1 '28 350w

"The story contains five well realized and contrasted characters, and Miss Cockrell's delicate art and humour invest it with an idyllic atmosphere."

+ Spec 141:745 N 17 '28 120w

"The lightest of stories, told with demure good sense and a pretty feminine wit. . . The really significant characters of the tale are not human beings at all. They are not even animate. They are the pieces of antique furniture—specimens of Sheraton or Hepplewhite or early American make—which Sally bought but would not sell."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p802 N 1 '28 370w

COCKS, DOROTHY. Etiquette of beauty. 332p il $5 Doubleday, Doran

391 Beauty, Personal 27-21729

In this large and finely made manual the author charts a strenuous course to be followed by the seeker after charm. She sets a rigorous régime of exercise and diet, and discusses the details of perfection essential to the well groomed woman poised in mind and body.

Booklist 24:312 My '28

"When I picked up 'The Etiquette of Beauty' I felt distinctly embarrassed, for I never knew before that there was such a thing. 'Perhaps,' I said to myself, 'I have been neglecting all these years certain pulchritude conventions that are as essential as tipping my hat to a lady and walking out backwards when leaving the presence of royalty.' When I had finished the volume, however, I was still ignorant, for I did not find a blooming thing about what to do and what not to do. In all other matters, though, I found this the best book on beauty I have read in a long time—clear, informative and instructive in spite of a somewhat sugary style." Florenz Ziegfeld

+ Bookm 66:703 F '28 450w

"It may be conceded that all the girls would be better off if they followed the excellent advice herein contained. For Miss Cocks proclaims the modern gospel that beauty is far more than skin deep; it comes from within, from good circulation and good digestion, good humor, and inner harmony."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p31 N 6 '27 260w

Boston Transcript p2 F 25 '28 180w

COE, CHARLES FRANCIS. River pirate. 254p $2 (7s 6d) Putnam

28-9656

In this story, which is similar in form and nature to "Me—gangster" (Book Review Digest, 1927), Mr Coe has a young wrongdoer

just out of reform school tell of his career of thievery with Sailor Frink along the docks of Manhattan.

"A good cut above the usual adventure story of commerce by virtue of sterling merits of matter and manner, this biographical tale of a young crook by the author of 'Me, Gangster' deserves wide reading." Will Cuppy

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p16 My 20 '28 100w

Boston Transcript p6 Jl 3 '28 180w

"Taken at its face value, 'The River Pirate' is a notable addition to the crime library."

+ Ind 120:629 Je 30 '28 100w

"A lively account in autobiographical form of the life of a professional burglar of ships' material on the River Manhattan. Police launches, reformatory schools, warehouses impending, cliff-like, over the river make thrilling 'props.'" Raymond Mortimer

+ Nation and Ath 43:397 Je 23 '28 60w

Times [London] Lit Sup p414 My 31 '28 80w

COE, CHARLES FRANCIS. Swag. 243p $2 Putnam

28-24957

A country boy who has run away to the city is forced to pawn his ring. The pawn-broker offers him a job, and Johnny accepts, thus unsuspectingly joining a criminal gang for the disposal of stolen goods. Johnny is no crook, and when he finds out what the gang is up to he helps his policeman friend make a clean-up.

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p21 N 25 '28 70w

"The characters in 'Swag' have the stamp of plausibility at least, and the reader feels that the information regarding these sinister individuals is largely authentic."

+ Boston Transcript p3 N 17 '28 180w

COHEN, LESTER. Oscar Wilde; a play. 179p $2 Boni & Liveright

812 Wilde, Oscar 28-11208

"The play is a concoction of pieces of the record of Wilde vs. Marquess of Queensberry, snatches of documents from biographers ranging from Frank Harris to R. H. Sherard, titbits of the gossip that has abounded since Wilde's resurrection . . . thrown together after the fashion of the Mansfield-Clyde Fitch play, 'Beau Brummell.' "—N Y Evening Post

Reviewed by W. P. Eaton

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p11 Ag 19 '28 100w

Reviewed by H. E. Dounce

N Y Evening Post p14 Ap 14 '28 280w

"Whatever may be said for Mr. Cohen's play, and we do not condemn its reading for an evening's pastime, it is on the whole, a labor lost. And this leaves out of account all ethical suggestion. Oscar Wilde has not in him the stuff of drama."

— + N Y Times p14 D 30 '28 580w

Reviewed by Mitzi Kolisch

N Y World p8m My 13 '28 360w

"Not in a long while have we read any piece of work with so little excuse for existence."

— Sat R of Lit 5:41 Ag 11 '28 210w

"Mr Cohen shows skill in dialog and the scenes are well contrived."

+ Springf'd Republican p7f My 20 '28 170w

COHEN, OCTAVUS ROY. Florian Slappey goes abroad. 311p $2 Little

28-10863

The debonair darkey hero of Mr Cohen's Saturday Evening Post stories goes abroad, in this new collection, to act as "interpreter" for the Midnight Pictures Corporation, Inc.

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p14 Ag 26 '28 60w

"Not hilariously amusing." W. E. H.

— Boston Transcript p2 My 26 '28 550w

Cleveland Open Shelf p92 Jl '28

"Mr. Cohen has done his best for Florian, but the stories, while possessing all the earmarks (cauliflower) of humor, are disappointingly dull. Absurdity is piled on absurdity, and Mr. Cohen's skillful misuse of negro dialect grows thin and tiresome."

— Ind 120:557 Je 9 '28 120w

"If Octavus Roy Cohen's Birmingham negroes are funny in their native habitat they are still funnier against a foreign background."

+ N Y Times p19 Ap 22 '28 250w

COHEN, OCTAVUS ROY. Light shines through. 290p $2 Little

28-19132

Having willed his fortune to Naomi, so that she may marry the man she loves, John Avery goes off to sea, is shipwrecked and reported lost. In course of time Naomi marries her Don in spite of a posthumous letter from Avery warning her not to. The warning is fulfilled. Don is a great disappointment, and just as Naomi has begun to realize it and to regret John, the missing man turns up. His appearance puts a new kink in the situation.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p17 N 4 '28 70w

"His method is sentimental, to the verge of tears. It is sensational, to the verge of more."

— Boston Transcript p6 Ag 22 '28 200w

"Neither amusing nor exciting, the book is not in the same class with Mr. Cohen's negro dialect stories." W. R. Brooks

— Outlook 149:717 Ag 29 '28 100w

"It seems a pity that Mr. Cohen deserted his negroes, on whom he had a sure grip. This novel is practically trash—thin, weak, uninspired. There is nothing here for those who have advanced beyond the tabloids."

— Sat R of Lit 5:73 Ag 25 '28 100w

COHEN, OCTAVUS ROY. Spring tide. 262p $2 (7s 6d) Appleton

28-10865

A romance of the Florida land boom days in which love and real estate get hopelessly tangled up.

"Here is an active, obvious and readable comedy based on the Florida boom, so richly flavored with gentility that the poor, illiterate squatters who occasionally help thicken the plot will endear themselves to many readers."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p8 S 2 '28 120w

Boston Transcript p2 My 9 '28 1100w

"After reading 'Spring Tide,' one wishes that the author might have introduced into his novel the spontaneity, charm and light-heartedness of his tales of negro life. One characteristic inherent in the two types of writing alone remains—entertainment."

N Y Times p24 My 6 '28 250w

Times [London] Lit Sup p432 Je 7 '28 140w

COHEN, SOLOMON SOLIS, and GITHENS, THOMAS STOTESBURY. Pharmacotherapeutics, materia medica and drug action. 2009p $15 (63s) Appleton

615 Materia medica. Pharmacology. Therapeutics 28-6811

"The drugs here discussed have been classified according to their chief uses—in the main, a clinical classification, having in view the needs of practice, but always with due regard to chemistry and pharmacodynamics."—Preface

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:626 D '28

COLBY, NATHALIE (SEDGWICK) (MRS BAINBRIDGE COLBY). A man can build a house. 355p $2.50 Harcourt

28-24952

In a net spread for Eisenstein Ruby catches Kaufman, owner of the store. He marries her with a dream in his heart. Ruby knows nothing of the dream, having her mind on an "artist gentleman" who once noticed her in a cabaret. He, poor fellow, is drinking himself into worthlessness knowing that Joan is too good for him. To Kaufman and to Joan love is a searing pain for the unworthiness of their loved ones; but to Maria, Kaufman's maid, it is peace and fulfilment as she and her Carl build their home. The story is unfolded thru the thoughts and emotions of the principal characters.

"The chief virtue of Mrs. Colby's third novel —its predecessors were 'Black Stream' and 'Green Forest'—is the excellence of its technique. . . For me 'A Man Can Build a House' seems a deftly done novel, in which its author shows a gain in the handling of her peculiar style and her peculiar method of telling a story, but a novel whose theme has no essential significance." Herschel Brickell

— + Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p7 N 25 '28 800w

"In its conception and execution, the novel has a decidedly poetic quality. While the characters are perfectly natural and the story as a simple story runs on with interest sometimes running high, the sensitive reader is bound to feel a poetic symbolism in the various characters."

+ Boston Transcript p6 N 28 '28 350w

"She finely communicates a sense of tragedy, which is her outstanding achievement. Only at the end does she lean, somewhat too heavily, on melodrama; this and an over-confidence in her gift of phrase are the chief points to be made against Mrs. Colby's novel. It would, however, be ungracious to emphasize them. For one puts this book down not only with the sense of having had an enjoyable experience, but with a feeling that it is a work of art." T. S.

+ — New Repub 57:148 D 19 '28 250w

"This book is not as successful as either 'Green Forest' or 'Black Stream.' It is exciting, but not often, save in the pathetic form of Peter Kaufman, very moving; the people are clearly presented and understandable, but neither as interesting nor as sympathetic as those of the earlier books." E. J.

— + N Y Evening Post p8m D 1 '28 650w

"This new book is very uneven, and bad for the most part rather than good. If it is extremely clever, extremely penetrating in places, in others it is badly off key: melodramatic, hollow, forced. But it is a more interesting book, for all that, than 'Black Stream.'. . Mrs. Colby still shows, at bottom, originality and a vital spark."

— + N Y Times p7 N 11 '28 800w

"'A Man Can Build a House' gives us brilliantly the specimen-types of a great metropolis. When we read it we know that we have got some account of the Vanity Fair of our day —a much cheaper, a much more soul-destroying Vanity Fair than that of the day before yesterday." Padraic Colum

+ — Sat R of Lit 5:369 N 17 '28 1150w

"Mrs Colby adds to her reputation in this shrewd story of city people."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e D 9 '28 180w

COLE, GEORGE DOUGLAS HOWARD. Short history of the British working class movement, 1900-1927. 3v v 3 237p $2.50 Macmillan [6s Allen & U.]

331.8 Labor and laboring classes—Great Britain. Trade unions—Great Britain

(26-3234)

The third and final volume of Mr Cole's history of the British working-class movement covers the years from 1900 to 1927.

"Cole's book is the only one which treats the trade union, intellectual, coöperative, and political movements as one interwoven texture. The reviewer is using it as a text in his course on foreign labor movements." S. Perlman

+ Am Econ R 18:317 Je '28 710w

"Throughout, Mr. Cole has tried for impartiality. Although he has been closely associated with the movement he describes and his sympathy is apparent, he is studiously fair." C. F. Brand

+ Am Hist R 33:913 Jl '28 300w

Boston Transcript p5 F 18 '28 350w

"On the whole, it is an admirable book: clear, though never inspired in style; reasonably impartial, without being insipid; compact, yet more than an epitome." T. P. Peardon

+ Hist Outlook 19:39 Ja '28 220w

Hist Outlook 19:349 N '28 240w

"On the whole Mr. Cole has succeeded admirably. His treatment of the economic background in which the movement developed and the chapters at the end of each volume on the condition of the working classes are particularly helpful. He has, perhaps, devoted too much of his attention to industrial struggles and, at times, treated the political side of the movement in rather a perfunctory way." Keith Hutchison

+ — Nation 127:17 Jl 4 '28 1000w

Nation and Ath 42:544 Ja 7 '28 420w

"This third volume has, of course, a peculiar interest in that it deals with matters in which many of its readers will have been personally concerned, or of which at least they will have first-hand knowledge. At the same time the very nearness of the events makes it harder to dogmatise about their significance, and some of Mr. Cole's judgments on points that are still controversial will no doubt be disputed."

+ New Statesman 30:254 D 3 '27 750w

"Mr. Cole says in the preface that he has found it extraordinarily hard to make sense of a period so eventful and so discontinuous as the quarter of a century covered by the volume. He is modest enough to silence criticism, which is a good thing, for he deals with events so recent and so full of passion that he is unlikely to satisfy anybody. He has striven very hard to be impartial, and on the whole he has succeeded."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p943 D 15 '27 500w

COLE, GEORGE DOUGLAS HOWARD, and COLE, MRS MARGARET ISABEL (POSTGATE). Man from the river; a Wilson story. 302p $2 Macmillan [7s 6d Collins]

28-21188

No sooner had Superintendent Wilson arrived in Steeple-Tollesbury, where he intended to spend his vacation, than there was work for him to do. The body of Mr Meston of Warden, Hanborough and Meston was found in the river that very day. The more he investigated the more scandal Mr Wilson came across and it was a very tangled mass of evidence upon which he busied himself, instead of taking a vacation.

Booklist 25:125 D '28

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 S 23 '28 160w

Boston Transcript p6 D 1 '28 380w

"The mystery is cleverly concealed, and the story adequately, if not overwhelmingly, exciting." Francis Birrell

+ — Nation and Ath 43:500 Jl 14 '28 100w

"The solution is extremely ingenious; and if some of the practical details seem more than a little difficult, the logic of the murder is quite satisfactory."

+ — New Statesman 31:678 S 8 '28 150w

N Y Times p26 O 7 '28 200w

"The folk concerned in this narrative, including the superintendent, are alive and actively amusing or repellent as they rarely are in detective fiction. The pattern of the crime is admirably worked out in the end: this is a spirited and exciting story from the first page to the last." R. A. T.

+ Spec 140:983 Je 30 '28 170w

"The method by which the crime was committed is ingenious and original, but in its practical details makes some demands on credulity."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p582 Ag 9 '28 230w

COLEMAN, LAURENCE VAIL. Manual for small museums. 395p il $5 Putnam

069 Museums 27-12866

" 'No one is so well equipped to write a book of this nature, and we believe it will be found indispensable to those for whom it was prepared.' " (Pittsburgh Mo Bul) Contents: Organization; Administration; Curatorial work; Educational work; Research; Building.

Booklist 24:56 N '27
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:92 F '28
St Louis 26:4 Ja '28

COLEMAN, LOYD RING, and COMMINS, SAXE. Psychology; a simplification. 320p $3 Boni & Liveright

150 Psychology 27-15506

"A popular condensation surveying the various fields of psychology."—Cleveland Open Shelf

Cleveland Open Shelf p86 Jl '28

"Written in a straightforward, breezy and, at the same time, scholarly and polished style, the book is comparatively free from technical circumlocution and ambiguity. There is no attempt to grind an axe for any particular cult or 'ism.' If the volume frequently skims along the surface and adds little that is original to the maze of previous contributions, it remains, perhaps, the better synthesis—a refreshing, tonic and witty résumé of some of the more interesting popular aspects of a subject still in its adolescent period."

+ N Y Times p6 Je 3 '28 600w

"Their book is a useful guide, and in view of the complexities of the country through which the journey goes, the relief of an easy and often engaging touch is welcome. This accompanies the reader through to the end. There is a bibliography with two-or-three-line appraisals that are often trenchant; and it is no slight feat to make a book-list interesting." Joseph Jastrow

Sat R of Lit 4:826 Ap 28 '28 1000w

COLEMAN, MRS SATIS N. Bells; their history, legends, making, and uses; with a foreword by Otis W. Caldwell. 462p il $2 Rand

789.5 Bells. Chimes and chiming 28-5256

"An interesting and readable book about bells, their history, uses and the many legends connected with them. There is a chapter on how bells are made, and the excellent illustrations include musical scores of bell chimes."—Cleveland Open Shelf

Booklist 25:56 N '28
Cleveland Open Shelf p115 N '28
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:353 Je '28
St Louis 26:384 D '28

COLEMAN, MRS SATIS N. Creative music in the home. 399p il trade ed $5 Lewis E. Myers & co., 250 Park Av., N.Y.

780.7 Music—Instruction and study. Musical instruments 28-10102

"Explicit directions are given on how to make simple musical instruments, drums, rattles, tuning glasses and bowls, marimbas, bells, pipes of Pan, horns, flutes, lyres, banjos and so forth. No household article is too homely to be overlooked—bottles, chopping-bowls, pot-lids, table-ware, cigar-boxes, all may be put to musical purpose. Any child who can use hammer, saw and nails and who can follow printed directions may, with the aid of this book, turn out a delightful variety of musical instruments. And possibly he may learn to play them too, through becoming acquainted with the simpler principles of musical theory. Ninety simple tunes are provided, set down in the earlier chapters in a system of number notation, invented by Mrs. Coleman for children too immature to attempt conventional staff notation." —Bookm

Booklist 25:17 O '28

"The present volume at least offers a suggestive, and to any child a truly thrilling, series of first musical experiences, and it ought therefore be warmly welcomed by parents everywhere. The book is splendidly printed, profusely illustrated and written sympathetically on the child's level." Agnes de Lima

+ Bookm 67:707 Ag '28 170w

"Satis N. Coleman, music investigator for the Lincoln School of Teachers College and author of 'Creative Music for Children,' has here provided the basis for a dozen books. In itself it is almost too heavy and comprehensive to be a loved book. But an ocean of material is here on how to make simple musical instruments, how to play them, music stories of many sorts, accounts of the scale, discussion of bird songs and many tunes for children to play. The book is a treasure house. Many artists and at least 100 photographers have contributed to the volume, which takes its place on publication as one of the essential books on the subject." Ernestine Evans

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p8 Je 17 '28 600w

Cleveland Open Shelf p99 S '28
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:605 N '28
Wis Lib Bul 24:256 O '28

COLLET, LEON WILLIAM. Structure of the Alps; foreword by O. T. Jones. 289p il $6.50 Longmans [16s E. Arnold]

554.94 Alps. Geology—Alps

The author, who is professor of geology and paleontology in the University of Geneva, sets forth the latest views of Alpine tectonics. His book is the only recent work in the English language dealing with the subject. Since it is not possible to treat the structure of every part of the Alps he has chosen as typical examples those regions best known to tourists, such as Zermatt, Lauterbrunnen, Grindelwald, Mont Blanc, the Bernina pass, the Maloggia pass and the Aosta valley. Illustrated with numerous plates, maps and diagrams.

"The book is, of course, written for the geologist, though it is so very well defined in its statements, so carefully preparatory in its conceptions, that an interested layman can follow it with not too great difficulty. Those who are seekers after a new theory of the earth will find plenty to ponder over in this history of the miraculous and yet natural phenomena of the formation and growth of the youngest and greatest mountain of Europe."

+ Boston Transcript p1 Ap 7 '28 220w

"There is no question that Prof. Collet's book will serve a very useful purpose in attracting the interest of travellers to the geology of the Alps; students in universities and schools will doubtless also be grateful to him for his lucid treatment of a difficult subject." P. G. H. Boswell

+ Nature 121:412 Mr 17 '28 600w

COLLINS, ARCHIE FREDERICK. Radio amateur's handbook; a complete, authentic and informative work on wireless telegraphy and telephony; rev. by George C. Baxter Rowe. 5th ed 424p il $2 Crowell

621.384 Radio communication 27-19264

A new and revised edition of a useful book on radio which is brought up to date by the inclusion of matter covering developments in the field since 1922, and which is newly illustrated with drawings and diagrams.

Booklist 24:171 Ja '28
Cleveland Open Shelf p127 D '27

COLLINS, DALE. Vanity under the sun. 331p $2 Little [7s 6d Heinemann]
28-19133

A worried American business man loses his memory in the shock of the Yokohama earthquake. Renaming himself Louis Kingsclere he sets out to travel and please himself. In Hong Kong he falls in love with a young woman who has a secret as good as his own. They marry and sail to Netherlandia, the scene of "The sentimentalists" (Book Review Digest, 1927) where their love story ends as, thru a startling episode, Kingsclere regains his memory and loses his secret and Leila.

Boston Transcript p3 Ag 18 '28 400w

"The familiar tropic stage is given a fresh descriptive vividness; there is some excellent character study, and the story, interesting in itself, is psychologically sound and decidedly well told." F. H. M.

+ N Y Evening Post p5 S 8 '28 140w

"The author of 'Ordeal' and 'The Sentimentalists' gives us an extraordinary and fascinating mixture of adventure and psychological analysis placed against a strange and exotic background ...The strange character of the mysterious Louis Kingsclere, the man conscious of his own riddle, but not of the answer, is done with a clarity and a deft firmness as satisfying as they are exceptional."

+ N Y Times p6 Ag 12 '28 640w

"Mr. Collins has been content to work at a cheap, melodramatic situation, and naturally he has not felt it worth while to expend himself on it. The result is a wildly improbable yarn in which passion preponderates so much over thought as to make the book rather sordid." Harriet Hastings

— Outlook 150:794 S 12 '28 150w

"With 'Vanity under the Sun' Dale Collins should find himself in an assured position as a vigorous interpreter of the exotic. He not only writes of events and people that beat upon our emotions; he puts questions that shake our complacency... Mr. Collins can write; he controls his material in the interests of effectiveness, and he colors it with a sure art." R. B. Macdougall

+ Sat R of Lit 5:69 Ag 25 '28 400w

"A powerful and exciting story, pleasantly relieved of satirical humour and by admirably vivid and natural descriptions of foreign scenes."

+ Spec 141:463 O 6 '28 150w

"The best of the four novels he has written."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p854 N 15 '28 560w

COLLINS, FREDERICK LEWIS. American travelcharts and travel chats. 387p il $2.50 Bobbs

917.3 United States—Description and travel —Guide-books
28-11576

Informal descriptive sketches of the cities of the United States with a chart showing the distribution of time and money spent in each. The last third of the book applies the same method to sight-seeing tours thru different sections of the country, and to the West Indies. Illustrated with drawings by Howard W. Willard.

Booklist 25:23 O '28

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 Je 24 '28 180w

"A book is this to make us realize with an honorable pride the travel-lure of our own country whose heart is the city of Washington, 'the most beautiful city of the New World'—perhaps the most beautiful in all the world." F. B.

+ Boston Transcript p5 Je 2 '28 300w

"Excellent and very different. There are few superfluous words in it. The author gives a maximum of facts and indulges in a minimum of rhetoric—even about the Grand Canyon." W. E. G.

+ Christian Century 45:857 Jl 5 '28 180w

Cleveland Open Shelf p89 Jl '28

N Y Times p20 My 20 '28 270w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:495 O '28

R of Rs 78:26 Jl '28 80w

"The book might have been developed into interpretative sketches or into a real book of information and suggestions; but, as it stands, it is neither."

Springf'd Republican p10 My 2 '28 540w

COLLINS, HUBERT EDWIN. Warpath & cattle trail; with a foreword by Hamlin Garland. 296p il $3.50 Morrow

978 Ranch life. Cheyenne Indians. Arapaho Indians. Indian territory
28-22305

"Tells the story of a frontier trading post on the Chisholm Trail, and contains a great deal about the Cheyenne and Arapahoe Indians and their leaders."—No Am

---

"A book as clean and true and straightforward as Darwin's 'Voyage of the Beagle.'. . Here is a true book about the frontier, one necessary but difficult to write, for it is always more difficult to set down things as they are than it is to indulge in flights of fancy." C: J. Finger

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p18 N 4 '28 800w

"A unique chronicle, written in simple and direct fashion, and full of keen observation and human understanding."

+ N Y Times p24 O 14 '28 450w

Reviewed by Herschel Brickell

No Am 226:adv N '28 40w

COLLINS, JOSEPH. The doctor looks at marriage and medicine. 313p $3 Doubleday, Doran

173 Marriage. Woman. Medicine—Practice. Physicians
28-25746

These articles, reprinted from Harper's, Cosmopolitan, and elsewhere, discuss with Dr Collins's usual frankness and vigor, in Part I, woman and marriage; and in Part II, the doctor and his patient, and the doctor and the neurologist.

"Dr. Collins's book, along with the equally sane and helpful one of Professor Groves, is on the side of the rectitudes that stabilize marriage even as they impose a pragmatic conception of it consistent with human ideals and limitations." Joseph Jastrow

+ N Y Evening Post p9m O 27 '28 1300w

"What Dr. Collins tries to do in this book, or rather this series of sketches, is to reason from experience. Whether one agrees with every conclusion or not it is impossible to deny that he has a firm footing in reality. It is this that keeps him from fitting neatly into any doctrinal pattern." R. L. Duffus

+ N Y Times p5 N 11 '28 1100w

"If in his last volume he seems not only less positive and more authoritative, but also more interesting than in some of the earlier volumes, it is, partly so at least, because he has enriched it with so many incidents from his own wide experience."

+ Sat R of Lit 5:490 D 8 '28 100w

COLUM, PADRAIC. Creatures. 56p il $2.50 Macmillan

821
27-20377

Creatures, some strange, some familiar, form the subject of these verses for which Boris Artzybasheff has made fascinating and fantastic drawings.

"Many of these poems were written years ago. I have heard the author speak them in his inimitable measured chant so that the shapes he evoked seemed to hover about his shoulders and at his right hand and his left hand. Reading them over alone I find them as fresh and profound as ever. The book is elaborately decorated with drawings in black and white by Boris Artzybasheff. Delightful as these are, they are too bold for the text, and the publishers have made a more serious mistake in clumsily printing the book on paper like cardboard." Babette Deutsch

+ — Bookm 67:443 Je '28 180w

"The poetry of Padraic Colum is never more charming or more arresting in its precise utterance than when he is writing about animals. He manages to capture the essence—so far as it may be communicated to mere mortals—of the creatures about whom he is writing, fixing them lastingly in a phrase or a stanza or a short poem."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p4 Ap 1 '28 580w

"These creatures—and these verses—are all intriguing in manner and in observation. But the charm of the volume is not the poet's work only. The drawings by Boris Artzybasheff contribute a good share of it. Altogether 'Creatures' is a volume that its possessor would show to his friends, holding the book himself and reading out the lines. For everyone, except those—if there are any left—who believe that art should elevate and poetry ennoble, 'Creatures' should prove irresistible." R. B. C.

+ Boston Transcript p6 N 26 '27 480w

"The shy, reticent love which knits him with the lesser creations of the earth gives warm life and charm to his verses." Percy Hutchison

+ N Y Times p2 Ap 29 '28 220w

Reviewed by Gustav Davidson

N Y World p11m Ap 22 '28 320w

"Here is a modern pendant to those fascinating ancient bestiaries, a pendant with its own fabulous glamour and extraordinarily apt descriptive epithet." W: R. Benét

+ Sat R of Lit 5:222 O 13 '28 200w

World Tomorrow 11:348 Ag '28 40w

"The book is a charming little piece of Celtic fantasy, with subtle and skilful variations in matter and metre." F: E. Pierce

+ Yale R n s 17:798 Jl '28 120w

COLUM, PADRAIC. Fountain of youth; stories to be told. 206p il $1.75 Macmillan

398 27-24380

These stories have all been selected from the author's various books and have been especially adapted by him, as the subtitle states "to be told."

Booklist 24:251 Mr '28

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p8 Ja 29 '28 400w

Boston Transcript p6 Ap 21 '28 230w

Cleveland Open Shelf p80 Je '28

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:229 Ap '28

St Louis 26:82 Mr '28

Sat R of Lit 4:492 D 31 '27 120w

COLVIN, FRED HERBERT, and COLVIN, HENRY FRED. Aircraft handbook; a collection of facts and suggestions concerning the construction and care of planes, motors and instruments for those interested in modern aircraft. 3d ed 464p il $4 McGraw

629.13 Airplanes 28-7522

"Presents briefly simple aëroplane theory, methods for rigging and assembling planes, description of instruments and their use, air commerce regulations, and airport construction, and gives complete information on the construction, operation, and maintenance of the standard engines."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

Booklist 24:411 Jl '28

N Y New Tech Bks 13:31 Jl '28

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:331 Je '28

COMMUNITY WORKERS OF THE NEW YORK GUILD FOR THE JEWISH BLIND. Samples; comp. by Lillie Ryttenberg and Beatrice Lang. 406p $2.50 Liveright

Short stories—Collections

The fourth annual collection of short stories compiled by the New York Guild for the Jewish blind contains autographed contributions by leading writers of the short story. The stories are republished from magazines or other anthologies.

Reviewed by C. P. Fadiman

Nation 125:738 D 28 '27 70w

"A very pleasant volume, whose lack of pretension absolves it of any sins of omission." Rose Lee

+ N Y Evening Post p15 O 22 '27 260w

Reviewed by J: Macy

Sat R of Lit 4:517 Ja 14 '28 700w

Wis Lib Bul 23:261 N '27

World Tomorrow 11:279 Je '28 60w

COMSTOCK, HARRIET THERESA (SMITH) (MRS PHILIP COMSTOCK). Penelope's web. 340p $2 Doubleday, Doran

28-21583

Penelope is the last and the least wanted addition to the Dane family. Her mother dies, and because her father is a shiftless creature, John, the eldest, assumes responsibility for the family. In the village community social lines are sharply drawn, with the Danes on the wrong side of the line. Penelope makes mistakes, but she has the proper spirit, and with her brothers John and Billy to help her, finds happiness and the right man.

"There is a good story in this situation of Penelope Dane and her brothers, but it would be a better story if it were more simply and naturally told."

+ — Boston Transcript p2 S 1 '28 250w

"If Harriet Comstock could rid herself of over-sentimentality, she would be a capital novel writer. She has a strong gift of characterization, her style is pleasantly flowing and she weaves a good yarn, but she permits an excess of tenderness to dilute the strength of her work. 'Penelope's Web' is an outstanding example of this weakness, the more the pity since it has much else to commend it."

+ — N Y Times p13 Ag 12 '28 400w

"Because Harriet Comstock can tell a good story and make her characters surprisingly lifelike, people are going to read 'Penelope's Web.'"

+ Sat R of Lit 5:173 S 29 '28 100w

COMSTOCK, SARAH. Roads to the Revolution; with here and there a byway to colonial days. 455p il $5 Macmillan

973.3 United States—History—Revolution. United States—Historic houses, etc. 28-695

In twenty journeys radiating from three centers, Boston, New York, and Philadelphia, the author visits the scenes of the Revolutionary war, by this means tracing the entire course of events.

Booklist 24:278 Ap '28

"A fair knowledge on the part of the reader of Revolution chronology would add much to the pleasurable use of the book. It is all very clearly and succinctly put and is well illustrated by many photographs."

+ Bookm 67:xxxvi My '28 200w

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 Mr 4 '28 120w

Boston Transcript p3 Ja 28 '28 280w

Cleveland Open Shelf p89 Jl '28

"If you have already read or used in a similar way her previous volume of some years ago, 'Old Roads From the Heart of New York,' you will not need to be assured of the interest, the competency and the charm of this new one."

+ N Y Times p24 F 19 '28 360w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:411 Jl '28

"She has woven into her narrative here an anecdote and there a description, now an allusion and again a bit of historical chronicle with the result that her book has interest if not much significance. It should prove a pleasant commentary for those who are covering the routes she describes."

COMSTOCK, SARAH—Continued
+ Sat R of Lit 4:577 F 4 '28 100w
Springf'd Republican p7f Mr 11 '28 100w
Times [London] Lit Sup p594 Ag 16 '28 50w
Wis Lib Bul 24:89 Mr '28

CONGRESSIONAL CLUB, WASHINGTON, D.C., comp. Congressional club cook book; favorite national and international recipes; with a foreword by Mrs Herbert C. Hoover and several special articles by eminent government authorities. pop ed 799p il $2.50 The club, room 70, Capitol, Washington, D.C.
641.5 Cookery 27-24072

"A collection of some three thousand favorite recipes, each signed by some one prominent in the official world of Washington. Every part of the United States and 59 nations are represented. The first hundred pages give foreign recipes arranged by nations; then follow the American dishes arranged according to use. The volume is indexed by contributors, by nations, and according to use. Heads of federal agencies dealing with various aspects of food contribute brief introductory articles, and there are useful suggestions from various members of the Club."—J Home Econ

"The book is well indexed, but the profusion of similar recipes with no distinction save that of different contributors would drive most any cook mad. . . Many of these recipes may be good, but the chances of finding the best of the collection are slight for those readers unacquainted with the culinary abilities of the authors. In fact, the Congressional Club Cook Book is of more value as a political directory than as a recipe book." Lettie Gay
— + Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p15 Jl 29 '28 500w

"It is an unusual cook book and from it the housewife will get many new ideas."
+ Boston Transcript p6 Je 2 '28 120w

"A much-talked-of, amusing, and suggestive collection."
+ J Home Econ 20:507 Jl '28 70w

CONKLIN, EDMUND SMITH. Principles of abnormal psychology. 457p $4.50 Holt
132 Psychology, Pathological 27-16899

The author, who is professor of psychology in the University of Oregon, places his emphasis on the psychology of abnormal behavior, not upon methods of treatment. Every phase of abnormal behavior is discussed and illustrated by concrete clinical cases.

"For better or worse, the book does not far transcend the level of a compilation. The accuracy of reporting what one expects of a good compiler appears to be present, and must not be undervalued. The regret must be repeated, that reference to sources was (intentionally) not made easier. There is further evidence of indirect contact with the large portion of the field concerned with psychopathology. In no other way is it possible to account for the relative status in the book of Kraepelin and Bleuler." F. L. Wells
— + Am J Psychol 40:510 Jl '28 650w

"If the work is not brilliant or penetrating, it does have to its merit a balanced and undogmatic tone which one rarely encounters in most of the literature on abnormal psychology. As an introductory text for under-graduate students the volume is unquestionably worth while; in itself it makes no contributions to theory." Herbert Blumer
— + Am J Soc 33:839 Mr '28 350w

"Professor Conklin is comfortably well read, it is true, and he writes without flagrant offense against literacy or the taboos of conventional decency. But his book is little more than a rehearsal of the surface manifestations of cases he has read about, heard of or viewed as a bookish amateur. And the picture of the undergraduates of the University of Oregon, prating fluently of 'psychosis,' 'psycho-neurosis' and 'the always fascinating field of the abnormal' is ghastly to reflect upon. Professor Conklin's book is liable to impart only a sterile and unintelligent knowledge about freakish behavior." Raymond Weaver
— + Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p18 Mr 11 '28 580w

"Professor Conklin's book, written in a popular style and rich in material, appeals to students and general readers alike. It would be valuable alone as a contribution to the lore of abnormal psychology, the author being more intent on presenting the facts, along with current interpretations of them, than on criticising theories and calling authors to account." E. N.
+ Boston Transcript p2 Ag 13 '27 880w

"The discussion throughout is tolerant, balanced, unprejudiced, and the student is given a good impression of the tentative basis of many prevailing ideas and conjectures. Criticism is by no means shirked, but it is always genial, sensible, and restrained. . . With Conklin's volume available as a guide, undergraduate courses in abnormal psychology are destined to become both more popular and more sound." L. S. Hollingworth
+ J Philos 25:136 Mr 1 '28 380w

Reviewed by E. B. Barrett
New Repub 52:343 N 16 '27 180w
Times [London] Lit Sup p523 Jl 12 '28 300w

CONNINGTON, J. J., pseud. See Stewart, A.W.

CONNOLLY, MYLES. Mr Blue. 152p $1.50 Macmillan
28-19748

Mr Blue lived in a gaudy packing box house on top of a New York skyscraper, and preached a strange gospel to his friends, a gospel which was a mixture of hedonism and a Christ-like philosophy. Then someone left him a huge legacy, which he hastily spent, and he was poorer than ever. At last he gave his life to save that of a poor comrade.

"Mr. Blue moves jerkily through vague experiences as tramp, millionaire, religious visionary and what not without evoking much emotion beyond curiosity and a faint distress. He is a case-history, but little, if anything, more."
— Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 S 16 '28 100w

"As a story the novel is unique because, despite its great improbabilities, the author does hold your attention to his strange hero."
Boston Transcript p2 S 12 '28 320w

"Myles Connolly has put us all in his debt by writing Mr. Blue which has the sharp actualities of a genuine biography—the tale of a Spy of God sent here briefly to witness against us and our immense and futile follies. . . This extraordinary record of a freed and joyous spirit should be in the hands of everyone who believes that a safe-deposit box is the snuggest place in the world in which to secrete one's soul." A. McC. S.
+ Cath World 128:116 O '28 500w

"Mr. Connolly adapts his form well to the difficult task of lending verisimilitude to the anomaly of Mr. Blue, and if the reader wonders at the incredibility of the character there is equal room for wonder in the adequacy of his portrayal."
N Y Times p7 Ag 26 '28 400w

CONRAD, JOSEPH. Conrad to a friend; 150 selected letters from Joseph Conrad to Richard Curle; ed. with an introd. and notes by Richard Curle. 192p $2.50 Doubleday, Doran
B or 92

The 150 letters contained in this volume have been selected from the many that Conrad wrote between 1912 and 1924 to Mr Curle, afterward his literary executor and biographer.

Some of them are notes of the briefest description and some are long letters of great importance, giving his literary opinions.

"The volume of letters proves what was already beyond cavil, that Conrad, in English, was not a good letter-writer. . . Mr. Curle has revealed himself as an industrious and faithful commentator, but he has contributed, in these new volumes, no very startling sidelights upon Conrad's complex personality." W: McFee
— Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p4 N 4 '28 740w

New Statesman 32:290 D 8 '28 480w

New Statesman 32:330 D 15 '28 100w

"That they should be on record is perhaps well. At worst, their publication stifles any possibility that Mr. Curle has deprived the Conradians of any scrap. But the letters themselves contribute nothing. They do, however, by their repeated invitation to the recipient to visit the Conrads, and by their reiterations of affection, give Conrad's own assurance of his confidence in Curle."
— + N Y Times p2 N 4 '28 80w

Reviewed by Harry Hansen
N Y World p8e O 28 '28 500w

CONRAD, JOSEPH. Letters from Joseph Conrad, 1895-1924; ed. with introd. and notes by Edward Garnett. 313p il $3.50 Bobbs

B or 92 Garnett, Edward, ed. 28-8754

These letters from Joseph Conrad to Edward Garnett, written from 1895 to 1924, are warm with appreciation of Garnett as friend and as literary critic. In them Conrad pours out the problems that beset him with the writing of each book, and records the alternating tides of optimism and despair.

Booklist 24:399 Jl '28

"Though this reflection of his own feelings about his work runs through the letters like a taut thread, and makes the book one of the most interesting literary documents that exists, there is much else that makes it extremely entertaining as well. Each letter is, in a way, the free explosion of a wound-up spring, each letter is released into easy, molten words of the strength which at his desk was so often a silent and unhappy prisoner." Robert Littell
+ Bookm 67:xxii Jl '28 1000w

"It is no exaggeration to describe the present collection of letters of Joseph Conrad as of paramount importance to English Literature. Apart from their poignant interest as the outpourings of a great though troubled spirit, a spirit groping painfully for articulation in an unfamiliar medium, they furnish us with valuable data on the vexed question of the way masterpieces come into being and of the impression those masterpieces make upon undoubted judges during the first impact." W: McFee
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p1 Ap 1 '28 1250w

"An important volume, supplementing as it does Jean-Aubry's valuable 'Life and Letters.' It might, indeed, be called Conrad's literary autobiography." K. S.
+ Boston Transcript p1 Je 2 '28 550w

Cath World 128:247 N '28 350w

"In the earlier letters he reports his struggle with and for words, but the very letters in which he laments the toil that every paragraph cost him are themselves written in an English of charm and distinction."
+ Christian Century 45:980 Ag 9 '28 100w

"I think that the present series of letters will interest writers as much as the more diffuse life and letters, edited by G. Jean-Aubry, will interest readers. The lights on Conrad's social personality are few and most of them are charming, but not particularly significant: The two things which one can find nowhere else are Conrad's attitude toward his work and his attitude toward the public." Gilbert Seldes
Dial 85:249 S '28 1600w

Reviewed by Barrington Gates
Nation and Ath 43:464 Jl 7 '28 730w

"It is a decidedly worth-while and rewarding volume, and not alone an interesting supplement to the 'Life and Letters.' Far more fully and in greater detail than that book, this one gives, in his own words, the story of Conrad's life as a writer—his literary development and his difficulties in composition, his struggles, hopes, fears, dejections, disappointments, successes, achievements and exultations." G. W. Harris
+ N Y Evening Post p12 Ap 7 '28 1100w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:342 Je '28

"These letters of Conrad are an open invitation into the workshop. There never was a writer so completely and single-mindedly devoted to his craft. . . Of the deeper qualities; the inward gaze, the recognition of abysmal horrors, the mitigating beauty and heroism, we can say no more now, except in a poor, trite way that here is the Conrad whom we reverence—and shrink from." R: Church
+ Spec 141:23 Jl 7 '28 1450w

Springf'd Republican p7f Ap 29 '28 920w

Times [London] Lit Sup p483 Je 23 '28 880w

COOK, ELSIE LESLIE. See Thornton-Cook, E. T.

COOKE, JOHN D., ed. Minor Victorian poets. (Modern student's lib.) 615p $1 Scribner

821.08 English poetry—Collections 28-8642

Apparently all the poets of this period are "minor" except Tennyson and Browning, since these are the only ones excluded. It is something of a shock to find Matthew Arnold, Francis Thompson, Thomas Hardy and Rudyard Kipling reckoned among the minor poets, but the book, apart from its misleading title, is a representative collection of the poetry of this period.

Reviewed by B. R. Redman
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 My 13 '28 120w

"The individual must make his own choice as to the major or minor qualities of these poets. If to him Hardy is a major, so let him be, but let the individual also be thankful for an amiable anthology of Victorian poetry that is a good book for the bedside shelf. Or for the classroom."
+ Boston Transcript p4 Ap 25 '28 280w

Sat R of Lit 4:766 Ap 14 '28 220w

Springf'd Republican p7f Ap 22 '28 200w

Wis Lib Bul 24:160 My '28

COOLEY, CHARLES HORTON. Life and the student. 273p $2.50 Knopf

. 814 27-18905

For descriptive note see Annual for 1927.

"To have known Professor Cooley personally is a rare privilege; but having missed that good fortune the next best thing is to see him revealed as he stands out in this book, humane, wise, simple, reverent, intuitive, magnanimous, gently humorous, and with a profound love of people—all sorts of people. No wonder sociologists consider him the most philosophic mind in all their group." A. J. Todd
+ Am J Soc 33:1008 My '28 960w

"He has mellowness, humor, breadth, and a shrewd but uncynical comprehension of contemporary life. The distinction between classes which is based on heredity rather than function and ability is abhorrent to him, yet he remains a philosopher, not a propagandist. His is one of those rare, meditative note-books to which one can turn again and again." E. H. Walton
+ Bookm 67:200 Ap '28 160w

COOLEY, C: H.—Continued
Cleveland Open Shelf p6 Ja '28
Educ R 75:156 Mr '28 550w

Reviewed by G. T. Buswell
El School J 28:635 Ap '28 350w

" 'Life and the Student' will, I think, gather a quiet reputation for itself, and be read and valued, long after most of the current books that have bawled their way into the marketplace have been shouldered out of the way by their younger competitors. Hitherto we have had to go to a man like Havelock Ellis for such a book; for the humanism of most of our 'humanist' critics has been acerbic and sterile; and it is a great delight to discover such a fine harmony of thought and feeling and observation, of special training and wide reading, such a wide field of experience and such a sharp focus, in a native thinker." L: Mumford
+ New Repub 54:226 Ap 4 '28 530w

"Without coupling or comparing, Professor Cooley with any of the famous and familiar, one may say that his is an unusual mind, whose quality does not appear in any particular charm or vigor of style, but in a combination of freshness and sanity, originality and reasonableness, and in this respect is a little like Joubert's. He is independent but not eccentric."
+ Sat R of Lit 4:681 Mr 17 '28 500w
Times [London] Lit Sup p14 Ja 5 '28 30w

COOLIDGE, DANE. Gun-smoke. 231p $2 Dutton
28-7332

Gun-smoke rides into a Texas town on Watch-eye, his trick pony. He rides out with the money and guns of bad-man Plunkett and his gang who unwisely wagered that Watch-eye couldn't run. Along with the money and guns Gun-smoke accumulates considerable ill-will. It follows him to the ranch of Colonel Blood and his daughter who have been cheated by Plunkett. Gun-smoke joyously makes their cause his own and lives up to his pseudonym, winning the battle and the girl.

"Mr. Coolidge has already won the reputation of writing some of the liveliest and most colorful of these tales that are now being produced, and this is quite the best he has yet turned out."
+ N Y Times p18 Jl 1 '28 240w
Springf'd Republican p7f Jl 1 '28 20w

COOPER, ANICE PAGE. Authors and others. 190p il $2 Doubleday, Doran
928 Authors. Artists 27-25599

Twenty-four informal and informative sketches of authors and artists who are making contributions to the literature of the present.

Booklist 24:280 Ap '28
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:300 My '28

COOPER, CLAYTON SEDGWICK. Latin America—men and markets. 466p il $3 Ginn
918 Spanish America. Spanish America—Economic conditions 27-20206

"Mr. Cooper's chief object has been to present briefly the 'fundamental facts relative to trade and business conditions' in each of the Latin-American states, so that the business man, the student, and the general reader in the United States may gain 'some comprehensive knowledge of Latin-America as a whole.' The author believes that our lack of interest in, and knowledge of, Latin-America has affected our trade and economic relationships; hence, when this fault is corrected, closer commercial relations will follow."—Hist Outlook

Booklist 24:203 F '28

"A factual and informative book by an expert on international commerce. It has the form and style of a text book and will be of especial value for reference." W. E. G.
+ Christian Century 45:20 Ja 5 '28 60w

"The author well understands the Latin-American temperament, and has brought together some sound and timely advice in his opening chapter on 'Understanding Latin-America.' In his second chapter a much too brief, flippant, and, therefore, unsatisfactory summary (ten pages), of 400 years of 'Historical Background' is given to the reader. Chapters three to seventeen, inclusive, deal in an encyclopedic fashion with the social and economic conditions of the separate countries or groups of countries. In this connection, the reviewer believes that one could read with as much profit any Encyclopedia or Year Book summary." A. C. Wilgus
+ — Hist Outlook 19:93 F '28 320w

"Mr. Cooper's book is suited for use in giving elementary training to prospective salesmen and should be of use in commercial colleges."
N Y Times p15 Ja 15 '28 320w
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:226 Ap '28

"We especially commend Mr. Cooper's first two chapters—'Understanding Latin Americans' and 'Historic Background.' Business men are not the only ones who would do well to read these chapters. Our politicians can profit from them as well."
+ R of Rs 77:16 F '28 100w

COOPER, COURTNEY RYLEY. Golden bubble. 302p $2 Little 28-5532

Denver in days of the gold rush is the scene of the story. Judson Moberly, of Kansas City, ruined thru the selfishness of his fiancée, goes to the new gold fields near Denver. Here success comes to him in a new love affair and as leader of the rangers.

"The story strikes me as mighty true of the times and told in a way that makes it mighty easy reading." Will James
+ Bookm 67:713 Ag '28 100w

"Another of Mr. Cooper's earnestly dignified romances of the Old West. A worthy successor to this author's 'Oklahoma.' " Will Cuppy
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 F 12 '28 80w

"Mr. Cooper is doing the world a real benefit with his stories; for they give their readers an entertaining story and at the same time a certain amount of true history."
+ Boston Transcript p6 My 26 '28 350w
Cleveland Open Shelf p66 My '28

Reviewed by E. C. Beckwith
N Y World p11m Mr 18 '28 130w
Wis Lib Bul 24:162 My '28

COOPER, MONTE. Death near the river. 267p $2 Holt
28-22144

On receipt of his friend's desperate letter Harris starts at once for the shantyboat house in the Mississippi canebrake. Sheridan, a newspaperman, goes with him. But in spite of their forced journey they arrive too late: Charles is gone; his wife is dead, murdered. Voodooism and negro superstition play a large part in this murder in the canebrake.

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 O 28 '28 60w
Boston Transcript p6 N 7 '28 130w

"The story is absorbing, and it moves swiftly, all the events taking place within twenty-four hours."
+ N Y Times p30 N 11 '28 220w

COPPARD, ALFRED EDGAR. Collected poems. 97p $2.50 Knopf
821 28-27675

This edition of collected poems makes once more available poems of two earlier volumes, Hips and haws and Pelagea, which have been out of print, and offers at the same time the author's late work.

"Coppard is sometimes so old-fashioned as to use not merely traditional metres but even inversion and antiquated stresses. But this lack of originality has not impaired the quality of his work. He can bestow upon the tritest of themes—the betrayal of a lover, the oncoming of evening, youth's vanishing—words and cadences that give it new values. A nice choice in phrasing, a sardonic abruptness, a fine sense of melody, combine to give a fresh lustre to the oldest story." Babette Deutsch

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p5 N 25 '28 1100w

New Statesman 32:296 D 8 '28 40w

Reviewed by J: Crawford

N Y Evening Post p9m N 3 '28 300w

"Mr. Coppard is as definitely a poet as a short story writer, getting into his verse the same effects of life crystallized with gem-like precision and clarity, the same apparently casual and yet deliberate music, and the same deep compassion and understanding as the finest of his stories show." H. M.

+ Spec 141:sup873 D 8 '28 800w

COPPLESTONE, BENNET, pseud. See Kitchin, F: H.

CORBETT, ELIZABETH F. Walt; the good gray poet speaks for himself. 331p $2.50 Stokes

Whitman, Walt—Fiction 28-5000

Here is a new and most effective method of biographical writing. Walt Whitman's life story is unfolded in a series of dialogues wherein he talks wth the person or persons of importance to him at the time, or in which others talk about him. The author writes a concise introductory note setting the stage for each of the dialogues. The result is natural, graphic and compelling.

Booklist 24:364 Je '28

"It is obvious that such a book, with its merciless stream of talk, would require a remarkable skill to keep Walt Whitman from degenerating into a terrifying bore. In this instance the method defeats the author. Her Whitman is pleasantly commonplace."

— + Bookm 67:xl Mr '28 280w

"It would be difficult to overpraise the skill with which Miss Corbett has selected her episodes and characterized, by their turns of speech, the various figures who appear in these dialogues." Van Wyck Brooks

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p5 Ap 1 '28 960w

"The treatment is clever and concise, yet it does not thoroughly serve to make Whitman alive. Nevertheless, the book translates into popular terms the life of this idling figure who loved the sea, who remembered Lafayette, and who stood for honesty and unswerving purpose in his work."

+ Boston Transcript p2 F 21 '28 250w

"He comes before us like a figure on the stage speaking in his own proper voice and in dramatic contact with the men and women who molded his career or whose lives he himself contributed to mold. No regular dramatization of the story could have conveyed as many of its vital elements as this skillfully contrived piece of dramatic art." Van Wyck Brooks

+ Ind 120:412 Ap 28 '28 1300w

"Miss Corbett has a distinct flair for the dramatic. She also has wit; there is many a light touch to her pages. And she is searching. If one will put aside prejudice and accept the manner of biographical writing, one will find 'Walt' vivid, engrossing and illuminating."

+ N Y Times p5 F 19 '28 1200w

"The book is undeniably interesting; the voices of the principal actors in the story of Walt Whitman's life talk to us convincingly out of the past in dramatic scenes and conversations. . .We are glad to possess this new and freshly-fashioned contribution to much exhaustive Whitmania. Where Whitman is taught it should prove excellent collateral reading for beginners in the study of his career."

+ Sat R of Lit 4:617 F 18 '28 220w

Wis Lib Bul 24:162 My '28

World Tomorrow 11:376 S '28 50w

CORMACK, BARTLETT. Racket. 134p $1.50 French

812 28-6672

This melodrama of the underworld is staged at a police station in the Chicago suburbs. The captain of the station is trying to clear out the gangsters in his district. They hope to return the compliment. Political crooks and gunmen battle with the police and a very young, very raw reporter grows old on his first assignment.

"The sure satire and the almost complete absence of hokum combine to place 'The Racket' at the head of these important new dramatizations of the more violent phases of our big-city life." Glenn Hughes

+ Bookm 67:591 Jl '28 150w

"Its dialogue is pungent with veracity, its brutal story is a scathing comment on current city government, and its characters have the tang of observed reality. It is the new style American melodrama at its best—melodrama that is more than half a pungent satire, and wholly entertaining." W. P. Eaton

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p17 Ap 1 '28 60w

CORT, DAVID. Once more, ye laurels. 296p $2 Day

28-23458

The story follows the decline of a spark of genius thru several generations of the same family. It begins with little Camilla Weymouth who in the last years of the 18th century, sacrifices a musical career to her husband and children. In each succeeding generation the divine affiatus flickers and dies until it peters out altogether in the jazz representative of the twentieth century.

"At times the delicacy is a little too studied to be anything more than a trick; but the sincerity of the whole soon makes the reader forget this excess showmanship. And yet the book is a failure because its tragedy is already too commonplace and too universal to win anything more than a shrug of our shoulders. The author himself realizes this in a final chapter in which he indicates that the suicide of his hero was in itself a futile gesture, of no profit to anyone, and of no consequence."

— + Bookm 67:xxxiv My '28 220w

"Mr. Cort has seen the pathos, the irony and the humor in each era, from Revolutionary times down to the present day with a modern and comprehending eye. He has written it down with a comprehending and facile pen. For a first novel of a man of twenty-three, the book is a landmark in the field of literature; as a novel, weighed against the run of more mature brain-children, it is delightful reading and better than most." Elizabeth Sanderson

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p28 Ap 15 '28 650w

"David Cort has a polished style and a nice taste for irony but as yet, apparently, he has not found material upon which to exercise these gifts, for 'Once More Ye Laurels,' his first novel, is empty and artificial."

— + New Repub 54:332 My 2 '28 180w

N Y Evening Post p13 Ap 7 '28 60w

"This is an interesting and individual first novel. It lacks much, yet stands out as one of those books, not highly important in themselves, which may serve as pivot for many speculations, questionings and discoveries on the part of the reader. Even when its art, its humanity or its drama is feeble, it is articulate enough to be stimulating."

+ — N Y Times p8 Mr 18 '28 620w

CORT, DAVID—Continued

"The author has achieved a book that is of special interest because its roots are entirely American. He has attempted to do what Glenway Wescott did so admirably in 'The Grandmothers.'" Kathleen Kelemen

+ Outlook 149:276 Je 13 '28 220w

"The novel is so carefully planned and executed that it becomes patently artificial, but this excess of form is better—how much better only a book reviewer knows!—than the wandering, undecided chronicles that are commonly endured. Tight, trim, careful, Mr. Cort's first novel is welcome for its notable craftsmanship, and welcome no less for its gracious exposition of defeat."

+ — Sat R of Lit 5:11 Jl 28 '28 200w

CORTI, EGON CAESAR, conte. Maximilian and Charlotte of Mexico; tr. from the German by Catherine Alison Phillips. 2v 976p il $12.50 (50s) Knopf

972 Maximilian, emperor of Mexico. Charlotte, empress consort of Maximilian, emperor of Mexico. Mexico—History 28-9888

The author has had access to the complete and hitherto unpublished correspondence of Maximilian and Charlotte with Napoleon II and Eugenie. Many of the letters are reproduced in the appendices of these two handsome volumes which tell in full the story of the ill-starred attempt of the royal young couple to set up an empire in an alien land, of the collapse of the enterprise, and the tragic fate of Maximilian and Charlotte.

Booklist 24:395 Jl '28

"We could hardly conceive of a more satisfactory treatment of this fascinating theme—scholarly, lucid, impartial but sympathetic, soberly dramatic and picturesque in the right place, psychologically profound." Albert Guerard

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p1 My 27 '28 1850w

Boston Transcript p2 My 19 '28 1300w

Reviewed by Van Wyck Brooks

Ind 120:484 My 19 '28 1050w

"These volumes are as valuable as they are readable."

+ Living Age 334:1111 Jl '28 420w

"Count Corti's is a book that should appeal to those who as yet know nothing of the Mexican adventure. Those already interested cannot fail to read it with avidity. Finally, Mrs. Alison Phillips has performed her long task very efficiently." Francis Birrell

+ Nation and Ath 43:398 Je 23 '28 1150w

"This is an excellent historical biography."

+ New Statesman 31:361 Je 23 '28 1150w

"Count Corti is probably the first to tell their story once and for all, from beginning to end, on the basis of important and documentary evidence, and in a manner and with an authority which may be accepted as final." F: H. Martens

+ N Y Evening Post p13 Ap 7 '28 630w

"It is the chief excellence of Count Corti's book that all those concerned in this episode seem to come to life again in his pages. As in the biographies of Emil Ludwig, the story is told largely in the words of the chief actors. Intimate letters and conversations give an insight into men and events that is rarely found in official documents." L. V. Updegraff

+ N Y Times p6 Ap 15 '28 2550w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:349 Je '28

Sat R 145:666 My 26 '28 900w

"The author has handled a difficult task superbly." J: M. S. Allison

+ Sat R of Lit 4:1031 Jl 14 '28 580w

Spec 140:799 My 26 '28 280w

Times [London] Lit Sup p343 My 10 '28 780w

"The excellence of the work called for an English translation. . . The writer gives us a narrative pieced together mainly from the countless letters preserved by Maximilian and shipped by him to Austria just before the final catastrophe. His account frequently presumes, therefore, in the reader a previous acquaintance with the history of the times. The personalities, however, of Maximilian and Charlotte he portrays with a richness and fulness never achieved before." C. H. Haring

+ Yale R n s 18:388 winter '29 1050w

CORTI, EGON CAESAR, conte. Reign of the house of Rothschild; tr. from the German by Brian and Beatrix Lunn. 457p il $5 Cosmopolitan bk. [25s Gollancz]

940.28 Rothschild family. Europe—Politics 28-25668

Count Corti's second and concluding volume carries on the history of the House of Rothschild to the present day, showing the important part which the Rothschilds have played in the events of the nineteenth century.

"Although the Rothschilds still keep their archives closed, guarding their secrets longer than the Romanovs and the Hohenzollerns, so that this book is documentarily incomplete, the whole story reveals the complete decency, the honorableness with which the great fortune was made, increased and administered—until in our day it came into the hands of weaker heirs and lost its active force, spending itself, like that of the Medici, on art and orchids." Emil Ludwig

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p1 D 16 '28 1150w

Boston Transcript p1 D 15 '28 600w

"Count Corti is an able historian of the scientific type, and his work shows the merits and defects of his school. From the vast mass of material, a clear and impartial narrative emerges, but the people scarcely come to life. The three great brothers, Nathan, Solomon, and James, exist in his pages as disembodied, financial intellects. But the book is a revelation. It will come with rather a shock to the average mind, fed once on text-book history."

+ — Nation and Ath 44:368 D 8 '28 400w

"Of course, the years from 1830 to 1871 have not quite the color, the glamour of the great Napoleonic epopee. Nevertheless, in this volume, which (with its concluding sketch of the Rothschilds during the twentieth century) brings the story of this remarkable clan to an end, Count Corti has written with the same gift of brilliant delineation of scene and character which he showed in its predecessor." F: H. Martens

+ N Y Evening Post p9m D 1 '28 400w

"Count Corti has taken a fascinating theme and written a dull book about it. Maybe the translators are partly at fault—but the author cannot be acquitted on that score. The main part of the blame belongs to him." T. R. Ybarra

— N Y Times p3 D 23 '28 2000w

"This is a book that all intelligent Americans who are interested in European history should read. The translators are to be complimented for their excellent rendering of Count Corti's version." J: M. S. Allison

+ Sat R of Lit 5:567 Ja 5 '29 560w

"His volume is a work of incalculable use to historians. The whole political history of Europe in the nineteenth century is closely bound up with the 'reign of the House of Rothschild,' and no great statesman could afford to dispense with it."

+ Spec 141:sup873 D 8 '28 800w

"If Count Corti had had the insight to realize that, in their Jewish way, the Rothschilds stood for that attitude of mind to which the world is now striving substantially to return, his industry would have resulted in a solid contribution to European history instead of in an accumulation of facts which historians will have to remove from the inadequate and too often distorted setting in which he has embedded them."

— + Times [London] Lit Sup p791 N 1 '28 1800w

CORTI, EGON CAESAR, conte. Rise of the house of Rothschild; tr. from the German by Brian and Beatrix Lunn. 432p il $5 Cosmopolitan bk. [25s Gollancz]

940.28 Rothschild family. Europe—Politics 28-12982

"The first volume of a complete history of the Rothschild family. The material upon which his history is based has been derived from official documents, memoirs, letters, &c. Count Corti begins his history with Meyer Amschel Rothschild, who was born in 1743 in the Frankfort ghetto, the eldest son of a small retail trader and money-changer. . . He began by selling coins to the Elector of Hesse, and left to his sons the business of a considerable financier. During the Napoleonic Wars and the troubled decade which followed them, his five sons developed the business into one of the largest and most powerful international financial firms that the world has known. The greater part of Count Corti's book is occupied with this part of the story."—Nation and Ath

---

Booklist 25:68 N '28

"The author has searched everywhere for data and facts concerning his theme, collected them carefully and represented them in easily understandable fashion. He promises a second volume. Still, we may say so much to-day: The first volume—that is, the one on hand—will be the more interesting one, because the most fascinating part in the history of all great leaders and adventurers, dynasties and families as well as in the contemplation of the career of a successful man or people is invariably the epoch of their rise." Emil Ludwig

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p1 Ap 29 '28 1750w

"In Count Corti's story of the House of Rothschild we have biography, history and the romance of wealth, all mingled into a narrative which may, without the slightest exaggeration, be described as nothing less than fascinating. Perhaps it is the newness of the story, barely mentioned in our histories, that caught our fancy and held it to the very end." S. H.

+ Boston Transcript p2 My 29 '28 1200w

"While his work lacks the rich human quality of his study of the Mexican sovereigns and deals, necessarily perhaps, more with figures and statistics than with living people, it is an altogether adequate account of one of the most extraordinary families of modern times." Van Wyck Brooks

+ Ind 120:605 Je 23 '28 1050w

"Count Corti is an historian's historian, and he confines his book almost entirely to a marshaling of documents. From the point of view of historical research it is without doubt a monument and of incalculable importance. But as it is offered to the general reader one must regret that a greater effort was not made to give it color and emphasis." W: Seagle

+ — Nation 127:138 Ag 8 '28 1020w

"Count Corti's book is a remarkable product of intensive research. He is an independent inquirer, unconnected with the House of Rothschild from which he has obtained neither information nor documents. His book is not one which I can recommend to the reader who is only out for entertainment, for it is a pretty stiff bit of reading. But to the student of history and of the development of European society in the nineteenth century the book is really important, and provides plenty of food for philosophic rumination." Leonard Woolf

+ Nation and Ath 43:110 Ap 28 '28 1100w

"It is a very careful and interesting record not only of one family but of a period of history. The translation is good."

+ New Statesman 31:supxvi My 19 '28 40w

Reviewed by Emil Lengyel

N Y Times p3 F 12 '28 1200w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:589 N '28

Pratt p42 autumn '28

"Count Corti, in showing how a Jewish family of Frankfort emerged from obscurity in the late eighteenth century to become the world's most resourceful banking house, has virtually rewritten the diplomatic history of Europe for many decades. Count Corti's contribution to history is really more significant than his contribution to biography, important as that is."

+ R of Rs 78:22 Ag '28 110w

"This work must be classed as one of primary importance in this field of history, and it will probably remain so until the Rothschild papers have been utilized." J: M. S. Allison

+ Sat R of Lit 4:1031 Jl 14 '28 530w

"We welcome Count Corti's impartial story; a strange and romantic tale, and an excellent piece of research."

+ Spec 140:620 Ap 21 '28 1250w

"Although the archives of the House have remained closed to him, Count Corti has spared no pains to exhaust all the available published and unpublished sources; and he promises in a further volume to carry the history of the Rothschilds down to the end of the last century. The translators deserve a special word of praise for their spirited and accurate rendering of the German original."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p325 My 3 '28 1800w

COULTER, EDITH MARGARET. Guide to historical bibliographies; a critical and systematic bibliography for advanced students. 104p 75c Univ. of Cal.

016.9 History—Bibliography 27-26960

A list of historical bibliographies for the advanced student. It includes chiefly those published in book form, and covers many countries tho the greater share of the entries are for the United States. The guide is the first of its kind in English.

Booklist 24:45 N '27

Pratt p6 spring '28

COULTON, GEORGE GORDON. Art and the reformation. 622p il $7.50 Knopf [25s Blackwell]

709 Art, Medieval. Art and religion. Reformation. Architecture, Medieval. Church architecture—England [28-19917]

"My object in this volume is to trace very briefly the rise and decay of Medieval Art, and thence to argue first that its origin was less definitely religious than is commonly supposed; secondly, that its decay was gradual—a logical and natural consequence of its evolution—and lastly, that its deathblow came not so much from the Reformation as from that general transformation of the western intellect which we call the Renaissance."—Introd.

Reviewed by R. E. Larson

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 D 23 '28 1250w

Boston Transcript p4 O 6 '28 300w

"Certainly one of the best things which Dr. Coulton has done." Eileen Powers

+ Nation and Ath 43:334 Je 9 '28 600w

"The book is both interesting to the general reader and valuable as a repository of many relevant passages which in their originals are inaccessible enough to daunt even an historian. Although he is unable in six hundred pages to quote more than a small part of the material he does succeed in giving a picture which is on the whole the best we know."

+ Sat R 145:470 Ap 14 '28 300w

"Mr. G. G. Coulton's attitude towards the Middle Ages is that of an embittered love. Its cathedrals grew, and were decorated with astonishing sculpture, in the service of a faith as yet undisturbed by what is known as the Reformation. This seems to annoy him overmuch. His learning is great, his industry unremitting, his appreciation can be acute; but his mood of prosecuting counsel becomes irritating rather than convincing."

COULTON, G: G.—Continued
— + Spec 140:692 My 5 '28 220w

Springf'd Republican p10 D 8 '28 560w

"The real stimulus in this book lies in the purely historical test Dr. Coulton brings to the prevalent idea of the convertibility of Gothic art and medieval religious belief and practice. . . Yet is the historical method exclusively the right one in dealing with matters ultimately belonging to the æsthetic experience? It is in the analysis of the creative act, the act that distinguishes poet and artist from the poetically minded and the artistically minded spectator, that we believe Dr. Coulton to be wanting."
Times [London] Lit Sup p515 Jl 12 '28 1200w

COUNCIL ON FOREIGN RELATIONS. Political handbook of the world; parliaments, parties and press, as of Jan. 1, 1928; M. W. Davis and W. H. Mallory, editors. 192p $2.50 The council, 25 W. 43d st., N.Y.

329 Political parties. World politics. Newspapers—Directories (28-12165)

"The 'Political Handbook of Europe' prepared under the auspices of the Council of Foreign Relations a year ago has grown into this 'Political Handbook of the World.' Summarizing party programs and leaders, and listing the chief newspapers of sixty countries, it will be a useful desk-book for editors and students of foreign affairs."—Nation

Ann Am Acad 138:197 Jl '28 50w

"To the great reading public, the book will be of great reference value."
+ Boston Transcript p4 S 15 '28 100w

"The task has been painstakingly performed, with a scrupulous effort at impartiality. But it is impossible to touch politics without any bias."
+ Nation 127:252 S 12 '28 160w

"It will be vastly useful, not only to journalists and editors, but to any citizen who desires to understand what is going on in the larger world into which America has moved. The real value of this volume, however, consists in the numerous papers prepared in advance by experts, provided for the information of the members, and in the lists of questions proposed for debate in the 'Round Tables,' with summaries of the views of the different speakers. . The editing and preparation of the material are admirable, and it is to be regretted that some of the facts have not been presented in current periodicals in more popular form."
+ Sat R of Lit 5:135 S 15 '28 480w

COUNTS, GEORGE SYLVESTER. School and society in Chicago. 367p $2.50 Harcourt

379.773 Chicago—Public schools. Education—Illinois. Education and state. Thompson, William Hale. McAndrew, William 28-24924

The book is a history of the Chicago school situation and the controversy between Mayor Thompson and Superintendent of schools William McAndrew.

"Dr. Counts has made a careful survey of the situation in Chicago in such a way that it becomes a survey of the problems confronting public education generally. It is a pertinent and important book, and it is very well written."
+ N Y Times p12 D 16 '28 450w

"This drama is full of interest from more than one point of view, but educators and intelligent laymen interested in public education will value Professor Counts' book chiefly because it is an objective analysis of the social and political forces which condition American education in industrial and cosmopolitan centers. Chicago is for the time being a horrible example, but what has happened there might happen in any other community in which interests, opinions, fears and passions conflict. Apart from the minor errors, the author knows Chicago and its forces of good, evil and half-good-half-evil. His account of the local press, the leading organizations, the churches, the labor unions as actors in the school drama is remarkably accurate." V: S. Yarros
+ Survey 61:384 D 15 '28 400w

Wis Lib Bul 24:300 N '28

"A careful and tolerant discussion of Chicago's school problems, internal and external, and the social forces and agencies which have played their parts."
+ World Tomorrow 12:523 D '28 60w

COURNOS, JOHN. Modern Plutarch; being an account of some great lives in the nineteenth century, together with some comparisons between the Latin and the Anglo-Saxon genius. 428p il $5 Bobbs [15s T. Butterworth]

920 Biography 28-23229

Biographies in brief of the Titans of the nineteenth century, with contrasting personalities of the Anglo-Saxon and Latin temperaments viewed together. Thus the author compares Mark Twain with Anatole France; Thoreau with Gauguin; Melville with Rimbaud and Doughty; Lassalle with Parnell and Balzac; John Brown with Garibaldi; Amiel with Henry Adams; George Sand with George Eliot; Robert E. Lee with Simon Bolivar; Cecil Rhodes with Ferdinand de Lesseps.

"It is in the three sketches of Herman Melville, Arthur Rimbaud and Charles M. Doughty that Mr. Cournos is at his best. Certainly the chapter on the author of 'Moby Dick' is a distinguished one." K: Schriftgiesser
+ Boston Transcript p5 O 20 '28 1800w

"The trouble with Mr. Cournos is not that he borrows something from Plutarch, but that he does not borrow enough. He seems to feel that his title was forced upon him in order to forestall a charge of plagiarism, but the scruple seems strained. . . One can only record a belief that his technique is wrong and Plutarch's right, and a regret that the Plutarchian technique was not borrowed along with the Plutarchian 'idea.'" Arthur Colton
— Sat R of Lit 5:317 N 3 '28 750w

Times [London] Lit Sup p855 N 15 '28 650w

COURNOS, JOHN, ed. Fifteen finest short stories. 343p $2.50 Dodd

Short stories—Collections 28-20610

The editor of the Forum asked Mr Cournos to name the fifteen finest short stories in all literature. The fifteen, chosen from writers of the nineteenth and twentieth centuries as the highest examples of the art are; Boule de Suif, by Guy de Maupassant; The hidden masterpiece, by Honore de Balzac; The procurator of Judæa, by Anatole France; The overcoat, by N: Gogol; Bontzye Shweig. by I: L. Perez; The tell-tale heart, by E. A. Poe; The torture by hope, by Villiers de l'Isle-Adam; Twenty-six men and a girl, by Maxim Gorky; Abyss, by Leonid Andreyev; The phantom 'rickshaw, by Rudyard Kipling; The district doctor, by Ivan Turgenev; Four days, by Vsevolod Garshin; The triumph of the egg, by Sherwood Anderson; The funnel, by A. E. Coppard; A lodging for the night, by R. L: Stevenson.

Booklist 25:120 D '28

"The anthology of Mr. Cournos does contain at least twelve of the most distinguished short stories ever written, whose distinction lies as much in the masterly development of plot as in that profound apperception of life which is art. They can indeed be presented to our writers as models of this fiction form. Yet, in a strict sense, they are not models at all, for they are vividly original in themselves and allow of no imitation by others. They are as unique as a canvass of da Vinci." Johan Smertenko
Sat R of Lit 5:190 O 6 '28 80w

COURSEN, DOROTHY. Fire of spring. 289p $2.50 Holt

28-23660

Two children, sisters, are visiting relatives in the country. Alma, the elder of the two, is on the verge of adolescence, and in the short two weeks of the visit she passes thru two emotional experiences, the one religious, the other the first stirrings of young love, which carry her from childhood to dawning maturity.

"There is skill and insight and a good deal of power behind this first novel, which makes one have no doubts as to the validity and the promise of those to come." Jean Douglass

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p2 N 11 '28 500w

"The analysis is excellent. The affectations and illusions of the various people are set down without any attempt at outside explanation. The result is a sincere and truthful piece of work." M. E. U.

+ New Repub 56:310 O 31 '28 100w

"For a great deal of the book's dullness the use of the stream-of-consciousness method must take the blame. Miss Coursen writes well enough, with deep sincerity and a fairly good knowledge of human nature. The whole story is smooth as Indiana farmland is smooth: drab, colorless, unexciting, lukewarm. If her talent is ever to make itself felt it must rise above the literalness of such a slice of life as she has treated here."

— + N Y Times p28 N 25 '28 500w

COVARRUBIAS, MIGUEL. Negro drawings; with a preface by Ralph Barton, and an introd. by Frank Crowninshield. 56pl $7.50 (30s) Knopf

741 Caricatures and cartoons—Negroes

27-23471

"Exceedingly amusing drawings, in line, tone and colour, by a Mexican artist, who is only twenty-two. Though in a sense caricatures, they are so sympathetic that we cannot but feel that they must be popular among negroes themselves. As for the subjects, they are 'picked at random from the welter of colored life in New York.' In colour we might pick out 'Seventh Avenue Type,' and in line the convoluted 'Waiter,' as best representing the artist."—Times [London] Lit Sup

"Harlem lives in these pages. But more than that, Miguel Covarrubias lives—lives and takes you with him, in every sly line and comprehending curve. For once subject matter is so perfectly adapted to technique that one forgets to talk about abstraction." R. M. Fisk

+ Bookm 67:329 My '28 160w

Reviewed by Walter Pach

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p3 N 6 '27 860w

"All are real; most of them have a mysterious laughter-provoking power; in some there is the stamp of genius, more than embryonic. But perhaps the most significant feature of all, that which is of more importance to the artist than anything else, is the promise of the future. The youth is barely out of his teens; and even now he has covered a considerable stretch of the road which leads to fame."

+ Boston Transcript p7 D 7 '27 210w

"Covarrubias sets down what he saw with such an unerring feeling for character that one whoops with delight at the sheer shocking truth of his types."

+ Nation 127:93 Jl 25 '28 180w

Spec 139:sup989 D 3 '27 210w

"As an artist Mr. Covarrubias deserves all that his introducers say about him—even if their references to Giotti, El Grecco, Picasso, and so forth are unnecessary. He has even in outline, an extraordinary control of plastic form, his colour is rich and haunting, and, above all, his work is full of vitality. It does, indeed, succeed in expressing that very real and not merely animal exaltation which any unprejudiced person must feel under the rhythms of negro music even as it comes to us in the degenerate imitations of the jazz orchestra."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p222 Mr 22 '28 140w

COWLES, FLORENCE A., comp. Seven hundred sandwiches. 246p $1.75 Little

641.84 Sandwiches

28-22411

Some seven hundred sandwiches of every sort, for every occasion, with many novel combinations for fillings.

Booklist 25:108 D '28

J Home Econ 20:906 D '28 40w

St Louis 26:382 D '28

"The housewife who finds the sandwich a useful means of supplying variety and substantial food value for her Sunday evening supper, the mother who has resort to it for the school lunch basket, the hostess who makes it the staple of her tea table, and the summer vacationist who relies on it for the picnic lunch will one and all find in this book recipes for its manufacture in delectable wise."

+ Sat R of Lit 5:255 O 13 '28 90w

COX, ANTHONY BERKELEY (ANTHONY BERKELEY, pseud.). Amateur crime. 349p $2 Doubleday, Doran

28-26640

Two crime enthusiasts are goaded by a third to stage an elaborate fake. The girl accomplice lures the victim of the hoax to the scene of the "murder" where, true to expectation, he shoots (with a blank cartridge) the man who has "wronged" her, and fully believes he has committed a murder. The police arrive and handcuff man and girl. Most of the hilarious complications which follow are outside of the original plan.

Booklist 25:28 O '28

"The farcical situations are entertaining and often funny, especially if you care for practical jokes." Will Cuppy

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p9 Ag 12 '28 100w

"A rollicking and romantic mystery cleverly woven about a group of characters who all play at cross purposes. The author keeps one leap ahead of his reader constantly and devises interesting situations without number."

+ Boston Transcript p4 Ag 15 '28 200w

Cleveland Open Shelf p123 N '28

N Y Times p18 Jl 29 '28 170w

COX, ANTHONY BERKELEY (ANTHONY BERKELEY, pseud.). Silk stocking murders; a Roger Sheringham case. 253p $2 Doubleday, Doran [7s 6d Collins]

28-23044

In a series of shocking cases the body of a young girl is found hanging to the door of her room, with one of her own silk stockings forming the noose about her neck. A pathetic letter from a country parson inquiring about his missing daughter starts Roger Sheringham, crime-reporter, on an investigation. The fiancé of one of the victims offers his aid. In a horrifying scene Roger reconstructs the crime and traps the murderer.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 S 23 '28 120w

" 'The Silk Stocking Murders' has few claims to distinction. It is not a bad piece of work by any means, and taken as just another mystery tale will serve pleasantly to pass an autumn evening. Without the implied recognition of the Crime Club label, it would pass well enough as a run-of-the-mine detective story; in the limelight it reveals too many flaws."

— + Boston Transcript p5 O 6 '28 280w

N Y Times p26 O 21 '28 200w

Reviewed by W. R. Brooks

Outlook 150:833 S 19 '28 150w

COX, A. B.—Continued

"It would have strengthened the story if suspicion of the murderer had been aroused earlier and provided a basis for the counter-scheme to Scotland Yard; but no one who reads the story will complain much of a fare which combines so much vivid sensationalism with so much sprightly and urbane pleasantry."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p433 Je 7 '28 200w

COX, ERLE. Out of the silence. 310p $2 Henkle

28-22777

"Fantastic mystery adventure with ideological embroidery. The tale tells that Alan Dundas, excavating in his Austrian backyard, came upon a temple containing Earani, a girl in a state of suspended animation—she'd been that way for twenty-seven million years. Aroused by the proper injections, she spins a tall story of her ancient civilization, displays marvelous inventions and threatens to do dire things to the present degenerate world."—Books (N Y Herald Tribune)

"The author displays much ingenuity in thinking up mechanical devices and less in dealing with Earani's pseudo-scientific obsessions, chiefly eugenic." Will Cuppy

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 S 23 '28 100w

Boston Transcript p2 O 13 '28 200w

"Despite all the doubtful and debatable material it contains, it cannot be denied that the story is based upon a startlingly original idea and is developed with a degree of imagination, interest and thought that is rare in present-day fiction."

+ — N Y Times p6 O 7 '28 580w

" 'Out of the Silence' is great stuff—persuasive, exciting, ingenious. We wonder who could be so filled with sawdust as not to be carried away by its startling virtuosity. The exploits of Dundas as he descends into the museum of the lost world are wholly plausible; his adventures are of course essentially preposterous, but we quite definitely do not care. We swallow them hook, line, and sinker, and race through the pages for more."

+ Sat R of Lit 5:440 D 1 '28 260w

COX, ISAAC JOSLIN. Nicaragua and the United States, 1909-1927. (World peace foundation pamphlets) p703-887 $1.25; pa 30c World peace foundation

327.728 Nicaragua—Foreign relations—United States. United States—Foreign relations—Nicaragua 28-3858

A detailed impartial study, based on documentary sources, of the relations between Nicaragua and the United States during the last eighteen years.

Booklist 24:309 My '28

Boston Transcript p3 Je 23 '28 280w

"The volume is essential to anyone seeking to understand the policies which have kept the United States marines almost constantly in the territory of this small Nation for the last 18 years."

+ Christian Science Monitor p12 My 29 '28 360w

+ Hist Outlook 19:290 O '28 320w

"A superbly well-documented study, invaluable to anyone who wishes the background of the present imbroglio."

+ World Tomorrow 11:231 My '28 70w

COX, SIDNEY. Teaching of English; avowals and ventures. 172p $1.50 Harper

407 English language—Study and teaching

28-7701

"The experiences of teaching seem to Professor Cox valuable and interesting only when they are drenched with personal feeling and emotion. 'What I offer my students,' he avows, 'is not my point of view, nor my knowledge, nor my schemes for getting knowledge, nor my technique, nor my discipline—not any of these things, but friendship.' He lays bare his soul, and it is in his plan to talk intimately to his students of his own past, of his family (like the columnists), of his friends. He expects his students also to lay bare their souls. For in philosophy teaching English is both the offering and receiving of friendship, it is feeling and thinking with students, it is the unbinding of emotions."—Books (N Y Herald Tribune)

"Something like awe strikes one at the contemplation of the self-confidence of the teacher who should put into practice the 'fearless friendliness' of the philosophy of teaching set forth in these ventures and avowals." G: P. Krapp

— Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 Jl 29 '28 780w

"Whether the volume will be 'a source of inspiration to teachers of English' may be cordially doubted. At least, laymen will find it well worth their while to analyze their reactions to these intimate talks. After reading this 'series of personal talks,' we are inclined to envy those students at Hanover who are able to benefit personally by the author's broad views, views based on friendship as well as experience." W. B.

Boston Transcript p3 My 2 '28 350w

"Mr. Cox's precise and temperate style has a buoyancy and verve lent by a novel personality. Some may be at first shocked by the colloquial and personal manner he handles a subject they fancy calls for pompous treatment. Others will wish he had given more of himself. The book deserves to be placed on the academic Index, for it will certainly nurture heresies wherever it falls and disturb complacency. But it will do more. A number of teachers who love their art but do not talk about it will find here a confession of their faith." J: Beecher

+ Sat R of Lit 5:71 Ag 25 '28 900w

Wis Lib Bul 24:302 N '28

COXON, MURIEL (HINE) (MRS SIDNEY COXON). Seven lovers, and other stories. 283p $2 Appleton

28-2673

The first and longest of those seven tales is also the title story. In it the affairs of a young English couple in Italy is conditioned by the pact made by the seven lovers of the girl's mother. Contents: Seven lovers; To be let furnished; Sunday and Monday; Wishing-ball; Buckled shoe; That face; Behold the patient!

Reviewed by Elizabeth Wyckoff

Bookm 67:213 Ap '28 80w

"Mrs. Hine's talent for novels is unquestioned. These short stories may have been written many years ago, before she developed her real abilities. They have all been published in English magazines of fair circulation and unpretentious literary merit. Harmless they all are, and they may amuse English readers."

— + Boston Transcript p4 Mr 17 '28 220w

"The second story, 'To Be Let Furnished,' is the triumph of the book. It is so simple in its mechanical aspects that an outline of the plot would do it grave injustice. It is the quiet little love story of an old maid with a furnished house to let and a travel-weary adventurer anxious to establish a home. The remaining stories, whatever else may be said for them, are sufficiently various."

+ N Y Times p10 F 19 '28 250w

COZZENS, JAMES GOULD. Cock pit. 302p $2.50 Morrow

28-21891

This story of the sugar industry in Cuba centers about the figures of Lancy Micks, chief field engineer, and his resolute and resourceful daughter Ruth. These two and the other characters—Cubans, Mexicans and halfbreeds—live in an atmosphere wholly dominated by sugar and the crop.

"This isn't, I believe, a novel which will create a sensation, but for action and excitement it ought to win many readers." D: Bramble

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p4 O 7 '28 480w

Boston Transcript p5 N 10 '28 500w

"This is a remarkable book to have been written by a young man . . . Here is a great love story told reticently, a forbidden love story so heroic in the girl's attitude that the most prurient can find nothing over which to smack their lips." Isa Glenn

+ N Y Evening Post p9 S 29 '28 780w

"If a trifle perplexing to those ignorant of the methods and organization of this particular industry, the novel is interesting and very entertaining, with flesh-and-blood characters and an abundance of drama."

+ N Y Times p28 O 7 '28 580w

CRAFTON, ALLEN, and ROYER, JESSICA. Acting; a book for the beginner. 318p $2.25 Crofts

792 Acting 28-16637

The book sets forth a theory and practice of acting for the amateur actor. It analyses the qualities essential to the actor candidate, explains how to go to work to create a character and to prepare a part for the stage, and gives suggestions about make-up.

"Within this book, say the authors, 'is to be found a theory and practice of acting for the amateur actor.' The practice is excellent. In formulating their theory Mr. Crafton and Miss Royer are on rather more debatable ground."

+ — Boston Transcript p2 S 1 '28 300w

St Louis 26:354 N '28

"Little Theatres which are still feeling their way among the difficulties and uncertainties of inadequate productions would do well to make this book compulsory reading for each member of the company." Frances Park

+ Theatre Arts Mo 12:687 S '28 400w

Wis Lib Bul 24:250 O '28

CRAM, MILDRED (MRS C. S. MCDOWELL). Scotch Valley. 257p $2 Doubleday, Doran 28-9736

James Gladden, war veteran, fathers the forlorn little brood of a doughboy friend killed in the war. The five small Smiths live on a ranch in California. A grasping neighbor is trying to get the ranch from them by stopping their water supply. Gladden, the willing if untried foster-father, has a fight on his hands at once, and presently, a romance.

"Mrs. Cram brings a message of optimism and good cheer, not forgetting a few acidly drawn pictures of ingratitude and kindred vices. For all its moral, her story marches nimbly along to an exciting finale in which a bit of gunplay figures." Will Cuppy

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 Ap 8 '28 100w

"The story is interesting, and well told until the end, when it descends into what appears to be a mawk of sentiment, but what is really a mere lack of technique. The character work is rather good."

+ — Boston Transcript p3 Je 15 '28 250w

Cleveland Open Shelf p105 S '28

"It is a good story, skillfully and compactly told, with an ironic quirk at the end which straightens itself out justly, after it has threatened to undo all of Jim Gladden's toilsome achievements."

+ N Y Times p18 Jl 1 '28 270w

CRAM, WILLIAM EVERETT. Time and change. 93p $1.50 Marshall Jones

630.1 Farm life 27-24750

Essays on bucolic pursuits and pleasures, written from a New Hampshire farm.

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p15 Ap 29 '28 100w

"After fighting our way through the jungles of what seems to be the characteristic writing of today, it is refreshing to come out, if only temporarily, into open country and lift our eyes to the quiet hills, resting against a quiet sky. This the sense of tranquil pleasure these sketches give." F. B.

+ Boston Transcript p6 D 3 '27 400w

"A slim volume of nature essays, unpretentious, but readable."

Sat R of Lit 4:674 Mr 10 '28 30w

Wis Lib Bul 24:88 Mr '28

CRANE, NATHALIA CLARA RUTH. Venus invisible, and other poems. 90p il $2.50 Coward-McCann

811 28-22322

This new collection of Nathalia Crane's poems exhibits the young poet's now familiar preoccupation with recondite subjects, her startling imagery and her uncanny perception.

"Nathalia Crane's poetry is exceedingly unsatisfactory because we read, finally not for delicious flashes, but for some substance of meaning. One moment we have a fearful precosity, the next, a banal and normal little girl. When she writes her cosmic mystic verse, it is, when good, very good; when it is bad, it is not horrid." Genevieve Taggard

— Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p20 O 7 '28 730w

Boston Transcript p2 N 3 '28 380w

"Three-fourths of 'Venus Invisible' may prompt the usual questions: 'Is it genuine? Could a child fathom such ideas, execute such technically accomplished verse?' The rarer one-fourth silences the queries. It no longer matters how such things are written. The smaller portion is a distilled and precious communication. Here, beyond cavil or controversy, it is. Take the poetry and be thankful." L: Untermeyer

+ — Sat R of Lit 5:139 S 22 '28 1250w

"Nathalia Crane, our leading child poet, is still drunken with words—rare, exotic, swooney words. Her syntax is vague and her ideas vaguer, but she does love words, and sometimes her kaleidoscope falls into a pattern of jingle-jungle words that stirs the reader in the old magic way. This is the beginning of poetry. She has not taken the second step, the making of metaphors, to disclose the resemblance of one thing to another, the pantheism all good poets preach." Leon Whipple

Survey 61:170 N 1 '28 80w

CRANE, THEODORE. Concrete building construction; ed. by Thomas Nolan. 689p il $6 Wiley

693.5 Concrete construction 27-19137

"The purpose of this text is to present in simple, practical form, the generally accepted principles of concrete design, together with recommended methods of office procedure and field construction."—Preface

N Y New Tech Bks 12:44 O '27

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:205 Ap '28

Pratt p20 spring '28

CRAWFORD, JACK RANDALL. What to read In English literature. 388p $4.50 (18s) Putnam

820.9 English literature—History and criticism 28-22014

The associate professor of English in Yale university offers an extensive guide to the treasures of English literature. In addition to bibliographies of each period of literary history Professor Crawford gives biographical sketches of the foremost writers and descriptive notes of their works.

"The scope of the book is amazing. No valued contribution to the literature, however remote,

CRAWFORD, J. R.—Continued
however short or long, or great or little, has been intentionally omitted."
+ Boston Transcript p6 O 6 '28 320w

"The work is more comprehensive of varieties of intellectual interest than such books usually are, for it includes all the usual categories of literature and also works dealing with science, politics and practical affairs. It will be valuable not only for the general reader, but equally so for students in English literature in schools and colleges."
+ N Y Times p20 S 23 '28 350w

"Prof Crawford does better with his novelists and dramatists than with poets and writers of other types of literature. The section on 19th century history does not mention Lecky and is otherwise unsatisfactory. With some revisions and additions, Prof Crawford's book would be improved. But its faults are those of most guidebooks, and it is better than many."
— + Springf'd Republican p10 S 7 '28 450w

CRAWFORD, NELSON ANTRIM. Man of learning; a half century of educational service as exemplified by Arthur Patrick Redfield. 273p $2.50 Little 28-6563

This fictitious biography of Arthur Patrick Redfield is a satirical portrait of an American college president who exemplifies the Rotarian ideal of success. The story, written from the viewpoint of ingenuous admiration, shows up this "man of learning" at some especially revealing moments of his mounting career.

" 'A Man of Learning' can be considered only as a complete realization of its author's intention and it must be considered as a painful social document even more than as an example of irony which never allows its smooth surface to crack—even more than as a very amusing fiction." Frances Newman
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p4 F 19 '28 700w

"No one who is interested in the conduct of the American scene and who can enjoy observing the antics of his fellow creatures can afford to miss this delightful and penetrating study of the methods of our educators. Not the least part of our pleasure in the book comes from the way in which the author has carried out every detail of the satire." D. L. M.
+ Boston Transcript p4 My 12 '28 620w

"We are given a comprehensive, complete, and succinct account of a career imagined by Mr. Crawford, but recognizable to every person who has ever observed the procedure of a 'live wire' college president. Having essayed many imaginary portraits myself, on a small scale, I particularly like the satirical relish and restraint with which Mr. Crawford has portrayed this typical hero of our times." Ernest Boyd
+ Ind 120:163 F 18 '28 830w

"Perhaps the chief fault to be found with the book is that it is not quite of a piece; its satire often lapses into farce, and its buffoonery into sheer horse-play. He does not, like Lewis, create a character that is even more alive than those dreadfully realistic persons who appear monthly in the 'Americana'; his realism lacks the imagination—one might almost say high romance—that the best work of Lewis shows. But Mr. Crawford has nevertheless written a book that is going to make many sides ache and many ribs sore during the coming month," R. F. Dibble
+ — Nation 126:297 Mr 14 '28 550w

"Mr. Crawford runs no risk of having his hero strike back at him: he is a cautious satirist and has chosen a foeman worthy of his wooden sword." M. P. L.
New Repub 54:254 Ap 11 '28 250w

"Mr. Crawford finds 274 pages necessary to show the dulness and heavy-handed vulgarity of this kind of biography." D: A. Robertson
— N Y World p11m Mr 18 '28 400w
No Am 225:adv My '28 80w

" 'A Man of Learning' may be classed as fiction. Its author is a follower of the Sinclair Lewis school, a journalist pamphleteer. As such, his book is naturally a story with a purpose. It bears about the same relation to satire as current farce does to Restoration comedy. But its tiresome lack of subtlety does no harm if, as this reviewer believes, it has been written in order to shock into alert attention a great many careless or complacent people, and not in order to entertain a few already watchful ones." F. C. L. R.
Outlook 148:397 Mr 7 '28 210w

"The college president of yesterday, Mr. Crawford's specimen, belongs with the dinosaurs (though here and there a giant lizard of the specimen may survive). He was a chimæra of the popular imagination, this Great American, and it is little wonder that in endeavoring to live up to what the public expected, the poor victim burst his moral and intellectual buttons." H: N. MacCracken
Sat R of Lit 4:643 Mr 3 '28 1130w

"Arthur Patrick Redfield, Ph.D., LL.D., has some affinity with Elmer Gantry. The controlled fury of Mr. Sinclair Lewis, however, would be necessary to make this mock-history significant to the end." R. A. Taylor
Spec 140:741 My 12 '28 60w
Times [London] Lit Sup p785 O 25 '28 450w
Wis Lib Bul 24:191 Je '28

CRECRAFT, EARL WILLIS. Government and business; a study in the economic aspects of government and the public aspects of business. 508p $2.96 World bk.
330.19 Industry and state—United States. United States—Economic policy. Business
28-5797

"Professor Crecraft has sought to show the multifarious points of contact betwen business and government, the political activities of business, the economic service of government, and the many ways in which business affects government and government affects business. The present volume attempts for the first time to interpret the interactions of government and business."—Hist Outlook

"The work, even if somewhat expansive, is well-written, shows a thorough knowledge of its field and ability to deal with essentials and fundamentals in the face of a deluge of detail. It is a very timely book, and will interest laborites and capitalists, political scientists and economists, students and laymen." A. S. R.
+ Boston Transcript p3 My 5 '28 110w

"It is unfortunate that his execution is not as excellent as his idea. In seeking to be comprehensive he has sacrificed compactness and concreteness. . . Its chief lack is concrete illustration. In some places it scarcely attains more depth than a syllabus. It is, however, a distinctly provocative book. In the hands of a competent teacher, capable of injecting some color into it, it could be made the basis of an extremely interesting and valuable course." J McG.
— + Hist Outlook 19:243 My '28 210w
R of Rs 77:14 My '28 20w
Wis Lib Bul 24:187 Je '28

CREEL, GEORGE. Sam Houston, colossus in buckskin. 341p $3 Cosmopolitan bk.
B or 92 Houston, Samuel. Texas—History
28-8616

This biography makes dramatic the career of the frontier statesman who led the movement that gained the independence of Texas from Mexico and who became so conspicuous a figure in the early history of Texas as a state.

"This book offers an exceptional lot for the price. To begin with, there is the story of that altogether remarkable frontiersman, Sam Houston, a story dynamically and colorfully told. Next there is a saga of pioneering westward from the Tennessee frontier; then a vivid study of 'Old Hickory' Jackson; a chronicle of early days in Texas and Old Mexico; then some dramatic interludes from the storm of abolition and secession, told with a narrative enthusiam which would leave an ordinary history text insipid by comparison." C: M. Wilson

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 Je 24 '28 550w
Boston Transcript p4 Ap 25 '28 400w
Cleveland Open Shelf p88 Jl '28

"Notwithstanding the charge of inaccuracy brought by critics in Fort Worth, this volume remains an interesting piece of summer reading. It tells the story of a man of action, and may therefore be read for pleasure rather than for instruction."
Ind 121:117 Ag 4 '28 110w

"Somehow, he fails to realize the burly, theatrical, downright, immensely individualistic Houston." J. F. Dobie
— Nation 126:650 Je 6 '28 180w

"It is a stirring tale of as vigorous and turbulent a character as the old frontier ever produced. This biography is thoroughly, insistently pro-Houston; the glorious deeds of the man are recounted on page after page of enthusiastic adjectives, and even the multifarious vices of old Sam are made to appear somehow majestic. . . One might ask for more detail than Mr. Creel gives, but no one could demand more drama." Stanley Walker
+ — N Y Times p5 S 2 '28 1000w

Reviewed by C: J. Finger
N Y Word p10m Ap 1 '28 500w

"A vivid biography of a man who more than any other was responsible for the annexation of Texas."
+ Springf'd Republican p12 My 17 '28 430w

CREIGHTON, MRS URSULA. Music; with a preface by Edward J. Dent. (Simple guide ser.) 256p il $3 Dutton [7s 6d Chatto & W.]

780 Music—History and criticism. Musicians. Music—Analysis, interpretation, appreciation [28-24379]

A book about music, musical instruments and the great composers, which offers much of interest and information to the amateur musician and the lay reader but which is too elementary for the serious student of music.

Boston Transcript p3 N 10 '28 130w

"This book contains much information about different kinds of music and about famous composers and is full of enthusiasm for the fact that music enhances the joy of life. However, it is an addition to scores of unsuccessful attempts that have been made to offer a bird's-eye view of the entire field of music without demanding study. The reader is forced to swallow without chewing. Repetition and undefined abstractions such as statements that Bach and Palestrina and many others wrote 'perfect' music produce a loquacious style confusing to amateurs and boring to students."
— + Sat R of Lit 5:496 D 8 '28 100w

"Though the book is at times a little amateurish in style, it is pleasantly personal and unconventional and will no doubt be of considerable service as an introduction to the appreciation of music by the intelligent but as yet unlearned young listener. On some of the knotty problems of modern music Mrs. Creighton writes with sound good sense."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p490 Je 28 '28 280w

CREW, HELEN (COALE) (MRS HENRY CREW). Trojan boy. 207p il $1.75 Century 28-19747

In the days of the Trojan war Paidon lived with his father and mother in the city of Troy. When he was five years old his father died and the boy and his mother went to live in a little hut outside the city walls. They worked hard to support themselves and Paidon determined to grow to be a hero and fight in the great war, like his hero Hector. The task was a bit heavy for a boy so full of life, but bitter experience taught him a valuable lesson. And after the fall of Troy he earned the right to be called hero.

Booklist 25:126 D '28

"This is a thrilling tale, for children or adults, simply told, but with a wealth of fascinating study and material behind it. We consider it an acquisition to ancient history for youngsters."
+ Boston Transcript p7 S 8 '28 330w

"The thread of incident is less successful than the detail. It is too nearly a series of unrelated events. Either more of Homer or more invented story would have given the progress and frank excitement that we miss. As Paidon grows up, however, and shares more in the mighty events going on about him, the story improves. Certainly the taking and burning of Troy have no lack of vividness." Catherine Woodbridge
— + Sat R of Lit 5:192 O 6 '28 430w

CREW, HENRY. Rise of modern physics; a popular sketch. 356p il $5 Williams & Wilkins [22s 6d Tindall & C.]

530.9 Physics—History 28-5385

"Dr. Crew, who is Fayerweather Professor of Physics, Northwestern University, bases this book for the general reader on a course of lectures which he gave some years ago to undergraduates of scientific interests but no special training in physics. The first hundred pages contain a brief history of the science in classical and medieval times, and the remainder of the book is devoted to the foundation of modern physics by Galileo and Newton, and an outline of the history of such subjects as light, electricity and magnetism, heat, atomic theory, spectroscopy, &c."—Times [London] Lit Sup

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:564 N '28

"Although the purposes which the author has in view will best be appreciated by the person well trained in physics, nevertheless for the more casual reader who is willing to skip over the passages which he cannot understand there is much of interest. This latter type of reader will meet intimately the great personalities of the science." N. C. Little
+ Sat R of Lit 4:911 My 26 '28 600w
Times [London] Lit Sup p471 Je 21 '28 100w

CROCE, BENEDETTO. Benedetto Croce; an autobiography; tr. from the Italian by R. G. Collingwood; with a preface by J. A. Smith. 116p $2 (5s) Oxford

B or 92 27-24040

For descriptive note see Annual for 1927.

Booklist 24:280 Ap '28

Reviewed by Philip Littell
Dial 84:422 My '28 880w

"This autobiography will, no doubt, be interesting to many as the analysis of a spiritual life, and certainly to all who need explanations of Croce's philosophy." C. D. B.
Int J Ethics 38:361 Ap '28 90w
Nature 121:1016 Je 30 '28 220w

"There is something lamentable in the defectiveness of this volume. Croce's life may have been void of spectacular incident, but his intellectual achievement, whether one admires it or not, is surely manifold and worth surveying. Since he slighted so many topics and persons in his 'Autobiography,' he might have done justice to the single realm emphasized. The man who considers his ideas the dearest things in his life and who cannot write an autobiography that gives them adequate setting and illumination is in a sad predica-

CROCE, BENEDETTO—Continued
ment. Perhaps the ideas themselves are to blame." C: M. Prager
— N Y Evening Post p13 D 31 '27 880w
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:297 My '28
Sat R of Lit 4:801 Ap 21 '28 310w

CROFTS, FREEMAN WILLS. Sea mystery; an Inspector French detective story. 348p $2 Harper
28-19241

A father and son fishing near the coast of Wales, pull up a large wooden box. Towing it to shore where they open it, they discover the body of a murdered man from whose clothes all identifying marks have been removed. The box and its gruesome contents are turned over to Inspector French. With scientific precision and from very meager data, he reconstructs the crime step by step to its astonishing solution.

"Mr. Crofts lacks the imagination of Mrs. Christie, but his plot structure is more thorough, and in this new tale of his the work of the veteran Inspector French in tracing the mysterious chest gives one of the prettiest pieces of deduction I have seen in a long time." C: M. Purdy
+ Bookm 68:233 O '28 130w

"Freeman Crofts is one of the few mystery mongers whose mind seems to work according to specifications, as taught in Psychology I. The same may be said of his trained sleuth, Inspector Joseph French of the C. I. D., who solves crimes with a most ingratiating combination of deduction, induction and whatever else there is. The charm of this volume inheres largely in its utterly honest handling of a possible crime; that can be thrilling." Will Cuppy
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 S 2 '28 120w

"Mr. Crofts both outguesses you and plays fair with you, and the result in 'The Sea Mystery' is a capitally knit tale with a model beginning and a rational and beguiling development." J. F. S.
+ Boston Transcript p2 S 12 '28 520w

"The Sea Mystery is a first-rate tale. The mystery is well sustained and there are no tricks played on the reader."
+ New Statesman 32:58 O 20 '28 200w
N Y Times p12 S 16 '28 270w

"It is a well-told and entirely credible detective story with the element of mystery well sustained throughout."
+ Springf'd Republican p7e S 9 '28 180w
Times [London] Lit Sup p809 N 1 '28 220w

CROMPTON, GEORGE. Tariff; an interpretation of a bewildering problem. 226p $2.50 (10s 6d) Macmillan
337 Tariff. Free trade and protection. Industry 27-23985

"The book opens with a review of the doctrine of Adam Smith as set forth in 'The Wealth of Nations' and which forms the basis of many of the present day arguments in the ever-current tariff controversy. A brief historical sketch of the free trade movement and the reaction to protectionism, is followed by a consideration of the arguments advanced for and against free trade and protectionism respectively, and by a consideration of the merits and fallacies inherent in those arguments."—Boston Transcript

"We cannot commend too highly the sincerity and candor with which the book is written; but one closes the volume with the feeling that the tariff remains a bewildering problem." G. O. Virtue
Am Econ R 18:543 S '28 560w
Booklist 24:269 Ap '28

"Mr. Crompton discloses on every page of his book an intimate acquaintance with everything worth while that has ever been written on either side of this endless controversy. Further, he points out with good temper, eminent fairness and logical keenness the limitations and the unavowed premises of both free trade and protectionist arguments. Those of us who remain unconvinced, then, by Mr. Crompton's argument, can yet read his book with approval and differ only in the weight that we attach to various disputable considerations." H: R. Mussey
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p14 F 12 '28 730w

"Here is a book which excellently overcomes the difficulty of presenting authoritative data in a popular fashion. It is a work which can be read with great value by student and layman alike. While the text is thoroughly up-to-date and practical in its treatment, an historical vein runs through it which adds to the value of the study."
+ Boston Transcript p4 F 8 '28 360w

"His study is capable, scholarly, admirably calm and judicial in temper and comprehensive in its scope. But essentially it is the same kind of study and interpretation that might have been made a quarter of a century ago, before the thousand and one new questions that the world of today is asking of tomorrow had begun to give new viewpoints and to alter the very appearance of problems."
+ — N Y Times p3 D 25 '27 260w
R of Rs 77:28 Mr '28 70w
Times [London] Lit Sup p180 Mr 15 '28 1050w
Wis Lib Bul 24:121 Ap '28

CRONE, JOHN SMYTH. Concise dictionary of Irish biography. 270p $3.50 (10s 6d) Longmans
920 Ireland—Biography. Biography—Dictionaries 28-20678

"The salient facts in the life stories of over two thousand noted Irishmen are set forth in Dr. Crone's 'Concise Dictionary.' Legendary heroes of the remote past are included in the survey, and the last to be included are the late Cardinal O'Donnell, Mr. Kevin O'Higgins, and Mr. F. J. Bigger, the antiquary."—Times [London] Lit Sup

"Dr. Crone's accuracy is as astonishing as his erudition."
+ New Statesman 31:492 Jl 21 '28 250w

"The book is all the more useful as a work of reference for containing names unenviably notorious as well as those of merit. As a rule, Dr. Crone is remarkably accurate in points of fact, although his printer often betrays him with as many as three slips on one page. . . . Dr. Crone has done pioneer work. His book will make an excellent foundation for the comprehensive Irish 'D.N.B.,' which could be reached by revision."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p326 My 3 '28 770w

CROSBY, IRVING BALLARD. Boston through the ages; the geological story of greater Boston. 166p il $2 Marshall Jones
557.44 Geology—Massachusetts 28-8177

"After a description of volcanoes in West Roxbury millions of years ago, Prof Crosby tells of the formation of Quincy granite and Roxbury puddingstone (conglomerate) and gives the history of formations of sections round about Boston, including Boston harbor. A chapter of much interest treats separately the geological formations easily available for investigation in the various cities and towns that make up Greater Boston. An ample bibliography is appended allowing of further study from authentic sources."—Springf'd Republican

Booklist 24:388 Jl '28

"It is altogether an easily digested book on a highly technical and scientific subject." S. L. C.
Boston Transcript p4 Ap 4 '28 280w
Springf'd Republican p6 My 21 '28 230w
Wis Lib Bul 24:159 My '28

CROSS, EARLE BENNETT. Hebrew family; a study in historical sociology. 225p $2.50 Univ. of Chicago press [12s 6d Cambridge univ. press]

392 Family. Marriage—Jews. Jews—Social life and customs 28-7853

"Dr. Cross, Professor of the Hebrew Language and Literature in the Rochester Theological Seminary, New York, here studies the changing status of the Hebrew family, showing that its development was along lines similar to those which humanity has followed in other parts of the world, and indicating that the modern literary and historical criticism of the Old Testament is substantiated by the tests of sociological investigations."—Times [London] Lit Sup

---

"It is the chief merit of this volume that it assembles in compact and readable form the most pertinent facts about the family life of the Hebrews, which would be difficult to obtain by students lacking training in biblical criticism." L: Wirth

\+ — Int J Ethics 38:482 Jl '28 1300w

"The author combines critical scholarship with a sociological point of view in a very helpful manner."

\+ J Religion 8:323 Ap '28 50w

"Professor Cross writes both as a trained sociologist and a biblical exegete, and his book accordingly carries weight, as many of its kind do not. . . The book is well written and makes easy reading." T. J. Meek

\+ J Religion 8:622 O '28 420w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:440 O '28

Reviewed by C: S. Brown

Survey 61:98 O 15 '28 100w

Times [London] Lit Sup p115 F 16 '28 50w

CROSS, MRS MARY ANN (EVANS). See Eliot, G:, pseud.

CROSS, WILBUR LUCIUS. Modern English novel; an address before the American academy of arts and letters. 42p $1 Yale univ. press

823 English fiction. American fiction 28-22326

"This address given before the American Academy of Arts and Letters, is a brief but quite unhurried evaluation of the more important of present day novelists of England and America. Galsworthy, Wells and Arnold Bennett, Hardy, James and George Moore, Virginia Woolf and Gertrude Stein are the notables who pass in review before the reader and to each Professor Cross assigns his proper place in the development of the modern novel."—Boston Transcript

---

"Has the charm, quiet humor and sanity of judgment that characterize all that Professor Cross writes."

\+ Boston Transcript p2 N 17 '28 120w

"The most valuable feature of the book is the selective bibliography of modern novels, of criticisms of the novel, and books on its general background. This is admirably done, and alone is worth the price of the book. One can have nothing but praise for the way in which the bibliography of so huge a subject is condensed into manageable form, without, so far as the present reviewer can judge, the omission of a single work of outstanding value."

\+ Springf'd Republican p7e N 25 '28 320w

CROTHERS, SAMUEL MCCHORD. Thought broker. 168p $2 Houghton

814 28-21292

Six essays on a variety of subjects, literary and otherwise. Contents: Augustus Bagster, thought broker; Keeping up with the smart set in literature; Angling in the pool of oblivion; Proposals for a social survey of literary slums: The worm turns; The unfailing charm of some novels.

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p17 Ja 20 '29 200w

Boston Transcript p6 O 20 '28 320w

Cleveland Open Shelf p129 D '28

N Y Times p40 D 9 '28 600w

"Mr. Crothers is lightfooted, skilful, and alert, the literary offspring of Oliver Wendell Holmes, heir to the adventurous wit of the Autocrat. . . His 'Thought Broker' gives advice about investments in ideas. There are more different kinds of ideas than kinds of stocks, and the amount and variety of pedestrian good sense which he evokes from his complicated metaphor is amazing." Arthur Colton

\+ Sat R of Lit 5:270 O 20 '28 480w

CROUSE, NELLIS MAYNARD. In quest of the western ocean. 480p $6.50 Morrow [25s Dent]

973.1 America—Discovery and exploration. Northwest passage. New France—Discovery and exploration. Northwest, Canadian—Discovery and exploration 28-6172

"Dr. Crouse traces in considerable detail the effort made to find a short route to the Pacific; namely, the northwest passage. The author is principally concerned with the enterprises of the English in searching for a route around the North American continent and with the attempts which the French made to find a way to the Pacific across that continent. The book is prefaced by an introductory chapter summarizing the reasons why Medieval Europe was so anxious to find an all-water route to the Far East."—Hist Outlook

---

"There is hardly a dull page in the whole book, and the charm of its style arises no doubt from the fact that it has been written for the general reader. On the other hand the work shows that a most thorough research has been made among the little known sources for the period covered. The range of the works consulted and the care with which they have been used and evaluated gives to the conclusions reached a scholarly value that appeals to the special student in this field." O. G. Libby

\+ Am Hist R 34:111 O '28 700w

Reviewed by J: N: Beffel

Bookm 67:323 My '28 180w

"The story is well told. In itself it supplies unsurpassed color and dramatic incident. Dr. Crouse's analyses are made with notable care." F. B.

\+ Boston Transcript p3 Ap 7 '28 440w

"Mr. Crouse has produced a very interesting study of a fascinating movement in world history." L. J. Burpee

\+ Canadian Hist R 9:172 Je '28 350w

"Both primary and secondary sources have been examined and the volume is authoritative and scholarly. It should be added, however, that it presents very little that was not already common knowledge. Its chief value, therefore, lies in the fact that it brings together in one place the outstanding events connected with the quest for the northwest passage. The dozen maps which illustrate the volume are well chosen."

\+ — Hist Outlook 19:243 My '28 250w

"Vividly told, with plenty of detail and much learning, this story should entrance all who love adventure and voyages of discovery. Dr. Crouse keeps before his eyes the main theme of his story, and embroiders that theme with incidents that gives it life and poignancy."

\+ New Statesman 31:519 Jl 28 '28 580w

"Mr. Crouse writes as full a narrative of it all as any one but a specialist would want. He has gone to original sources wherever possible and has made from them an authentic, scholarly, well documented book whose story is enriched by explanation of the economic and political conditions that influenced the explorations and their results."

\+ N Y Times p18 Ap 29 '28 450w

"A mass of valuable basic knowledge about America and its discovery which months of dredging in libraries would not produce. The style is admirable. Great skill in selection has been demonstrated, and the continuity has been preserved throughout." W: McFee

CROUSE, N. M.—Continued
+ N Y World p10m Mr 11 '28 500w

"It is not a simple task that the author has attempted. He has done a great deal of research, and while many of the questions with which he deals are more or less controversial, he has dealt fairly with them. The book is a manual primarily. There is no romance in it; the great spirit which moved these explorers has roused no kindred eloquence in the author. He treats his subject matter like a pedagogue in the classroom."
+ — Sat R of Lit 5:12 Jl 28 '28 350w
Times [London] Lit Sup p545 Jl 26 '28 1000w

CROWDER, WILLIAM. Naturalist at the sea-shore. 384p il $10 Century
591.92 Marine fauna 28-27881

Mr Crowder appears in this handsome volume in two rôles: as self-made naturalist studying marine life near his home at Glen Cove, Long Island, and reporting his observations with pleasant garrulity; and as self-made artist, reproducing in photographs and drawings the sea creatures he describes. The drawings are very fine; those in color are of exceptional delicacy and beauty.

"Mr. Crowder talks fish so simply and naturally that one feels that his captives are really his pets. With vividness and romantic insight he describes the drama taking place under the waves which only the careful observer ever suspects, and one constantly feels the imprint of his interesting personality."
+ Boston Transcript p2 D 8 '28 250w

"William Crowder has many of the gifts of Jean Henri Fabre and some gifts that Fabre lacked. He can see truly and record truly. . . He has gained a living insight into the perpetual mystery and miracle of life, and he can communicate that mystery to us." C: Johnston
+ N Y Times p11 D 23 '28 1300w

CROWNFIELD, GERTRUDE. Feast of Noël. 116p $1.50 Dutton
Christmas stories 28-21488

Stories of Christmastide, or the Feast of Noël, as it is called in Provence where these children lived: Babette who was led by the Three Kings on Christmas Eve; Etienne who dreamed a beautiful dream in the cathedral at Christmas; Réné, the shepherd of Maussane; Toinette who sang so sweetly the Noël; and little Alix who sold her beloved doves so that her friend might have a chance to regain her eyesight.

Booklist 25:126 D '28
— Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p6 D 23 '28 50w
Cleveland Open Shelf p140 D '28

"Charming little book of Christmas legends . . . all very simple and naive, with a medieval childishness, rare in these days of sophisticated literature for the very young. One wishes for more of the quaint black and white drawings by Mary Lott Seaman."
+ N Y Evening Post p10m N 10 '28 130w

CROWTHER, J. G. Science for you. 241p $2.50 Brentano's [5s Routledge]
504 Science

"Simply written essays in which are explained some of the fascinating scientific theories recently propounded, with descriptions of 'some of the more exciting researches now in progress.' "—N Y New Tech Bks

Boston Transcript p3 O 27 '28 150w

"His book is an example of clear exposition, and he is a good enough journalist to make his subjects interesting, whether he is writing about things as remote as tropical cyclones and new theories about the stars or as immediate as the conditions of working in coal-mines."
New Statesman 31:370 Je 23 '28 250w
N Y New Tech Bks 13:39 Jl '28
St Louis 26:349 N '28

"Mr. Crowther combines the scientific method with a rare capacity for exposition. He is so thoroughly master of his subject that he can make himself plain to the reader without the obfuscations of the second-rate writer, who so often designs, not to elucidate any depth of thought, but rather to hide its shallowness."
+ Spec 140:572 Ap 14 '28 730w

CROWTHER, SAMUEL. Presidency vs. Hoover. 286p $2.50 Doubleday, Doran
353.03 Presidents—United States—Powers and duties. Hoover, Herbert Clark 28-17280

The first part of the book is given to a setting forth of the problems that press upon the country and the manner of man best fitted to exercise presidential powers. The second half examines the qualifications of Mr Hoover and the extent to which he matches up to presidential requirements.

Booklist 25:9 O '28
Reviewed by Silas Bent
Bookm 68:346 N '28 120w

"Mr. Crowther's book is only incidentally biographical. He starts with a loose generalization of what in this day and age the man who would be president should be, and then proceeds to fit Mr. Hoover into the frame. It is far more argumentative than narrative, shows signs of hasty composition and even hastier thought, and relies for a large percentage of its text on extracts from Hoover's speeches." W: Houghton
— Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p7 Je 17 '28 150w
Reviewed by O. G. Villard
Nation 127:44 Jl 11 '28 230w
N Y Times p21 Je 3 '28 360w
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:406 Jl '28
Pratt p12 autumn '28

CROY, HOMER. Caught! 289p $2 (7s 6d) Harper
28-15156

A tale of married life and what happened to Connie Webb when her devoted but narrowly puritanical husband discovered her old affair. The harshness which Walter Webb shows a girl in his office caught in an unfortunate affair, is directed toward his wife when the unscrupulous ex-lover comes to Junction City and tries to blackmail Connie.

"The best part of the story is to be found in the humor and understanding with which Mr. Croy turns the final scenes from tragedy into comedy. The story is a quite human one and very much less sensational than its jacket and jacket descriptions would lead one to suppose."
+ Boston Transcript p10 Ag 8 '28 200w

"Since the writing of 'West of the Water Tower,' the work of Homer Croy has improved. There is a smoothness in this latest tale of Junction City that was lacking in the rather crude, virile, earlier story which brought him into prominence."
+ — N Y Times p9 Jl 8 '28 550w
Reviewed by E. C. Beckwith
N Y World p7m Ag 12 '28 120w
Springf'd Republican p7f Jl 22 '28 450w

CROZIER, MRS BLANCHE (BENJAMIN). Smiley's haven. 360p $2.50 Little 28-7753

The leisurely story of an engaging ne'er-do-well who drifts—literally, astride a bedstead—to a small island in the Atlantic, and finds there a comfortable berth and a good wife to do the work and the worrying for the family.

Booklist 24:403 Jl '28

"A novel like 'Smiley's Haven' is a haven in itself after too much stormy reading. So casually, leisurely and smoothly does Mrs Crozier do it that after the first few pages one mentally relaxes and actually enjoys himself. A writer who in these days of tension can hold his audience without recourse to the alarm method deserves more than moderate approval. . . 'Smiley's Haven' is a vivid and sincere piece of work, a very commendable first novel." Ruth Lechlitner

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p17 Ap 29 '28 550w

Boston Transcript p7 Je 16 '28 230w

"A somewhat tame, tedious, and long drawn-out novel of domestic life on an isle in the British West Indies, this book is not the thing for those who demand liveliness of action in their fiction. The story is dull, but capably written."

— + Sat R of Lit 4:807 Ap 21 '28 150w

CROZIER, WILLIAM PERCIVAL, ed. Letters of Pontius Pilate; written during his governorship of Judæa to his friend Seneca in Rome. 172p $1.75 Sears [5s J. Cape]

232.9 Pilate, Pontius. Jesus Christ—Passion 28-22163

"The book is cast into the form of letters written by Pilate to his friend Seneca in Rome. They begin on the voyage to Judea and they end with the narrative of the trial and crucifixion of Christ. The various pictures of the Jews as they appeared from the Roman standpoint, contemptible, but baffling and dangerous on account of their fanaticism, are very telling, and the different strands of thought and feeling amongst them are well brought out, as in Anatole France's famous Procurateur de la Judée."—Spec

"If the language were more in keeping with our idea of what it was, and there had been a concrete statement as to the source of these letters, even though such statement was bold in admitting personal authorship, we could enjoy the quite vivid pictures of manners and customs of those early days."

— + Boston Transcript p5 O 6 '28 300w

New Statesman 31:supxvi My 19 '28 300w

"No reader need waste time in speculation as to the genuineness of these 'letters.' Mr. Crozier has not even taken the trouble to write pastiches of the Roman epistolary style. While he keeps for the most part within the bounds of probability, he now and then betrays himself by a modernism. The utmost latitude in translation would not justify the rendering of Latin slang into 'Tell it to the marines.' " R. C. B. Brown

N Y Evening Post p8m N 3 '28 200w

"The complexities of Judean life are portrayed fairly interestingly. The style is colloquial in the extreme, and wholly modern. Neither text nor footnotes supply the authority of source books or documentary reference."

— + N Y Times p22 O 28 '28 280w

"We may take Mr. Crozier's scholarly imaginings as the projection of an accurate and historical mind which has set itself the problem of trying to understand and to present the Roman Governor confronted by a turbulent and schismatic province."

Sat R 146:53 Jl 14 '28 560w

"Mr. Crozier has discovered an excellent style for his story, familiar but dignified, bearing marks of taste and knowledge throughout. It will be invaluable to the ordinary reader who wishes to know something of the background of the Gospels."

+ Spec 140:654 Ap 28 '28 220w

Times [London] Lit Sup p302 Ap 26 '28 320w

CRUM, JOHN MACLEOD CAMPBELL. Original Jerusalem gospel; being essays on the document Q. 190p $2.25 Macmillan [9s Constable]

226 Bible. New Testament—Gospels 28-28061

"It is generally agreed that the authors of the first and third Gospels used the Gospel of Mark and a lost collection of discourses for which it has become customary to use the symbol Q. The reconstruction of this lost source has naturally occupied the attention of many New Testament critics. In the nature of the case the enterprise can never be entirely successful. A short time ago, Mr. Crum published in the Hibbert Journal his own reconstruction of the lost document. That restoration is reprinted in the present volume."—Times [London] Lit Sup

"J. M. C. Crum presents a series of essays on Q. They are popular and can hardly be said to represent a serious attempt to clarify the problems that remain. His reconstructed Q, based on the assumption of the poetic quality of the document as a guiding principle, presents no conclusions that have not been proposed by various scholars before on other grounds, save certain changes in the sequence of the material." S. V. McCasland

Christian Century 45:701 My 31 '28 420w

"The style of exposition is clear even to minuteness, and the work could not be better done. In passing a great deal of valuable sidelight is shed on the incidents and metaphors of the Gospel narrative."

+ Spec 138:sup872 My 14 '27 210w

"It is an interesting piece of work which is entitled to respectful consideration. But it is necessary to warn readers unfamiliar with the subject that this is, as Mr. Crum himself says, 'a conjectural restoration of Q.' "

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p540 Ag 11 '27 650w

CRUMP, IRVING. Boys' book of airmen; with an introd. by Commander Richard E. Byrd. 278p il $2 Dodd

629.13 Aeronautics—Juvenile literature. Aviators 27-24510

"Accounts of the recent achievements of Lindbergh, Chamberlain and Byrd, and of the unsuccessful attempts of others of recent date, with descriptions of lesser known flights as far back as 1910."—St Louis

Booklist 24:251 Mr '28

Cleveland Open Shelf p114 N '28

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:179 Mr '28

St Louis 26:82 Mr '28

Wis Lib Bul 24:256 O '28

CRUSE, MRS AMY. English literature through the ages; Beowulf to Stevenson. 592p il $5 Houghton

820.9 English literature—History and criticism

"This book aims at telling the story of English literature through the stories of individual books. These have been chosen in the first place because they are great literary masterpieces, and in the second because each is representative of a particular period, a certain class of writers, or a common literary tendency. Of these books the author has told the story in considerable detail, aiming at making each appear to her readers as a living reality, not merely a constituent part of a great whole known as English literature."—Preface

"The balance between biographical details and critical material is nicely adjusted: there is just enough of the former and not too much of the latter. Miss Cruse is broad in her sympathies and lucid in her appraisals. In a single chapter she not infrequently attains the rounded adequacy of a monograph, especially in her approach to such figures as Milton, Samuel Johnson and the Brontës."

CRUSE, AMY—Continued
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p35 N 25 '28 250w
Springf'd Republican p10 S 7 '28 180w

CULLEN, COUNTEE. Ballad of the Brown girl; an old ballad retold. 11p il $2 Harper
811 27-13958

A narrative poem of Lord Thomas and the two who loved him, Fair London and the Brown girl. Illustration and page decorations by Charles Cullen.

"The slim book should be a desirable item both for poetry lovers and collectors of unusual publications."
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p21 My 6 '28 60w

"Aside from a very few inept choices of phrasing, the poem has unity of diction. Its many skilful flashes lend it distinction in its class. It is a poem worth knowing, in a book worth possessing." S. V. V. W.
+ Boston Transcript p5 My 5 '28 430w

"I find 'The Ballad of the Brown Girl' as interesting as a second-hand production is likely to be. It does not transcend its sources in the way the ballads of Coleridge do theirs; and many of the stanzas have the 'literary' flavor which becomes a flaw under these circumstances." A. K. Laing
N Y Evening Post p8 Jl 7 '28 80w

"Adapting the common title to 'The Ballad of the Brown Girl' Countee Cullen has made a slightly modernized and erudite version of the story. But he has kept to the ancient ballad meter; his figures are the customary figures of ancient ballads; and he has the swing, the narrative succinctness of the original." Percy Hutchison
N Y Times p12 Ap 29 '28 140w

"The poem shares the general excellence of Mr Cullen's work. But in a day when there is little sale for books of poetry one rather wonders what the wisdom of dressing up one small poem so extravagantly."
Springf'd Republican p8 O 17 '28 180w

CULLUM, RIDGWELL. Mystery of the barren lands. 318p $2 Lippincott [7s 6d Cassell]
28-20462

Her father's dying words had been "Let nothing deter you, get Noel Maddox. Make his diabolical mischief impossible." And June and her uncle had followed the trail to the barren lands beyond Hudson Bay and there the trail seemed to end, in a little settlement where the Indians were dying off from some dread unknown malady. Then Dr Jimmy Paton came, solved the first mystery, and with June's help, the second.

"The author provides sufficient incident to keep a rather ragged yarn alive during the search for the arch criminal. His personae are not so good." Will Cuppy
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 Je 10 '28 90w
Boston Transcript p6 Je 16 '28 380w
Springf'd Republican p7e S 23 '28 170w
Times [London] Lit Sup p582 Ag 19 '28 280w

CURLE, RICHARD. Last twelve years of Joseph Conrad. 212p il $2.50 Doubleday, Doran [10s 6d S. Low]
B or 92 Conrad, Joseph 28-25387

The author gained Conrad's acquaintance thru a critical article expressing his admiration for "Nostromo," which had up to that time been almost ignored by the public as well as the critics. The friendship then begun endured and strengthened thru the twelve years that remained of Conrad's life and the sincerity of the disciple's feeling for the great man brought with it understanding. The result is an unusually clear picture of Conrad as friend and artist and a revelation of his many-sidedness.

"Richard Curle writes out of a very great love for his subject. He writes out of the full intimacy of a dozen years. His industry has been enormous. And yet, granting his intimacy, his affection and his industry, the lover of Conrad's novels has a sense of something lacking in Mr. Curle's picture. It is not easy to define this deficiency or to indicate its exact nature. It derives, in my opinion, partly from the fact that Mr. Curle knew Conrad at the latter end of a fairly long life, and partly from Mr. Curle's own limitations as an interpreter." W: McFee
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p4 N 4 '28 650w

"Mr. Curle's Twelve Years is fluent, naive, and marked almost throughout by what Matthew Arnold would probably have called simplesse. The tone is like that of a schoolboy telling how the captain of the eleven had patted him on the back or tossed him a careless word. The book, moreover, reads as if it had been dictated and never revised. But all this is not to say that the book is without value and interest. Any first-hand information about so remarkable a man as Conrad must be interesting; and Mr. Curle enjoyed unique opportunities of studying him." E. E. K.
+ — New Statesman 32:329 D 15 '28 800w
N Y Times p2 N 4 '28 1100w

"Mr. Curle's careful cultivation of Conrad has given us much light on the author, nor has the critic taken the opportunity to preen his own feathers. He has an excellent understanding of Conrad and conveys in a number of passages not only Conrad as he must have been but the conviction that he really knew him." Harry Hansen
+ N Y World p8e O 28 '28 1000w

"It is in its honesty of devotion that the value of the book lies, for by it the author has been inspired to a purpose so sustained and so far-reaching that Conrad himself lives for us again." R: Church
+ Spec 141:374 S 22 '28 780w

"It is probable that Mr. Curle's account of Conrad and his work is the most important part of his book. But it must not be thought that Mr. Curle neglects to tell anecdotes of Conrad's character. Conrad does here, as in almost any faithful narrative of his doings, come alive, and Mr. Curle has realized that the more scrupulously exact he is the more picturesque must Conrad appear."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p641 S 13 '28 880w

CURLE, RICHARD. The one and the other. 355p $2.50 Doubleday, Doran
28-23113

"It is a sort of family detective story in which everyone is trying to find out what everyone else is like. Two at least of the people are psychological freaks; one, an old man who murdered his wife for her money, and the other, a young man whose satisfaction in life is to cheat his brother out of something he has succeeded, with difficulty, in winning—in this case a woman. The first disappears after an attempt to rob his daughter, the second commits suicide. All through the book the reader is baffled not only with family secrets but with all the obscurities of people half-revealed. The effect is that of an extraordinary intellectual thriller."—New Statesman

---

"Half way through the book it has a quality of poignant suspense. We feel impending catastrophe, an awareness of dark things brewing. Then the story drops. The method becomes ineffectual through over-use. We can no longer shiver quite as hard as we are bidden, the strongest premonition does not stir our hair nor prickle our thumbs."

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p20 N 4 '28 340w

Reviewed by Raymond Mortimer

Nation and Ath 43:397 Je 23 '28 30w

"The book has the elements of a powerful spiritual melodrama, but it lacks any vitalizing spark, any stinging reality. Mr. Curle does not deal convincingly with raw passions. His intricately conceived characters are products of artifice, not of life." E. H.

— + New Repub 56:359 N 14 '28 160w

"The One and the Other is a long book, but except for a digression at the beginning, it is extremely vivid. In its action it is theatrical and yet psychologically it is for the most part convincing. There does seem to be some kind of fate threatening these twisted people. It is not a picture of life, but it is exciting in quite a new way." G. W. K.

+ New Statesman 31:332 Je 16 '28 360w

"Its penetrating etching of characters, which are staccato-like in their tensity, its feeling of something ominous impending, of the spiritual pressure of one mind against another, of ruthless quiet, mysterious combat in the dark makes the story absorbing and fascinating. It has moments of striving for effect and moments of unadulterated beauty. On the whole, one feels that with the tensity of the writing something much finer should have been achieved."

+ — N Y Times p24 O 7 '28 500w

"Discriminating readers will take Mr. Curle's first novel as an interesting stunt, and they will wait without apprehension for his next and possibly less experimental narrative."

Sat R of Lit 5:560 D 29 '28 350w

"Very well written and holds the reader's interest to the end. One can pay him this tribute without hestitation, for his chief success has been in creating an atmosphere of electrical excitement in which a few characters chase breathlessly round a sultry London on one another's tracks. It is, however, a success of artifice and technique, as a reader will quickly realize who retrospectively gives the novel a sober consideration."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p448 Je 14 '28 400w

CURTIS, J. Mysterious murder of Maria Marten at Polstead, in Suffolk (reprinted from the ed. of 1828). (Famous trials ser.) 300p il $3 Scribner [10s 6d G. Bles]

343.1 Corder, William. Trials

"There was nothing particularly mysterious about the murder of Maria Marten, who was shot and stabbed by her paramour in the famous Red Barn at Polstead. William Corder was duly hanged for it and made a satisfactory confession on the verge of the scaffold, thereby earning a niche in the Dictionary of National Biography. The fame which this rather sordid crime attained, and which led to a long career for the melodrama founded upon it, was apparently due to the popular belief that the murdered girl's body was discovered in consequence of a veridical dream vouchsafed to her stepmother. The present volume is a verbatim reprint of the 'authentic and faithful history' issued by Kelly in 1828."—Sat R

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p15 Ag 19 '28 150w

Ind 121:141 Ag 11 '28 150w

"Its queer stilted language and platitudinous moralizing have a certain archaic interest, but the thing is done much better by our modern criminologists."

— + Sat R 145:442 Ap 7 '28 150w

"It was an obvious and commonplace crime, though a great effort has been made by the old writer to embellish it with mystery. His book in the beginning must have been commonplace too, but was well worth reprinting for the sake of the quaint picture of rural England one hundred years ago that it presents, with its village fairs, its javelin men, its puppet shows." Hulbert Footner

+ — Sat R of Lit 5:138 S 22 '28 250w

Springf'd Republican p7e S 16 '28 90w

Times [London] Lit Sup p285 Ap 19 '28 750w

CURTIS, KENT. Tired captains. 202p $2 (7s 6d) Appleton

28-4068

In the war, a gangling Iowa boy meets a young Englishman who is all that he would like to be. The former is a poet; the latter looks like one. So by a half jesting agreement between them the poems of the one are published in the name of the other. The partnership is a great success. Then the Englishman is killed. The dead man's fiancée marries the Iowan because of his closeness to her lover. The marriage is of course a failure. Drifting from place to place and haunted by his slain ambitions, the poet gradually degenerates. At the last, in a South Sea storm he tries to redeem the sordid wasted years in one heroic gesture.

Reviewed by L. M. Field

Bookm 67:332 My '28 150w

"The book is written in Conrad's method of interrupted reminiscence, and in something of his manner, but these improbable impostures make it almost a parody. The war scenes which begin the story, and which raise our hopes, are only the peg on which the author has seen fit to hang his melodrama." T. S. Matthews

— + New Repub 55:206 Jl 11 '28 200w

"In the slang of the British officers who appear frequently in the narrative, this is a real pukka novel. The name of the author is new, but he has got off to a fine start and his subsequent performances should be worth watching." Rex Hunter

+ N Y Evening Post p13 Mr 3 '28 330w

"In these twisted, gay, flected lives is told with artistic suggestion and restraint the pitiful, gorgeous story of hurt romantics. 'The Tired Captains' is a novel that visualizes beyond the gauds of the big show and touches the hearts of men; it probes; it brings understanding of things that have remained in the shadow-land. 'The Tired Captains' is among those few fine performances in the novel that have come out of the war."

+ N Y Times p10 F 19 '28 520w

"A very thin story, whose characters refuse to come alive."

— Sat R of Lit 4:895 My 19 '28 200w

"The book is good enough to make it worth while to point out two faults. Sedley, who tells the story, has no real share in it. Dwight's heroic death in a 1926 Bahama hurricane is rather incredible in a man who had for eight years been soaking his naturally jumpy nerves in drinks of all kinds. Nevertheless, the book gives an admirably vivid picture of a single unhappily-constituted character."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p244 Mr 29 '28 170w

Wis Lib Bul 24:255 O '28

CURWOOD, JAMES OLIVER. Plains of Abraham. 316p $2 Doubleday, Doran [7s 6d Hodder & S.]

28-15676

A novel of the days of New France, in which many of the characters are historical. Especially it is the story of Toinette Tonteur and Jeems Bulain, orphaned by an Indian massacre, and their difficult progress to eventual happiness.

Booklist 25:28 O '28

"Lurid in spots, crammed with knock-down-and-drag-out action for love's sake and crowded with the picturesque characters belonging to a vivid period (some of them scalped), the story is an essential for admirers of this au-

CURWOOD, J. O.—Continued
thor. Complete with happy and hokum ending." Will Cuppy
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 Jl 1 '28 110w

"'The Plains of Abraham,' although completed at the time of Mr. Curwood's sudden death, remained unpublished until now. Into it has gone his best work, making it absolutely his masterpiece." Florence Milner
+ Boston Transcript p4 My 19 '28 1350w
N Y Evening Post p5 Ag 18 '28 100w

"Although Mr. Curwood is a trifle slow in beginning and does not get into the real movement of his story until he has consumed half his pages, he contrives upon the whole to make an entertaining, a picturesque and even a breath-taking tale."
+ N Y Times p8 My 20 '28 520w

"As a novel 'The Plains of Abraham' is terrible. It is a perfect example of the dullness of romanticized history. The story, being true is incredible; the characters, painted from life, absurd puppets; the style, bastard Cooper, grandiloquent and verbose. But as a monument to Curwood's devotion to the past of his land, to his love of nature, to his admiration for the usually ignored virtues of the Indian, his book is dignified and touching."
— + Outlook 149:72 My 9 '28 180w
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:364 Jl '28
Times [London] Lit Sup p553 Jl 26 '28 180w

CUSHING, CHARLES CYPRIAN STRONG. Devil in the cheese; a fantastic comedy in 3 acts; ed. by Ton Cushing. 180p il $1.50 French
812 28-129

A fantastic comedy of love and bandits, staged in an old monastery in a remote part of Greece. The play was a success on the New York stage during the season of 1926-27.

Booklist 24:316 My '28

"A highly diverting comedy with a splendid second act and a rather weak third. It is a strictly commercial piece of writing filled with theatrically appealing but woefully improbable incidents, compensating for these by several deft characterizations and a good deal of ingenuous, Tarkingtonian dialogue." Glenn Hughes
+ — Bookm 67:592 Jl '28 70w
Cleveland Open Shelf p116 N '28
Springf'd Republican p7f My 6 '28 350w
Wis Lib Bul 24:222 Jl '28

CUST, NINA (MRS HENRY CUST). Wanderers; episodes from the travels of Lady Emmeline Stuart Wortley and her daughter Victoria, 1849-1855. 364p $4 Coward-McCann [12s 6d J. Cape]
910 Voyages and travels

"These 'Episodes From the Travels of Lady Emmeline Stuart-Wortley and Her Daughter Victoria' are the graphic reactions (from private family sources) of two early Victorian travelers amid scenes strange to their mental and physical ambient. They cover the years between 1849 and 1855, and while the 'Spanish' and 'Syrian' journeys also have the quality of swift and lively narration, the 'American Journey' in particular, with its vistas of burning steamboats on the Mississippi, rocketing stage coaches in the Alleghenies, the Hudson, New York and Boston in 1849; Mobile, colorful with Cherokee roses and Choctaw Indian turbans: Mexico, Havana, the Isthmus, the Pacific Coast, Callao and Lima—entitle the volume to a place on any one's Americana book shelf."—N Y Evening Post

---

"Out of her mother's and grandmother's journals and letters Mrs. Cust has made an interesting and unusual book.'
+ New Statesman 30:636 F 25 '28 300w
N Y Evening Post p8m N 3 '28 110w

"It is a book which flows in a very placid stream, but never becomes commonplace or wearisome. Many different sources have been drawn upon—diaries, letters, and the like—and the material has been put together by Mrs. Henry Cust with care and skill."
+ Sat R 145:397 Mr 31 '28 630w
Times [London] Lit Sup p107 F 16 '28 1250w

CUTHRELL, MRS FAITH (BALDWIN). Alimony. 294p $2 Dodd
28-21893

After five years of marriage Stephen and Charlotte admit they have made a mistake. Charlotte is all for divorce—and alimony. Stephen refuses until he falls in love with his secretary. He consents then, but cannot afford to pay alimony and support a wife. The situation is degrading, for to keep Charlotte in luxury Stephen and Eve must wait indefinitely to marry. By the time they do marry some of the first joy is gone. Meanwhile Charlotte and an ex-lover of Eve's mother discover each other, and after a season of cross-purposes, their affair too works itself out.

Bookm 68:xxx N '28 100w
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p22 N 4 '28 160w
Boston Transcript p2 O 3 '28 230w

"A rather sordid story."
Cath World 128:508 Ja '29 200w

"This is one of those novels that is entertaining for reasons that one fears the author never quite intended. . . The economy of characters in this fanfaronade makes each one of them get involved with one or another to a greater or less degree before the story is done with ringing the changes on alimony. Coincidence is far too pale a word to explain how some of them get together."
— N Y Times p20 O 7 '28 680w

D

DAHL, JOSEPH OLIVER. Kitchen management, construction, planning, administration. 364p il $5 Harper
647.95 Kitchens. Restaurants, lunch rooms, etc. Hotels, taverns, etc. 28-17409

A companion volume to "Restaurant management, principles and practice" (Book Review Digest, 1927), concerned with the arrangement, equipment and management of the modern hotel, restaurant or institutional kitchen. Contains many drawings and plans, and photographs of the newest labor-saving devices.

Booklist 25:57 N '28

"The modern hotel, restaurant, or institutional kitchen, its arrangement, equipment, and management, discussed by an experienced administrator and writer on such subjects. Many practical suggestions, plans, tables, and illustrations are given, which should make the book of value to those concerned with the planning of institutional kitchens or with work in them."
+ J Home Econ 20:677 S '28 60w

DAINGERFIELD, FOXHALL. House across the way. 250p $2 (7s 6d) Appleton
28-2517

Miss Hester Posey is a seamstress across the way from the big house where the Robertsons live. She is in the house on the night the first attempt is made on Mrs Robertson's life, and again on the night when that timid little woman is murdered. The tragedy is a village wonder and Miss Hester, being on the scene from beginning to end, tells the story of the whole mystifying affair.

"A competently told story, and that is about all one can say in praise. Mr. Daingerfield indulges in a great amount of ill-chosen humor, and frequently, because of the conversational method adopted, his tale verges on the incoherent. Its brevity of elaboration alone saves it in such instances."

— + Boston Transcript p4 Mr 28 '28 150w

Springf'd Republican p7f Ap 29 '28 130w

Times [London] Lit Sup p190 Mr 15 '28 120w

Wis Lib Bul 24:162 My '28

DAINGERFIELD, FOXHALL. That gay nineties murder; or, A Victorian crime; pub. for the Crime club, incorporated. 278p $2 Doubleday, Doran

28-12310

One quiet evening in Kentucky in the nineties Miss Cornelia Hunter is visited by a hatless, breathless young man announcing a murder next door. The victim is the younger daughter of Miss Cornelia's close friends, the Appledores. The mystery seems impenetrable, but several incidents disturb Miss Cornelia and these she reports to the district attorney. Together they work on the case with increasing excitement, yet neither is prepared for the shocking revelations at the close.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 My 6 '28 80w

Boston Transcript p6 Je 23 '28 230w

Reviewed by R. A. Simon

N Y Evening Post p13 Ap 21 '28 320w

N Y Times p23 My 6 '28 140w

DAINGERFIELD, FOXHALL. Wilderness house. 270p $2 Appleton

28-17811

Beverley, the heroine, who writes the story, is a crippled girl living in a musty old house in the Wilderness section of Virginia. Her father, a stern old man with his mind growing ever more fixed on thoughts of honor, she seldom sees. Her brother, Ruddy, whom she adores, Miss Angelica, an elderly gentle-woman, Catherine, whom Ruddy loved but could not marry because of poverty, and the negroes, move in and out of the story in a slow melancholy procession. At last Beverley and Catherine are left alone except for rare visits from the aging Miss Angelica. Tragedy is hinted at but rarely shows its face. That, according to Miss Angelica's code, is as it should be.

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p18 O 28 '28 230w

"The story is told in the first person by Beverley, the daughter, in an artless and girlish way that makes the recital of her troubles all the more real and appealing. Surely Mr. Daingerfield has described some old house with which he has been long familiar, else he could hardly have made it stand so plainly in all its loneliness before one's eyes." G. B.

+ Boston Transcript p4 Ag 1 '28 480w

"It is not that Mr. Daingerfield strikes any false notes: his method doesn't allow him to strike enough true ones. Stout figures were needed to carry this grim tragedy, and the two male Reves, seen through girlish eyes, are simply thin people in a book. Only black Harmonicum, the cook, comes through the filter alive."

— + Sat R of Lit 5:251 O 13 '28 160w

"The story ends on a rather optimistic note, but the general trend of the tale is one of tragedy. It is all honestly seen through the eyes of the crippled girl, who only knows what she learns from others or sees herself in her narrow circle of life."

Springf'd Republican p7f Ag 19 '28 230w

"After a slow start the book steadily gathers power, and unfolds its tragic developments in a manner that is quite moving."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p689 S 27 '28 300w

Wis Lib Bul 24:307 N '28

DALY, CARROLL JOHN. Man in the shadows. 310p $2 Clode

28-21979

"The body of a murdered man is discovered on the beach near Shadow Lawn, the home of a wealthy and respected citizen of Newton, who at one time in his early career had been a close friend of the victim and had joined the Klondike rush for gold in his company. Then begins the tracing of the motive, the only clue being that the knife with which the victim was slain was thrust through the three of spades. Many exciting things happen. First one person and then another is suspected and as usual the murderer is the last man one would believe capable of such a deed."—Boston Transcript

"Whether this is Mr. Daly's best novel, as it is claimed to be, we cannot say, but at any rate it is a good story of its type."

+ Boston Transcript p6 Ag 22 '28 200w

"Mr. Daly believes that this is his best mystery novel so far, and having read his other two, we heartily agree with him—the story is emphatically O. K." Isabelle Houck

+ N Y World p9e O 28 '28 150w

"A good fast-moving yarn." W. R. Brooks

+ — Outlook 149:638 Ag 15 '28 130w

DANE, CLEMENCE, pseud. (WINIFRED ASHTON). The Babyons; the chronicle of a family. 4v 378p $5 Doubleday, Doran [7s 6d Heinemann]

28-17640

In four small volumes bound in patterned paper and boxed together, Miss Dane chronicles the history of the Babyons of Babyon court, Devonshire, thru four generations. Back in the Georgian period, dark Hariot is jilted by her cousin Jamie and kills herself, by this act poisoning his married life and driving Jamie to a similar death. From that time the family devil takes possession of one of the women in each generation. Unappeased in death these ghostly Babyons return to haunt their home until the last Lady Babyon gives them peace. Contents: Third person singular; Midsummer men; Creeping Jenny; Lady Babyon.

Booklist 25:119 D '28

"Miss Dane is extraordinarily irritating, because her work is at least good enough to provoke a question. If, instead of dragging her infernal gods from their tin machines, she let the larvae laboriously spin the cocoon in her brain, would she not produce good silk? The answer perhaps is that she wouldn't, because she doesn't." Norah Meade

— + Bookm 68:348 N '28 230w

"From these tested ingredients—lords and ladies, gipsies and ghosts, moonlight trysts, madness, stolen matches and recurrent violent deaths—Miss Dane has contrived a mellow and richly colored tale. She can turn a decorative phrase gracefully; she has a pretty taste in scenery, furniture, dresses and all the elegant details which, in fiction, connote aristocracy; and she has the gift of conveying her own enjoyment of these things." Isabel Paterson

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p4 S 30 '28 1000w

"This particular type of story requires exactly the firm but delicate handling so characteristic of Miss Dane. Melancholy and violence run in the Babyon family but she never overdoes the matter, and she never allows what seems like a repetition of conditions really to be so. Never do we experience a feeling of improbability." D. L. Mann

+ Boston Transcript p4 S 22 '28 1800w

DANE, CLEMENCE, pseud.—Continued

"There are signs that the book is intended as a serious imaginative work; but it is impossible to reconcile the intention with the performance. As a thriller the story would be more satisfactory without the sociological trimmings; as a study of heredity or fate it is invalidated by the fact that one cannot accept seriously either the terms employed or the conclusions drawn. The whole, indeed, is inappropriately melodramatic: the style, the characters, the dialogue, the theme." Edwin Muir

— Nation and Ath 42:752 F 18 '28 140w

"Miss Dane has accomplished a tour de force in the art of fiction, and has written as well a story of compelling interest." R. M. L.

+ New Repub 56:281 O 24 '28 230w

"Had Miss Clemence Dane gone to Ibsen and not to the Christmas Annual for her ghosts, what fine stuff this woven story of four generations of Babyons might have been! Even as it is, when we escape from spooks and curses and get to realities the stories are good; how firm the characterisation, how rational the progressive decadence of a clever, mad, and reckless race that no imported stupidity or sanity can save."

— + New Statesman 30:672 Mr 3 '28 150w

"Miss Dane has handled her material with greater variation than she before exhibited; the darker passages and episodes are silhouetted against backgrounds of occasional light; one is conscious of the tragedy without being overwhelmed by it. If there is horror, there is also pity. . . Of the four books 'Midsummer Men' has a beauty, a sad, suffusing, penetrating beauty, possessed by none other." Percy Hutchison

N Y Times p5 S 16 '28 1450w

"The fault of 'The Babyons' is that it seems to have no motive power but the mere current of time. A tale that contains many delightful passages but that, wanting the stimulus of one increasing purpose, moves somewhat heavily towards a dubious goal." L. P. Hartley

— + Sat R 145:138 F 4 '28 630w

"For the most part, Miss Dane's technique is so deft as not to be evident. The story slips unobtrusively from one age to another, with the trappings of each period kept well in the background. The Babyons are considerably more than period portraits. But the emotion they evoke in the reader is after all the becalmed emotion evoked by the theatre, the comfortable sense that nothing happening to them is important, because they themselves are abnormal and unreal. . . These defects, however, detract very little from the effectiveness of the performance as a whole which, ambitious as it is, deserves unstinted commendation." Grace Frank

+ — Sat R of Lit 5:184 O 6 '28 1050w

"The flowery combes of Devon lie outside the ominous house of the Babyons, and a strain of gipsy song is heard in the wood. Even if that relief were missing, Miss Clemence Dane would yet have achieved an original, enthralling, and spiritually exciting novel."

+ Spec 140:168 F 4 '28 180w

"It is a good method of telling the story of a family, and tracing its inherited tendencies and instincts, to tell four definitely separate yet related histories; and our interest in the Babyons increases as the generations progress. The mixture of the fantastic with the real is convincingly done by Miss Dane's accomplished pen, and she can depict character—ordinary people—with a sure touch."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p78 F 2 '28 350w

DANIEL, HAWTHORNE. Clipper ship. 277p il $2.50 Dodd

623.8 Clipper ships

In the first chapters the author sets the scene for his clipper ships in a graphic account of the East Indiamen, the passenger packets, the slavers, and the clippers in the China trade. The later chapters tell again the story of the record-making and record-breaking clipper ships, the Oriental, the Flying Cloud, the Great Republic, illustrated from drawings of these famous vessels under full sail.

Boston Transcript p4 N 7 '28 480w

"In popular style the author of the present volume has shown us why these and other famous clippers came into existence, has recounted the major excitements of their heyday, and has lamented their passing. The record is now complete."

Sat R of Lit 5:443 D 1 '28 250w

DANIELS, FARRINGTON. Mathematical preparation for physical chemistry. (Int. chemical ser.) 308p il $3 McGraw

510 Mathematics. Chemistry, Physical and theoretical. Chemistry—Problems, exercises, etc. 28-5052

"Requiring only a rudimentary knowledge of algebra and trigonometry this text is stated to contain sufficient mathematics for a first course in physical chemistry and some advanced courses; but 'is not equivalent to the standard courses in analytical geometry, differential calculus and integral calculus.' Deals with logarithms, the slide rule, graphic methods, differential and integral calculus, infinite series, and probability. Numerous practical problems, a bibliography, and tables. Author is Associate Professor of Chemistry, University of Minnesota."—N Y New Tech Bks

"Written by a professional chemist, this surprisingly interesting book proves extremely gratifying to the mathematician upon finding an American chemist who knows so much mathematics." Tomlinson Fort

+ Chem & Met Eng 35:366 Je '28 500w

"The present volume cannot be too highly commended. It constitutes the most compact and the most comprehensive introduction to the use of the higher mathematics in typical chemical problems that has thus far been furnished, and the author is to be congratulated on his achievement." James Kendall

+ Ind & Eng Chem 20:556 My '28 210w

N Y New Tech Bks 13:20 Ap '28

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:260 My '28

DANIELS, HAROLD GRIFFITH. Rise of the German Republic. 292p il $4 Scribner [15s Nisbet]

943.085 Germany—History—Revolution. Germany—Politics and government [28-12179]

"Mr. Daniels gives a clear and straightforward account of the country's development from the time of the Revolution to its present position as a parliamentary Republic, dealing with the political and economic factors directly responsible."—Nation and Ath

Booklist 24:357 Je '28

Living Age 334:467 Mr 1 '28 580w

Nation and Ath 42:690 F 4 '28 480w

"Easily the best account that has appeared in English of the German revolution and its consequences. Mr. Daniels may not be an inspired historian but he possesses in a high degree the detachment and cool judgment which are much rarer than they ought to be amongst professional historians."

+ New Statesman 30:468 Ja 21 '28 1050w

"The main lesson to be learnt from Mr. Daniels's very able and analytical study of the rise of the German Republic is that in very many respects the new German Reich is the old German Reich writ large in seemingly democratic calligraphy."

Sat R 145:42 Ja 14 '28 800w

Spec 139:1092 D 17 '27 110w

"Mr. Daniels covers a wide field in his book on the German Republic, which is a valuable contribution to our knowledge of a very complicated and important period of modern history."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p944 D 15 '28 1300w

DANTON, GEORGE HENRY. Germany ten years after. 294p $3.50 Houghton

914.3 Germany—Social conditions. Germany—Intellectual life. Education—Germany. Germany—Economic conditions. Reconstruction (European war)—Germany 28-7888

The author spent the academic year 1925-26 as exchange professor at the Universities of Leipzig and Berlin. While his observations have largely to do with the student and student life, they give also an informative survey of the economic political, and social life of post-war Germany.

"The author writes in clear and concise style of political and economic reactions, of schools, universities and students, of post-war effects on theatres and literature, and closes his book with a significant chapter on Germany's intellectual vitality. It is a book of impressions fit for the interested layman or scholar." D. L. Hunt

+ Ann Am Acad 138:189 Jl '28 150w

Booklist 24:360 Je '28

"The book gives a clear and objective picture of Germany by a writer who does not allow his sympathies to impair his critical faculty." F. R. Dulles

+ Bookm 67:698 Ag '28 170w

"It is interesting. But it is not in the least a comprehensive study of that miracle of recuperation which is present-day Germany. Many of the author's comments about Germany are applicable to the continent of Europe in general."

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 Ap 22 '28 300w

"A book that ought to satisfy the tastes of a wide class of readers."

+ Boston Transcript p6 Ap 7 '28 380w

Cath World 128:123 O '28 320w

"The book abounds in shrewd criticisms and trenchant observations." Reinhold Niebuhr

+ Christian Century 45:857 Jl 5 '28 210w

"An interesting and informing book. Few professors have such a wide base from which to triangulate their observations of Europe as has Professor Danton—an American with a long experience of China. Indeed, his observations have all the distinctness and some of the apparent disconnectedness of a surveyor's field notes. But they give us the bearings and levels of heights and depths more accurately than is possible by laboriously climbing them or plumbing them as others have done." G: Young

+ New Repub 54:275 Ap 18 '28 1200w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:494 O '28

Pratt p29 summer '28

St Louis 26:326 O '28

"Professor Danton's notes on his year's stay in Germany are very readable, understandable, and useful. He was specially fitted to be an intelligent, and at once sympathetic and objective reporter. But it is only in the simplest and most concrete fashion that these backgrounds and his whole subjective experience are brought into his book. There is no attempt at fourth dimensions and metaphysics. Indeed, so far as manner and viewpoint is concerned, these voluminous notes might have been made by any keen-eyed and unusually thorough tourist, so simple are they and so concrete." Arthur Ruhl

+ Sat R of Lit 4:822 Ap 28 '28 750w

"This book is not a Siegfried's America Comes of Age, but quite as absorbing." N. L. Sims

+ Survey 60:612 S 15 '28 280w

Wis Lib Bul 24:160 My '28

Reviewed by Howard Becker

World Tomorrow 11:277 Je '28 70w

Reviewed by W: H. Dawson

Yale R n s 18:384 winter '29 550w

DARK, SIDNEY. Five deans. 255p $2.50 Harcourt [7s 6d J. Cape]

922 Colet, John. Swift, Jonathan. Donne, John. Stanley, Arthur Penrhyn. Inge, William Ralph. Church of England 28-20783

Studies of five deans belonging to as many centuries in English church history—Colet in the sixteenth, Donne in the seventeenth, Swift in the eighteenth, Stanley in the nineteenth, and Inge in the twentieth—each one considered as a typical representative of the English church in his century. Tho two of these five deans were far more distinguished as men of letters than as churchmen and Dean Inge is more philosopher than priest it is mainly as churchmen that they are considered by Mr Dark.

"The charm of this book is the author's use of the personal aspects of the church of England as it passed from crisis to crisis. In these authentic critical studies, we find the man behind the ecclesiastical official." F. B. N.

+ Boston Transcript p3 Ag 25 '28 980w

Reviewed by E. F. Edgett

Boston Transcript p7 O 6 '28 400w

"Lively and readable book." A. F.

+ Nation and Ath 43:258 My 26 '28 930w

"The five make an excellent group for critical study, and Mr. Dark shows plainly enough that he has enjoyed doing them. By far the best of the five studies is that of the present Dean of St. Paul's, upon whom Mr. Dark has no mercy."

+ New Statesman 31:234 My 26 '28 180w

"Mr. Dark may be congratulated alike on the vividness of his portraiture and the sprightliness of his style. Occasionally his observations discover a quite unusual penetration. Even in his most extravagant moods Mr. Dark is never other than readable and his book is a particularly interesting example of the extension of the Lytton Strachey method into the region of ecclesiastical biography."

+ Sat R 145:567 My 5 '28 480w

Sat R of Lit 5:244 O 13 '28 460w

"A shrewd and graphic book. Two facts, however, stand in the way of a really noteworthy achievement. One is Mr. Dark's provoking penchant for Anglo-Catholic propaganda. The other objection to Mr. Dark's sketches is that they fly at too high game."

+ — Spec 140:742 My 12 '28 230w

"The last essay dealing with Dr. Inge is the best chapter in a lively and amusing if not very deep work."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p338 My 3 '28 320w

DARK, SIDNEY. St Thomas of Canterbury. (Great English churchmen ser.) 218p $2.25 (6s) Macmillan

B or 92 Thomas à Becket, Saint, abp. of Canterbury [28-3318]

"The career of St. Thomas may be treated as an obstinate and dramatic struggle between two powerful wills, or it may be described as part of the more general struggle of which Hildebrand and the Emperor Henry the Fourth made Europe the cockpit. Mr. Dark has dwelt more on the first aspect, and with the limits of his space in mind he has probably made the right decision. He certainly contrives to give a telling picture of his hero."—New Statesman

"It is a brilliant piece of historical writing, and largely an apologetic for the church's opposition to the secular power and the nationalistic aspirations of the twelfth century." W. E. G.

+ Christian Century 45:178 F 9 '28 160w

"Mr. Dark writes as a whole-hearted admirer, but he writes so agreeably and with such candour that even those who do not take his view will enjoy his animated pages."

+ New Statesman 30:54 O 22 '27 450w

"Mr. Dark writes with a certain infectious gusto, hitting out valiantly at Protestants, 'moderates' and modernists, and the reader is never left in any doubt as to the direction in which the author's sympathies lie. The volume is one of the most interesting in a series which promises to be of considerable value to all students of English Church History."

DARK, SIDNEY—Continued
+ Sat R 143:873 Je 4 '27 520w

"It is the duty of the reviewer to say plainly that Mr. Dark's history is grotesque. Anyone who reads the book had better turn to the relevant chapter of 'England under the Norman and Angevin Kings' for a corrective. Here are two hundred pages that will do whatever is good in the Anglo-Catholic cause great harm." E. B. Powley
— Spec 138:1131 Je 25 '27 210w
Times [London] Lit Sup p443 Je 23 '27 420w

DARLING, S. BOYD. You and the law; with an introductory Companionate index presenting in new form a complete outline of the law for the layman and revealing by a new arrangement of material its human contacts and intimacies. 343p $2.50 Appleton

340 Law

A lawyer answers the layman's questions concerning the law on matters touching his domestic, civil and business relations. The questions and answers are arranged in logical chapters according to subject, and are followed by a dictionary of legal terms of some sixty pages, a bibliography, an occupational and a subject index.

"Mr. Darling comes marvelously close to making the law a 'human document.' He does this, first, by his means of approach, and then by his treatment of the subject."
+ N Y Times p22 O 21 '28 500w

Reviewed by W. R. Brooks
Outlook 150:1294 D 5 '28 80w

DARROW, CLARENCE SEWARD, and YARROS, VICTOR S. Prohibition mania; a reply to Professor Irving Fisher and others. 254p $2.50 Boni & Liveright

178.5 Prohibition 27-24583

Two pronounced opponents of prohibition legislation examine the arguments advanced by Irving Fisher and other advocates of prohibition, with a keen eye to detect weaknesses or fallacies. They hold that the Eighteenth amendment is not enforceable.

"A devastating criticism of Professor Irving Fisher's Prohibition at its Worst, as well as of Professor Fisher himself. Point by point his claims are taken up and their unfairness, their lack of logic and scientific accuracy are shown up. We can commend the book to all who wish to know both sides of this burning question." M. P. Ravenel
+ Am J Pub Health 18:827 Je '28 280w
Booklist 24:191 F '28

"In spite of the many obviously absurd statements made by the authors in their vain attempt to completely annihilate Professor Fisher, there is much in 'The Prohibition Mania' which should be read by prohibitionists in order that they may sail upon a more even keel, because when the authors are not trying to make a case against Professor Fisher, they give sound advice—sometimes in a withering fashion—to those who claim that prohibition is 100 per cent right. It is probable that if the authors had not been '100 per cent opponents' of prohibition, they would have written a much more effective book on the 'prohibition mania.' " C: Stelzle
+ — Christian Century 45:317 Mr 8 '28 1900w
N Y Times p16 D 4 '27 370w
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:142 Mr '28

"In order to overwhelm Professor Fisher, they have produced a book larger than his in bulk and almost wholly given up to a detailed examination of his arguments. On its negative side their attack is certainly successful in the sense that it turns the spotlight on the many weaknesses inherent in Professor Fisher's reasoning. When the authors turn, however, to what may be called a counter-offensive and undertake to bring forward evidence in support of their own position, they promptly fall into errors similar to his; like him, they base their contentions largely upon fragmentary utterances by individuals of varying degrees of trustworthiness and on assumptions which it is difficult to accept without verification." H. S. Davis
Sat R of Lit 5:298 O 27 '28 1050w
Wis Lib Bul 23:284 D '27

DARROW, FLOYD LAVERN. Story of chemistry. 528p il $4 Bobbs

540.9 Chemistry—History 27-21151

Generously illustrated, this story of chemistry opens with a chapter on the alchemist, and moves forward thru two centuries of scientific discovery, tracing the development of the science of chemistry from the beginning of the modern era to its dominating position in the industrial and political world of today.

Booklist 24:312 My '28

"When the first sting of disappointment has subsided, we find that what we have is, with the exception of some tediously industrial pages which fairly bristle with statistics, extremely interesting. The chapter on 'Atoms, Electrons and Protons' is perhaps the most lucid thing that has yet been written upon this subject, and the title of another, 'The Twilight Realm of Matter,' stirs us like a Jules Verne novel." E. H. L.
+ Boston Transcript p5 N 19 '27 320w

"Intelligent readers without up-to-date knowledge of industrial chemistry will learn a lot from the book and perhaps even catch some of the author's evident enthusiasm for his subject."
+ Chem & Met Eng 35:431 Jl '28 160w

"This new outline begins rather well and promises for the first five chapters to be among the best of them. . . After this propitious beginning, unfortunately, the book lapses. Most of the chapters on the practical applications of chemistry offer no improvement on a score of similar treatises on popular science. These chapters, comprising somewhat more than half the book, are padded with an excess of boresome eloquence and frequently fail to explain just the things the reader is most curious about."
— + Ind 120:189 F 25 '28 130w
Ind & Eng Chem 20:102 Ja '28 550w

" 'The Story of Chemistry,' is not so much a story of the science of chemistry as of its achievements in the field of industry. Here the book has to stand the test of comparison with Slosson's 'Creative Chemistry'; and this comparative test is not altogether to Darrow's advantage. . . It is on the whole not only a readable book, but one which shows its author to possess a sound knowledge of the subject." B: Harrow
+ — N Y Evening Post p13 D 24 '27 380w
N Y New Tech Bks 12:44 O '27

"The most striking feature of the 'Story of Chemistry' is its journalistic timeliness. Here we have the last minute news of the laboratories and the factories, so far as it is possible for a book to emulate a newspaper in reporting scientific occurrences. Nothing of current chemical interest seems to have been omitted." Waldemar Kaempffert
+ N Y Times p8 Mr 4 '28 850w
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:93 F '28

"In the main both Mr. Darrow's choice of material and the presentation are most commendable and many readers not themselves directly concerned with chemical science should find enjoyment in this book. The glamor and the romance of chemistry lie within its covers." C. S. Leonard
+ Sat R of Lit 5:24 Ag 4 '28 560w

"Despite the protest which the thoughtful scientist might make over the rosy enthusiasm of 'The Story of Chemistry,' the book does convey to us all much information about recent discoveries written in an engaging style, and Mr Darrow may be commended upon writing one of the most interesting popular science books of the past few years." C. S. L.

+ — Springf'd Republican p10 O 2 '28 480w

DARROW, JANE. Figured flame. 352p $2.50 Century

28-20924

Eve's childhood is circumscribed by the exactions of her pretty, petulant mother, who has old-fashioned and rather horrid ideas about the upbringing of children. These ideas of her mother cause the breaking of Eve's engagement to Christopher. The girl goes abroad to study sculpture and meets a man considerably her senior. She has decided to enter a passionless marriage with him when the sudden reappearance of Christopher brings up old desires and a new attitude toward them.

"Tough minded readers are likely to find the love life of Eve Marvin—if such it may be called—something between a trial and a tribulation. . . One cannot doubt that there are such people. Nor can one blink the fact that they are a bit of a bore unless presented with quite extraordinary skill."

— Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p20 N 11 '28 220w

"The novel is extremely well written, and it has passages of great beauty. Though Jane Darrow has written verses and short plays this is her first novel. If her later books fulfil the promise of 'The Figured Flame,' she will certainly gain a high place." G. B.

+ Boston Transcript p2 S 1 '28 400w

"The manner of Jane Darrow's book is decidedly better than its matter. It is well written, and shows a certain gift for characterization."

+ — N Y Times p7 Ag 19 '28 520w

DARWIN, BERNARD RICHARD MEIRION, and DARWIN, ELINOR MARY (MONSELL) (MRS BERNARD RICHARD MEIRION DARWIN). Tootleoo two unp il $2 Harper

821

Verses and pictures in color describing the lively adventures of Tootleoo who was shipwrecked in Cockyolly land, married Mrs Cockyolly and lived merrily ever after with his wife and six children, the Cockyollychicks.

"It has all the exaggerated merriment of preposterous situations, carrying them off with sweeping skill." M. G. Bonner

+ N Y Times p8 D 16 '28 70w

Reviewed by Herschel Brickell

No Am 226:adv D '28 50w

"The delicately-colored illustrations can hardly be too highly praised. And the verse is amusing rather after the fashion of Hilaire Belloc's verses for children, though not with quite the inspiration. This brief nonsense story in verse is extremely English in tone, the chatter of the children is entirely that of English children; but the character of Marmaduke is an achievement, and the whole book rarer as a literary and artistic effort than most books of its kind." W: R. Benét

+ Sat R of Lit 5:193 O 6 '28 180w

"A nonsense book adults will enjoy as much as children."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e D 23 '28 120w

Wis Lib Bul 24:308 N '28

DASA-GUPTA, SURENDRANATHA. See Surendranātha Dāsa-Gupta.

DAUDET, LEON A. The stupid XIXth century; tr. from the French by Lewis Galantière. 333p $2.50 Payson & Clarke

901 Civilization, Modern. France—Civilization. Nineteenth century 28-11231

Written by the son of Alphonse Daudet, this is a vigorous polemic against nineteenth century civilization—its political liberalism, its romanticism, its "degradation" of the family, society and the arts, its scientific dogmas and fads, chief among which he reckons the doctrine of evolution. The book treats in the main French civilization of this period, but its criticisms have wider application.

"Stimulating but unfair." R. T. House

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p20 Je 3 '28 1200w

Boston Transcript p3 Jl 7 '28 280w

"A fearful picture of that stupid product of the perfectly human Nineteenth Century—Léon Daudet." Ernest Boyd

— Ind 120:411 Ap 28 '28 1000w

"A compound of Menckenesque bombast and medieval obscurantism. He occasionally hits a target, of course, since he shoots at everything, and his antics are always funny."

+ — Nation 126:570 My 16 '28 70w

"His book makes sprightly and sometimes paradoxical reading, though his famous father, in such novels as 'Le Nabab' and others, has infused certain human social and political phases of the nineteenth century with the glow and glamour which all his son's accusations cannot dim." F: H. Martens

+ — N Y Evening Post p8 Jl 7 '28 300w

"The difficulty of reviewing M. Daudet's tirade on the nineteenth century at all is that the book must be advertised as entertaining, casually brilliant, and often charming—worth your time, in short—while it is impossible for anybody over the age of thirty and not French, to take 'the stupid nineteenth century' either very seriously or with any sharp admiration." T: Beer

+ — Sat R of Lit 4:779 Ap 21 '28 880w

DAVEY, NORMAN. Judgment day. 327p $2.50 Bobbs [7s 6d Constable]

28-23538

Judgment day comes to the English village of Quaire, and in the separate chapters of his story Mr Davey tells what happened when the Voice of God spoke to certain members of the community caught at the moment in a characteristic pursuit.

"An exceedingly agreeable novel. It strokes the reader with a fluent, mellow style and cajoles by the subtle flattery of giving voice and body to our buried inarticulate opinions of our fellow men. . . Because the unrelieved delights of judging others pall after the first novelty wears off, 'Judgment Day' grows tedious some time before the end, but Mr. Davey has sustained a difficult endeavor with taste and wisdom and unfailing humor."

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p20 N 4 '28 500w

"Mr. Davey has written a novel which should interest all thinking people. It is frankly for frankness, unashamedly against shams, it has moral implications which need careful digesting, and its conception of God would 'shock the most ultra-fastidious.' But Mr. Davey has used his brain, to do something different, and we suspect that he has here produced something which contains a trifle more than just the intention to startle." I. W. L.

+ Boston Transcript p6 D 15 '28 480w

Reviewed by Francis Birrell

Nation and Ath 43:499 Jl 14 '28 100w

"Mr. Davey has an abundance of fancy to carry him along, but he lacks the imaginative depth his conception calls for. However, he captures the reader's interest in his first chapter, and holds it continuously to the end."

+ — New Statesman 31:494 Jl 21 '28 100w

Reviewed by Hansell Baugh

N Y Evening Post p8m N 24 '28 730w

"One cannot deny that his verdicts are refreshing and often unexpected; one cannot deny the thoughtfulness and the sincerity of the book, and one must recommend it as at once an unusual, an entertaining and a provocative piece of work."

+ N Y Times p7 O 28 '28 450w

DAVEY, NORMAN—Continued

"The defect of his method lies in its fragmentariness: the several 'cases' are in effect so many short stories, gaining a precarious unity from their common appearance in the dream of Peter Young. Apart from this, 'Judgment Day' is a very readable book. Mr. Davey has shown great fertility in inventing varied and interesting lives for the souls brought up for judgment, and throughout the book the reader has the never-failing pleasure of hearing other people being told unpleasant truths about themselves." L. P. Hartley

+ — Sat R 146:158 Ag 4 '28 250w

"There is no fault to find with the author's God as a deity, except that He is a bit impractically minded. As a character in a novel, however, he lacks the charm that distinguishes Mr. Davey's human creatures. It seems something of a pity that the latter should have felt called upon to deal in metaphysics when he writes so nicely about people."

— + Sat R of Lit 5:494 D 8 '28 330w

"On the whole, Mr. Davey makes out a very good case for the belief that sincerity is the best of virtues, hypocrisy the worst of vices, but at moments this seems to lead him to the popular and possibly erroneous belief that open confession of an offense almost automatically condones it. One knows, moreover, chiefly by relying on one's normal prejudices, how the judgment will probably end in each instance. This is surely a pity, for there can be little point in a judgment day which jumps with one's prejudices, or with any prejudices which can be recognized as such. Mr. Davey should have startled one more."

— + Times [London] Lit Sup p802 N 1 '28 330w

DAVIDSON, ARTHUR AITKEN. Eilean More. 294p $2 (7s 6d) Longmans

28-16855

Colonel John Urquhart strides out of the Hebrides with the decaying pomp of a Highland chief, marries a delicate English girl and hastens back with her to his dour island, Eilean More. The only child of the ill-fated union is Evan, a lonely, neglected little hunchback. To compensate for his physical weakness Evan buries himself in books, grows more and more arrogant toward his tenants, and by his brutality estranges even Sheila his wife, who is the last to cease loving him. Pride, loneliness and grief conspire to turn his mind, and the last of the Urquharts dies in the ruins of Eilean More.

Boston Transcript p3 Jl 7 '28 220w

New Statesman 31:134 My 5 '28 80w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:320 Je '28

"A slight but savage story, told as a tale of history, easily, by a Scotsman. Its failing, perhaps, is that, though, a study of a thwarted character, none of the characters except the caricatures comes alive in it."

Times [London] Lit Sup p292 Ap 19 '28 190w

DAVIDSON, L. MARION. Things seen in the Dolomites; the glorious scenery of the serrated peaks & pine-clad slopes, their impressive gorges & flower-filled pastures & life in the picturesque villages of this paradise for walkers, climbers & motorists. 160p il $1.50 Dutton [3s 6d Seeley]

914.5 Dolomite Alps—Description and travel

[28-26713]

Illustrated with sketch map and many photographs the book describes a tour thru the Dolomites, preferably by motor, from Trento to Cortina d'Ampezzo. A chapter on the flowers of the Dolomites is added.

"Altogether fascinating and valuable little book."

+ Boston Transcript p4 Je 30 '28 180w

"From a welter of superlatives and exclamation marks there emerges a good deal of useful information for the tourist who intends to explore this precipitous district, though for a sympathtic study of the people the reader is recommended to go elsewhere."

Sat R 145:532 Ap 28 '28 90w

"A brightly written account of the Dolomites, more chatty at times than grammatical, by one who evidently appreciates them warmly and knows them well."

Times [London] Lit Sup p275 Ap 12 '28 70w

DAVIDSON, NORMAN JAMES. Romance of modern travel. 320p il $3 Lippincott [6s Seeley, S.]

910 Voyages and travels

Bits of information and description of out-of-the-way places all over the world, from Eskimo life in the Arctic to the island tribal life of the South Pacific. The material, both text and illustrations, has been drawn from various sources, largely from the personal narratives of adventurous travelers.

Boston Transcript p5 N 21 '28 120w

Times [London] Lit Sup p961 D 6 '28 500w

DAVIES, MARY CAROLYN. Penny show. 95p il $2 H. Harrison, 324 E. 15th St., N.Y.

811 28-7771

"In the entertainment provided by this 'Penny Show' of her heart are grave and gay moods, whimsical and tender; and the poet seems to understand that she is giving her audience what it wants. The vast array of magazines in which many of these verses first appeared indicates somewhat the variety of their quality." —Books (N Y Herald Tribune)

"She is frankly, enthusiastically and disarmingly concerned with taking her heart out and turning it over and over to see what makes it sing. In doing so, of course, she keeps on singing." C: Divine

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 O 30 '27 380w

"Though she seems to imitate the least important and most insignificant feature of Edna Millay, her gay and flippant attitude toward the traditionally tragic and wistful and forlorn sweeps us still farther away from the demoded Ella Wheeler Wilcoxes and all the older preconceived notions of what poetesses should feel and think about." Marcia Nardi

— New Repub 55:181 Jl 4 '28 130w

N Y Evening Post p13 Mr 24 '28 90w

DAVIES, RHYS. Withered root. 335p $2.50 Holt [7s 6d R. Holden]

28-11175

A young Welsh evangelist inherits from his father a spiritual fervour which battles valiantly with the earthly desires that come to him from his mother. All Reuben's temptations center in Eirwen Vaughan who predicts that one day he will come to her. And to his undoing, at the height of a religious campaign among the coal miners, her prediction is fulfilled.

"The tale moves swiftly, dramatically, with evidences in its composition of a fine gift for prose and a sound technique. . . No analysis of the book's flaws can deny it the power and distinction of its straightforward candor. It escapes above its own limitations simply through the vividness of its very apparent sincerity. As a first novel it is an achievement." Eugene Lohrke

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p3 Jl 15 '28 650w

Boston Transcript p6 Ap 28 '28 700w

"For those who desire to catch the pulsing fervor of that particular variety of religious experience which is known as a Welsh revival, there is no more genuine source. It is hard to read the lyrical exhortations of the young evangelist, with all their lack of practical meaning, without feeling the same stirrings which have so often thrown all Wales into a frenzy of religious excitement."

+ Christian Century 45:737 Je 7 '28 140w
Cleveland Open Shelf p121 N '28

"Mr. Davies has spoiled an occasionally very powerful tale by his sentimental handling of passion and the gratuitous death of his hero. The most interesting element in the novel for Americans is the depiction of the strange religious frenzy which appears ingrained in the Welsh character, a frenzy which has in it a dominant quality of cruelty and lust. Mr. Davies handles this material very effectively."
+ — Nation 126:652 Je 6 '28 100w
N Y Times p8 Ap 15 '28 500w

"Undoubtedly a first novel of austere power and no little beauty, this tale of a South Wales colliery village evokes one's admiration for its rugged strength and realism, but leaves one coldly disinterested in the fate of its brutish people." E. C. Beckwith
+ — N Y World p11m My 6 '28 420w

"There is power in the book and passages of thrilling prose, charged with emotion."
+ No Am 225:adv My '28 130w

"There is nothing original in the treatment; even that stock figure of fiction, the kind-hearted prostitute, makes her appearance. As a story, 'The Withered Root' cannot be counted a success; but as a picture of Wales, particularly of the part that religious emotion plays in Welsh life, it is vigorous and valuable. It is sympathetic but impartial, and a far more convincing account than that of Mr. Caradoc Evans." L. P. Hartley
+ — Sat R 144:918 D 31 '27 260w

"With his simple and richly sensuous style he has chronicled with just a bit too much poignant detail—and perhaps just a few too many eloquent perorations—the disintegration of a sensitive nature in the sea of religious ecstasy . . . a creature who, floating in this psychic vast, suddenly finds that he is buoyed not by a pure, spiritual medium, but by pulsing human blood—all too bloody. The moment is right and the man is substantial; but even so the matter of proportion and selection leaves not a little for debate." Robert Marks
+ — Sat R of Lit 4:841 My 5 '28 450w

"The unwillingness to describe emotion except in fleshly physical phrases, these attempts to enrich a grey atmosphere with strange wealth of epithets, distract attention from the far more cunning pictures of the Valley and its religious life. When Mr. Davies is describing a Welshman's hilltop dreams or the psychology of semi-sordid love, his language carries little weight other than adjectival; but his Valley he does know and its 'death-worshipping' people with their ornate Sabbath teas. Fair or unfair he may be to that old-and-new Glamorgan religion which is the resultant of Welshmen and coal-mining and geographical isolation; he has correctly inserted all the illustrative details."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p930 D 8 '27 700w

DAVIS, ELMER HOLMES. Giant killer. 373p $2.50 Day

David, king of Israel—Fiction 28-23464

Mr Davis's David always had someone else to kill his giants for him. From that first encounter with Goliath when he took by accident the credit for another man's deed, the shepherd-poet-king marches from triumph to triumph with the full approval of Yahweh and the acclaim of his people. But it is Joab, David's kinsman, who is the real giant killer. Patriot and zealot, commander-in-chief of the army, he builds up an empire and holds it for the king, a shining, irresponsible figure, who is the victim, perhaps, of the poetic temperament and his own undoubted charm.

Booklist 25:120 D '28
Bookm 68:xxvi N '28 260w

"'Giant Killer' is obviously Mr. Davis's most ambitious attempt at novel writing. . . This is a satisfactory historical novel which bears every evidence of careful scholarship, but which can hardly be called inspired and which seemed to me overlong." Herschel Brickell
+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p6 O 7 '28 720w
Boston Transcript p8 N 3 '28 250w
Cleveland Open Shelf p136 D '28

"Mr. Davis has done a rather remarkable piece of imaginative re-creation. Although he occasionally drops into sly cynicism, with obvious intent to shock, his book has a certain sweep and spaciousness. His fidelity to fact is even, at times, distressing. Witness the endless and tedious accounts of Israel's campaigns. Mr. Davis has read the Bible with unusual intelligence, with an eye for its latent possibilities. But why did he have to write 'Giant Killer?' " E. H. W.
+ — New Repub 57:147 D 19 '28 180w
Reviewed by F: F. Van de Water
N Y Evening Post p9m N 24 '28 1050w

"It is a book that is more solid than brilliant. Its pages lack the sparkle that ran through Elmer Davis's farce novels. Yet Mr. Davis has employed the scriptural skeleton of the story of King David to such good effect in chronicling duplicity, the dishonesty of international dealing, the hypocrisy of men seeking to exalt themselves by fair means or foul, that 'Giant Killer' has a cumulative sardonic effect that a lighter tale would lack."
— + N Y Times p6 O 14 '28 530w
Reviewed by Herschel Brickell
No Am 226:adv D '28 90w
Reviewed by A. N. Wilder
Outlook 150:1211 N 21 '28 480w

"Mr. Davis has allowed his thesis to override him and he has thrown away too often certain essential values of narrative in order to make an easy satiric point. It is a spirited and readable novel—it will be widely read and much discussed. But essentially it goes no deeper than the plaster. And I think that Mr. Davis intended something more." S. V. Benét
— + Sat R of Lit 5:293 O 27 '28 1100w

DAVIS, H. P. Black democracy; the story of Haiti. 370p il $5 Dial press
972.94 Haiti—History 28-13117

Written by a twelve years' resident in Haiti this is the first complete and dependable history of the country and its people, from its discovery by Columbus in 1492 to the constitutional amendments ratified in January, 1928. Half the volume is devoted to the last thirteen years of Haitian history since American intervention and occupation.

" 'Black Democracy' is well worthy to complete the trilogy begun so auspiciously by Blair Niles with her 'Black Haiti' and continued so charmingly by John Vandercook in his 'Black Majesty.' . . Although the social history of Haiti remains to be written, 'Black Democracy' both in retrospect and in prospect will long remain an authoritative work on the political history of the island." R. W. Logan
+ Ann Am Acad 140:343 N '28 1150w
Booklist 25:22 O '28
Reviewed by D. C. Seitz
Bookm 67:xx Ag '28 430w

"The author may be accused of trying to cook several large fat geese in the concluding chapters of the volume, which deal with the American occupation, but the whole historical body of the book, down to the summer of 1915, when the battleship Washington steamed into the harbor at Port-au-Prince, is solid stuff that will concern scholars long after current political issues are dead. I believe the historical body of the volume will stand permanently as the soundest textbook of Haytian history." W. B. Seabrook
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p7 Je 3 '28 880w

DAVIS, H. P.—Continued

"It is mainly Haitian history with which Mr. Davis deals in this well written and richly documented volume, but he deals with it in a way to give the book a high value alike for statesmen, students and general readers." E. N.

+ Boston Transcript p8 Je 30 '28 780w

Cleveland Open Shelf p101 S '28

"Mr. Davis has admirably sorted out the obscure history of this lesser end of a not inconsiderable West Indian island, and for the first time presented a fairly coherent picture of what has happened to the western part of Columbus' Hispaniola." Robert Herrick

+ New Repub 56:78 S 5 '28 1200w

"A thoughtful book conscientiously and admirably written." H: E. Armstrong

+ N Y Times p3 My 20 '28 2500w

Pratt p38 autumn '28

Reviewed by Arthur Ruhl

+ Sat R of Lit 5:3 Jl 28 '28 1250w

DAVIS, JEROME DWIGHT, and BARNES, HARRY ELMER, eds. Readings in sociology; to accompany An introduction to sociology; with the collaboration of L. L. Bernard, Seba Eldridge, Frank H. Hankins, Ellsworth Huntington, Malcolm M. Willy. (Social relations ser.) 1065p $6 Heath

301 Sociology 27-15663

A companion volume to "An introduction to sociology." "The outline used is that of the former volume, and all the material is classified and integrated under the following heads: Book I, The evolution of the great society; Book II, The forces shaping society: Pt. 1, Society and its physical environment; Pt. 2, Society and its biologic equipment; Pt. 3, The psychological foundation of society; Pt. 4, Society and its cultural heritage; Book III, The organization of society; Book IV, Sociology applied to social problems." (Introd.)

"The editors have brought together here a remarkably rich collection of materials, many of which have not previously been published in any similar connection." F. N. House

+ Am J Soc 33:650 Ja '28 120w

"The most solid, brilliant, modern, and useful treatises on ourselves that have come to our club since it was organized."

+ Educ R 76:22 Je '28 200w

DAVIS, MARY GOULD, ed. Stories; a list of stories to tell and to read aloud. pa 25c N. Y. Public Lib.

016.8 28-26075

"Here is a list of tales, with annotations by Mary Gould Davis, Supervisor of Storytelling in the New York Public Library. The most polyglot childhood in the world has approved the stories on Miss Davis's list—drawn from the life experience of all races. Some of the tales listed are joyous ones, some are tinged with the melancholy that children cherish, some are heroic. Hans Andersen and Carl Sandburg, Kipling and King David, Lewis Carroll and Edmund Spenser, with a multitude of others, remote or living, are listed here because the children of New York have enjoyed them."—Sat R of Lit

Booklist 24:231 Mr '28

Reviewed by A. C. Moore

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p8 Ja 29 '28 500w

"It is a list so charged with the joyousness of childhood's response to stories that every amateur will long to try his skill. No story has been given here that has not stood the test of the children's interest and approval. The list has been made by the storytellers, but it has been endorsed by the boys and girls. And so it is a list entirely without the note of didacticism." Esther Johnson

+ Sat R of Lit 5:79 Ag 25 '28 500w

DAVIS, RALPH CURRIER. Principles of factory organization and management. 449p $5 Harper

658.5 Factory management. Efficiency, Industrial 28-16370

"For the elementary student. Attempts to provide sufficient background for visualizing and solving ordinary problems of management, and thus leading to more accurate methods."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

"A clear and helpful text."

+ Am Econ R 18:757 D '28 70w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:630 D '28

St Louis 26:382 D '28

DAVIS, RAYMOND EARL; FOOTE, FRANCIS SEELEY; and RAYNER, WILLIAM HORACE. Surveying theory and practice. 1016p il $5 McGraw

526.9 Surveying 28-15140

A text based on long experience in teaching and in actual practice giving a full presentation of the material usually taught in surveying courses and sufficiently comprehensive to be of value to practicing engineers and surveyors.

Booklist 25:13 O '28

Eng N 101:106 Jl 19 '28 580w

N Y New Tech Bks 13:39 Jl '28

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:562 N '28

DAVISON, EDWARD LEWIS. Some modern poets, and other critical essays. 255p $2.50 Harper

821 English poetry—History and criticism. Lindsay, Nicholas Vachel 28-12108

Critical essays on some modern British poets —Bridges, Masefield, de la Mare, A. E. Noyes and others—and the American, Vachel Lindsay.

Booklist 25:64 N '28

"Mr. Edward Davison is certainly a critic of a very inferior order. The essays in the present volume, at all events, are the products of a very tender mind quite manifestly devoid of the least originality. . . One essay in the volume—that on analyzed rhyme—is, on account of its subject, of considerable interest. Here Mr. Davison is merely expository and it would be ungracious not to record that his exposition is clear and adequate. But I suppose that so short an essay is hardly worth the price of the whole volume—a little excessive at best." Newton Arvin

— + Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p14 Je 3 '28 700w

"Rather fine literary estimates of some of our most significant contemporary poets. It is a book that leisurely and cultured readers as well as professional students and scholars will find worth their perusal."

+ Boston Transcript p4 My 19 '28 280w

"The defect of Mr. Davison's critical articles is that the art and fire of his poetry does not get over into his prose. These then seem mere journeyman essays, often pleasant enough but without ultimate importance. Gratifyingly, there is a more distinguished note in Mr. Davison's essay on that too little valued poet, that most poetic of poets, the present Laureate. Herein occurs perhaps the only illuminated passage in the book." Shaemas O'Sheel

— + N Y Evening Post p9 Jl 7 '28 310w

"His Word for Tradition differs notably from the usual timid prayer for a little consideration at the hands of the masters of the hour. He has really produced a challenge of his own. . . I find his little essay exceedingly stimulating." Simeon Strunsky

+ N Y Times p4 Je 3 '28 1200w

"Davison's critical writings are confined almost exclusively to English magazines. For this reason 'Some Modern Poets' should go far to spread in this country his reputation for sound judgment and discriminating appreciation." Percy Hutchison

+ N Y Times p2 Ag 12 '28 2050w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:482 O '28

"It is of no advantage to him that his publishers should describe these critical essays as 'brilliant and provocative,' and quote the London Mercury that 'Davison has one of the toughest and most original minds among the youngest generation of writers.' The adjectives are singularly unhappy and only draw unnecessary attention to the absence in his critical work, so far, of all these characteristics. The two essays which have interested me are on Walter de la Mare and on Analyzed Rhyme." Arthur Colton

— + Sat R of Lit 5:19 Ag 4 '28 950w
Springf'd Republican p6 S 24 '28 600w
Wis Lib Bul 24:221 Jl '28

DAWSON, CHRISTOPHER HENRY. Age of the gods; a study of the origins of culture in prehistoric Europe and the ancient East. 466p il $5 Houghton [18s Murray]

571 Man, Prehistoric [28-20112]

"A well-illustrated volume designed to embody the cream of the information about early man discovered in recent years through the findings of archaeologists and anthropologists. How ideas, religious beliefs, customs, laws, and so on, were born, and how they have survived to this day, is what Mr. Dawson endeavors to show."—No Am

---

"An excellent idea has been carried to successful realization in these pages." E. N.
+ Boston Transcript p3 Ag 4 '28 800w

"The book is a remarkably able synopsis of the history of civilization up to the begining of the Iron Age, which can be strongly recommended to the general reader who is interested in the extraordinary progress of this fascinating subject during the last generation. It is, in our opinion, a long way the best of several attempts which have been made lately to summarize the broad results of recent discoveries and theories. Mr. Dawson's scholarship is exact, cautious, and thoroughly up-to-date, but the extent of his knowledge has not prevented him from covering adequately a great deal of ground in a moderate space and painting in the broad outlines of the picture with just that amount of detail which is necessary to make it live."
+ Nation and Ath 43:148 My 5 '28 530w

"Those who wish to keep abreast of modern research in pre-history, yet have not the time to read the vast literature that has gathered round the subject, will find in Mr. Christopher Dawson's scholarly résumé of the accumulated evidence precisely the kind of book they need. . . Several useful chronological tables, an excellent bibliography, and some very clear sketch maps add to the value of the book."
+ New Statesman 31:166 My 12 '28 850w

"Well documented, clearly written." F. H. M.
+ N Y Evening Post p5 Ag 4 '28 90w

"This book was well worth writing. It is well worth being read. But it almost certainly will not be read as widely as it might have been had not the necessity of doing a tremendous job in a very limited space forced the writer into a style somewhat encyclopedic, at the loss of warmth and color." Gregory Mason
+ — N Y Times p16 N 18 '28 600w

"The Age of the Gods is scholarly as to background, but written so any one can understand it and profit by reading it." Herschel Brickell
+ No Am 226:adv S '28 130w
R of Rs 78:20 Ag '28 40w

"It is a little curious that in a work laying claim to such a comprehensive character some subjects, such as the discovery of iron working, should be passed over almost in silence; Mr. Dawson does not even mention the hypothesis that its home was in Africa. The author has read widely and systematically and at the end of the book are classified bibliographies for each chapter; but though this may be useful to anyone who wishes to read up any particular branch of a subject it cannot replace the citation of authorities in footnotes, which Mr. Dawson seems to regard as unnecessary. When all is said and done, Mr. Dawson has written an eminently readable book."
+ — Sat R 145:469 Ap 14 '28 380w

"Mr. Dawson's book is perhaps the best short account of our present knowledge of prehistoric man, especially since the dawn of the Bronze Age, that has so far been written."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p478 Je 28 '28 1250w

DAWSON, CONINGSBY WILLIAM. Pilgrims of the impossible. 357p $2.50 Doubleday, Doran 28-17102

Robin is in the train en route to his first parish when he meets the young actress for whom he later gives up the ministry. There then begins a lone and difficult struggle to make a living in some other field. Meanwhile June marries another man. The marriage is not a solution to the problem, but an added complexity. The way to happiness is a bitter and lengthy one.

Bookm 67:xxiii Ag '28 100w

"The fine clarity of style, the purity of diction, the sense of the dramatic and the restraint which characterize Mr. Dawson's writing are all there. There is no stressing of sex appeal, there is no seeking after the sensational, the story is told quietly and works itself out logically and the character drawing is worthy of special commendation." G. B.
+ Boston Transcript p2 Je 6 '28 700w

"Pilgrims of the Impossible only just falls short of being very good. It is marred by a conventional sentimentality in its ending as well as by a certain flatness in the writing. Nevertheless it displays a refreshing breadth of interest and perception, a knowledge of life, and a manifest desire for honesty."
+ — New Statesman 31:676 S 8 '28 200w

"It is a tale of credible human beings cramped into unnatural situations by one of those plots equipped with a dramatic climax at the end of every milestone."
N Y Times p8 My 20 '28 500w
Times [London] Lit Sup p633 S 6 '28 200w

DAWSON, EDGAR, and others. Teaching the social studies. (Teachers' professional lib.) 405p il $2 Macmillan

307 Social sciences—Study and teaching 27-14487

"Represents the newer practice in co-operative text-writing. Well known specialists have set forth succinctly and in simple language for each science, its nature and purpose, origins, important writers, relations to other sciences, values in education, and important books: R. M. Brown, geography; Holmes, biology; Gates, psychology; Ely, economics; Tufts and Tufts, ethics; Henry Johnson, history; and Giddings, sociology."—Am J Soc

---

Am Econ R 18:84 Mr '28 130w

"The book deserves a wide use not only in normal schools and teachers' colleges but also in college departments of social sciences, from which most of the instructors will come. Finally this blocking out of the field should stimulate greatly research into precise problems." D. H. Kulp II
+ Am J Soc 33:646 Ja '28 450w

"An occasional disagreement with the author will not weaken the impression that Dr. Dawson is earnestly seeking to bring about better teaching of the social studies, and that his labors as represented in this book are highly commendable." R. O. Hughes
+ Am Pol Sci R 22:214 F '28 420w
Boston Transcript p2 Ag 6 '27 620w

"The most striking achievement of the work is the collection of definitions of the social sciences. These are real definitions, not verbal formulæ, each an essay of about thirty pages. One might expect to find in the writings of such a distinguished array of scholars a pardonable emphasis upon individual points of view, irrespective of the purposes of this book. This is only slightly the case, however. Each has defined his subject with remarkable clearness, made generous allowance for varying points of view within his field, and considered duly the needs of the teachers in the schools." A. C. Krey

DAWSON, EDGAR, and others—Continued
+ Hist Outlook 19:43 Ja '28 680w

DAWSON, WILLIAM HARBUTT. Richard Cobden and foreign policy. 350p $5 Frank-Maurice
B or 92 Cobden, Richard [27-19246]

A critical study of the political life of the great English advocate of free trade, made "with special reference to our day and its problems."

"Mr. Dawson has made a notable contribution to English historical study. He has at once given us a sympathetic and critical survey of one of the most important figures in British public life in the last century, and all without trangressing on the previous work of Lord Morley." A. S. R.
+ Boston Transcript p7 O 1 '27 850w
Cleveland Open Shelf p122 N '27

Reviewed by J. A. Hobson
Nation 126:325 Mr 21 '28 230w

"Mr. Dawson's book is not a new biography of Cobden but rather a contribution to the destructive criticism of European diplomacy, especially of the victorious allied powers. Mr. Dawson takes the daring step of putting between quotation marks what he imagines Cobden would have said of the peace treaties and the Covenant of the League of Nations, basing himself on paraphrases of some of Cobden's speeches." L. V. Updegraff
N Y Times p14 D 25 '27 1600w

DAY, CLARENCE SHEPARD. Thoughts without words. 118p il $3.50 (15s) Knopf 817 28-15041

A book of drawings and verse combining humor with philosophy, in which the author contrives to say more with line than letter.

Booklist 25:20 O '28

"This book of drawings and rhymes is an excellent thing to have and to pore over at odd moments of an evening. There is much philosophy in it, but the philosophy is not too maliciously keen. Humor healthily outweighs wit." E: Sapir
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p3 Ag 5 '28 850w

"The author of 'This Simian World' again proves himself a past-master of caricature and a laughing philosopher." S. V. V. W.
+ Boston Transcript p2 Je 6 '28 450w

Reviewed by R. A. Simon
N Y Evening Post p7 Je 9 '28 170w

"Mr. Day's thoughts are swell. They are, in manner and in spirit, many of them, like the thoughts Mr. W. S. Gilbert thought when he abandoned words and drew pictures." W. R. Brooks
+ Outlook 149:157 My 23 '28 120w

"His sense of comedy is such, both in pencil-drawing and in tag and caption, that almost every page delights the mind. To us 'Thoughts without Words' is a book constantly to keep by one against the embittered hour. 'What Fools These Mortals Be,' is the sense of it and its disillusioned philosophy cuts deep. More than this, it is extremely funny." W: R. Benét
+ Sat R of Lit 5:4 Jl 28 '28 250w

"Mr. Day's humour, like his drawing, is rather crude, and nothing is too sacred or too painful to be mocked. But if he caricatures humanity somewhat cruelly, he sees it from a really individual angle, and his book will prove a source of considerable amusement to those who are not shocked by his sardonic chuckles."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p490 Je 28 '28 110w

DAY, FRANK PARKER. Rockbound. 292p [2] $2.50 Doubleday, Doran
28-25633

The hardy primitive life of the fishermen of the Grand Banks is projected in this story written in the uncouth dialect of the islands. The story describes the clash of wills between David Jung and his covetous old uncle Uriah, David's friendship with the ballad-making giant Gershom, and Gershom's sacrifice of self to clear the cruel uncle and son from his friend's path.

"When the author leaves dialect alone, he writes in an English which is straightforward enough, although without the graces of an effective style. The starkness of life on these islands permeates the book; but here the author has overplayed his hand: plot and characters are sacrificed to 'strength' and local color." Wilbert Snow
+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p21 D 9 '28 110w

"His characters are well drawn and seem real. Every-day mishaps, quarrels, loves, work and bits of good fortune give the pages of 'Rock Bound' a genuine realistic interest."
+ Boston Transcript p7 N 17 '28 90w

DEAN, ELIZABETH LIPPINCOTT. Dolly Madison, the nation's hostess. 250p il $3 Lothrop
B or 92 Madison, Dorothea (Payne) (Mrs James Madison) 28-11087

A straight biography of Dolly Madison, which carefully avoids any semblance of fiction in following the story of the "nation's hostess" as it touches closely the famous personages and the lively events of her times.

Booklist 25:26 O '28
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p19 Ag 26 '28 100w

"A biography of excellent balance and research, a book that reproduces the atmosphere of the early Republic and draws quick portraits of the figures of the day, and is also a book of some literary grace and considerable charm." S. L. Cook
+ Boston Transcript p4 Je 2 '28 1600w

"Good reference reading in American social customs and especially interesting for those who enjoy the city of Washington."
J Home Econ 20:598 Ag '28 30w

"Her narrative is too often rather flat and dull in the manner of its telling to make amends for its defects. The immense amount of material that is crowded into its two hundred-odd pages, however, does make the volume both valuable and interesting as a moving picture of the eighty years it covers." F. F. Kelly
+ — N Y Times p5 My 6 '28 1050w
Springf'd Republican p6 Jl 23 '28 570w

"A delightful book. For all libraries."
+ Wis Lib Bul 24:223 Jl '28

DEBUSSY, ACHILLE CLAUDE. Monsieur Croche, the dilettante hater; from the French; with a foreword by Lawrence Gilman. 212p $2 Viking press [6s N. Douglas]
780.4 Music—History and criticism. Music—Addresses, essays, lectures 28-12967

"Debussy contributed articles on music to various Paris journals for almost a dozen years before the War. At first he invented the figure of M. Croche, restless and impetuous, as a medium through which to express his opinions. Later however, he dropped all pretence, abandoned his affectionate caricature and expressed himself directly and, incidentally, more seriously. The contents of the present volume are not merely a collection of essays, the gleanings of the casual writings of a personage, thrown together posthumously for the sake of concocting a book; Debussy himself made extracts from his articles for publication in book form, and he was able to correct the proofs before the War came and postponed the appearance of the work until after his death."—Bookm

---

"Only recently available, this collection of articles on music and musicians by the great French Impressionist composer will prove of value to anyone who is an admirer of this brilliant figure, or who is at all interested in the criticism of music itself. As a critic, we find Debussy in these pages often acute, sometimes not quite just, always witty." Elbert Lenrow

+ Bookm 67:703 Ag '28 480w

"Debussy writes about music in the manner of Dorothy Parker about books. The results are almost always amusing. The refined irony and malice are those of the sensitive person who is apt to have sharply defined, intensely felt sympathies and antipathies, and to astonish one alternately with his penetration and his lack of understanding. Often, therefore, when he is most amusing, Debussy is unsympathetic and unfair."

+ — Nation 127:232 S 5 '28 160w

"The articles are so short that they are little more than notes of a musical critic and on ephemeral topics. But they are nearly always of permanent value, for Debussy never hides his musical tastes and opinions. He wrote with wit, and could flick a critical whip with great skill. In a few words he can give a criticism or indicate a musical opinion for which most musical critics would require pages. He is as interesting on Massenet as he is on Beethoven and Wagner, and his criticism of conductors is as good as his analysis of composers."

+ Nation and Ath 42:402 D 10 '27 100w

"It is true that the book is full of almost Whistlerian hates and prejudices, expressed in caustic Gallic epigrams. But he is generous enough to love as warmly as he hates." Marian Tyler

New Repub 55:128 Je 20 '28 580w

Reviewed by Tom Davin

N Y World p7m Ag 12 '28 420w

DEEPING, WARWICK (GEORGE WARWICK, pseud.). Old Pybus. 376p $2.50 Knopf [7s 6d Cassell]

28-23544

"Old Pybus is a gentle philosopher, formerly a dealer in rare books, now the 'boots' at an English country inn. He is estranged from his sons, Conrad, rich and thorough-going mucker, and Probyn, rich but redeemable, and his grandson, Lance, the twentieth century version of the old man, does not know him. But he discovers him and they become fast friends. Old Pybus furthers Lance's literary ambitions, helps him out of the wrong kind of love with the wrong girl and into the right kind with the right girl, and brings about a better understanding between Lance and his father."—Outlook

---

Booklist 25:120 D '28

"If he has not come up to the level of 'Sorrell and Son,' he has at least written an engaging and at times moving story."

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p21 N 11 '28 230w

Reviewed by E. F. Edgett

— Boston Transcript p2 S 22 '28 1350w

"'Old Pybus' is not so continuously entertaining as 'Kitty' or 'Sorrell and Son.' But the old man makes it unforgettable." E. F. Edgett

+ Boston Transcript p6 O 13 '28 850w

Cleveland Open Shelf p137 D '28

"Warwick Deeping is a moralist rather than a novelist. His characters are drawn in the best Victorian tradition, his conception of life is bound by a 'twinkle and a tear.' Glorious Mary, Brilliant Lance, the Roman, the Venerable Pybus are more stock characters than creations of flesh and blood. 'Old Pybus' is a pretty story for sentimental people."

— Ind 121:309 S 29 '28 270w

"Mr. Deeping returns in this book to the theme of Sorrell and Son, indeed, it is fundamentally an inferior variant of the same story. The relations between the old man and the young are described with a bright and brotherly smugness that is somewhat trying, yet there is truth and occasional beauty in the story."

— + New Statesman 32:24 O 13 '28 150w

"The book is extremely long, and extremely preachy. 'The Venerable,' which was Lance's own nickname for 'Old Pybus,' is rather appealing at times but most of the characters are mere conventional figures of fiction, whose actions depend almost entirely on the needs of the plot, a plot of the neatly tailored kind, thoroughly artificial, and with all tangles and obstacles obligingly removed by the author."

— N Y Times p22 S 16 '28 520w

"As in all of Deeping's books, the plot is mechanically perfect and the characters move in it like well-oiled clock-work. The book is humorless; its pseudo-intellectuality tawdry, and its sentiment cloying. But Old Pybus, if smacking somewhat of a figure in a newspaper 'human-interest' story, is still an engaging old thing, and nine out of ten readers will praise this book about him. And why be the tenth reader?"

— + Outlook 150:954 O 10 '28 200w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:546 N '28

"Here is self-righteous pomposity masquerading as a humble-minded exposing of truth: here is pandering to the mob who wish to believe that, aided by Sunday School mottoes, they shall inherit the earth; and lastly, as if the first two malefactions were not sufficient, here is a novel that is plainly and simply bad." R. B. Macdougall

— Sat R of Lit 5:458 D 8 '28 500w

Springf'd Republican p7e N 18 '28 700w

"It is all very romantic and very improbable."

Times [London] Lit Sup p836 N 8 '28 150w

DEEPING, WARWICK (GEORGE WARWICK, pseud.). Uther and Igraine. (Blue jade lib.) 376p $3 Knopf

28-11712

"This early story of a now popular novelist dates in the Hewlett period of historical romance. It has a good story romantically dealing with the fortunes of Ygraine who was to be the mother of Arthur. Its background is neither the fairy land of Hewlett's Middle Ages, nor yet the conventionalized medievalism of the Arthurian romances, but a Romanized Briton with some realization of what England in the sixth century may really have been like."—Sat R of Lit

---

"As we read we see the author busily thumbing an article in an encyclopedia on the Roman house. Such strange words as 'wooelshawe,' and 'parazonium,' coupled with the tintinnabulations of his poetic prose produce a stupefying effect. The wonder is how this brackish book ever got printed without a glossary." C. A. C.

New Repub 54:358 My 9 '28 220w

N Y Times p16 Ap 29 '28 600w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:370 Je '28

"This reviewer finds it in his heart to wish that Mr. Deeping would turn his new powers of characterization back into pure romance. He would not do chapters much better than the first of this book. His style in the descriptive passages of 'Uther and Ygraine' is already full-functioning and sometimes very beautiful. But he would make more now of the theme. Taste must govern in works of this kind. For those who like the historical romance, here is a new pasture for their imagination."

+ — Sat R of Lit 4:723 Mr 31 '28 200w

"Originally copyrighted in 1902, and for that reason one suspects that it is largely early work. That is at least the most charitable explanation, but whether it be true or not, the book will hardly add to Mr Deeping's reputation. It is a jumble of discordant elements which never approach the fusion and the unity of a great work of art." H. K.

DEEPING, WARWICK—Continued

— Springf'd Republican p7f Ap 15 '28 880w

DEFRIES, AMELIA DOROTHY. Interpreter Geddes, the man and his gospel; foreword by Rabindranath Tagore; introd. by Israel Zangwill. 334p il $3 Liveright [10s 6d Routledge]

B or 92 Geddes, Patrick 28-23514

Professor Patrick Geddes has been called the modern Leonardo for his interest and achievements in the fields of science, art, and philosophy. Internationally known for his exhibitions of town planning, he has been for thirty years professor of botany in the University of Dundee. In the field of philosophy his theories of life have found ardent disciples in widely scattered corners of the earth. Miss Defries, pupil and assistant of Professor Geddes, interprets with the aid of diagrams, certain of his philosophical theories.

"One gets from the book a series of glimpses, rather than a well-focused view of the extraordinary phenomenon that is Patrick Geddes."

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p8 D 23 '28 280w

"This skilful portrait of the man by his student-friend, Miss Defries, renders the great service of making more clearly known his thought and achievement."

+ Nation 127:sup380 O 10 '28 200w

"Miss Defries's method is personal and emotional. She has reproduced many of the Geddesian diagrams with their setting. It might have been better for her purpose if she had chosen only a few, and had tried a downright piece of analysis and exposition with the aim of supplying for the ordinary intelligent reader a brief summary of that Geddesian social philosophy in which many ardent minds have found inspiration, but to which no follower has so far given concrete expression in words."

New Statesman 30:150 N 12 '27 230w

"Those who are long familiar with Professor Patrick Geddes will probably feel that the elusive spirit of that surprising and Protean philosopher is hardly captured, although he himself fills many pages with long letters and lectures and reported conversations. This earnest volume does not convey the impression that acquaintance with Patrick Geddes is an amusing as well as a stimulating experience." R. A. Taylor

Spec 138:24 Jl 2 '27 400w

"Miss Defries has succeeded where others have failed because she has not attempted to set forth in ordered categories the contributions of this great Scotsman to half a dozen sciences, or more, and to an equal number of arts. She has given us a faithful picture of Geddes, the conservationalist—faithful even to the little peculiarities of style and manner at once so stimulating and so disconcerting to those who would absorb the full meaning of his talk." Bruno Lasker

+ Survey 61:172 N 1 '28 900w

"We carry away an impression of wide interests, of great labours and fruitful results in many fields of learning; but some kind of a synthesis is needed to distinguish among all this discursiveness the world-leader and teacher whom Miss Defries sees in her hero."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p474 Jl 7 '27 110w

World Tomorrow 12:44 Ja '29 20w

DEHAN, RICHARD, pseud. See Graves, C. I. M.

DE KRUIF, PAUL HENRY. Hunger fighters. 377p il $3 Harcourt

926 Agriculture—Experimentation. Agriculture—Biography. Scientists. Food supply 28-24361

Paul de Kruif records the lives of some devoted experimenters whose researches have been of untold value in improving and increasing the yield of certain foods essential to man. Among these men are Mark Carleton, founder of the durum wheat industry, who brought the tough winter wheat from Kharkov to our western plains; Marion Dorset, who found the remedy for hog cholera, and John Mohler, curer of foot-and-mouth disease; George Harrison Shull, the maize breeder; Stephen Babcock, discoverer of the fat test for milk; and Joseph Goldberger, experimenter with yeast.

Booklist 25:116 D '28

"The book is a real tour de force. The author has found a subject of absorbing interest, which is entirely new to the average reader. It is an absolutely original treatment of a set of events of so much importance to mankind that they dwarf the results of every other kind of labor done on this earth during the same period of time except a few other pieces of scientific investigation." Logan Clendening

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p4 O 21 '28 900w

Cleveland Open Shelf p118 N '28

"Dr. De Kruif's chief virtue is that he knows how to give the quest of the scientist all the thrills and gaudiness of a fight with broadswords. . . He has made a good job of his book." H. L. Mencken

+ Nation 127:523 N 14 '28 550w

"These stories stand out because Dr. de Kruif lets us into the processes as well as the results, into the blunders as well as the successes. They have the suspense of good detective stories and the thrill of heroic adventure. One can forgive an occasional affectation in Dr. de Kruif's style. He often strains for effect, but the effect is never absent."

+ N Y Times p4 O 21 '28 1250w

"This author writes with the fullest appreciation of the romance of science." Herschel Brickell

+ No Am 226:adv D '28 100w

"De Kruif's primary intention has been to make science interesting to a popular audience. To that purpose, his style is probably well adapted. It is violent, explosive and colloquial, a sort of combination of Emil Ludwig and Sinclair Lewis. His secondary, and reading in surprise and shame of the treatment his heroes have received, one feels his most worthy, purpose has been to give to the men of whose work he writes some public recognition. In both endeavors he succeeds."

+ Outlook 150:1132 N 7 '28 480w

R of Rs 78:36 N '28 20w

St Louis 26:389 D '28

"The records of effort of something like a score of workers, living and dead, are used in examplification of the theme. The personalities and motivation of these scientists are so crudely sketched that they are not recognizable by the reviewer who has had the advantage of personal contact with nearly all of them. Their actual accomplishments, however, are not over-drawn; indeed this would be difficult to do." D. P. MacDougal, M.D.

Sat R of Lit 5:183 O 6 '28 1000w

"A vastly better book than the Microbe Hunters and it must have been far more difficult to collect the biographical data for this latest of de Kruif's. Most of us who write at all wish we had this author's gift of showmanship. He's human. He's not a bit bookish. Would that many a teacher of history, or the sciences, and too many other subjects, could take off the professorial frown, forget dictionary English, get down on the level with the pupil (young or old) and be as good an educator as de Kruif! For this book is precisely the sort of presentation that will interest the public in science." Hugh Rowell, M.D.

+ Survey 61:512 Ja 2 '29 420w

Wis Lib Bul 24:301 N '28

"You never heard of most of these men, probably; nobody wrapped them with the flag. But they were the fighters of peace, wresting new secrets from Mother Nature. Who says non-military life is dull? Not for such as these!"

World Tomorrow 12:522 D '28 40w

DELAFIELD, E. M., pseud. See De La Pasture, E. E. M.

DE LA MARE, WALTER JOHN. Told again; old tales told again. 248p il $3.50 Knopf [7s 6d Blackwell]

398 Fairy tales 27-25042

"Here, at last, are the histories of Cinderella, of Little Red Riding Hood, of Sleeping Beauty, set forth simply, imaginatively, in terse rhythmical English embellished with many an odd endearing quip of humor. With his perfect literary tact Mr. de la Mare has resisted the temptation to even elaborate these stories; he found them simple, though permanent things and left them so."—Sat R of Lit

---

Booklist 24:324 My '28

"Cinderella in quite the loveliest version I have ever read. . . I do not care in the least for his vain Little Red Riding Hood and not nearly as much as I had hoped for 'The Sleeping Beauty,' but whether one likes what has been done to the stories individually or not, one feels that a fresh lease of life has been given them in this attractive form, and one approaches the book with curiosity. I think it would be a mistake to give the book to very young children." A. C. Moore
+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p8 D 11 '27 430w

Boston Transcript p2 Ap 25 '28 280w

"Mr. de la Mare misses one fundamental requisite for a story for children, and that is simplicity. He misses it intentionally. What he is doing in 'Told Again' is embroidering familiar tales with pretty sympathetic touches." Jane Cassidy
N Y Evening Post p13 F 4 '28 480w

"Keeping the distinctive features of each tale, he has rewritten it at greater length, giving it with added touches more beauty and fantasy and a finer and more varied appeal."
+ N Y Times p14 Mr 11 '28 140w

"Seen through the whimsical glasses of Walter de la Mare the stories take on added magic. These are no longer pretty little fairy tales with characters impossibly virtuous or unbelievably wicked, as the case may be; but people who have become quite human and situations which take on a naturalness and a logic that oddly enough add to the effect rather than detract from it." M. Van R. King
+ N Y World p11m D 11 '27 180w

"Specially delightful are Mr. de la Mare's Cinderella and the little Red-Riding-Hood. 'The Hare and the Hedgehog' and 'The Four Brothers' are also charmingly retold. Details are perfectly put in, and though many of the old features are transformed, the transformation is so delicately done that the result will satisfy both the child who has enjoyed the old version and the child who makes his first acquaintance with the stories here. The illustrations are sympathetically drawn."
+ Sat R 144:746 N 26 '27 210w

"In this handsomely contoured and amusingly illustrated volume, I believe the parents of younger children will discover something they have long looked for and, perhaps, despaired of finding. They will find there a score of the famous old fairy-stories and folk-tales 'told again,' as only a poet (whose Fairy Godmother presented him at birth with an invincible key to Fairy Land) could tell them." L. W. Dodd
+ Sat R of Lit 4:652 Mr 3 '27 180w

"Since so many authors have tampered with and spoiled the traditional fairy stories by retelling them in the worst possible manner, we should be especially grateful to Mr. Walter De La Mare for his new book."
+ Spec 139:sup995 D 3 '27 110w

"By what authority does Mr. Walter de la Mare destroy the character of Little Red Riding Hood? He says she was intensely vain and could not even pass a puddle without peeping down into it to catch a glimpse of her apple cheeks and golden hair. Cinderella herself, and Snow-White, and Mrs. Bluebeard, and Rapunzel, and the Sleeping Beauty and others he treats very nicely although there is perhaps another side to one or two of their stories. But he insists that even after her dreadful experience of being swallowed alive, Red Riding Hood's one thought was to comb out her yellow curls and uncrumple her hood before the looking-glass. Anyhow, in spite of his prejudices and his use of puzzling, if charming, words—he does explain 'paigles' and 'rampions,' but not 'tapets'—his re-telling of a short score of traditional tales is delightful."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p873 N 24 '27 280w

DE LA PASTURE, EDMEE ELIZABETH MONICA (MRS A. P. DASHWOOD) (E. M. DELAFIELD, pseud.). The way things are. 336p $2.50 Harper

28-3979

An ironic comedy of English middle-class life, in a manner suggestive of Jane Austen. Laura Temple, married seven years to a stodgy and inexpressive husband, and faithfully, if inefficiently, devoted to the care of her home and children, has a vague sense of something missing in her life but lacks the resolution or capacity to control its futilities. A rather tepid love affair gives her a moment's added self-confidence, but peters out, leaving her none the richer for her experience. The choicest part of the comedy consists in Laura's relations to her husband and children, her servants and neighbors.

Booklist 24:322 My '28

"The job is deftly but coldly done.' A. B. Parsons
Bookm 67:212 Ap '28 150w

Reviewed by Mary Ross
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p2 F 12 '28 1120w

"Mrs. Delafield has written an engaging and witty story in a masterly way. She, moreover, narrates her story with that fine play of irony which makes her beyond question the Jane Austen of her generation, a Jane Austen, however, who sees a little more profoundly into life than did that witty lady so many years ago." D. F. G.
+ Boston Transcript p4 F 8 '28 1500w

Cleveland Open Shelf p77 Je '28

"Above all others, E. M. Delafield seems to possess the gift of expressing the experiences and emotions of average aspiring people. She paints their lives in a way that at once strips away sentimentality and suggests an invisible significance. If she does not move us deeply, it is because an irrepressible sense of humor shines through her most dramatic scenes."
+ Ind 120:261 Mr 17 '28 180w

"Mrs. Delafield has written better books in her day, but one is willing to forgive a deal of frothy dialogue for the sake of the two priceless youngsters she has managed to create."
+ — Nation 126:219 F 22 '28 80w

"Laura and her domestic appendages—husband, children and servants—wander back and forth before us in the guise of every-day. And we are not bored. Amused, annoyed, sympathetic—but not bored. Well, hardly ever."
+ New Repub 54:131 Mr 14 '28 200w

N Y Times p14 F 5 '28 450w

" 'The Way Things Are' might have been a heavy-footed problem novel had not the author's deft touch, amused sympathy with fallible humanity, and nice taste in satire made it instead excellent light reading." F. C. L. R.
+ Outlook 144:396 Mr 7 '28 200w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:320 Je '28

"It does not show Miss Delafield quite at her best, but it is like all her work, astringent and refreshing." L. P. Hartley
+ — Sat R 144:371 S 17 '27 130w

DE LA PASTURE, E. E. M.—Continued

" 'The Way Things Are' is a quiet book. But it is an incisive book, and a wise one, understanding in its psychology, detached in its outlook, and yet quick with its sympathy for human nature." Amy Loveman

+ Sat R of Lit 4:681 Mr 17 '28 700w

"Every unsuccessful and pertinacious housekeeper should be made to read this book as an awful warning of what too Martha-like an attitude can produce in an intelligent female."

Spec 139:436 S 17 '27 80w

" 'The Way Things Are' is an ingratiating comedy, with insight, wit and grace to commend it. Its method of presenting character is objective and its workmanship is cleancut. Yet it is by no means a masterpiece. Miss Delafield adds a good deal—psychoanalysis and what not—that is mere filling or satire, and the men characters are only foils to the women."

+ — Springf'd Republican p7f F 12 '28 560w

"So rippled with enjoyment is the surface of this sardonic narrative, that one cannot at times help feeling that despite the almost hallucinatory naturalism of the dialogue, this world is not—worse luck—the world we encounter."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p622 S 15 '27 680w

Wis Lib Bul 24:91 Mr '28

DELAPLAINE, EDWARD SCHLEY. Life of Thomas Johnson. ltd ed 517p il $5 Hitchcock

B or 92 Johnson, Thomas 27-25842

"When a political personality fails to be amply recognized by his own generation it is difficult for a biographer to establish his prestige with a future generation. Mr. Delaplaine has attempted to perform this service for the first Governor of Maryland, who was also a warm friend of George Washington, a member of the Potomac Company, a lawyer of parts, an amateur soldier, an iron founder, a speculator in real estate, an Associate Justice of the United States Supreme Court, a Commissioner of the Federal City of Washington, and perhaps also something of a philosopher."—N Y Times

"A life of Governor Thomas Johnson has long been needed and this effort merits praise as an honest attempt to meet that need. The volume will prove valuable to students of Maryland history but some of the inherent opportunities seem to have been neglected. The Maryland governor is pictured as a man of parts, of more than usual ability, and a worthy patriot, but the treatment is not entirely convincing as the author is so entirely sure of Johnson's qualities that he seems unaware of the desirability of properly impressing the uninformed reader."

+ — Am Hist R 33:670 Ap '28 750w

"The book, which was altogether worth doing, is well documented and well written."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p18 F 12 '28 320w

"Mr. Delaplaine, though he has evidently made a thorough study of his material, does not quite succeed in making Thomas Johnson vivid. The reader is not certain whether this is Mr. Delaplaine's fault or Mr. Johnson's. Mr. Delaplaine is at least not lively and sometimes he is ingenuous."

N Y Times p14 Ja 1 '28 1200w

DE LEEUW, ADELE LOUISE. Flavor of Holland. 344p il $4 Century

914.92 Netherlands—Description and travel

28-22073

Traveling much by boat and motor, the author, who is of Dutch parentage and speaks the language, had ample means for getting acquainted with the true Hollander. Most of the chief cities of Holland were visited and have been described, as well as the country villages and their life and customs. The book is in no sense a guidebook, but would be useful to visitors to Holland, for its interpretations.

Booklist 25:115 D '28

"Miss de Leeuw has chosen for her book a most fitting title, for she has somehow managed to catch and imprison in her pages that distinctive national charm, which any country has for those who love, admire and understand it and its people."

+ N Y Times p12 S 30 '28 330w

" 'The Flavor Of Holland' goes below surface impressions and really gets next to the heart of the country. One is taken into Dutch homes and admitted into the confidence of the people. Miss de Leeuw's travels were comprehensive; taking in little-known villages as well as the larger cities, and her style is both informal and chatty." Milton Byron

+ Outlook 150:1171 N 14 '28 120w

DELL, ETHEL MAY (MRS G. T. SAVAGE). Peggy by request; the love story of Noel and Peggy, from "The keeper of the door," written by request of some of my readers (Eng title By request). 397p $2 Putnam [7s 6d Unwin]

28-3174

Eighteen year old Peggy goes out to India to be with her father whose mind has begun to fail save in regard to his work. Noel, a favorite of her childhood, becomes her protector and social sponsor. Unpleasant rumors concerning Noel and a married woman carry enough truth to spoil Peggy's romantic dream, but the sacrificial gesture she prepares to make is not required of her.

" 'Peggy' is an interesting story, easily written and easy to read, not so engrossing one cannot lay it down, yet sufficiently appealing to make one want to read to the end."

+ Boston Transcript p3 Ap 21 '28 350w

"In mingling sensation with sentimentality Miss Dell's hand has lost none of its cunning."

Spec 139:894 N 19 '27 100w

"The sentimental atmosphere in which the characters move hampers them considerably in their attempts to behave like people, but the incidents are well narrated and make fairly pleasant reading."

Times [London] Lit Sup p820 N 10 '27 300w

DELMAR, MRS VINA. Bad girl. 275p $2.50 Harcourt [7s 6d. P. Allan]

28-11174

A flirtation begun on a Hudson river excursion boat ends shortly in a hasty marriage and a flat in Harlem. Dotty Haley, typist, and Eddie Collins, radio mechanic, have everything to discover about each other, about being married and about having a baby. Bad girl is the amusing and frequently penetrating story of their first year.

" 'Bad Girl' is one of the miracles of American life, and it adds much to the richness and variety of contemporary American fiction. The miracle lies in the triumph of the author over the ordinary rule of fate; and her book's importance lies in the fact that she has presented a new milieu in a vivid, impressive and honest manner." Burton Rascoe

+ Bookm 67:304 My '28 2200w

"It has moments of high ecstasy and moments of desolation. It has, in their perception of it, a primitive poetry which they do not recognize as poetic. It has infinite possibilities most of which, as they do not realize, will never be fulfilled. Eddie and Dot have no history, but they have no destiny; this, in the last analysis, is what makes them representative and significant. Mrs. Delmar, portraying them against the background of the world in which they live, has produced a novel that, more adequately than any other recent work of fiction, expresses one characteristic aspect of New York." Lloyd Morris

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p7 Ap 8 '28 1000w

Boston Transcript p2 My 2 '28 600w

" 'Bad Girl' seems as fresh as a dill pickle on a hot summer day. The first chapter, in which Dot and Eddie meet on a Hudson River boat, is delightful reading, and an extremely able piece of work. But, unfortunately, all the rest of the book is devoted to repeating the successes of the first chapter, and in time we grow weary." A. B. Parsons

+ — Nation 126:540 My 9 '28 320w

"No sentimental reader will be able to resist it. Adolescents may be enthralled by the description of pregnancy and child-birth, which is pretty complete. This is a first novel, a very glad book, bursting with gladness. It must have been fun to write it." T. S. Matthews

New Repub 54:301 Ap 25 '28 260w

"A sensationally good novel; perhaps for one thing because it obviously does not aim to be sensational. It is one of the most matter-of-fact, simple, straightforward, accurate pieces of writing I have ever seen in print, and it lives from beginning to end." J. M. March

+ N Y Evening Post p12 Ap 7 '28 620w

"The present writer does not find the book interesting or ably written, except in parts. It seems to him unduly preoccupied with the matter of childbirth, both impending and actual. Admitting the subject, however, the reviewer is willing to state that this is the best fictional account of it he has yet come across. And he trusts he may be spared the reading of any other."

— + N Y Times p8 Ap 22 '28 530w

"The story is skillful, observant, and captures a mood in the life of a section of the metropolis that will be invaluable 100 years hence for those seeking bygone atmosphere. Although 'Bad Girl' has been overpraised, it would be a mistake to react from the plaudits and damn it with mere tolerant acceptance." J: R. Chamberlain

+ — N Y Times .p2 Je 24 '28 130w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:320 Je '28

"Had the author's ability to observe accurately and present deftly been matched in these later chapters—as they were in the earlier—by corresponding gifts of imagination and restraint. she would have written a memorable book. As it is, 'Bad Girl' will undoubtedly appeal to many readers—especially to those women, who to invert Dante, rejoice to recall in felicity the days of their miseria." Grace Frank

+ — Sat R of Lit 4:645 Mr 3 '28 450w

"There is no denying the narrative's fidelity to life, nor can we fail to admire the sincerity and sympathy that underlie Miss Delmar's stark realism. As the work of a writer in her early twenties, Bad Girl is a remarkably promising performance. But Miss Delmar must learn to leave something to the reader's imagination. A novel is not the place for obstetrics."

+ — Spec 141:463 O 6 '28 170w

Springf'd Republican p7f Ap 15 '28 340w

"This is a good book; these are real people; this is human nature, everybody pretty foolish, but pretty well-meaning. It is realism, but never dull—the inescapable baby provides thrill enough, thank you! And it is always clean, as birth is. It's fine case work too, with light for almost any newly-weds. This is the American scene, caught with fresh and undeceived eye, by youth for youth. It proves that in life, as in novels, it all depends on what you choose for your high moment." Leon Whipple

+ Survey 60:178 My 1 '28 220w

DELTEIL, JOSEPH. Lafayette; tr. by Jacques Le Clercq. 212p il $3.50 Minton

B or 92 Lafayette, Marie Joseph Paul Roch Yves Gilbert de Motier, marquis de 28-12637

"In my opinion," writes M. Delteil in his preface, "to relate the life of an eminent man is not to report facts and action, but to invent his soul. Have I depicted Lafayette as he was? I have depicted him as I like him, anyway." The Lafayette whom Delteil has invented is a romantic personality, sentimentalist and idealist, and all the events of his life are embroidered to carry out this pattern.

Reviewed by F. H. Winterburn

Bookm 67:585 Jl '28 180w

"The seeker after information concerning La Fayette had best look somewhere else for it. He will find little concrete matter here, and what he will find will be largely inaccurate. . . The reader may be surprised, he may be shocked, he may be disappointed. But if he is a lover of gorgeous phrase and thrilling, tingling poetry, it is highly probable that he will read the book through to the end." R. T. House

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p6 Je 17 '28 230w

"M. Delteil sees the conflict in Lafayette—between the man of the head and the man of the heart, as he calls it—much more clearly than Mr. Sedgwick. But that is the only merit his book has. Otherwise it is a series of libidinous images, which perhaps to a better-trained mind than mine would represent the Freudian complexes of the faithful husband and respectable citizen that Lafayette was." L: R. Gottschalk

— + Nation 127:17 Jl 4 '28 350w

"It is neither sympathetic nor exact; it is based on very little study; its style, which is sometimes irritating and sometimes superb, is never unobtrusive. M. Delteil, in the course of his narrative, has managed to be salacious, a difficult feat when dealing with Lafayette. He has also succeeded in writing a book which, in spite of its faults, must be considered as Literature." Malcolm Cowley

— + New Repub 56:132 S 19 '28 270w

"Brilliantly impressionistic life-portrait." F. H. M.

+ N Y Evening Post p9 My 26 '28 110w

Reviewed by H: L. Stuart

N Y Times p3 My 13 '28 900w

"An impressionistic, somewhat lyrical study, wholly unconventional as biography." Herschel Brickell

No Am 225:adv Je '28 100w

"Employing brief, glowing, even apostrophic panels, without trying to fill every crevice of time—as Mr. Sedgwick does—M. Delteil conveys a vivid semblance of a life. He seems to have conquered his data, giving it forth in an individual form. Sedgwick is for those who wish to know about Lafayette, knowing nothing. After Sedgwick, Delteil will mean more." Harry Salpeter

+ Outlook 149:316 Je 20 '28 330w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:488 O '28

"There emerges from Mr. Delteil's canvas a romantic personality wrestling with events as a poet or an artist might wrestle, mixing sentiment with practicality, more or less obsessed by words and formulas about liberty and the people, governed by his heart as often as by his head, but an alluring personality notwithstanding. The blot on the scutcheon, as Mr. Delteil looks it over, is a curious lack of virility; and upon Lafayette's sexual shortcomings he dwells with a zest which the scrupulous in such matters may perhaps think would better have been bridled." W: MacDonald

Sat R of Lit 4:906 My 26 '28 600w

DELTEIL, LOYS. Meryon; tr. by G. J. Renier. (Masters of modern art) 62p il $2 Dodd [5s Lane]

B or 92 Méryon, Charles 28-22208

"The story of the colour-blind ex-naval officer who, by a series of extraordinary chances, became the greatest of etchers, is here given the accuracy and conciseness which mark this admirable series."—Times [London] Lit Sup

---

"This monograph contains a biography in which every detail of Meryon's life is carefully

DELTEIL, LOYS—Continued
authenticated, a sound criticism of his black-and-white art and forty illustrations."
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p5 My 20 '28 280w
Times [London] Lit Sup p724 O 11 '28 550w

DENHAM, SIR JOHN. Poetical works; ed. with notes and introd. by Theodore Howard Banks, jr. 362p $5 Yale univ. press
821 28-10523

The only edition of Sir John Denham's work to appear in his lifetime was Poems and translations, 1668. This, the first critical edition of his work, is based upon that and the later reprinted editions.

"Mr. Bangs has edited these poems as partial fulfillment of the requirements for his doctorate at Yale and has done a most careful and scholarly piece of work. He includes a sketch of the poet and a carefully edited bibliography." G. R. B. R.
+ Boston Transcript p5 Jl 7 '28 380w

"The best of Denham's verse is not poetry; it is charming verse. Yet by his place in the history of English verse Denham deserves a scholarly edition; and Dr. Banks has provided not only the edition but a critical introduction which assigns Denham's place with entire justice."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p501 Jl 5 '28 870w

DENNIS, ALFRED LEWIS PINNEO. Adventures in American diplomacy, 1896-1906 (from unpublished documents). 537p $5 Dutton
327.73 United States—Foreign relations 28-7286

"The ten years [from 1896-1906] were crowded with events illustrating the importance of American diplomacy; events with which Secretaries Hay and Root and President Roosevelt dealt in a masterful and vigorous way. . . Dr. Dennis, by patient investigation of American manuscript sources, including the State Department archives and the Hays and Roosevelt papers, by an impartial exploration of motives and personalities, and by exceptional skill in following the main clews through confusing mazes of facts has now given us a history of this decade as excellent as it could be made." —Books (N Y Herald Tribune)

Reviewed by H. T. Collings
Ann Am Acad 137:263 My '28 550w
Booklist 24:346 Je '28

"Even where he reveals nothing new, his compact marshaling of all the available facts is highly satisfying. The book is that rare product, a piece of scientific history, quietly written, which is equally valuable to the specialist and the general reader; a book which treats the details of diplomacy exhaustively, coolly and with careful documentation, and yet makes out of them a narrative which often becomes absorbing. Every citizen interested in the events which have made America a world power will profit from its reading." Allan Nevins
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p5 Mr 4 '28 950w
Boston Transcript p4 Mr 14 '28 1350w

"This is, indeed, a book for the scholar in his study. But it is more than that. It is deserving of a place on the journalist's desk, in the lawyer's files, on the minister's pulpit. It should surely be read by those citizens—would that there were more of them—who love their country, but who believe that patriotism should be informed, intelligent, and rightly critical." Duane Squires
+ Hist Outlook 19:288 O '28 820w

"It is sound, dignified writing in the best tradition of American scholarship; but it is also excellent reading for anyone who takes an intelligent interest in the story of his own times; and it has, in addition, all of the thrill that attaches to the revelation of any secrets, but especially to the diplomatic variety." J: Bakeless
+ Ind 120:236 Mr 10 '28 1100w

"These are rich pickings, an important contribution to understanding of a pregnant decade." L: S. Gannett
+ Nation 126:649 Je 6 '28 660w
N Y Evening Post p13 Ap 7 '28 50w
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:556 N '28
World Tomorrow 11:376 S '28 170w

DENNY, LUDWELL. We fight for oil. (Modern world and its affairs) 297p $3 (7s 6d) Knopf
338.2 Petroleum industry and trade. World politics 28-17529

This is the story of the "oil war" between Great Britain and the United States for the control and distribution of the world's output of oil. The contested areas are in Russia, India, Mesopotamia, and in Central and South America. That this bitter commercial competition may easily lead to actual war between the two contestants is the author's contention, since the Department of state in the one case and the Foreign office in the other are already closely concerned.

Booklist 25:54 N '28
Bookm 68:xxii S '28 120w

Reviewed by J: H. Nelson
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p4 Ag 5 '28 1550w
Boston Transcript p4 Ag 11 '28 150w

"It is a breath-taking book, a sensationally realistic book, boldly facing unpleasant facts. If Mr. Denny's suggestion that the two empires must choose between such an improbable compromise and war seems incredible, then read the book, face the facts yourself, and see if you can do better." L: S. Gannett
+ Nation 127:65 Jl 18 '28 1050w

"Although the tale is not always savory, it is well told on the whole; Mr. Denny writes as a capable journalist. In support of Mr. Denny's thesis there are certain indisputable facts. . . Nevertheless, this book is unduly alarmist." E: M. Earle
+ — New Repub 56:106 S 12 '28 930w

"A book of vital interest and considerable value. This is a book which should be read by every one who is interested in the drift of international affairs. In the light of its thesis, such things as League meetings, disarmament conferences and pious expressions of distaste for war seem so much waste energy." Herbert Solow
+ N Y Evening Post p5 Jl 21 '28 360w
N Y Times p1 Jl 8 '28 2000w
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:446 O '28
St Louis 26:348 N '28

"The greater part of his book is filled with intricate details as to the negotiations or battles between the great oil companies and the support—open or veiled—which they are supposed to have received from their respective governments. Many of these details are highly controversial and of little interest to the general reader."
— Sat R 146:394 S 29 '28 1150w

"Mr. Denny has found a mare's nest. His hypothesis is based on the flimsiest of half-truths and on sheer falsehoods. Any City man who knows the facts about our oil companies will smile at his credulity. Any politician who knows how careful our Ministers and our departments are to keep clear of entanglement in the affairs of companies will wonder how Mr. Denny can be so hopelessly misinformed."
— Spec 141:406 S 29 '28 1050w

"A lurid book. The author has something to say, but prefers to bellow it, and his facts can hardly be seen for headlines. The facts are well compiled but are flavoured with inferences and reports from 'authorities' with minds as credulous or as sensational as Mr. Denny's own. The author's ignorance of British sentiment would be laughable were it less mischievous, but the book will be to the taste of those who like their politics hot, with plenty of thrills and hidden hands."

— + Times [London] Lit Sup p671 S 20 '23 200w

World Tomorrow 12:522 D '28 40w

DENSMORE, FRANCES. American Indians and their music. 143p il $2 Womans press

970.6 Indians of North America—Music. Indians of North America—Social life and customs 27-1524

"The first ten chapters deal with Indian life in general—arts, ceremonies, games, etc. The statements about these are very condensed and rather dry for anyone except a searcher after pure fact. These chapters have been conscientiously put in because the author feels that—'We understand the people better if we know their music and appreciate their music better if we understand the people themselves.' It is the music, however, which really interests Miss Densmore, herself a musician, and from the chapter called 'A Popular View of Indian Songs' we suddenly feel a spring of enthusiasm let loose, and follow easily through the chapters on children's songs, love songs, etc., the chapters on various musical instruments, to the more technical ones on the scale adaptations, even though we are not musicians."—Sat R of Lit

---

"When Miss Densmore is dealing directly with her own field, she is at her best. The chapter, 'Why do Indians sing?' makes the point that Indians expect to accomplish something with song. They do not sing for mere entertainment. Equally good are the remarks on the peculiarities of Indian music. These avoid technicalities and bring out several striking features differing markedly from the European tradition. On the whole it is a good book to put in the hands of one who cares to know something about the subject with the least amount of mental effort." Erna Gunther

+ Am Anthropol 30:710 O '28 180w

"An elementary but sound introduction to a complicated subject, written by one of the authorities."

+ Nation 124:458 Ap 20 '27 60w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:500 O '28

"It is a veritable encyclopædia of information on Indian subjects and an excellent reference work for musicians, historians, or anyone interested in American Indian lore."

+ Sat R of Lit 3:585 F 12 '27 420w

Times [London] Lit Sup p458 Je 30 '27 180w

DENT, EDWARD JOSEPH. Foundations of English opera; a study of musical drama in England during the seventeenth century. 242p $5 Macmillan [12s 6d Cambridge univ. press]

782 Opera, English 28-25140

"Professor Dent takes scores and librettos, sketches and other data for the reconstruction of scenes (such as those left by Inigo Jones), contemporary accounts and criticisms, and even the parodies of Thomas Duffett, which often throw light on the æsthetic standpoint of the time, and attempts to reconstruct from these diverse materials a description of what the musical stage was like from the Masques of Ben Jonson to Purcell's last 'opera.' "—Times [London] Lit Sup

---

"Professor Dent, as his wont is, has written here an interesting and important book. Whatever the fate of English opera has been to date, it has existed since far back in the seventeenth century, and the end is not yet. In discussing its foundations, Professor Dent deals with a subject that is undeniably considerable, and he does so in a way that is both illuminating and heartening." P: Bowdoin

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p22 O 21 '28 330w

"The masques of the early Seventeenth Century furnished the beginnings of English opera, and its growth from that time on provides Mr. Dent with an interesting and hitherto rather slighted topic. He gives a very complete and entertaining history of the early foundations of musical drama."

+ Boston Transcript p3 Ag 18 '28 350w

Nation and Ath 43:500 Jl 14 '28 680w

Sat R 146:126 Jl 28 '28 200w

"Professor Dent has been a vigorous digger and a careful sifter, and in this volume he has been able to show us more of the ground plan than any previous investigator has displayed. The reason is that he has a fuller equipment and a more comprehensive point of view than his predecessors, to whom, like all explorers, he is necessarily indebted."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p464 Je 21 '28 1350w

DER LING, princess. Old Buddha. 347p il $3.50 Dodd

B or 92 Tzŭ-hsi, empress dowager of China. China—Court and courtiers 28-24740

Princess Der Ling was for three years the favorite companion of the great Manchu empress Tzu-hsi. From her memories of the years in the court, years of close association with most of the historical figures who appear in these pages, the Princess Der Ling has written a romantic biography of the Empress, called Old Buddha, whose power was absolute, and who in signing the decree that sanctioned the Boxer uprising, decreed her own downfall.

"It is written half in the style of an old Chinese fairy tale and half in that of a Hollywood scenario. There are plenty of thrills in it and plenty of heart interest."

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p14 D 9 '28 200w

"Although the march of the narrative is interrupted by throw backs and numerous repetitions, the story is intensely interesting from the first word to the last. The book contains many photographs." J. W. M.

+ — Boston Transcript p4 N 24 '28 650w

"The book can be recommended to those who desire to know something about the last few decades in China, but who do not care to apply themselves to solid histories and interpretative works." C: Batchelder

+ Sat R of Lit 5:366 N 17 '28 250w

DE SCHWEINITZ, KARL. Growing up. 111p il $1.75 Macmillan

612.6 Sex instruction. Reproduction 28-1598

"The story of how we become alive, are born, and grow up."—Subtitle

---

"The story is told in a simple, straightforward way and the illustrations have been selected with discrimination as well as from the art viewpoint."

+ Am J Pub Health 18:1441 N '28 60w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:627 D '28

"A sound story of reproduction and birth, meant for children between the ages of six and twelve. Sex is simply told, in a healthy way in order to make clear how we become alive, are born and grow up. It has the dignity of truth as well as its vigor. The home built upon an integrity of candor between parents and child cannot afford to miss this book from its shelves." Halle Schaffner

+ Survey 60:357 Je 15 '28 300w

DE SELINCOURT, BASIL. Pomona; or, The future of English. (To-day and to-morrow ser.) 52p $1 Dutton [2s 6d K. Paul]

420 English language 28-6331

A master in the use of English discusses the future of the language as an evolutionary prob-

DE SELINCOURT, BASIL—Continued
lem. If English is to continue to be the speech of developing progressive peoples, it must find the means of continually vitalizing itself. The author sees advantage in the contrasting and competitive use of one language by English and Americans, and in the fresh outlook of the younger of these peoples a means of enriching and revitalizing our English speech.

Booklist 24:349 Je '28

Reviewed by G: P. Krapp
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p15 Je 10 '28 700w

Boston Transcript p2 Ap 28 '28 250w

Reviewed by E. S. Eliot
Nation and Ath 40:595 Ja 29 '27 330w

Reviewed by E: Shanks
Sat R 142:809 D 25 '26 1200w

Times [London] Lit Sup p930 D 16 '27 620w

DESMOND, SHAW. Echo. 277p $2 Appleton [7s 6d Duckworth]
[27-22056]

In Nero's time the greatest fighting man in Rome is a red-haired Irish giant, the son of kings, captured in war. The Red Shadow, as he is called, meets and slays one by one the mightiest and craftiest of warriors in the arena, swordsmen, wrestlers, sling-shooters, reserving till the last Clistris the Cat, with whom the Shadow has a deeper grudge to settle, one concerning the Lady Deeshie, his love thru countless incarnations. It is a lusty, sanguinary tale, with a hero who dares defy Nero himself.

" 'Echo' is told with an abundance of swing and vividness of phrase. It is a good action story, its historical ambient is correct enough, and if the Irish hero (like others in the book) occasionally mounts his stilts to 'converse' he drops them at once as soon as a chance to get some real, serious fighting comes along. A hero who can do just that is always a guaranty of a good, stirring adventure story."
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p22 S 23 '28 320w

Boston Transcript p2 S 8 '28 260w

"Mr. Desmond has written a capital story, with enough blood and cruelty to satisfy all reasonable demands. Unfortunately, the story is written in a pretentious jargon to gain effect."
+ — Nation and Ath 42:162 O 29 '27 180w

"It is a fine, poetically vivid and well-colored love story in which one of the finest young Irish lovers of fiction runs riotously active through the trireme fights, chariot races, gladiatorial combats and orgyistic indoor and outdoor revels which constitute the novelist's imperial Roman carnival." F. H. M.
+ N Y Evening Post p5 S 15 '28 150w

"Despite pages of horrors, the deaths of the early Christians, the crucifying of the slaves, the book is as charmingly pagan as the pipes of Pan, and as poetic as an Irish lilt."
+ N Y Times p6 Ag 19 '28 500w

"Any one with a strong stomach and an interest in gladiators will enjoy 'Echo.' The febrile atmosphere of the reign of Nero is excellently conveyed and the fights are thrilling." L. P. Hartley
+ Sat R 144:342 S 10 '27 30w

"Mr. Desmond's apparent belief that first-century Romans spoke Latin with the modern English pronunciation is symptomatic of a large indifference to historical and archæological exactitude. Yet there is the rudiment of a good story in this history of the Irish gladiator; and however distorted Mr. Desmond's picture of Neronian Rome, he has come near achieving the almost impossible—a plausible picture of that mad, bestial genius, Nero himself."
+ — Sat R of Lit 5:57 Ag 18 '28 380w

Times [London] Lit Sup p696 O 6 '27 90w

DESMOND, SHAW. London nights in the gay nineties (Eng title London nights of long ago). 252p il $3.50 McBride [21s Duckworth]

914.21 London—Amusements. London—Social life and customs 28-12648

"A good-humored collection of notes on the amusements and personalities of London as the nineteenth century closed."—Sat R of Lit

"Mr. Desmond's volume is permanently valuable as a record of people and places once famous and now, for the most part, becoming more shadowy every year. But especially is it valuable because he has caught the tone and outlook of the age."
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p13 Jl 29 '28 420w

Boston Transcript p6 Ap 14 '28 300w

Cleveland Open Shelf p132 D '28

"Mr. Desmond confesses to being some forty years of age and therefore, full of a vast nostalgia for the days of yore, a nostalgia which his pages have communicated to me. He describes London when that city was unmistakably and charmingly itself, and when it was possible to gaze at the back of a human neck and be quite certain whether one was looking at a man or a woman. That, in itself, was a simplification devoutly to be mourned." Ernest Boyd

Ind 120:507 My 26 '28 920w

Reviewed by R: Le Gallienne
N Y Times p6 Je 10 '28 800w

"If Mr. Desmond occasionally assumes the rôle of a rhapsodist rather than of a recorder, that arises, no doubt, from the very necessities of the case. The temptation to sentimentalize about the past is one that few writers can resist, as it is one from which even reviewers themselves are not immune. In any case, Mr. Desmond has written a book which will recall to many the salient features of a London that has long since passed away. But it is a book essentially for the middle-aged."
Sat R 144:861 D 17 '27 700w

"Mr. Desmond turns back the universe for you very tenderly and tells you what was popular, and therefore good, when he was in his 'teens." T: Beer
Sat R of Lit 4:779 Ap 21 '28 380w

"If taken in judicious doses, they may afford, by stirring old memories, some mild pleasure. The illustrations are very good."
Spec 139:1009 D 3 '27 100w

DE VANE, WILLIAM CLYDE. Browning's Parleyings; the autobiography of a mind. 306p $4 Yale univ. press [18s Milford]

821 Browning, Robert 27-23182

The book is a study of the last of Robert Browning's works published in his lifetime, "Parleyings with certain people of importance in their day." The seven men with whom Browning talks in this dramatic monologue—a philosopher, an historian, a poet, a politician, a priest, a painter and a musician were chosen as a medium thru which to express his matured opinions upon some of the chief interests of his life and to show forth the autobiography of his mind. The poem has been one of the least understood of his works, its autobiographical intent having escaped most of its contemporary critics.

"Mr. De Vane has written a thorough, painstaking and lucid explanation of the poem. It is needless to add that a poem of 40 pages that requires a commentary of 300 pages to make it intelligible is a happy hunting ground for no one but a Browning specialist." G: F. Whicher
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) N 27 '27 180w

" 'The Autobiography of a Mind' shows itself to be the fruit of deep and intelligent research augmented by keen deductive reasoning.

It is a scholarly piece of work that has the added advantage of being well-written." E. H. L.
+ Boston Transcript p2 F 4 '28 380w

Reviewed by Lionel Trilling
N Y Evening Post p12 Mr 17 '28 400w

"Nothing is left unexplained, the facts of the new material are marshaled in clarifying order—occasionally repetitious when the proof might have been dovetailed into the narrative—the study remains in general readable and authentic." Edwin Clark
+ N Y Times p7 Mr 18 '28 1050w

"Mr. DeVane's attitude is sympathetic as well as judicial. He has done valuable pioneer work in clearing away, like Mr. Nicolson for Tennyson, the myth of the poet as teacher, in order to shift the emphasis where it belongs; to Browning the artist." Emery Neff
+ Sat R of Lit 4:1004 Je 30 '28 950w
Times [London] Lit Sup p77 F 2 '28 950w

DEVIGNE, ROGER. Gay dreamers; an idyl of Paris; Ménilmontant; tr. from the French by Frederic Taber Cooper. 336p $2 Stokes
27-20260

The adventures of five old toy venders of Paris who were so poor they had hardly enough to eat, and only three quaint huts in which to live. One day Père Chinelle found a huge emerald heart and returned it to the owner. For a reward he asked for a garden in the midst of Paris where all the poor children could have all the toys they wanted.

Booklist 24:249 Mr '28

"It is a gay little jeu d'esprit all but spoilt by sentimentality—it must be regarded as a merry-go-round of fancy. Its descriptions of topaz-colored brandy and leaf patterns on the table that has been set in the sun will give you nostalgia for the dusty bottles and soup pots and casseroles of France. But 336 pages are a strain on the reader's endurance and neither the light style nor the lighter story survives such a test." L. G. Marshall
+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p18 F 5 '28 420w

"This is an exquisite lyric of the Paris slums, a lovely idyll of all true hearts. It is poignantly sad, but it is as beautiful as it is sad. There are as many good people as bad, perhaps more, and good dreams to dip the balance. Moreover, the children had their garden, after all. There are delicious, more or less unrelated, bits, like Père Martin's visit to the old gentleman of the garden, and Père Jos's succulent stay in the country, to attend to the affairs of the widow Toinon. After all, this is quite different."
+ Boston Transcript p4 Ja 14 '28 380w
Cleveland Open Shelf p54 Ap '28
No Am 225:adv Ja '28 30w
Wis Lib Bul 24:126 Ap '28

DE VOTO, BERNARD AUGUSTINE. House of sun-goes-down. 408p $2.50 (7s 6d) Macmillan
28-12430

Two strong men, the Abbeys, father and son, live in the pages of this book. James Abbey, leaving the South just after the Civil war, goes West with his newly-married wife. His hobby is land and ever more land, but he finally admits defeat. Pemberton, his son, takes to mining, hoping to make money and live down his father's reputation for failure. He succeeds for a time but he too, in the end, is conquered.

"Mr. De Voto, perhaps purposely, has constructed a formless narrative which is more valuable for the portraiture it permits than the story it tells. . . Mr. De Voto is often extremely self-conscious in his style and manner of expression. Although his phrasing is neat, he seems constantly to be seeking a striking, unusual word, with the result that his descriptions are often violent and melodramatic. What probably was intended to be vividness or color frequently becomes mere verbal virtuosity." I. B. Veit
+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p14 Jl 29 '28 650w

"It is a stirring tale of two strong and virile men. The changing conditions are related with a vividness of description and sharpness of detail that make the story stand out among the many novels of Western life, though it has no cattle rustlers and no gunmen, and it gives us a different aspect of the growth of the West from that to be found in most of the fiction of the present day." G. B.
+ Boston Transcript p2 My 29 '28 650w

"Mr. de Voto writes with a certain lustiness, but he also writes with a certain garrulity which makes his readers wish that he were a man of fewer words. The picture of the early West is, in spots, memorable, and it is obviously drawn with the pen of a skilled observer as well as a trained recorder."
+ — Chicago Daily Tribune p15 Je 9 '28 180w

"The novel is interesting, thoughtful, stimulating, and the characters of the two men, father and son, so much alike in some ways, so utterly unlike in others, have been very carefully drawn."
+ N Y Times p8 My 13 '28 750w

Reviewed by G: Joel
N Y World p7m Jl 1 '28 80w
Springf'd Republican p7f Je 24 '28 580w

DEWEY, JOHN. Philosophy of John Dewey; sel. and ed. by Joseph Ratner. 560p $4; students ed $3.25 Holt
191 Philosophy 28-14147

More people are familiar with John Dewey's educational and moral philosophy than with his general philosophic thought. It is with the purpose of helping to make his philosophic principles accessible to the general reader that Mr Ratner has compiled this volume of selections drawn from the whole range of John Dewey's writings and constituting a connected outline of his entire philosophy arranged in logical order.

Booklist 25:52 N '28

"For the general reader there could be no better, and, in a pleasant sense, no more systematic introduction to the philosophy of John Dewey. Mr. Ratner is content, wisely, I think, to let that philosophy speak from its own pages, in the words, albeit none too easy, of its author." Irwin Edman
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p1 Ag 5 '28 2800w
Boston Transcript p4 Ag 1 '28 800w

"Because Mr. Dewey has been one of the most productive of contemporary thinkers this selection will be welcomed not only by the public in general, but even by students of philosophy. Mr. Ratner is to be thanked for it." Eliseo Vivas
+ Nation 127:457 O 31 '28 900w

"Dr. Ratner puts into one book of octavo size the heart of the teaching of the man who has often been called 'the most original philosopher in America.' Dr. Ratner has canvassed everything that Dr. Dewey has written to make this one-volume edition, and the work on it has been done with Dr. Dewey's constant assistance. It summarizes the contribution to philosophical thought made by Dr. Dewey, and touches upon so wide a variety of subjects that there is something of interest to any one who cares for such serious matters."
+ No Am 226:adv Ag '28 90w
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:435 O '28

DE WITTE, YSABEL. Daughter of Venice. 320p $2 Henkle [2s 6d J. Hamilton]
Bianca Cappello, consort of Francesco Maria de'Medici—Fiction 28-6768

"The charming Bianca, 15-year-old daughter of Bartolemmeo Cappello, leans from the gilded balcony of her Venetian home, as the gondolas

DE WITTE, YSABEL—Continued
pass on their way to the carnival, where the Duke de Medici is to be the honored guest. This vision of premature loveliness flashes upon the acquisitive eye of a bank clerk, Pietro Buonaventuri. He urges her to embark upon a flapperish escapade in his gondola. On their return, the house of Bartolemmeo Cappello is locked against his sunny-haired daughter; and the bank clerk finds himself in possession of the girl—without the long purse of which he had covetously dreamed. But fortunately another wooer has gazed upon the ravishing little Venetian, as she leaned over the garden walls. This is the Duke de Medici himself. How the naïve Bianca escapes from the despicable Pietro and finally establishes herself as the grand 'Daughter of Venice,' wedded to the Duke, Francesco, is the story which Miss De Witte unfolds."—N Y Times

Reviewed by L. M. Field
Bookm 67:333 My '28 130w

"Few living writers possess those golden gifts essential to the creation of high romance at its best. Miss De Witte has managed, at least, a highly colorful swashbuckling story . . . with vivid sixteenth century trappings, sufficient villainy and incidents proper to a somewhat flamboyant plot."
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p14 Ag 26 '28 100w

"It is a good story, keeping the outlines of history, and runs so racily one must needs finish it at a sitting." F. M. W.
+ Boston Transcript p4 Ap 14 '28 620w
Ind 120:461 My 12 '28 110w

"It is for those readers who revel in the turquoise skies and purple doublets of Venetian canals, intermingled with prison chains and scaffolds, and the fierce hatreds and intrigues of sixteenth century Italy."
N Y Times p18 F 19 '28 320w

DEXTER, WALTER. Some rogues and vagabonds of Dickens. 284p il $5 Lippincott [15s C. Palmer]

823 Dickens, Charles [27-24886]

"Beginning with Mr. Merdle in 'Little Dorrit,' the author goes on to Montague Tigg and Chevy Slyme, to Abel Magwitch, to Jingle of the 'Pickwick Papers,' 'a sad scamp but a lovable one,' to various tramps and Artful Dodgers, to Jonas Chuzzlewit, 'the greatest scoundrel in the picture gallery of Dickens's varied assortment of rogues and vagabonds,' and many others. In each case Mr. Dexter begins with a brief explanation of the character itself, its special function in the novel where it is found, and, sometimes of its origin. Then follow extracts from the novel, woven together with a few explanatory lines, the whole forming a complete and vivid picture of this particular specimen of roguedom."—N Y Times

"Unnecessary for those who read Dickens, and for those who don't." E. H. Bierstadt
— Bookm 66:586 Ja '28 30w

"His comments are intelligent and his selections well made. They are naturally taken, in most instances, from the most intense moments of the master's most admirable villains—with several scenes of violent destruction—and they give the impression that Dickens was a terse and concise writer. But they also renew the conviction that he has no close competitor in the field of melodrama."
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p13 D 25 '27 200w

Reviewed by E. F. Edgett
Boston Transcript p5 O 1 '27 1750w
New Statesman 29:90 Ap 30 '27 240w
N Y Times p18 D 25 '27 300w
Pratt p26 spring '28

Reviewed by R. A. Taylor
Spec 138:sup653 Ap 9 '27 1200w

DIAMOND, HERBERT MAYNARD. Religion and the commonweal; an analysis of the social economy of religion. 305p $2 Harper

201 Religion. Religion, Primitive. Sociology 28-18011

A thoughtful and thought-provoking study of religious belief—whether the superstitions of the savage or the great religions of the world—as a social force in the course of human development. Dr Diamond is professor of economics at Lehigh university.

Reviewed by Gilbert Loveland
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p26 N 25 '28 160w

"This fine, sane study traces the story of the loss of faith in the average mind, as a concomitant of the social and economic transformations of the industrial revolution, with an intelligence, a plausibility, a breadth of mind and view and a wealth of folkwise illustration that make it delightful reading." F. H. M.
+ N Y Evening Post p5 S 8 '28 100w

DIAZ DEL CASTILLO, BERNAL. Discovery and conquest of Mexico, 1517-1521; ed. from the only exact copy of the original MS. (and published in Mexico) by Genaro Garcia; tr. with an introd. and notes by A. P. Maudslay. (Broadway travellers) 596p $5 Harper [15s Routledge]

972 Mexico—History—Conquest, 1519-1540. Cortés, Hernando [28-21381]

Bernal Diaz del Castillo, from whose chronicle Prescott drew largely for his history, was one of the soldiers under the leadership of Hernando Cortés who took part in the conquest of Mexico. This translation in the Broadway travellers series was made from the Diaz mss. now preserved in the Guatemalan archives.

"Bernal's history is by far the most important eyewitness account of the conquest of New Spain that we possess and it is as interesting to the casual reader as it is valuable to the historian." B. R. Redman
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p8 Ag 19 '28 850w
Boston Transcript p2 Ag 18 '28 400w

"Few indeed are the books that at one and the same time are historical source material and a thrilling yarn. As juvenile literature it is unexcelled. It is meaty for boys from twelve to eighty-four." Ernest Gruening
+ Nation 127:297 S 26 '28 620w

"Professor Maudslay's compression is all to the good, and his scholarly notes provide additional historical and geographical information. Bernal Diaz is a vivid and most readable chronicler, ready with intimate descriptions."
+ Nation and Ath 42:974 Mr 31 '28 280w

"No soldier of Plassey described the feelings and experiences of the men in the ranks with the force and vividness of Bernal Diaz, upon whose memoirs Prescott drew heavily for the most vivid chapters of his history. Good as Prescott is, Diaz undiluted is better."
+ New Statesman 30:832 Ap 7 '28 520w

"Bernal Diaz wrote something rather more than an historical document of the first importance. His narrative is also captivatingly readable, so that one's interest and admiration are equally divided between the stupendous events he records and the charming revelations that he makes of his own character and general outlook."
+ Sat R 145:195 F 18 '28 1050w

"What perhaps is most delightful in all Bernal's vivid story of misery, pathos, and blood is his drawing of himself—'simple, enduring, splendidly courageous, and unaffectedly vain,' as Professor Maudslay writes."
+ Spec 140:sup467 Mr 24 '28 500w
Times [London] Lit Sup p352 My 10 '28 850w

DIAZ DEL CASTILLO, BERNAL. True history of the conquest of Mexico; written in the year 1568; and tr. from the original Spanish by Maurice Keatinge; with an introd. by Arthur D. Howden Smith. (Argonaut ser.) 2v $10 McBride [30s Harrap]

972 Mexico—History—Conquest, 1519-1540. Cortés, Hernando 27-25413

"This history, four centuries after the conquest, is still undergoing adventures. Keatinge's translation was taken from the first Spanish edition published in 1632 by Friar Alonzo Remon, who is said to have tampered with the text, suppressing or interpolating pages and garbling the facts. In 1901 Don Genaro Garcia made the first exact copy of the original manuscript kept in Guatemala, and Professor Maudslay has translated from this edition. Maudslay, in editing his volume for the Broadway Travellers series, has considerably abridged his own translation, till it contains more suppressions than the 'corrupt' text, although comparison of parallel passages reveals a more detailed style of narrative than in Keatinge."—Nation and Ath

"What warms the heart of the reader are the strong human interest and gossipy detail, told in the mellowness of the age. The prowess of an old friend in battle and how he died, the color of a horse and his good points, are some of the details set down with a faithfulness to actuality that will make the book a fireside companion for generations to come for those who love the Homeric in man's story." H. J. Priestley

\+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p22 F 19 '28 780w

"Mr. Howden Smith's introduction is excellent. In it he discusses at some length the qualities which make this narrative of such absorbing interest. Bernal Diaz was not a polished writer, but his charm is that his pages quiver with life, raw, painful, appalling. Of him Prescott said, 'There is nowhere a wilful perversion of truth. Had he attempted it, his very simplicity would have betrayed him.' " G. H. S.

\+ Boston Transcript p4 D 21 '27 700w

"Aside from the fact that it makes available to the public at a semi-popular price an interesting account of the conquest of Mexico, it appears to the reviewer that there is no excuse for the appearance of these two volumes. The story is almost as much the life of Cortes subsequent to 1519 as it is the historical memoir of its author. It deals in a naïve manner with the experiences of the conquerors of Mexico. Its very simplicity is unique. And as regards style, it has much in common with the works of Marco Polo, John Smith and 'Trader Horn.' " A. C. Wilgus

Hist Outlook 19:294 O '28 350w

Nation and Ath 42:974 Mr 31 '28 180w

New Statesman 30:832 Ap 7 '28 520w

"The story, even in its emasculated Keatinge form, is really one of the great books of American history and much more interesting than a 'best seller.' It is a straightforward story, told simply, and with no other art than its simplicity."

\+ Sat R of Lit 4:656 Mr 3 '28 400w

Sat R of Lit 4:775 Ap 21 '28 600w

Spec 140:sup467 Mr 24 '28 500w

Times [London] Lit Sup p352 My 10 '28 850w

DICKENSON, MAY FREUD. Apron strings. 320p $2 Macaulay

28-17205

"In 'Apron Strings' May Freud Dickenson presents the case of Jo Knapp, bound by his own weak nature first to the petulant, greedy demands of his widowed mother and his sisters, later to the avaricious desires of a shallow wife."—Books (N Y Herald Tribune)

"Despite a style of no little piquancy, revealing an occasional ability to catch the color of a mood in a phrase, the book remains irritatingly uncertain. . . . May Freud Dickenson exhibits conscientious craftsmanship in the development of this story, an effort none the less admirable because she falls short of her intentions." E. E. Feinberg

— + Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p23 S 16 '28 800w

"Poor Jo. His story is simply and convincingly told, without the author yielding to the temptations, so abundant in the materials, to wax maudlin."

\+ N Y World p7m Ag 12 '28 230w

Sat R of Lit 5:325 N 3 '28 330w

DICKINSON, ASA DON, comp. Best books of our time, 1901-1925. 405p $5 Doubleday, Doran

028 Bibliography—Best books. Books and reading 28-12627

Based upon the same plan as the author's "One thousand best books" (Book Review Digest, 1924), the book covers the first quarter of the twentieth century. The titles chosen represent a consensus of expert opinion and the number of endorsements of each book is indicated, no book being included unless at least four sponsors for it have been found. Books are accompanied by critical descriptions and brief notes on the author. A subject classification is provided and a list of authors arranged according to nationality and another list, by number of endorsements.

Booklist 24:343 Je '28

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 Je 24 '28 130w

Reviewed by E. F. Edgett

Boston Transcript p5 Ag 4 '28 250w

"To say that the authorities show catholic tastes is expressing it too mildly; their tastes are downright democratic. Robert Chambers, Philip Gibbs, Zane Grey, are candidates along with Willa Cather, H. G. Wells, Galsworthy—not, remember, for 'favorites' but for 'best' books. Edward Bok, with thirteen 'indorsements,' shares a page with Randolph Bourne, who has five." T. S.

N Y Evening Post p15 Ap 14 '28 90w

"The majority of the books are in the field of belles-lettres, and Mr. Dickinson explains that all volumes of other categories that have been included have had to show literary charm and excellence in addition to their other values . . . An index of titles, classification by subject, of authors by nationality and also by number of endorsements increase the reference value of the volume."

N Y Times p15 Ap 22 '28 300w

DICKINSON, GOLDSWORTHY LOWES. Revolution and reaction in modern France. 255p $2.50 Brentano's [7s 6d Allen & U.]

944 France—History

"A new edition of a standard work on French tendencies, revised to some extent, and provided with a new chapter on results as seen in the light of present-day developments, will be a help to students of the French era from the rise of Napoleon to the end of the Franco-Prussian War."—Boston Transcript

"It is the book to clutch to your bosom if you have ever been lost in the labyrinth that leads from the Bastille to Sedan." B. R. Redman

\+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 My 6 '28 730w

"It is very live, full of little intimate details of the day. There are choice and apocryphal tales, but there is also a great deal of solid information, not so much of facts as of causes The whole period is made to live for us vividly."

\+ Boston Transcript p4 Je 30 '28 250w

"A reprint, more valuable now than when it was first issued a number of years ago. It is one more striking presentation of the fact which cannot too often be presented: mere change is costly and futile." Lyman Bryson

\+ New Repub 55:24 My 23 '28 420w

DICKINSON, H. W., and JENKINS, RHYS. James Watt and the steam engine; the memorial volume prepared for the committee of the Watt centenary commemoration at Birmingham, 1919. 416p il $21 (63s) Oxford

621.1 Steam engines. Watt, James

"An authoritative account of the development of the steam engine as conceived by Watt and constructed by Boulton at the famous Soho works at Birmingham. Some seventy pages at the beginning of the book are devoted to the life and character of James Watt. The study of the steam engine, which forms the main part of the book, begins with an account of the early experiments, on a laboratory scale, with the condenser. The authors pass on to consider the various large scale experiments, until they come to the first practical engine constructed at Soho. From this point onwards they discuss in turn every engine that represented an improvement in construction, illustrating all the points by reproductions of original drawings taken from the manuscript collections and records placed at their disposal. These drawings form a feature of the book. They are beautifully reproduced and of the greatest engineering interest."—Spec

---

Eng N 101:741 N 15 '28 450w

"We have had to wait a long time for a proper account of Watt's life-work, but we have now the satisfaction of possessing a definitive book. The authors have clearly spared themselves no pains in what has been for them a congenial undertaking, and they have lacked neither material nor the ability to turn it to the best account. The writing is clear and sympathetic; the illustrations, including three portraits, are excellent; and the general production reflects the greatest credit on a famous press." E. N. da C. Andrade

+ Spec 139:1010 D 3 '27 1200w

"With its wealth of documented detail should take rank as the standard account of the development of the steam-engine at the hands of Watt and his associates."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p947 D 15 '27 1250w

DICKINSON, THOMAS HERBERT. Portrait of a man as governor; with a foreword by George Foster Peabody. 37p $1 (4s 6d) Macmillan

B or 92 Smith, Alfred Emanuel 28-8900

This essay is an attempt to interpret the character of Governor Smith of New York through the study of his public mind.

Reviewed by Silas Bent

Bookm 68:347 N '28 250w

"Mr. Dickinson's study is not cast in the predigested formulas of campaign literature, but it will be read appreciatively by the thoughtful."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p19 Ag 5 '28 250w

"It is an impressive piece of work, and should it ever become the general practice to evaluate candidates for political office with such cool dispassion, politics would be a finer art."

+ Boston Transcript p3 Je 30 '28 180w

"Of all the studies of the Governor which have appeared in print this is, perhaps, the one based on the loftiest conception of his character and powers."

+ Cath World 128:251 N '28 350w

Cleveland Open Shelf p103 S '28

"In writing this essay Dr. Dickinson has probably convinced himself of the governor's excellent qualities, but he has obscured his findings and his reasons under such a mass of heavy, didactic rhetoric that it is difficult to discover the man he admires. To analyze Al Smith in the idiom of a Phi Beta Kappa oration is to miss the vitality which is the keynote of his appeal."

— Ind 120:315 Mr 31 '28 120w

"Dr. Dickinson's analysis of Governor Smith seems to us too subtle and too deep. We doubt that the Governor has anything like the subtlety or the depth which he attributes to him. As an attempt to interpret the American political mind of the moment in terms of Al Smith it is none the less interesting."

— + Nation 126:544 My 9 '28 180w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:488 O '28

Pratt p35 summer '28

St Louis 26:194 Je '28

Springf'd Republican p7f Je 24 '28 800w

DICKSON, HARRIS. Children of the river; a [2] romance of old New Orleans. 326p $2 Sears 28-23040

With household goods and livestock piled on a barge Tige Bullock moves his motherless children down the Mississippi to New Orleans. Mary the eldest daughter, tho scarce in her 'teens, is a person of spirit. In the adventures that lie before them during the struggle of Andrew Jackson and Jean Lafitte to defend New Orleans against the British, Mary is to play a plucky part.

"The glamour of those times is admirably reflected and the yarn rates high in caloric entertainment."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p26 D 9 '28 130w

Boston Transcript p7 D 22 '28 330w

"At times his style is over-mannered, and the dramatic quality of his theme betrays him finally into melodrama; but the contributory elements of his story are nicely subordinated, and serve properly to dignify and enrich it. 'Children of the River' is a historical novel not entirely unworthy to share the popularity stimulated by Feuchtwanger and Neumann."

+ — N Y Times p32 N 18 '28 400w

DICTIONARY of national biography; founded in 1882 by George Smith; ed. by H. W. C. Davis and J. R. H. Weaver; 1912-1921; with an index covering the years 1901-1921 in one alphabetical series. 623p $7 (21s) Oxford

920 Biography—Dictionaries. Great Britain—Biography

"This supplement to the Dictionary of National Biography, founded in 1882 by George Smith, contains the lives of British persons notable in various ways who died within the years 1912-1921. Approximately 500 biographies are included, thus bringing the number of biographical articles in the entire work to more than 30,000. They fill 600 pages and were written by almost 250 contributors, of whom a list is given. There is also an index filling twenty-three pages that includes the three supplementary volumes published in 1901, so that it covers the years 1901-1921 in one alphabetical series. The volume is prefaced by a fourteen page Memoir of Sir Sidney Lee, with especial attention to his work as editor of the dictionary for so many years and its connection with his writings in general."—N Y Times

---

Booklist 24:246 Mr '28

Reviewed by F. G. Marcham

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p25 Mr 11 '28 1000w

Reviewed by E. F. Edgett

Boston Transcript p5 Ja 21 '28 1800w

"The work has been well done in most cases. The highest standard in the work is shown by the fact that the late Mr. Hogarth writes on Lord Cromer, Sir Frederick Maurice on Kitchener, Mr. Percy Lubbock on Henry James, and Professor Basil Williams on Botha."

+ Nation and Ath 42:370 D 3 '27 380w

N Y Times p10 F 5 '28 200w

Sat R 144:859 D 17 '27 680w

Sat R of Lit 4:597 F 11 '28 150w

"The new supplement to the famous 'D.N.B.' opens with an admirable memoir of the late Sir Sidney Lee by Sir Charles Frith, who does justice to that great Editor and charming man. His successors have carried on his tradition fairly well. The articles tend to be shorter than before, and some of them are rather dull and loosely written. The more important memoirs are competently handled, and men who were not so well known to the general public, like William Aldis Wright, William Stanley Houghton and Robinson Ellis, have found sympathetic and well-informed biographers."

+ — Spec 139:939 N 26 '27 160w

"Professor Davis and Mr. Weaver, the editors of the volume under review, are clearly out to obtain good general estimates from their authors rather than minute biographical details. The spare athletic style of the earlier volume is replaced by a certain sense of ease, verging, as in the description of Mr. Kelly's gifts as a sculler, on the brink of opulence. The literary criticism, for the authors do not hesitate to appraise and sometimes to condemn reaches a high level of excellence."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p827 N 17 '27 1400w

DIEFFENBACH, ALBERT CHARLES. Religious liberty; the great American illusion. 205p $1.50 Morrow

261 Religious liberty. United States—Religion 27-22169

"This earnestly written book is an attempt to rouse Americans to undertake the task of recovering religious liberty and releasing religious energies to the work which awaits them. . . Dr. Dieffenbach believes that the coming American religion will be creative and ethical, inclusive of all life, finding its expression in action and character and not in dogma, and that the first essential for its birth and growth is that liberty of mind and soul, for lack of which so many thousands have left the churches, or remain within them, inactive, restless, doubtful and unsatisfied."—N Y Times

---

Booklist 24:191 F '28

"Dr. Dieffenbach's book will probably be regarded by the average reader as a sweeping attack upon Fundamentalists and Modernists, upon orthodox Christians generally, both conservative and liberal. From this standpoint the book is likely to make a sensation, for the author is in the Theodore Parker tradition and hits straight and hard. It is likely, also, to make enemies; and this is a pity, for Dr. Dieffenbach's main concern is not with thwacking his theological opponents, but with proclaiming anew the ideal of religious liberty which he feels to be in grave peril in this country." J: H. Holmes

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p22 N 20 '27 550w

"A rather unimportant presentation of a very important subject." Paul Jones

New Repub 53:174 D 28 '27 680w

Reviewed by F. F. Kelly

N Y Times p10 D 18 '27 250w

St Louis 26:310 O '28

"He is so sure of his position, and he writes with such fire and such feeling, that he almost convinces us—almost." C: S. Brown

Survey 59:782 Mr 15 '28 150w

DIEHL, JOHN C. Natural gas handbook. 578p il $5; lea $6.50 Metric metal works of the Am. meter co., inc., Erie, Pa.

553.28 Gas, Natural 28-1439

"Deals in detail with the production, transportation, measurement, and utilization of natural gas. Based on engineering principles but written so that it can be understood by the practical man in the field. The most useful book now available on the natural gas industry."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

---

N Y New Tech Bks 12:45 O '27

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:93 F '28

DIGBY, GEORGE BASSETT. Tigers, gold, and witch-doctors. 341p il $3.50 Harcourt [12s 6d Lane]

915.7 Siberia—Description and travel. Mongolia—Description and travel 28-6176

Mr Digby has many interesting and astonishing things to tell of his travels in the remote sections of Siberia. The great lake of Baigal, Siberia's Indians, a journey to Mongolia—each has a chapter, besides the tigers, gold, and witch doctors of the title. Illustrated.

Booklist 24:318 My '28

Reviewed by A. B. Maurice

Bookm 67:459 Je '28 180w

Cleveland Open Shelf p133 D '28

"The adventures encountered with witch doctors, lamas, and Indian peasantry, the descriptions of scenery and customs, the anecdotes of historical interest with which this modest book is generously colored make it pleasant and instructive reading. Mr. Digby's easy humor and his wide interests combine successfully in a book that is both entertaining and picturesque."

+ Ind 120:509 My 26 '28 130w

"Once we have clambered over the stockade of Mr. Digby's robust manner, there is something more within than a frozen waste. He obviously knows a great deal about the natives, the flora and fauna, and the history of Siberia. But he has about as much idea of presenting his knowledge as he has of the art of literary persuasion. The book is so disorderly in treatment, it covers such vast tracks in a few sketchy bounds, that the impression left upon us is one of confusion." H. J. Massingham

— + Nation and Ath 43:738 S 8 '28 320w

"Mr. Bassett Digby is a good observer and raconteur, with a racy turn of speech that brings person or scene vividly before the reader. He has the gift, moreover, of making friends quickly with simple people. For all its gaiety and discursiveness his book, dealing with a country that as yet has only been very perfunctorily explored, has a genuine scientific interest, though Mr. Digby is at times a little reckless in his ethnological attributions."

+ — New Statesman 31:519 Jl 28 '28 140w

Reviewed by F: H. Martens

N Y Evening Post p13 Mr 10 '28 120w

"It is a record of travel in pre-war Siberia, interesting, etymological, vivid and out of date. . . The only passage in the entire volume which casts real light on the Russian situation is that which concerns the question of vodka and prohibition."

N Y Times p6 Ap 22 '28 550w

"Mr. Digby has a delightful sense of humor which is nicely woven into his narrative, and although at times he seems to have a slight leaning towards statistics and other superfluous matter, he seems to get a hold on himself shortly, realizes he is writing for the layman, and passes on to his next subject." Milton Byron

+ Outlook 148:436 Mr 14 '28 220w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:347 Je '28

"Mr. Digby has an eye for noticing the right things and a happy knack of humour which never degenerates into flippancy. Then, too, it is evident that he has dived deep into Siberian history, but what most attracts here, as in his stirringly picturesque books in the Mammoth, is his own observation."

+ Spec 140:944 Je 23 '28 580w

Times [London] Lit Sup p462 Je 21 '28 800w

Wis Lib Bul 24:89 Mr '28

DILLINGHAM, ROBERT BARCLAY, pseud. See Foulke, W: D.

DILLON, GEORGE. Boy in the wind. 79p $1.50 Viking press

811 27-19705

A collection of the published verse of one of America's younger poets who at nineteen became associate editor of Poetry.

Booklist 24:200 F '28

"He expresses himself much too well. The clean cameo accuracy of the scrupulously chiseled phrases, the firm precision with which the lines run into each other, the felicitous paragraphing—these have kept Mr. Dillon exclusively busy and he has not had much time to say anything in particular." Emanuel Eisenberg

— + Bookm 66:329 N '27 220w

"George Dillon writes with a fine sensitivity, with a touch that is delicate, yet at times amazingly sure and firm in texture. As young poets do often, however, he writes in sweeping gestures of wind, rain and flame—and does not seek often enough the greater strength that lies in minute and original observation of small things." Ruth Lechlitner

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p40 D 4 '27 550w

"A careful first collection containing a majority of good poems and a few exquisite poems." M. E. M.

+ Boston Transcript p4 Ja 4 '28 420w

"There is no timidity or evasion, no suggestion of frailty or wavering. His lines have always the assurance of authority, the finality of complete mastery." R. M. Lovett

+ Dial 84:339 Ap '28 1300w

"The quality that gives life to lyric utterance Mr. Dillon possesses. If he continues to write poetry as he grows in maturity and experience, I believe he will come into the possession of the quality that gives it permanence. In many of his poems, the added harmony of felicitous wisdom is already present." Helen Goodspeed

+ New Repub 53:171 D 28 '27 900w

"He deserves the critical consideration we give the highest: judging [his work] as though no other poet were living with which to compare him. His pages not only stand the severity of such a test, but tempt one to cast aside criticism for scarcely reserved enthusiasm." L: Untermeyer

+ Sat R of Lit 4:627 F 25 '28 500w

Wis Lib Bul 23:88 Mr '28

DILNOT, GEORGE. Crook's game. 303p $2 Houghton [7s 6d G. Bles]

27-16146

"Mr. Dilnot makes great play with the repeated attempts of some American blackmailers to extract vast sums from the millionaire, Buck Shang, who had offended them by refusing to resume the career of crime which a term of imprisonment had cut short in New York. Shang has come to London with his daughter, so it is upon Scotland Yard that he ought to have relied to protect him from his enemies. Indeed all, or nearly all, might have gone well had he done so, but both he and the girl think that they can manage their own war, and he repines so much under the friendly surveillance of the police that he traps his protector and escapes into the arms of the blackmailers. His daughter is equally foolish and has harrowing adventures with a corpse and a furniture van before she is rescued, with her father, by the hero."—Times [London] Lit Sup

Reviewed by Gilbert Seldes

Bookm 66:92 S '27 100w

Boston Transcript p6 Ag 24 '27 250w

"Mr. Dilnot has a method of his own for revitalizing conventional plots and counterplots. He makes no bones about letting his readers know at page 55 who really fired the fatal shot. From that moment, as a narrator, he plays the crook's game from both sides of the field."

+ Ind 119:213 Ag 27 '27 200w

"Aside from smoothness of writing and jocularity of dialogue, 'The Crook's Game' has little to offer in the way of excellence."

— + N Y Times p13 Ja 1 '28 320w

Times [London] Lit Sup p458 Je 30 '27 160w

Wis Lib Bul 24:23 Ja '28

DILNOT, GEORGE. Great detectives and their methods. 271p $4 Houghton [16s G. Bles]

364 Crime and criminals. Detectives

[27-25812]

An English journalist who knows London and the workings of Scotland Yard tells of the methods of running down criminals used by detectives connected with London's famous police system. These true stories of crime rival detective fiction in interest.

Bookm 67:xvi Jl '28 130w

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p30 Ap 15 '28 140w

Cleveland Open Shelf p77 Je '28

"In spite of a slightly professional bias makes for variously fascinating reading." R. S. Bailey

Ind 120:284 Mr 24 '28 450w

"A superficial piece of work, it dismisses the service contributed by science, particularly chemistry, in one chapter of eight pages. And there is just one mention of the name of Hans Gross, and none of his outstanding achievements." L: Sherwin

— N Y Evening Post p13 Ap 21 '28 240w

Sat R of Lit 4:810 Ap 21 '28 180w

Springf'd Republican p10 Mr 21 '28 580w

"The many adventures and anecdotes in Mr. Dilnot's pages show the difference not only between procedure in various countries but also between the methods of individual exponents of the detective art, and the reader will find several instances in these interesting pages in which the author, as a sober historian, is able to quote actual incidents which he would scarcely dare to rival in his capacity as a writer of detective fiction."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p747 O 20 '27 430w

Wis Lib Bul 24:219 Jl '28

DILNOT, GEORGE. Trial of Professor Webster. 2 (Famous trials ser.) 274p $2 Scribner

343.1 Trials. Webster, John W.

"About that standard villain, Professor John W. Webster, of Harvard, who, one quiet afternoon in 1849, did with a heavy wooden stick slay Dr. George Parkman, another Harvard man, in the very medical building which the victim had given to the university. Mr. Dilnot provides the Webster case with a colorless introduction and adequate handling of the voluminous court records which are the meat of the thing."—Books (N Y Herald Tribune)

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p15 Ag 19 '28 580w

"Mr. Dilnot, an English newspaperman with a flair for mystery and murder, has done well by the story."

+ Ind 121:141 Ag 11 '28 50w

"The Professor bungled his job (as they all did), but the account of it makes an excellent tale. The book has an admirable introduction by George Dilnot." Hulbert Footner

+ Sat R of Lit 5:138 S 22 '28 230w

DILNOT, GEORGE, ed. Trial of the detectives. (Famous trial ser.) 302p il $3 Scribner [10s 6d G. Bles]

343.1 Trials

In 1877 the superintendent and several inspectors of Scotland Yard were arrested and tried for complicity in the swindling practices of two notorious crooks. The introduction gives the story of their offence, and is followed by the day-to-day summary of the proceedings of the trial. The affair is unique in criminal records.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p15 Ag 19 '28 320w
Ind 121:141 Ag 11 '28 50w
Sat R 145:736 Je 9 '28 580w

"It should not be neglected, because it relates an extraordinarily interesting case." Hulbert Footner
+ Sat R of Lit 5:138 S 22 '28 130w

"Mr. Dilnot has told it well and clearly, if occasionally, perhaps, with too much conscious picturesqueness, in his introduction, and there are some interesting portraits."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p435 Je 7 '28 230w

DIMNET, ERNEST. Brontë sisters; tr. from the French by Louise Morgan Sill. 256p $2.50 Harcourt [7s 6d J. Cape]
B or 92 Brontë family. Brontë, Charlotte [28-4140]

The first English translation of a famous monograph, published in France in 1910, which has been called "the best book on the Brontës." An appendix contains Charlotte Brontë's four letters to M. Héger which came to light after the French edition was published.

Booklist 24:319 My '28

"Interesting, and new in Brontëan criticism, is his comparison of Charlotte's literary style and qualities with George Sand's, a comparison to which he returns several times. . . Dimnet has made an admirable attempt to sink the story of the Yorkshire sisters below the surface of their stories. He is not infatuated, not beguilded, seldom sentimental. But he has not succeeded, and we lay down this book, as we have laid down others, wondering if any attempt at this will be crowned by success." Edna Kenton
+ — Bookm 67:586 Jl '28 580w

"M. Ernest Dimnet has dealt with the Brontë tragedy more effectively, more simply, and, if he will forgive me the use of a word which I do not mean in any mawkish sense, more sweetly than any of his predecessors." G. B. Stern
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p1 Mr 18 '28 4200w

"In his discussion of the three Brontë sisters, M. Dimnet is extremely thorough. He is biographical, critical, analytic, and he makes us see their literary work as the outgrowth of their lives. He goes deeply into the personality of all three, and especially into those romantic phases of Charlotte Brontë's friendship with men who loved her that have resulted in millions of written words. M. Dimnet is concise and compact. He wastes no space. He tells the whole story in a book of no more than two hundred and fifty pages. Whoever reads it will learn as much as he needs to know about these three quite wonderful women." E. F. Edgett
+ Boston Transcript p2 F 11 '28 1350w

Reviewed by E. F. Edgett
Boston Transcript p5 Mr 24 '28 430w
Cleveland Open Shelf p65 My '28

"Admirable literary biography. Abbé Dimnet presents a unified and convincing picture where Clement Shorter gave us an encyclopedic chronicle and Augustine Birrell an engaging jeu d'esprit."
+ Nation 126:700 Je 20 '28 130w

"It has the graceful sobriety characteristic of the French tradition in letters. Emily is one of those disorderly English geniuses for whom the French have naturally little understanding or appreciation, and it is, therefore, remarkable to find what a high place M. Dimnet gives to her work. Only once does his critical insight seem to me to fail—when he says that her poetry has nothing in common with her prose but its originality." Leonard Woolf
+ Nation and Ath 43:178 My 12 '28 250w

Reviewed by R. M. Lovett
New Repub 55:230 Jl 18 '28 530w

"It is competent, condensed and generally distinguished by a number of un-English qualities, which are brilliantly shown off by the sentimentality and redundancy of Mrs. Gaskell's two volumes. M. Dimnet's analysis of the novels and the verse is not profound, but he weighs biographical perplexities with tact and discretion. An appendix deals adequately with the recently discovered Héger correspondence. 'The best book on the Brontës,' Andrew Lang wrote. Still, the knack and scholarship of a French biographer can shine by comparison, without precisely satisfying."
+ — New Statesman 29:816 O 8 '27 1150w

"The Brontes have never had a biographer fully up to the job; they have had more luck with M. Dimnet than with any of the others." Joseph Collins
+ N Y Evening Post p12 Ap 28 '28 1750w

"One will go far to find a truer reading of human beings and artists." Percy Hutchison
+ N Y Times p3 F 26 '28 820w

"It bears the superlative approval of Andrew Lang, who wrote, when it appeared, that 'the best book on the Brontes is in French.'" Harry Hansen
+ N Y World p10m F 19 '28 1050w

"He entirely eschews the methods of psychography. His book lacking perhaps the air of ponderous scholarship which a strict adherence to the classic and didactic model would have given, keeps the detachment and the judicious balance which is the mark of classic biography. Gallic qualities mark his work: a gracious style, preserved by the translator, humanity, worldly wisdom, incisive criticism, economy, wit and charm, and affection tempered by cool analysis." F. L. Robbins
+ Outlook 150:792 S 12 '28 230w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:297 My '28

"He is sympathetic, at times enthusiastic, but he is detached, and in his dealings with the personalities of the sisters can be cool to the point of chilliness. After so much gush from other pens we are glad enough to find a writer on the Brontës who does not sob over every biographical page. M. Dimnet is of those who are happiest with Charlotte. He understood both her gifts and her limitations, her literary ambitions and her shrinking from the consequences of success in them, and his criticism of her several works and of her writings as a whole, offered with great simplicity, is fresh, sound and stimulating."
+ Sat R 144:368 S 17 '27 930w

"Monsieur Dimnet's charming book, 'Les Sœurs Brontë,' has been familiar to serious students of English fiction for nearly two decades. It is now translated—and well translated for the benefit of those who cannot or will not read it in the original tongue. . . Its chief importance consists not in the new facts added to the biography of the family, but in the critical view of a Frenchman who knows the subtle combination of the sane and the sympathetic which characterizes the critical writing of his nation." C. B. Tinker
+ Sat R of Lit 4:649 Mr 3 '28 300w

"We find no superiority in M. Dimnet. Some might even accuse him of heroine-worship, an uncommon quality in a Frenchman when he is dealing with a foreigner. His method is a straightforward one, with none of the modern ironic and pathetic complications which Mr. Lytton Strachey has since introduced into the technique of biography. M. Dimnet relates the facts, events, and achievements into an orderly brief, with a running commentary which is modest and convincing." R: Church
+ Spec 139:665 O 22 '27 1250w

Springf'd Republican p7f Jl 1 '28 1100w

"Miss Sill has produced a version which is both charming in itself and faithful to the charm of the original. The charm of M. Dimnet's book is undeniable; it is the charm of sympathy overcoming what seem impossible obstacles. We have in it a gentle diagnosis of the condition of one of the most twisted boughs of the tree of Protestantism as seen by an emancipated Roman Catholic."

DIMNET, ERNEST—Continued
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p687 O 6 '27 820w

Wis Lib Bul 24:190 Je '28

"M. Dimnet's book is one of the most delightful and satisfying studies of many years. . . He is at once adventuresome and penetrating, clear and kind. There is a kind of expectancy, delightful and refreshing, about his simple style, to which readers instinctively respond with the courtesy of their best attention." M. E. Chase
+ Yale R n s 18:377 winter '29 530w

DINGMAN, CHARLES FRANCIS. Construction job management. 220p il $2.50 McGraw

692.6 Building—Superintendence. Building—Handbooks, manuals, etc. 28-5026

"Elementary work which will be very serviceable to the inexperienced building contractor. Gives practical suggestions for organization and coördination of work and for handling of materials, equipment, and workmen."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

Booklist 24:350 Je '28

N Y New Tech Bks 13:32 Jl '28

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:266 My '28

DISBROW, CHARLES WESLEY. Fundamentals of banking, finance, and economics. 204p $2.50 Doubleday, Doran

330 Banks and banking. Business. Economics 27-27504

A simple and intelligible explanation of banking systems and practices, of international finance and economics, for the layman or woman with scant knowledge of the subject.

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p15 F 26 '28 80w

"It is written with exceptional vigor and clarity, as by a man thoroughly familiar with the whole subject."
+ N Y Times p30 N 20 '27 280w

DIX, BEULAH MARIE (MRS GEORGE H. FLEBBE). Legend of Saint Nicholas, and other plays. 266p $1.50 French

812 28-1166

"These plays for young people, the first of which gives its name to the book, are to be acted on a bare stage, without scenery or drop curtain. The last two, 'The Weal of Wayland's Well' and 'The Princess Dayshine,' may be produced out of doors." (Boston Transcript) Contents: A legend of Saint Nicholas; The weal of Wayland's well; The Princess Dayshine.

"These three plays are pleasantly set in the mediæval time. They are not very spirited but soft-hearted readers may like them." H. S. Wright

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p8 Ja 15 '28 130w

"They are all well constructed and well and poetically written, and, as all Beulah Dix's historical work is, true to the period in which the scenes are laid."
+ Boston Transcript p2 F 25 '28 220w

DIXELIUS, HILDUR. The grandson; a sequel to The son; tr. by Anna C. Settergren. 273p $2.50 Dutton

28-23277

Brings to a close the trilogy, translated from the Swedish, of which The minister's daughter and The son were the preceding parts. Sara Alelia rounds out and completes her life with her loving care for her grandson's demented wife, thus expiating in some measure, according to her standard, for the mistakes of her own impetuous youth.

"For a stark and rugged directness of style Mrs. Dixelius is without rival among Scandinavian writers to-day, and this gift alone carries the mind and imagination with it as irresistibly as a straw on the surface of a dark, rapid stream. Only her philosophy of life will seem to many people strained and weighed down by a curious morbid anxiety and apprehension." Eugene Lohrke
+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 D 16 '28 700w

Boston Transcript p5 D 1 '28 70w

"The human spirit which burns with both sacred and carnal love against a background of relentless nature and rigid ecclesiastical formalism, makes the story one of universal truth amid highly local surroundings." R. M. L.
+ New Repub 57:51 N 28 '28 110w

"In spite of the depressing theme the book is to be recommended as a fine and revealing work of literature. It tells the story of two lives, and tells it poignantly; it offers us swift but illuminating glimpses of the Swedish peasantry and its modes of thought and life. In her translator, however, Mrs. Dixelius has not been particularly fortunate."
+ — N Y Times p7 O 28 '28 500w

"The book will find many readers because of its stark intensity, and its obvious honesty."
+ Sat R of Lit 5:324 N 3 '28 220w

DIXELIUS, HILDUR. The son; tr. by Anna C. Settergren. 252p $2 Dutton

28-5565

The sequel to The minister's daughter (Book Review Digest, 1927) covers in brief compass the later years of Sara Alelia's life and its bearing on the lives of her son, Erik Anton, and his children. The scene is rural Sweden in the early nineteenth century.

Booklist 24:364 Je '28

"It is the simplest and most honest of records, but it has to too great a degree the flavor of a mere chronicle, and it lacks somewhat that overwhelming power which we have learned to associate with the Scandinavian authors."
+ — Boston Transcript p3 Mr 24 '28 130w

Cleveland Open Shelf p91 Jl '28

Dial 85:265 S '28 100w

Reviewed by Marian Storm
N Y Evening Post p13 Ap 28 '28 750w

"Those who wish to know something of the life lived in Swedish villages a hundred years and more ago will undoubtedly find 'The Son' full of interest."
N Y Times p29 Mr 18 '28 480w

Reviewed by Kathleen Kelemen
Outlook 149:277 Je 13 '28 320w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:364 Jl '28

"This is a tale of primitive folk told in the simplest of prose. Such reality and charm as it possesses arise from its forthrightness, its air of wishing to say as directly as possible just what happened."
Sat R of Lit 4:917 My 26 '28 210w

Springf'd Republican p7f Ap 22 '28 370w

Wis Lib Bul 24:163 My '28

DIXON, ROLAND BURRAGE. Building of cultures. 312p $4 (16s) Scribner

901 Civilization. Culture 28-8418

The origin and growth of human culture depends upon three primary factors: environment, diffusion, and nationality or race. The author studies the interplay of these three factors and the result in the building of cultures.

"There can be only admiration for his honesty of evidence and sobriety of judgment. . . Almost without exception American anthropologists, at least, will find themselves in agreement with Dixon's general position. . . His book is well done, despite a certain logical oversystematizing." Leslie Spier

+ Am Anthropol 31:140 Ja '29 1050w

Reviewed by Robert Redfield
Am J Soc 34:388 S '28 620w
Bookm 68:xxxv O '28 50w

"The book contains a vast amount of interesting information." N. H. D.

+ Boston Transcript p8 Ap 7 '28 950w

"The book is stimulating and written with the authority of Dr. Dixon's extensive information of cultural data. It should prove useful to any interested in the processes of human civilization."

+ Nation 127:252 S 12 '28 230w
N Y Evening Post p12 Mr 31 '28 70w

"The reader who shall persevere to the end of Professor Dixon's book will be rewarded with a singularly clear and well-balanced view of some of the scientific problems of social origins. The first half of the book, however, is undeniably hard going for the 'general reader' whom the author has particularly in mind." W: MacDonald

+ — N Y Times p2 O 14 '28 1600w
Springf'd Republican p6 N 12 '28 450w
Times [London] Lit Sup p505 Jl 5 '28 110w

"In the main, his discussion of the problems involved in tracing the building and diffusion of cultures is eminently sane, sound, and well-balanced." Lynn Thorndike

+ Yale R n s 17:813 Jl '28 450w

DOAN, FRANK CARLETON. Eternal spirit in the daily round; meditations for the modern mind; with an introd. by Samuel McChord Crothers and a preface by Harold E. B. Speight. 204p $2 Harper

242 Spiritual life 28-13232

"Frank Doan was born and reared a Quaker. He taught and preached as a Unitarian, but to the end of his days remained a Quaker in his conviction and practice of the inner experiences of the mystic soul. In his last years, when illness had laid him low, he organized a widely scattered fellowship of men and women to join daily in what he called a Quarter Hour Silence. He gave himself rigorously to this discipline, and in its quiet moments wrought out 'meditations' which, set down on paper, were found, after his untimely death, a rich harvest of his spiritual sowing. This book, 'The Eternal Spirit in the Daily Round,' presents a selection from these 'meditations.' "—Books (N Y Herald Tribune)

"All the sheer mystic power of the soul's communion with the Eternal is here. It is a superb experiment in the now so necessary business of expressing religion in terms of contemporary thought and experience—of working out a language of prayer, shall we say, as typical of our age as à Kempis's language was typical of his. Nay, it is more than an experiment—it is an achievement. Dr. Doan has written a classic for our time—a living testimony, and testament, of the new and truer thoughts of the spirit." J: H. Holmes

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p17 O 7 '28 450w

"Many a person who has failed to find help in the ordinary devotional book will find here both solace and stimulus, prayer and contemplation, a way of opening the soul to the Eternal Spirit, which is utterly in keeping with modern thinking. These meditations really seem like real psalms written for the twentieth century." T. C. R.

+ Boston Transcript p2 Ag 11 '28 300w

"If meditation is almost a lost art, here is the means of recovering it. Weary of many argumentative and controversial books about religion, and of books descriptive and critical of other people's religion, one may turn with relief to this volume and find peace and refreshment and renewal of spirit." W. E. Garrison

+ Christian Century 45:952 Ag 2 '28 380w

DOBB, MAURICE HERBERT, and STEVENS, H. C. Russian economic development since the revolution. 415p $5 Dutton [15s Routledge]

330.947 Russia—Economic conditions 28-15260

A British economist studies in detail the ten years of social experiment in Russia since the Revolution and the economic structure built up by the Soviet government. Much the larger part of the book is given to the transition into the new economic policy in 1921, known shortly as N E P, which Lenin conceived and put into effect when "war-communism" broke down.

Reviewed by Amy Hewes
Am Econ R 18:726 D '28 1000w

"A book for the expert rather than the general reader." F. R. Dulles
Bookm 67:697 Ag '28 70w

"It is hard going for the average reader. But the going, if the reader will drive himself patiently through it, is worth the while. Here, at least, is a writer about Russia who has no ax to grind, no sentimental preoccupations one way or the other, but seems solely intent on trying to understand and explain objective facts." Arthur Ruhl

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p4 Jl 8 '28 1150w
Boston Transcript p4 Ap 21 '28 600w

"Unlike so many books on Communism, Russian Economic Development Since the Revolution cannot be criticized for superficiality. Perhaps it is too much to expect clarity of expression as well. Nonetheless, the book is valuable to the student of foreign affairs, to the economist, the business man interested in foreign trade, and to all who seek to understand the great Soviet experiment." A. H. Thiemann

+ — Living Age 335:150 O '28 600w

"Mr. Dobb has produced the most ambitious, comprehensive, and dispassionate study of the Soviet economic scene available in our language." Harold Kellock

+ Nation 127:205 Ag 29 '28 950w

"We have much to learn, both positively and negatively, from the Russian experiment: and Mr. Dobb's strong and scholarly book ought to be of great assistance to us in learning it." D. H. Robertson

+ Nation and Ath 42:908 Mr 17 '28 1100w
No Am 226:adv O '28 50w
R of Rs 77:30 Je '28 20w
St Louis 26:376 D '28

"An extremely careful, detailed, and thorough account of a series of economic experiments which are the most stupendous in history. It will be of inestimable value to all who wish to study the history of Russia since the Revolution."

+ Sat R 145:291 Mr 10 '28 420w

"There is nothing very new in his exposition, save perhaps that he ignores the human element in the problem more completely than most English Socialists have been able to do."
Spec 140:237 F 18 '28 180w

DODD, LEE WILSON. Great enlightenment; a satire in verse; with other selected verses. 250p $2 Harper

811 28-25967

"The verses in the present volume are a selection from all the lines I have written during thirty or more years. I have included nothing that did not (for one reason or another, and in so far as I am capable of self-criticism) seem to me good of its kind; and nothing has been admitted without revision, sometimes slight and sometimes drastic. Briefly, here is the best I have to offer."—Preface

---

DODD, L. W.—Continued

"For rapidity, irony, deft allusiveness and a witty use of poetic echoes the whole poem is a very gay performance." Edgar Johnson

+ N Y Evening Post p8m D 29 '28 600w

"Here is a man whose mental quickness is far ahead of his poetic gift. . . Mr. Dodd's art, again, is far stronger in his lyric than in his satire. . . But we will not press our quarrels with a man who has brought so much ardor and efficiency to so good a cause." O. W. Firkins

+ — Sat R of Lit 5:536 D 22 '28 1000w

DODD, WILLIAM EDWARD. Lincoln or Lee; comparison and contrast of the two greatest leaders in the war between the states. 177p il $2 Century

973.7 Lincoln, Abraham. Lee, Robert Edward. United States—History—Civil war
28-13309

Professor Dodd's book is not so much a comparison of Lincoln and Lee and an assessment of their characters as it is a swift, impressionistic sketch of the crises of the war, showing the "narrow and accidental margins" upon which some of its most important issues hung.

Booklist 25:22 O '28

"In reading Professor Dodd's little book one gets a touch of the method of Carlyle, swift, meaty sentences, suggestive, provocative, but which sometimes leave one feeling a little vague. As a character study the book is too slight to be important." S. L. Cook

Boston Transcript p2 My 26 '28 1550w

Cleveland Open Shelf p118 N '28

"This small, provocative book is less a parallel study of Lincoln and Lee than a closely packed, dramatic narrative of the trials of spirit that beset the Northern President from his first inauguration to his death. Into the brief compass of the narrative Professor Dodd marshals, in order and perspective the miscellaneous and confusing mass of the whole Civil War. The portrait of Lee is the most intelligent I have seen." Allen Tate

+ New Repub 55:75 Je 6 '28 850w

Reviewed by C: W. Thompson

N Y Times p9 Jl 15 '28 1850w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:500 O '28

St Louis 26:327 O '28

"Mr. Dodd's little book is an interesting if journalistic essay in historical criticism." L. E. Robinson

Sat R of Lit 5:104 S 8 '28 620w

"The author condenses a historical narrative with graphic effect; in his other chapters the mingling of character portrayal with political narrative is not entirely successful. Prof Dodd's gift of judicious interpretation is somewhat obscured by what seems to be an attempt to follow a literary fashion. In particular, his employment of adjectives is not altogether happy."

+ — Springf'd Republican p8 Ag 14 '28 300w

Reviewed by R. H. Gabriel

Yale R n s 18:372 winter '29 130w

DONISTHORPE, MRS GLADYS SHEILA. You. 288p $2 Duffield [7s 6d Hurst & B.]
27-24578

An emotional and ill-balanced young woman addresses to her lover a feverish narrative rehearsing their whole affair from the first meeting in Oxford, thru days of swiftly culminating ecstasy and on to her sorry disillusionment. The story ran serially in Smart set.

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p22 N 11 '28 90w

"The emotional gyrations of a foolish woman infatuated with a selfish and self-satisfied man have formed the theme of many a novel. It is a theme which may perhaps be enlightening, but which, when quite unrelieved either by admixture with any other or by any especial wit or grace, can scarcely be called enlivening."

— N Y Times p16 Ag 26 '28 440w

DORLAND, ARTHUR GARRATT. History of the Society of Friends (Quakers) in Canada. 343p il $7 (18s) Macmillan

289.6 Friends, Society of 28-9766

"Professor Dorland, who appears to have searched industriously the manuscript and printed material available, traces the history of the sect from the first settlements of Quakers in the maritime provinces and lower Canada on through the reinforcement due to the migration of Loyalist Quakers from the United States after the Revolution and the later spread of settlement in central Canada and the West. The story of the great rifts in the society fills the larger, and historically the more interesting and valuable part of the book. There are added some informing chapters dealing with the attitude of the sect or its members toward such philanthropic issues as Negro slavery, the Indians and Acadians, the Doukhobors in western Canada, temperance, woman suffrage, prison reform and capital punishment, the rather meager activity of the society in education and the crucial test of conscientious peace tenets in the face of war."—Books (N Y Herald Tribune)

"Professor Dorland's book is to be welcomed as filling, with considerable success, a small but important gap in ecclesiastical history. Until this work appeared there was no history of the Society of Friends in Canada, and the standard histories of the Dominion throw little light on the subject."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 O 7 '28 300w

"Impressively sympathetic and stimulating is the author's setting forth of the many ways in which the north-country Quakers have aided, not only in Canada, but also in the world at large, the causes of religion, philanthropy, education and international peace." E. N.

+ Boston Transcript p3 F 4 '28 630w

"One can only wish that all histories of religious bodies in Canada and elsewhere could be written by men with the same high standard of mental discipline and careful research as is shown by Professor Dorland. In dealing with the work of other communions, and in discussing the various schisms which have at times rent the Quaker body, he is impartial and generous and understanding, without being colourless. . . Mr. Dorland has made a real contribution to the history of Canada which is very unlikely to be superseded. The book is well printed, well indexed, and well illustrated." W. L. Grant

+ Canadian Hist R 9:67 Mr '28 630w

Christian Century 45:797 Je 21 '28 40w

DORR, MRS RHETA LOUISE (CHILDE). Susan B. Anthony, the woman who changed the mind of a nation. 367p il $5 Stokes

B or 92 Anthony, Susan Brownell. Woman suffrage 28-22296

Susan B. Anthony's biographer does not fear to show the warmth of her admiration for the young Quakeress who became the most unflinching of feminists and gave the best of her long life and all her great gifts to the fight for the full measure of freedom for women. Mrs Dorr succeeds in making this chief burden bearer of an unpopular cause a warm and lovable personality.

Booklist 25:116 D '28

"Mrs. Dorr runs counter to current fashions by writing a warmly partisan biography. She is never impersonal; she is often dogmatic as to both people and events; and Susan B. Anthony is her idol. But her partisanship is leavened by wit and becomes companionable. Mrs. Dorr has a lively sense of drama. Out of her unfaltering judgments emerges a trenchant line-portrait which few readers with an interest in American types will care to miss." Constance Rourke

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p3 O 21 '28 950w

"Mrs. Dorr, who like Miss Anthony, has endeavored to level barriers placed around her sex, has here done a tremendously interesting and valuable piece of work. . . Mrs. Dorr has not hesitated to be very frank in many of her statements, but in her frankness lies much of the charm and virility of her style. The whole pageant of the days from 1848-1906 forms the background for Miss Anthony's story, and in interpreting this pageant and its consequences, Mrs. Dorr has shown a skilful hand. This biography will help to make the soul of Susan B. Anthony go marching down the centuries, an heroic figure of all time." R. R. Miller

+ Boston Transcript p3 O 20 '28 1100w

"As a grotesque and sinister background for the figure of Susan, Mrs. Dorr has painted an unforgettable picture of women's life in this country during the early years of the suffrage fight, when a married woman could not own property or make contracts; when her wages and even her children belonged solely to her husband; when only a few, ill-paid trades were open to women and no colleges or professional schools admitted them." Freda Kirchwey

+ Nation 127:455 O 31 '28 730w

"Mrs. Dorr has written a competent life of a woman who bulked large in one of our major political experiments. If she was not the greatest heroine of all time that is not Mrs Dorr's fault." J: Carter

+ — N Y Times p4 N 4 '28 1450w

"A grandly partisan biography, full of a gusto, a sense of drama and a reality which the popular 'detached' biographies of the day cannot attain. A fine picture of Susan B. Anthony emerges from the book."

+ Outlook 150:1337 D 12 '28 100w

Wis Lib Bul 24:304 N '28

World Tomorrow 12:523 D '28 40w

DORRANCE, JAMES FRENCH. Rio rustlers. 319p $2 Macaulay

28-3331

A modernized and electrified West has taken the place of the Old West in this book. Marietta Webster, young and spirited and above all, beautiful, rules the great El Toro ranch and is known as the Princess. With the help of Winthrop Hadley, an electrical genius, she succeeds in clearing out the bands of rustlers and plotters who threaten her.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p22 Mr 11 '28 50w

"The author is resourceful, ingenious and skillful in working out complications, dramatic developments, daring moves and spectacular events from this situation. And in the end, of course, the best man wins the heroine."

+ N Y Times p18 Ja 29 '28 180w

DOSTOIEVSKAĬA, ANNA GRIGOREVNA (SNITKINA) (MME FEODOR MIKHAILOVICH DOSTOIEVSKII). Diary of Dostoyevsky's wife; ed. by René Fülöp-Miller and Fr. Eckstein; tr. from the German ed. by Madge Pemberton. 421p $7 Macmillan [21s Gollancz]

B or 92 Dostoievskii, Feodor Mikhailovich

The diary of the twenty-year-old second wife of the Russian author, beginning in April 1867 when they left Russia because of debt, and continuing until August of that year when they arrived in Geneva.

Reviewed by Malcolm Cowley

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p1 D 30 '28 2850w

Reviewed by Leonard Woolf

Nation and Ath 44:294 N 24 '28 380w

Outlook 151:73 Ja 9 '29 1000w

Sat R 146:820 D 15 '28 520w

"The Diary of Mme. Dostoyevsky gives a very poignant, full and remarkable picture of six months of their first year of married life. There could have been few girls who have passed through such drama and vicissitude in so short a time. She possessed a woman's eye for clear small detail; and her resilience and charm shine through every page. It is astonishing to be reminded how much strength can be given by love. Anna Grigoryevna accomplished the seemingly impossible. By her own generosity and by Dostoyevsky's unparalled insight and tenderness, a marriage which should have issued in ruin by all the rules of common sense achieved a signal and genuine success." Alan Porter

+ Spec 141:823 D 1 '28 700w

"It is a profuse and quite artless record of daily trivialities, covering only four months in the first year of the diarist's married life. None the less it presents a portrait of Dostoevsky of considerable force and liveliness, and conceived with such ingenuousness of purpose that it abounds in implications, often of some weight, of which the writer herself is unconscious."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p997 D 20 '28 3000w

DOTY, BENNETT JEFFRIES. Legion of the damned. 298p il $3 Century [7s 6d J. Cape]

355 France—Army—Foreign legion 28-5898

The author was recently reprieved from an eight year prison sentence imposed upon him for deserting from the Foreign legion. In graphic style he tells of joining the Legion, and of fighting as a Legionnaire against the Druses in Syria. He includes in his account a plain story of the circumstances leading up to his desertion, of his arrest, imprisonment, and reprieve. There are a few photographic illustrations.

Booklist 24:346 Je '28

"Here is a book which combines the thrill of fiction with the authority of truth. Mr Doty writes crudely, but with conviction, and his account of his life in the Legion is a temperate and authentic performance."

+ Bookm 67:xx Je '28 120w

"The book itself, from first page to last has a pleasing honesty. One finishes it with a feeling that the Foreign Legion is 'like that,' the good of it and the bad of it told without exaggeration and with balanced candor. While Doty never boasts about his personal exploits, it is clear that he made a good legionnaire and fought like a demon against the Druses." W. B. Seabrook

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p2 F 19 '28 1000w

"Here is the best evidence we have seen for a long time that truth is stranger than fiction. Here is something less than a literary masterpiece, yet something far more than an exciting tale. It is the type of story that most people will read at one sitting, but totally unlike other stories of that class, it will leave something permanent and valuable to the reader whose mind is alert enough to allow him to appreciate its rare history and geographic description."

+ Boston Transcript p4 Mr 28 '28 300w

Cleveland Open Shelf p102 S '28

"Doty's colonel reminded him on his discharge that the Legion was hard, but just. And to a surprising degree he conveys that impression to the reader. Although he might comport himself more impressively with a rifle than with a pen, the author still makes his tale vivid without descending to obvious exaggeration, and workmanlike into the bargain."

+ Ind 120:213 Mr 3 '28 110w

"This is a capital narrative. Mr. Doty is an agreeable contrast to more than one of the ex-Légionnaires who have taken their woes to the comforting bosoms of the newspapers. His narrative of what he saw and engaged in has all the stamp of truth on it."

DOTY, B. J.—Continued
+ New Statesman 32:232 N 24 '28 280w

Reviewed by R. C. B. Brown
N Y Evening Post p5 Ag 25 '28 250w

"What is of interest in his book, which bears all the earmarks of having been dashed off at top speed and without very careful revision, is the picture of the no-quarter warfare waged between the French and the Druses in and around Damascus. Even Lawrence's 'Revolt in the Desert,' larger and infinitely more significant though his canvas is, has few more humanly vivid pages than some of the chapters in 'The Legion of the Damned,' describing the hand-to-hand struggles in the campaign." Howard Devree
+ N Y Times p3 F 26 '28 620w

"Out of Doty's tale emerges a picture of the Foreign Legion which is probably truer than anything to date. Doty has nothing but scorn for the hysterical 'expose' and the overwritten Legion stories of cheap fiction. Its life, as he reveals it, is one of iron discipline, stark passion, valor and quick death." G. P. Jones
+ N Y World p11m Mr 18 '28 420w

"In 'The Legion of the Damned' we have the real French Foreign Legion—pure and unadulterated. And, deprived of all the usual 'hokum,' it still retains all the glamour and romance attributed to it by popular novelists." Milton Byron
+ Outlook 148:435 Mr 14 '28 350w
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:406 Jl '28
Springf'd Republican p10 My 25 '28 650w

DOUGLAS, NORMAN. In the beginning. 309p $2.50 Day
28-14705

A tale of the days when the world was very young, when immortals fraternized with mortals and lived blithely without care for good or evil, morals or reform until a reactionary tide of goodness set in, and "all delight fled from earth, and mortals, for the most part, grew to be the fools and cowards they have since remained."

"So consistently is the style of 'In the Beginning' serenely beautiful that Mr. Douglas must be willing to say of it what he on one occasion said of 'Alone' (1921): 'Going through the pages of this book I find, for a wonder, little that I should care to have written differently.' So much one may say for 'In the Beginning' and yet quit the book with the feeling that as a whole it is inferior to 'South Wind' or, for that matter, to 'They Went.' In its entirety Mr. Douglas's new novel somehow fails to come off." E: D. McDonald
— + Bookm 67:578 Jl '28 800w

"When you have read 'In The Beginning' you are charmed by the mature wisdom and the dignified gambolings of the new-born, but you hardly find him a gift vouchsafed by the gods. He was fathered by Norman Douglas, but he was not mothered by South Wind. He has grace and laughter and is just a little lascivious in a discreet sort of fashion, and he is a kind of cousin to James Branch Cabell (on the distaff side) and for so young a child he is rather shockingly urbane." Donald Douglas
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p7 My 20 '28 1050w

"It seems strange that after so long a rest Mr. Douglas has failed to give us a novel at all comparable with 'South Wind,' but he has not. As a matter of fact, were it not the book of one who has, in a short space of time, produced one novel that is recognized as a classic, it might not be accepted as a tolerably readable work. But coming from Norman Douglas it deserves attention. . . The prose of the book, we must admit, is beautiful. The sentences are rhythmic and a fine sensibility of the choice of words is everywhere manifest." K. S.
— + Boston Transcript p2 My 16 '28 1000w

"He wrote well in 'South Wind'; now he is writing brilliantly. The plot is slight and its importance almost lost in the beauty of style with which Mr. Douglas develops it. 'In the Beginning' is one of those rare books which should receive a well-deserved acclaim."
+ Ind 121:21 Jl 7 '28 130w

"Mr. Douglas breaks his long silence with a languid sigh which should never have escaped his lips."
— Nation 126:652 Je 6 '28 50w

" 'In the Beginning' is a difficult book to review. You cannot extract a short passage, and say 'How witty,' or 'How beautiful.' The beauty is in the whole world of the author's imagination and in the whole texture of his writing. It is certainly the best new novel I have read this year." Raymond Mortimer
+ Nation and Ath 43:795 S 22 '28 800w

"We have waited ten years for a novel from Norman Douglas, and now that we have it, we would willingly have waited a little longer." T. S. Matthews
— New Repub 55:76 Je 6 '28 820w

Reviewed by Elizabeth Bibesco
New Statesman 32:52 O 20 '28 480w

"A thin, cloudy and abortive work. It is easy reading, but, alas, it is not very interesting. Not bad enough to be called a mess, not attaining the dignity of a chaos, it is a kind of hash or stew with some very dubious ingredients, lacking savor and withal not filling." Shaemas O'Sheel
— N Y Evening Post p5 Ag 4 '28 400w

"There is sagacity to 'In the Beginning,' and a moral for those who find it, humor that is tolerant rather than acid, and much gayety. To sum up with an overworked word. 'In the Beginning' is a fantasy, but a fantasy of gorgeous possibilities, not all of which have been realized by the author." Percy Hutchison
+ — N Y Times p2 My 6 '28 1250w

"A disappointment to one who expected something excellent from the author of 'South Wind.' " J: R. Chamberlain
— N Y Times p26 Je 24 '28 100w

"It is a slyly humorous story of ancient gods and goddesses, with plenty of satire, and a number of passages that are not meant to be collateral reading for Sunday schools. Mr. Douglas writes excellent prose and there is much to be said that is favorable about the new work, but it is not within several long bow-shots of his classic, South Wind." Herschel Brickell
+ — No Am 225:adv Je '28 150w

"Having found 'South Wind' indefinitely rereadable, we could not get through this one once. 'In the Beginning' has to do with the escapades of Linus, a halfgod, and is a mixture of Anatole France, Cabell, Erskine, etc. Out of so ill-assorted a medley of influences, not much good can come."
— Outlook 149:434 Jl 11 '28 300w

" 'In the Beginning' is beautifully written, in a prose that does anything that Mr. Douglas requires of it. But having said that, one has said almost all; never was a book in which the form so far surpassed the content. It is trivial above all things; its imagination is weak and its satire misses the mark." L. P. Hartley
— + Sat R 146:365 S 22 '28 250w

"The lovely elements that mixed so delicately in 'South Wind' have all gone up the spout. And 'In the Beginning' is a feeble specimen of that chirping pornography that passes for strength among the weak." Leonard Bacon
— Sat R of Lit 4:945 Je 9 '28 800w

"For the small group of those who can become mentally excited and even ecstatic over a rare brand of irony, a new sardonic romance by this author is an occasion for unmitigated delight. His style, limpid and iridescent, with its innocent airs and wicked refrains, is the nearest approach in our language to the manner of Anatole France." R. A. Taylor
+ Spec 141:340 S 15 '28 220w

"It may be too much to ask of a prose work of fantasy, especially ironical fantasy, that we should entirely believe in it as we read it; but certainly it must never be allowed to bore us. Mr. Norman Douglas's disillusioning fable fulfils this need, at least, serenely. It is a smooth but animated tale with resourceful inventions; the style has a clear and vivid quality, the wit an easy, Lucian-like flavour."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p76 F 2 '28 720w

"Mr. Douglas's imagination sometimes runs to unnecessary grossness, but his art of simple but cunningly chiselled narrative is always fresh and charming, and his dialogues are delightful."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p646 S 13 '28 550w

World Tomorrow 11:348 Ag '28 20w

DOUGLAS, O., pseud. See Buchan, A.

DOUGLAS, ROBERT DICK, jr.; MARTIN, DAVID R.; and OLIVER, DOUGLAS L. Three boy scouts in Africa. 149p il $1.75 (6s) Putnam

916.76 Africa, British East. Animals 28-24737

The three lucky boy scouts who were chosen to accompany Mr and Mrs Martin Johnson on safari in Africa collaborate in this story of their adventures by pooling their diaries. The boyish record has plenty of camera illustrations some taken by themselves, others by the Johnsons.

"Books by boys for boys may have value as such in the classroom. Boys themselves need stronger meat to feed upon in the formative years of their reading than they can provide for one another, and no one knows this better than the boys themselves." A. C. Moore

— Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p8 O 28 '28 730w

N Y Times p26 N 11 '28 180w

DOUGLASS, HARLAN PAUL. The church in the changing city; case studies illustrating adaptation. (Inst. of social and religious research) 453p $4 Doubleday, Doran; Inst. of social and religious research

261 Churches. Social surveys 27-22723

A study of the city church and its problems, which shows how sixteen big city churches have endeavored to keep pace with the changes round about them and to continue their usefulness to the community in new or altered forms.

Reviewed by S: C. Kincheloe

Am J Soc 34:239 Jl '28 100w

Booklist 24:308 My '28

"The study is a revelation as to the breadth of program and equipment which the churches are adopting to meet the needs of the modern city. It shows in detail what a church can do, and is the best answer to the repeated request of city pastors as to what can be done to meet certain situations." T. C. R.

+ Boston Transcript p10 N 26 '27 250w

"The volume will help enormously toward an understanding of the problems faced by city churches and toward an interpretation of the function of the church as it confronts the exceedingly intricate, complex and swiftly evolving life of the city." C: T. Holman

+ Christian Century 45:145 F 2 '28 1450w

J Religion 8:167 Ja '28 40w

Pratt p8 winter '28

R of Rs 77:28 Mr '28 90w

"While the study has a significance, some of its suggestions do not to me seem to be drastic enough." Nels Anderson

Survey 59:537 Ja 15 '28 110w

DOW, GEORGE FRANCIS. Arts & crafts in New England, 1704-1775. ltd ed 326p il $5 Wayside press, Topsfield, Mass.

609 New England—Industries. Art industries and trade 27-24471

"The long subtitle, contrived after the manner of titlepages of the days with which the work deals, gives 'Gleanings from Boston Newspapers Relating to Painting, Engraving, Silversmiths, Pewterers, Clockmakers, Furniture, Pottery, Old Houses, Costume, Trades and Occupations.' Mr. Dow has searched the existing files of five newspapers covering the years from 1704 to 1776, namely, Boston News-Letter, Boston Gazette, New England Courant, New England Journal and Boston Evening Post, and from advertisements, announcements and articles he has culled everything concerning materials and articles pertaining to arts and crafts that were made, imported, bought, sold, used in the New England of Colonial days."— N Y Times

"The volume is a mine, or rather a heap of precious ore hauled out to the mouth of the mine in which it had been hidden. It is good reading for the lover of the curious, and if I were an antique dealer I would not think of trying to keep shop without it." G. H. S.

+ Boston Transcript p5 Ja 4 '28 650w

"Throughout done in accordance with the best traditions of the bookmaking craft, while its contents show the patience, the care and the painstaking willingness of the trained research worker."

+ N Y Times p34 D 11 '27 280w

DOWNEY, JUNE ETTA. Kingdom of the mind. (Young people's shelf of science) 207p il $2 (8s 6d) Macmillan

150 Psychology—Juvenile literature 27-24376

The originator of the Downey intelligence tests writes for boys and girls these chapters on how the mind works, suggesting simple tests that young people will be interested in trying out.

"The work is gracefully written and humanly presented so that he who reads can't help wanting to learn." S. D. House

+ Bookm 67:98 Mr '28 220w

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p17 My 6 '28 100w

Cleveland Open Shelf p86 Jl '28

"One must have only praise for the effort, and little else for the success. The style of the book, though slightly condescending, is not offensively so. The scientific accuracy appears to be beyond reproach. It does seem, however, since someone has decided to break the long silence, that it might have been done with a little more of a rattle. 'Safety first' is, after all, a grammar-school motto." Elisabeth Irwin

+ — New Repub 52:sup360 N 16 '27 450w

"As a whole, it may be said that the book accomplishes its purpose of providing harmless recreational reading. However, one of the dangers involved is that the reader of such a diluted treatment of psychological principles may mistake the froth for the substance and use with harm to himself or others the semi-psychological or pseudo-psychological information secured." C. V. Good

School R 36:388 My '28 500w

Wis Lib Bul 24:127 Ap '28

DRAGO, HARRY SINCLAIR. Where the loon calls. 317p $2 Macaulay

28-19282

A love story of the early French settlements along Lake Erie. 'Toinette defies her family to run away with the swashbuckling Placide Labadee, captain of the Heloise. At once she realises her mistake. The ship goes down and the two are marooned on an island offshore; but as 'Toinette's scorn for Placide grows, so does his new love for her. She is not to be placated, however, and marries the good Cleophas who comes to rescue her. Placide waits humbly, and does not wait in vain.

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p20 N 4 '28 110w

"Freshness of plot and locale mark this tale of French Canadians who settled the marshy lands along Lake Erie between Toledo and Detroit. . . While most readers will be delighted to have the lovable "Toinette happy ever after, there is a sense of hurry and unreality, for the slow-grinding mills of God grind much grist in a short time in the last chapter."

DRAGO, H. S.—Continued
+ — N Y Times p16 S 2 '28 450w

DRAKE, HENRY BURGESS. Cursed be the treasure. 310p $2 Vanguard press [7s 6d Low]
28-3435

An eighteenth century mystery and treasure hunt in England. Tommy and his father are fugitives from the vengeance of Shadow-of-Fear. From his father's awesome stories Tommy gathers that the cause of their flight is buried treasure, a mad captain, and a curse. As the boy grows up he takes his full share in the blood-and-thunder adventure, and pursues the mystery to the sea cave where its secret is hidden.

"If Mr. Drake had only sternly censored and sternly re-written the second half of his book, it might have become a masterpiece. Some of his episodes are as exciting as Stevenson's. What further praise could one give! But he needs to be more severe with his fancies. Meantime, he shows the making of a writer of genuinely thrilling adventure stories."
+ — Boston Transcript p3 F 25 '28 180w
Cleveland Open Shelf p67 My '28
Ind 120:365 Ap 14 '28 120w

"Pirates with pigtails, smugglers, King's men, hidden treasure, fights with knives and pistols, and Gothic mystery, all go to make up this interesting novel. As a boy's book it is excellent; as a contribution to modern literature it is less."
+ — Living Age 334:562 Mr 15 '28 200w

"Its melodrama is gripping, for its author is a stylist whose English carries conviction, and the key to the mystery is withheld to the end. It is, paradoxically, a shilling shocker of genuine literary quality, though one cannot agree with English opinion, which compares its author to Conrad and Stevenson." F. H. M.
+ N Y Evening Post p12 Ja 28 '28 120w

"For people who like tales of adventure it is a fascinating, well rewarding novel. For not only has it an ingeniously imagined plot richly furnished with picturesque and startling incidents and adventures, but is so well told as to appeal to the more fastidious tastes of discriminating readers. The style is firm, restrained, simple, and the novel as a whole carries on in the tradition of romantic adventure stories set by Conrad and Stevenson."
+ N Y Times p9 Ja 29 '28 400w

"Mr. Drake had all the tools with which to fashion a masterpiece of fiction but he used them with such a chaste and stilted coldness that the result is flat. Although his style is literary the laborious way in which he unravels a too complicated plot tends to tire the reader."
— + N Y World p11m Mr 18 '28 80w

"This is a long, old-fashioned, plot-novel, written in good English prose, with a love story and high adventure on sea and land to give it interest for those who are weary of social and psychological problems of one sort or another. It is hereby recommended as good entertainment." Herschel Brickell
+ No Am 225:adv Mr '28 70w

"This mystery story of eighteenth-century England, of hidden treasure, of dark enmities, of slow conspiracies, of torture and assassination, will hold every reader till the final page is reached. It combines marked originality in plot and freshness of style with the use of those familiar properties in which we all delight—sea-caves revealed only at low tide, subterranean passages, lonely moors, a haunted mansion, and swift luggers." Allan Nevins
+ Sat R of Lit 4:646 Mr 3 '28 300w
Times [London] Lit Sup p145 Mr 3 '27 130w

DRAKE, HENRY BURGESS. The shadowy thing. 329p $2 Vanguard press
28-22878

From his school days Avery Booth had exercised an uncanny influence over his fellows. Gradually his power takes evil shape, and in the case of young Gaveston drives the boy actually mad. From that time on Dick, who tells the story, pits himself against Avery. Dick's sister Blanche has a supernatural power for good as strong as Avery's for evil. It comes to open war between them or rather between the spiritual forces, divine or satanic, which each has the power to summon. In a final gruesome scene Blanche wins, but the effort kills her.

"For real honest to goodness horror of the Dracula school peruse 'The Shadowy Thing,' a fascinating nightmare. . . It must be difficult to manage true love among the gooseflesh of such a shocker, but Mr. Drake gets away with it gallantly. Recommended for reading in broad daylight." Will Cuppy
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p20 O 14 '28 150w
Boston Transcript p2 N 24 '28 350w

"The atmosphere of pervasive dread is never quite established. The most impressionable reader will not lose much sleep on account of this all too-shadowy Thing." T. S. Matthews
— New Repub 57:200 Ja 2 '29 200w

"Somehow the author manages to spread a web of plausibility over the whole and the book never descends to that absurdity which would constantly threaten it were the theme less ably handled."
+ N Y Times p6 N 4 '28 500w

"Mr. Drake has put a number of shudders in this book, but he has so muffled and swathed them in verbiage that they lack the authentic chill." W. R. Brooks
— Outlook 150:959 O 10 '28 120w

"Frankly, it is not another 'Dracula,' though it has moments that induce goose-flesh, and is superior in its phantasmagorias to the general run of horror stories. . . Mr. Drake has a vivid imagination and there are moments when his narrative is intensely alive."
+ — Sat R of Lit 5:440 D 1 '28 280w

DRAKE, WILLIAM A. Contemporary European writers. 408p $3.50 Day
804 Authors. Literature—History and criticism. Europe—Literature 28-11519

Biographical and critical studies of forty interesting figures in contemporary European literature. Contents: Marcel Proust; Jean Giraudoux; Jean Cocteau; Franz Werfel; Benedetto Croce; Thomas Mann; Maurice Donnay; Paul Morand; Sigrid Undset; Sibilla Aleramo; Georg Kaiser; Kostes Palamas; Georges Duhamel; Pio Baroja; Guillaume Apollinaire; Ramon Del Valle-Inclan; Vladimir Mayakovsky; Carl Sternheim; Frank Thiess; Maurice Barrès; Boris Pilniak; Hermann Bahr; Pierre Louys; Robert de Montesquiou; Armando Palacio Valdes; Jakob Wassermann; Anna de Noailles; Paul Valery; Azorín; Francis Jammes; Charles Péguy; Henri de Régnier; François Mauriac; Chaim Nachman Bialik; Paul Bourget; Charles Maurras; Karel Capek; Giuseppe Antonio Borgese; Detlev von Liliencron and Richard Dehmel; Luigi Pirandello; Bibliographies; Index of names.

Booklist 25:20 O '28

"This excellently compiled volume of information and opinion need not frighten the cultivated American reader. He will read in it much that is of interest and is in many instances otherwise unavailable in English, and he will be made acquainted with the best European estimates of these personalities for Mr. Drake quotes with admirable scrupulousness and liberality from the critics of other literatures." L: Galantiere
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p5 My 27 '28 880w

"Although rather over-inclined to orthodoxy in its judgments, this book is a remarkably fine introduction to the work of contemporary Europe. Particularly valuable are its comments on figures who are as significant as they are little known here: Valle-Inclán, Richard Dehmel, Azorín."
+ Nation 126:570 My 16 '28 170w

"As a whole the book is weakened by the journalistic origin of the essays, which shows in the very grain of the work. . . But the volume suffers from a still more radical defect. Mr. Drake's critical attitudes, his critical criteria unfortunately show vacillation and lack of firmness." Axton Clark
— + N Y Times p38 N 25 '28 900w

"The range, dexterity, versatility and adaptability of Mr. Drake's intelligence would be proved by the chapter headings alone, but behind each chapter is a university course in the type of literature discussed and in many of the chapters the subjects are not suspended in mid-air, but are related to their sources, literary and social, their time, their prototypes and contrasts in a manner giving assurance that Mr. Drake has made his own syntheses, not borrowed from others' summations." Harry Salpeter
+ N Y World p10m Ap 22 '28 880w
Outlook 150:1337 D 12 '28 110w
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:482 O '28

DREISER, THEODORE. Dreiser looks at Russia. 264p il $3 Liveright

914.7 Russia—Social conditions. Russia—Economic conditions. Russia—Politics and government. Communism 28-27605

Theodore Dreiser was invited by the Soviet government to visit Russia to investigate conditions there, being given freedom to choose his own itinerary and express freely his conclusions. He spent only eleven weeks in Russia but he saw much. He believes that a very great thing is happening there, that Communism is working, that the government is thinking and really going somewhere, that while luxury has gone, the misery of poverty has gone also, that the Russian system of education moves the boy and girl to think.

"Dreiser says nothing which he does not take back. For that very reason his is a supremely honest book. He refuses to make the sweeping statements of the journalist. Life, in Russia as elsewhere, is muddled. . . So he gropes. Decidedly this book is not like any other book on Russia. For Dreiser is not sure of anything about Russia. And who else has ever written a book about Russia without being abundantly sure?" L: Gannett
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p3 D 23 '28 1000w
Boston Transcript p7 D 1 '28 420w
Reviewed by E. F. Edgett
Boston Transcript p10 D 8 '28 210w

DRESSER, HORATIO WILLIS. History of modern philosophy. 471p $3 Crowell [15s Allen & U.]

190 Philosophy, Modern—History 28-4631

"This volume continues the survey of philosophic thought from the point where the author's previous History of Ancient and Medieval Philosophy concludes its presentation. The work introduces the student and the general reader to the leading tendencies and systems of modern thought from the beginning of the seventeenth century until the present day. The book is divided into two parts: the first leading from Francis Bacon to Kant, and the second from Kant through current theory. Not only the individual thinkers but also the intellectual movements of the past three centuries are given full exposition and evaluation. In addition to their theories, the lives, works, values, and successors of the outstanding philosophers are discussed."—Int J Ethics

---

Boston Transcript p4 Mr 14 '28 310w

"The author plays no favorites and espouses no system as his own. The style is clear, though compact and without any special vividness. It will be equally useful to those who wish a connected account of the course of speculation during the last three centuries and those who desire a convenient book of reference giving an account of the positions of the better known thinkers and bibliographies for further study."
Christian Century 45:577 My 3 '28 110w

"The book is meritorious in clearly and completely presenting, in separate sections, the main notions of the leading thinkers; in providing a thorough perspective of modern philosophy by including references to lesser men and movements; in furnishing with each subject an extended bibliography of books available for introductory study; and in treating contemporary schools as important and integral aspects of the philosophical process." D. L. Evans
+ Int J Ethics 38:490 Jl '28 330w

DRESSER, PAUL. Songs; with an introd. by Theodore Dreiser. 262p il $3.50 Boni & Liveright

784.3 Songs 28-18635

A collection of the songs of Paul Dresser, with words and music and illustrations, and with an introduction by Theodore Dreiser, the song-writer's brother, who tells of the inspiration of some of the songs, and how he himself happened to write the words of the immensely popular song "On the banks of the Wabash."

"It is a valuable addition to the records of the minor and more curious aspects of the American theater." E. F. Edgett
+ Boston Transcript p5 Jl 14 '28 330w

"Most of them are not worth preserving; some are not even as funny as the magic-lantern slide illustrations which accompany them."
— Dial 85:226 S '28 80w
Ind 120:629 Je 30 '28 110w
Nation 127:187 Ag 22 '28 80w
Reviewed by W. R. Brooks
Outlook 149:75 My 9 '28 90w

"The sum of his work was a definite contribution to the social conglomerate, and his songs merit the permanent form given them in the present collection. The illustrations from stereopticon slides of the period lend the book a pleasant and proper sense of antiquity."
+ Springf'd Republican p10 My 31 '28 350w

DREW, ELIZABETH A. (MRS BRIAN DOWNS). Jane Welsh and Jane Carlyle. 282p il $2.50 Harcourt

B or 92 Carlyle, Mrs Jane Baillie (Welsh). Carlyle, Thomas 28-6005

Miss Drew combats Froude's view of Jane Welsh Carlyle as an unhappy, misunderstood woman, martyr to her husband's eccentricities. Instead, these two geniuses are shown as human beings, baffling to each other and to themselves but held together in a difficult partnership by a mutual and long-sustained love.

Booklist 24:319 My '28
Reviewed by Robert Kissack, Jr.
Bookm 67:444 Je '28 420w

"Mrs. Drew's book is not a formal biography, but a character study; in effect, a brief for Jane, though not an indictment of Carlyle. It is a pretty irony that Scotch jurisprudence alone admits of a verdict which covers the Carlyle case: Not Proven." Isabel Paterson
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p1 Mr 25 '28 2300w
Boston Transcript p4 Mr 28 '28 530w
Cleveland Open Shelf p65 My '28

DREW, E. A.—Continued

"She writes in a manner that should ensure for her a wide reading among the followers of the popular monthlies. To the present reviewer, however, this author lacks the necessary perspicuity to do complete justice to her subject."

Dial 84:526 Je '28 100w

"Miss Drew has done unobtrusively a most painstaking piece of biographical compilation—done it richly, sympathetically, and fairly for the most part. But as this note is overshadowed by its preamble, so is Miss Drew's book—or any similiar book—overshadowed by the complex dimensions of its subject. By all means read this book; it is not only interesting but authoritative. But as certainly remember that the story is not all told here, nor best told. Only the Carlyles themselves can do the Carlyles justice."

+ — Ind 120:213 Mr 3 '28 280w

"The analysis of a Victorian lady's position is probably the least satisfactory part of Miss Drew's book. Although she gives sufficient background to explain why Mrs. Carlyle made her husband the center of her life, she fails to present a concrete statement of the legal and occupational disqualifications of women. What she does observe, however, is the incongruity of Mrs. Carlyle in the conventional Victorian picture." W. F. Neff

+ — Nation 126:542 My 9 '28 800w

Nation and Ath 43:434 Je 30 '28 600w

"Miss Drew finds herself provided with a subject still fresh, for hitherto no competent woman writer has thought it worth while to work over the voluminous records for the purpose of drawing an objective portrait of Jane Welsh Carlyle. Miss Drew has done this most successfully."

+ New Statesman 31:488 Jl 21 '28 1650w

Reviewed by Joseph Collins

N Y Evening Post p13 Mr 10 '28 1400w

"It is a human picture, vivid, colorful and immensely real. Perhaps it was because Jane Welsh Carlyle impressed her contemporaries as so very real that she is so today in biography; and perhaps it is Miss Drew's art. But again, whatever the cause, both the book and the reader profit." Percy Hutchison

+ N Y Times p3 F 26 '28 200w

"This book will do no violence to admirers of Jane, among whom the present writer is delighted to number himself, and it should set at rest a lot of silly gossip about the Carlyles."

+ No Am 225:adv Ap '28 150w

"It is well organized, well written, discerning, and yet so easily unpretentious that it makes the elaborate efforts at 'portraiture' of some of the others sound very much like big bow-bow stuff. It refuses to step beyond the proved facts." Ruth Suckow

+ Outlook 148:673 Ap 25 '28 260w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:342 Je '28

"This 'cross between John Knox and a gypsy,' as W. E. Forster called her, is shown here with a fairness and yet an enthusiasm which make criticism difficult." R. C.

+ Spec 140:946 Je 23 '28 320w

Springf'd Republican p7f Mr 25 '28 1000w

Times [London] Lit Sup p443 Je 14 '28 650w

Wis Lib Bul 24:125 Ap '28

"The excellence of Miss Drew's biography lies, first of all, in its judicious and telling selection of just the right letters and excerpts from diaries and journals. Indeed, she cannot be too highly commended for this work in the face of the mass of material that must needs have been consulted. One wishes for space in which to comment more fully upon the admirable arrangement of subject matter, upon the conscientious, eager way in which the author loses her own identity in that of her subject, upon the complete and vivid portrait she achieves by the use of anecdote and of carefully chosen imagery and detail." M. E. Chase

+ Yale R n s 18:375 winter '29 250w

DRINKWATER, JOHN. All about me; poems for a child. 104p il $2 Houghton [7s 6d Collins]

821 28-22486

"'Me' is a little girl about eleven years old who cogitates upon the riddles of life and says some very sensible things in some very whimsical verse."—N Y World

Reviewed by Sylvia Lynd

New Statesman 32:supxx D 1 '28 60w

"It is particularly trying when a poet like John Drinkwater, who really ought to know better, goes Christopher Robinish on us." Rachel Field

— N Y Evening Post p10m N 10 '28 130w

"It is John Drinkwater in his best mood 'for little girls,' and he has put their philosophy, their charm and their prim little humor into poetry they will like." Isabelle Houck

+ N Y World p9e O 28 '28 180w

"It would be idle to pretend that these rhymes or the illustrations have the charm of the Milne-Shepard combination, nor do the verses uniformly avoid sophistication and an intricacy of thought that make them a little difficult for the average child."

— Sat R 146:784 D 8 '28 90w

Reviewed by W: R. Benet

Sat R of Lit 5:415 N 24 '28 80w

"Mr. John Drinkwater has seen straight into the mind of children in his All About Me. He does not attempt to 'write down' of course, nor yet to simplify or explain: the amusing and delightful thing to say bubbles up with the gorgeous inconsequence of genius. Every family should enjoy this jolly book."

+ Spec 141:332 S 15 '28 80w

DRINKWATER, JOHN. Charles James Fox. 389p il $5 Cosmopolitan bk.

B or 92 Fox, Charles James 28-22072

A poet's life of the great Whig statesman and orator who took his seat in the House of commons at the age of twenty, who passed almost the whole of his parliamentary career in opposition to the government, fighting George III on every important issue, and who supported the cause of the American colonies in Parliament during the Revolutionary war.

"One who knows Mr. Drinkwater's talent for delineating character would expect such a personality in such a setting to make a distinguished biography. Instead we have a bald recital of events. Only in a few places does the author cut below the surface in interpretation." A. L. Sachar

— Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p28 D 2 '28 420w

Boston Transcript p5 S 22 '28 1600w

Reviewed by E. F. Edgett

Boston Transcript p7 N 17 '28 900w

"Mr. Drinkwater gives us a life-size portrait of Fox, not merely as a man, but as a politician; his book is something more than a biography; it is a study of Fox's place in the political development of England. It is an interesting book much the best of Mr. Drinkwater's that I have read. . . . He has completely succumbed to the charm, and he is all for Fox. I lean the same way myself, but I think Mr. Drinkwater really goes a little too far in putting the biographical telescope to his blind eye when he has to look at his hero's failings and failures." Leonard Woolf

+ — Nation and Ath 44:110 O 20 '28 400w

"That Mr. Drinkwater has probably gone too far in eulogy is natural and excusable: like his hero, he is often carried away by enthusiasm, and says more than he really means. Nor, though he has had access to some unpublished papers, has he been able to tell us much that is new. There are a good many slight errors, and a certain weakness in the difficult art of transition. Mr. Drinkwater's book will certainly not supersede Trevelyan's." E. E. K.

— + New Statesman 32:89 O 27 '28 1000w

"Debunking heroes is an amusing pastime. Not less amusing is whitewash for the unheroic.

Either process yields novelty; neither process guarantees truth. What Mr. Drinkwater gives is, too often, his own editorial instead of the news." P. W. Wilson

— N Y Times p8 O 28 '28 1650w

"But for the fact that John Drinkwater has access to much material pertaining to the purely personal side of this picturesque man not hitherto touched, we should be tempted to describe this book as a beautiful essay and not a biography in the true sense. But because of this material, family letters and the like, much that is new is presented and the actual charm of this genius is accentuated to the reader. It is interesting to find that Mr. Drinkwater's prose in historical narrative is quite as attractive as his poetry. No admirer of Fox can afford to neglect this exquisite story of his life; no liberal ought to pass it by. If we dared use the word we would characterize the whole as a lovely portrait." C. G. Bowers

+ N Y World p10m O 7 '28 920w

"A book about Fox means a book partly about Pitt and Burke, Horace Walpole, George the Third, Lord North and so forth, and about the London which included the salons of the great and lovely ladies who look out from the pictures of Romney and Gainsborough and the gambling rooms at Alcock's and Brook's. And such a book could scarcely be dull. In Drinkwater's hands it is brilliant and fullbodied. He presents the whole English scene and the characters which moved across it. And the figure of his hero is reanimated by Drinkwater's dramatic power."

+ Outlook 150:995 O 17 '28 150w

"Mr. Drinkwater, if he lacks some of the virtues of the professional historians, has qualities of his own which should make his book widely read. And he gives a fresh turn to some longstanding controversies."

+ Sat R 146:544 O 27 '28 880w

Reviewed by Frank Monaghan

Sat R of Lit 5:535 D 22 '28 800w

"When a poet, and playwright, undertakes political biography, the result is a foregone conclusion, so far as the ordinary reader is concerned. He is sure to be delighted, whatever learned historians may have to say about sources and deductions. . . To borrow an expression from George Sand, Fox was always able 'to take men by the heart.' Mr. Drinkwater makes his readers realize this rare and indescribable gift, and therein lies the great charm of an enthralling book."

+ Spec 141:457 O 6 '28 880w

"Mr. Drinkwater has lowered his biography to the level of a party pamphlet. It is unfortunate that Mr. Drinkwater's book is weakened by this idolatry which excuses everything done by Fox both in public and in private. . . On idolatry, even blind idolatry, for the memory of such a man it is difficult to be very severe. Mr. Drinkwater has missed the opportunity of writing a book which has yet to be written. But perhaps he has been happier in placing one more laurel on that beloved head."

— + Times [London] Lit Sup p721 O 11 '28 1550w

DRYDEN, BRIDGET, pseud. Passion is the wind. 323p $2 Day

28-22879

Another of the stream of consciousness novels, this is the obliquely told story of the love of Brooke Bonnell for Harold Michelson. Both are employees of Nightingale's department store; Miss Bonnell is head of the Book department, Michelson is one of the buyers. The story of their ecstacy and its passing is given against the ever present background of the store and its personnel, a background that is psychological almost more than physical.

"Miss Dryden possesses an amazing ability to evoke places, people, situations. She projects the advertising department through a kaleidoscope; the mountain rendezvous of the lovers through a Clavilux. But in the end she scoops up all her shifting colors and throws them into the loud harmony of the market place."

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p45 S 30 '28 320w

"The story is told in the modern introspective vein—a record part of thought and part of feeling. It is not confined to one viewpoint, which is to be regretted since it loses considerable force from the fact that we are shifted rapidly from the inside of Brooke's mind to the inside of Michelson's. . . The novel is so well done in places that one is irritated that it does not keep this excellence throughout."

+ — Boston Transcript p3 O 20 '28 250w

"The great retail establishments of the country have been neglected as settings for fictional drama, and if the present volume does little else, it shows the literary possibilities that exist behind the counters and showcases and card-index systems of the modern emporium. . . One forgets the incoherence of Brooke and Michelson in the delightful experience of coming upon a new world."

+ — N Y Times p7 D 9 '28 450w

DUBLIN, LOUIS ISRAEL. Health and wealth; a survey of the economics of world health. 361p $3 Harper

614 Public health. Vital statistics. United States—Sanitary affairs 28-13641

The statistician of the Metropolitan life insurance company discusses public health in terms of the value of the individual in dollars and cents. Contents: Preface; The economics of world health; The cost of medical service; What it costs to neglect our children; The problem of heart disease; The problem of tuberculosis; The chance of death from cancer; The problem of old age; The great American family; On the true rate of natural increase; Birth control and the population question; The education of women for home-making and careers; Life, death, and the Negro; Health of the workers; Has prohibition improved the public health? The possibility of extending human life.

"He has given us a book with which every health officer, health worker, and statesman should be familiar and which will interest all who are concerned in the welfare of humanity and the future of the race." M. P. Ravenel

+ Am J Pub Health 18:952 Jl '28 580w

"Each of the problems discussed is buttressed with a mass of verified statistical data, interpreted with lucidity and insight. Students of the Negro will find the essay on 'Life, Death, and the Negro' of special interest." W. O. Brown

+ Am J Soc 34:566 N '28 250w

Booklist 25:13 O '28

Boston Transcript p4 My 26 '28 750w

"Few writers are so happily facile in dealing with statistics as Dr. Dublin. Optimism is the note on which the whole book is written, but an optimism founded on keen statistical analysis, common sense and a belief that with facts carried home more liberal funds to combat ill health and disease, and thus to prolong life, will be provided."

+ Eng N 101:445 S 20 '28 180w

"The book presents informed, illuminating and thought provoking discussions of many problems of American life."

+ N Y Times p18 My 27 '28 450w

St Louis 26:316 O '28

"The book is of real value and should do much to stimulate a broader interest and a more generous support, for these measures aim at preventing sickness and postponing death." G. M. Tucker, Jr.

+ Sat R of Lit 5:106 S 8 '28 1000w

Springf'd Republican p10 Je 13 '28 170w

"The whole volume is a good standby for those who must speak and write entertainingly, without sacrifice of accuracy. A blessing to publicists and health workers the length and breadth of the continent." Haven Emerson, M.D.

DUBLIN, L: I.—Continued

+ Survey 60:356 Je 15 '28 730w
Wis Lib Bul 24:188 Je '28

DU BOIS, WILLIAM EDWARD BURGHARDT. Dark princess; a romance. 311p $2 Harcourt 28-11319

Outraged by the discrimination against him in a New York medical college, Matthew Towns, a negro of brilliant promise, leaves America and its race prejudice. In Berlin he steps into an international race feeling as strong as that he has fled from. He joins a movement of the dark people whose high priestess is an Indian princess, and returns to America to spread propaganda among the blacks. He is a railroad porter for a time and is thrown into jail for his knowledge of a wreck which he prevents. On his release he is used by a political machine to gather votes in Harlem. He rises steadily, marries and is headed for Congress, when the dark princess reënters his life.

"The book is an amazing mixture of fact and fancy. There is mingled in it the pain and toil of the dark laborers in our great cities, and the romance and regal splendor of an ancient kingdom that lies below the white summits of the Himalayas. After reading it one has the feeling that the much written of white man's burden is sentimental twaddle, but that the black man's burden of suffering is a cross which sometimes must be borne on the shoulders of all humanity." Jane Reiteli
Ann Am Acad 140:347 N '28 360w

Reviewed by Alain Locke
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 My 20 '28 630w
Boston Transcript p5 Jl 14 '28 380w
Cleveland Open Shelf p105 S '28

"His people are real people. If they are occasionally silly and improbable, they are never mere personified debates." M. P. L.
+ — New Repub 56:27 Ag 22 '28 250w
N Y Evening Post p9 My 12 '28 90w

"The book is well written, but there is enough material in it for several novels and the plot is flamboyant and unconvincing. The theme of miscegenation is so decidedly controversial that to those who believe in the preservation of racial purity the book will fail to lessen their prejudice. There is, however, real meat in the 'Dark Princess' and such proof of the author's power that it seems a pity he is not using his talent to show the natural ability of the colored man or his nobility of character, as in 'Porgy,' rather than to dwell oversensitively on social injustices which are inevitable in any period of racial transition and development—of white or black."
+ — N Y Times p19 My 13 '28 580w

"It is by no means a dull novel, for the author's passion alone is enough to give it vigor and interest. Beyond that it is hard to go. The melodramatic plot, with its bewildering complications, its incredible coincidences, its overemphatic climaxes; the grand style, lapsing into poetry with or without justification; the one-dimensional characters, existing not for their own sakes but for the author's special purpose —these are the paraphernalia of a second-rate novelist of the nineties. The truth is, of course, that DuBois is not a novelist at all, and that the book judged as a novel has only the slightest merit. As a document, as a program, as an exhortation, it has its interest and its value, but one can readily imagine the mirth it will provoke among the Harlem literati." G. H.
— + Springf'd Republican p6 My 28 '28 480w

"A piece of symbolic social literature and propaganda. Written with fine nervous ardor and scorn for injustice."
+ World Tomorrow 11:473 N '28 50w

DU COUDRAY, H. Another country. (Univ. prize novel) 295p $2.50 Sears [7s 6d P. Allan]

"Miss du Coudray, of Lady Margaret Hall, has won Messrs. Philip Allan's £100 prize, offered for the best novel written by an undergraduate in residence at Oxford or Cambridge . . . Charles Wilson, second officer of a P. and O. liner, is recovering from illness in Malta. Unpleasantly married, with a wife and children in London, and feebly well-intentioned in character, Wilson drifts into friendship with a household of Russian refugees, falls in love with the one decent member, commits bigamy casually, and on discovery, leaves for England, whither the girl presently follows him."—New Statesman

Boston Transcript p6 O 27 '28 200w

"It is all quite plausible, conscientiously worked out, quietly (too quietly) told, the characters are disagreeable and true, and there are no hysterics, even at the end. It reminds one of Gissing. A depressing performance altogether, by one so young." T. S. Matthews
New Repub 56:184 O 3 '28 200w

"A book of both promise and achievement."
+ New Statesman 31:300 Je 9 '28 200w

"It is difficult in the extreme for the reader of this book to believe that the author was a girl of only 18. She writes with the air of a practiced fictionist and of an experienced person of the world. She shows the restraint which usually comes only after long discipline, and has the deft and suggestive power of the true artist; she depicts character poignantly but without sentimentality, and brings her story to a tragic climax without strain or melodrama."
+ N Y Times p6 N 11 '28 530w

"The book is clever and ugly. Mr. Pattee would class it with those cocksure shafts of Hyatacus which can bring down naked, bloody, revolting 'truths' before the greedy eyes of a sensation loving public."
— Sat R of Lit 5:252 O 13 '28 160w

"The masculine grip and the mature insight of this prize novel certainly do not suggest the amateur. It is a singular and ruthless analysis of the more contemptible side of humanity."
+ Spec 141:112 Jl 21 '28 250w

"Miss Du Coudray has written an original and moving book, and her Charles and Maria stand apart from the other victims of chance. The style is so mature, so unhurried, that as the work of an undergraduate 'Another Country' is the more remarkable."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p354 My 10 '28 550w

DUDLEY, ADOLPHUS MANSFIELD. Induction motor practice; a designing engineer brings his experience to operating men and students to help in the solution of practical problems involving induction motor characteristics. 236p il $2.50 McGraw

621.313 Electric motors, Induction 28-10376

"Supplements author's earlier work entitled 'Connecting induction motors.' More than a third of the present book consists of questions and answers on induction motors reprinted from the 'Electric journal.' Much of this material was included and expanded in 'Connecting induction motors.' "—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

Booklist 25:13 O '28
N Y New Tech Bks 13:37 Jl '28
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:628 D '28

DUDLEY, LOUISE. Study of literature. 396p $2.25 Houghton

801 Literature 28-12900

Tho designed as a text and used by the author in her English classes at Stephens College, Columbia, Missouri, the book is so written as to appeal to any reader looking for an analysis of literature and a discussion of literary standards.

"This book is intended as an aid to students in beginning the story of literature, and as such it should be judged. From a more exacting point of view it would be difficult to praise it, for Miss Dudley simplifies so relentlessly and schematizes so rigorously the ideas she treats that an 'advanced' student is left with stones in his hand rather than bread. For beginners, however, these objections are unimportant; the novice will find the problems of literary study here helpfully stated and suggestively answered."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 N 4 '28 180w

"Her method is conspicuously admirable. It is clear, concise, provocative, leaning upon a foundation rock of scientific authority. . . The poetical excerpts which throughout her study Miss Dudley gives as examples of the point under discussion, form a little anthology of rare beauty and value."

+ Boston Transcript p3 Je 2 '28 420w

"A stimulating book."

+ Wis Lib Bul 24:221 Jl '28

DUFF-GORDON, LUCIE (AUSTIN) lady. Letters from the Cape; annot. by Dorothea Fairbridge; with an introd. by Janet Ross. 164p il $3.50 (10s 6d) Oxford

916.87 Cape Colony 28-26459

"These Letters from the Cape were first published in 1864. On their first appearance they were bowdlerized, but are now published as they were written. They give an intimate picture of the life of Cape Colony some sixty odd years ago. A traveller in search of health, Lady Duff Gordon crossed the ocean in a sailing ship which 'bounded like a tiger,' established herself in a primitive boarding-house in Cape Town and found time and courage to take long journeys into the neighbouring villages, and register her impressions day by day for the amusement of her husband at home." —Spec

— —

Reviewed by B. R. Redman

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 F 12 '28 150w

"The fact that she wrote with an idea of eventual publication made her conscious of her style; it is careful but not too literary, descriptive where it needs to be, and clear and amusing the rest of the time. Even though her letters have none of the intimate interest common to familiar letters, she has one quality which all great letter-writers must have—the power to endow commonplace, familiar matters with charm and freshness."

+ Boston Transcript p3 Ja 21 '28 180w

"The mid-Victorian letters of Lady Duff Gordon have tenderness and vivacity, and an unmistakable style, the outcome of a generous and cultured personality."

+ Nation and Ath 42:sup254 N 12 '27 70w

New Statesman 30:supxvi D 3 '27 260w

Reviewed by Herschel Bricknell

No Am 225:adv F '28 120w

"Exceedingly humorous and lively."

+ Spec 139:1020 D 3 '27 230w

"There are several exquisite and many amusing descriptive passages in her book, of which the style, if it seems a little too much considered by comparison with epistolary masters, is regular and bright. Her best pen-pictures are those of human beings, as her predominant interest in life is the study of mankind."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p811 N 10 '27 300w

DUFFIELD, ANNE. Miss Mayhew and Ming Yun; a story of east and west. 311p $2 Stokes

28-972

Summoned to Peking by the illness of her nephew's wife Miss Mayhew finds the household in willing thrall to Ming Yun, a beautiful, inscrutable Manchu, the nephew's ward. A Russian refugee whose experiences have cost her the power of speech is added to the household and with her coming Miss Mayhew witnesses a curious struggle between the dying wife, Ming Yun, and the little Tanya to win or hold first place with Stephen.

— —

Booklist 24:282 Ap '28

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p16 F 19 '28 130w

"All the persons in this drama of the love of a Chinese girl for a white man many years her senior, are well drawn. Not the least lovely among them is Anastasia, the mute Russian princess that Bob and Raoul rescue from a horrible fate. Although it may be true that everyone in the story is a little too delightful, rich or fascinating, there is enough realism in the author's portrayal of Ming Yun to make her the vivid central figure of a rapid moving and extremely readable novel." F. B. B.

+ Boston Transcript p3 Ja 28 '28 450w

Cleveland Open Shelf p56 Ap '28

"The story is that of tragedy, but the setting is curiously gay, and the whole is instinct with truth; truth which not even the melodramatic incident of the angry Manchu Prince can completely spoil."

+ New Statesman 30:804 Mr 31 '28 100w

"In no sense a frivolous book (Vera's battle with her disease would prevent that attitude), yet it does not consider any actuality of man's life. It is adventurous, accurate in Oriental background, prettily picturesque and written in unpretentious and swift English."

+ — N Y Times p9 Ja 29 '28 350w

"The scents and sounds and colours of Pekin find their way into the pages, with charming effect. There is much readable matter in this curiously unequal book, which, after raising a great storm and pother, dies peacefully and somewhat ineffectually away." L. P. Hartley

+ — Sat R 145:200 F 18 '28 150w

"There is more to 'Miss Mayhew and Ming Yun' than a colorful novel of China or merely another story of the triangle. The presentation of the Manchu point of view as indicated in the behavior of Ming Yun and the gentlemanly Manchu prince is excellent."

+ Springf'd Republican p7f My 6 '28 220w

Times [London] Lit Sup p173 Mr 8 '28 200w

Wis Lib Bul 24:91 Mr '28

DUFFUS, ROBERT LUTHER. American renaissance. 321p $3.50 (18s) Knopf

707 Art—United States. Art—Study and teaching. Art—United States—Galleries and museums. Theater—United States. American drama 28-20255

Mr Duffus makes a "random pilgrimage" in search of signs of an aesthetic revival in America. He visits universities and art schools, museums and theatre workshops and writes provocatively of his discoveries thru observation and discussion with those thru whom the American renaissance in the fine arts is to come about.

— —

Booklist 25:60 N '28

"His book, as a true indication of the state of the arts in America today is superficial, misleading and untrustworthy at best, it is only a swaggering tribute to the magnitude, methods and distribution of the cultural plants now operating in the various parts of the country." T: Craven

— Bookm 68:357 N '28 780w

"Dispassionately yet understandingly Mr. Duffus discusses the manifestations of the artistic spirit in America, with enough of the evolution of each manifestation to make its present status intelligible. There is no attempt at propaganda, no effort to decry what, however dunderingly, we in America are striving to do. On the other hand, there is no sentimentalizing over our brilliant prospects. In a word, it is a book for those who are interested in what art means and may come to mean in America. For such it is well worth not only reading but owning as well." S. L. Rich

DUFFUS, R. L.—Continued

+ Boston Transcript p2 Ag 18 '28 1250w

"Whatever one may think of American art, about which this book really says nothing at all, one learns that it is being taught almost with hilarity; one realizes, moreover, that this survey of teaching aims and methods is an example of an egregiously expert journalism, so finished as to become itself a kind of objet d'art." H: Ladd

Nation 127:400 O 17 '28 1050w

Reviewed by J. B. Temple

New Repub 57:48 N 28 '28 500w

"A survey of the teaching of art might prove extremely dull reading. It all depends upon the manner of handling one's material. In his manner of handling, Mr. Duffus is anything but dull. He has the gift of dramatizing his subject and his style is always clear and well knit." E: A. Jewell

+ N Y Times p5 S 9 '28 1350w

Pratt p24 autumn '28

"A sane well-tempered book, but disappointing and disquieting! What has befallen our 'Renaissance?' Pale indeed are its beginnings if this be all." J: W. Gassner

Survey 61:455 Ja 1 '29 480w

DUGMORE, ARTHUR RADCLYFFE. African jungle life. 246p il $6 (15s) Macmillan

599 Animals—Habits and behavior 28-20560

The author has illustrated in color these stories of African jungle life, in which he sums up in a narrative concerning an elephant, a rhinoceros, buffalo or lion, the life story of a species.

Booklist 25:57 N '28

"Though Mr. Dugmore is a fine naturalist, he is rather a poor hand at telling a story. . . Few authors have the genius to write a 'Jungle Book' or a 'Bambi,' but Mr. Dugmore may console himself by realizing that the popularity of such works depends far more on their imaginative artistry than on their truth to nature."

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p21 N 18 '28 200w

Boston Transcript p6 Ag 25 '28 350w

N Y Times p18 O 14 '28 630w

Reviewed by W. R. Brooks

Outlook 149:438 Jl 11 '28 110w

R of Rs 78:18 Ag '28 40w

"This is a splendid book of the jungle. The price unfortunately places it beyond the reach of the average schoolboy, but we hope a cheaper edition will soon be forthcoming, for it is a book boys will delight in."

+ Sat R 146:188 Ag 11 '28 100w

"Major Dugmore has a wonderfully sympathetic style, so that at the end one cannot help wondering why man ever tries to kill such beings. This book should make a wide appeal to children and grown-ups alike; even the sportsman of East Africa must pause and ponder when he comes to realize that man is probably the wild animals' worst enemy."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p370 My 17 '28 520w

DUKES, ASHLEY. World to play with. 148p $2.50 (6s) Oxford

792 Theater

"Ashley Dukes's 'The World to Play With' is a thin collection of rather thin papers on aspects of the theater, suggestions rather than completed studies. Perhaps the most interesting is called 'The Painted Actor' and preaches a doctrine directly counter to the increasingly naturalistic practice of most modern players. Another paper of interest is a dialogue between a 'movie' and a theater fan, in which the latter makes the suggestion that the 'movies' will always be at the mercy of mechanical invention. This was written, evidently, before the talkies came along, to show us how true it is."—Books (N Y Herald Tribune)

Reviewed by W. P. Eaton

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p40 D 2 '28 100w

"The promise of originality and spontaneity is never quite realized and it is slightly disappointing to find that the author introduces serious questions, such as the value of verse as a dramatic form, the relation of playwright to producer in the modern theatre, only to guide subsequent discussion into the shallows of drawing-room urbanities and conversing in a pleasant monotone which is entertaining without being exhilarating, and persuasive without being convincing.

— Nation and Ath 43:710 S 1 '28 550w

"A certain dashingness of attack and a rather juvenile intolerance exercised against any type of play except the one Mr. Dukes fancies at the moment are not incompatible with a power to write about many aspects of the theatre in an entirely charming manner."

— + Sat R 146:21 Jl 7 '28 500w

"Writing with but little of that fire which reduces most enthusiasts to incoherence, and always the detached master of himself and his idea, Mr. Dukes shows on every page how open is his mind and how independent his spirit. He is anxious to reappraise the arts of the theatre in terms of what the happenings of the recent years have brought to them."

+ — Sat R of Lit 5:439 D 1 '28 300w

"Mr. Dukes is a critic who knows his drama not only in the library but from both sides of the curtain. So much that he has to say is suggestive and inspiring, so shrewd is the practical advice that he dispenses to playwrights and translators, to actors and producers, that one can the less afford to overlook his lapses. . . . If for an instant we concede—or allow critics like Mr. Dukes to imply—that the dramatist is not the motive force of the theatre, then our case will be hard indeed."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p591 Ag 16 '28 950w

DUMMER, MRS ETHEL (STURGES), ed. The unconscious. 260p $2.50 Knopf

127 Subconsciousness. Behaviorism (psychology). Psychoanalysis 28-6822

"A collection of articles by specialists in biology, sociology, psychology, psychiatry, and anthropology. The contributors inspire confidence: C. M. Child, Kurt Koffka, John E. Anderson, John B. Watson, Edward Sapir, W. I. Thomas, Marion E. Kenworthy, F. L. Wells, William A. White. Some of the material is familiar; most of it is new."—Survey

Booklist 24:345 Je '28

"Though each chapter is written by a different man, the book has a remarkable continuity, and (with the exception of one or two contradictions) a surprisingly unified idea. It is as if the editor had outlined the book in order to stress certain underemphasized viewpoints and then assigned each chapter to the man best qualified to write it." Margery Mansfield

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p17 My 6 '28 980w

"The addresses of a remarkable assembly of researchers who are set to the task of pulling the unconscious out of the mystery of centuries and of exposing it to the clear light of experimental testing and scientific judgment."

+ Educ R 76:142 O '28 1200w

J Home Econ 22:771 O '28 60w

N Y Times p15 F 12 '28 400w

Reviewed by Nels Anderson

Survey 61:244 N 15 '28 120w

DUNCAN, ISADORA. My life. 359p il $5 Boni & Liveright

B or 92 28-577

For descriptive note see Annual for 1927.

Booklist 24:280 Ap '28

"Although she was no stylist in letters, Isadora had always a faculty of lucid statement; and this, applied to the forthright, saltily-frank tale of her amazing and flaming career, has produced what is surely the bravest autobiography ever written by a woman, and perhaps the frankest story of love ever written without a smirk." Shaemus O'Sheel

+ Bookm 67:100 Mr '28 560w

Cleveland Open Shelf p35 Mr '28

Reviewed by W. E. Garrison

Christian Century 45:284 Mr 1 '28 130w

"The awareness that she was always 'good copy' guided the pen of the autobiographer, displacing sincerity with artfulness. Episodes which may have been beautiful in reality are rendered tawdry in the telling; instead of the figure of a great artist there emerges the effigy of an Elinor Glyn heroine. The impulsiveness and the restless energy which made Isadora a world-renowned artist are reflected in these chapters, but something finer and more fundamental remains unexplained."

— + Dial 84:437 My '28 80w

"Her account remains interesting as a lively portrait of a personality that attracted many great people of her day."

Ind 120:285 Mr 24 '28 120w

Reviewed by Leonard Woolf

Nation and Ath 43:210 My 19 '28 170w

Reviewed by E. S. Sergeant

New Repub 54:sup164 Mr 21 '28 1550w

New Statesman 31:supx My 19 '28 770w

"It is not easy to see just why Isadora Duncan's autobiography is not a little ridiculous; but certainly it is not. Much of the writing is not good or skillful; it is not free from errors in simple rhetoric, and there are long passages of barren narrative. Yet, somehow, the book reveals a noble, positive, exhilarating soul. It is like the 'yard of cotton veiling bought at Liberty's' which, though probably not much in itself, served to reveal the moving outlines of the dancer's body." Melvin Levy

+ N Y Evening Post p14 Ja 21 '28 1050w

"It is, in spite of its lack of certain literary qualities, a genuinely moving portrayal of the dancer's life struggles, told without any suggestion of vulgarity, and transcending its own intrinsic importance by its deep sincerity." Herschel Brickell

+ No Am 225:adv Mr '28 70w

"As author Isadora betrayed occasionally a breezy disregard for syntax, but she is never dull, always stimulating, and often profoundly moving. Hastily written, the book contains a score of minor errors. But what magnificent reading! A classic of its genre." L: Galantière

+ Outlook 148:115 Ja 18 '28 720w

Sat R 145:702 Je 2 '28 1100w

Reviewed by Arthur Ruhl

Sat R of Lit 4:647 Mr 3 '28 750w

"It is an occasional passage of real wisdom which makes the reading of her book so pleasant. Whole chapters consist of little more than the record of a brilliant, charming, and beautiful child rushing about the Europe of the first decade of the twentieth century, hysterically admiring, but quite uncomprehending of what was going on about her. And yet even these chapters have a value, for they give one a sense of what the rich, cultured, and, above all, secure European Society of that date was like."

+ — Spec 140:803 My 26 '28 720w

Reviewed by E. M. Jewett

Springf'd Republican p7f Mr 18 '28 850w

"Most autobiographers write about all those events that did not cut too deep. In this naïve great book, Isadora Duncan writes only about those that did cut deep; the trivialities that make up the sum of most lives seem never to have grazed her consciousness." A. B. Parsons

Survey 60:190 My 1 '28 880w

"There is proverbially but the shortest of steps from the sublime to the ridiculous and in these pages Isadora moves, always gracefully and often gaily, from one to the other. Her literary style is as varied as her abundant personality, ranging from the depths of platitudinous bathos and sentimentality to an occasional stark phrase that sears the mind and remains forever in the memory." Rosamond Gilder

Theatre Arts Mo 12:223 Mr '28 630w

Times [London] Lit Sup p392 My 24 '28 1400w

World Tomorrow 11:231 My '28 30w

DUNHAM, B. MABEL. Toward Sodom. 336p $2.50 Macmillan

Mennonites—Fiction 28-30267

The story of a Mennonite community in the pioneer days of Canadian history. Sarah Horst, wife of the Mennonite bishop, takes her stand against the invasion of the community by new standards and customs and the resultant trend "toward Sodom."

"In the business-like apportionment of rewards and punishments Miss Dunham exhibits something of the naivete of the simple folk of whom she writes. Her style too is as drab and unadorned as a Mennonite maiden's bonnet. And, to mention all the defects first and at once she includes unnecessarily a number of time-worn jokes which have surely earned retirement by honorable service in the newspaper exchanges. Yet she has a genuine, unforced sense of character; these people, even in the monotonous uniformity of their ways and beliefs, are clearly differentiated." Isabel Paterson

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p9 Ja 1 '28 700w

"It is simply told and has the ring of sincerity."

+ Boston Transcript p2 Ja 21 '28 280w

"There is no richness, no fineness of texture, nothing over and above the record of the facts, in 'Toward Sodom.' "

— N Y Times p12 Ja 1 '28 350w

Wis Lib Bul 24:224 Jl '28

DUNHILL, THOMAS FREDERICK. Sullivan's [2] comic operas; a critical appreciation. 256p il $3 Oxford [10s 6d E. Arnold]

782 Sullivan, Sir Arthur Seymour

"The main purpose is to give answer to the most important of Sullivan's detractors. Mr. Dunhill crosses swords with Dr. Ernest Walker and Mr. Rutland Boughton among other people. There is no doubt that he is right in considering this adverse criticism to be a serious matter which must be seriously met, and it cannot be denied that his book has real authority. He carries out an admirable analysis of the operas, and towards the end gives us an excellent chapter on 'Sullivan and the Orchestra.' "—Spec

---

"One is grateful to Mr. Dunhill for showing at such length that Sullivan's genius never could have compassed the measure of the symphony and the oratorio and grand opera, and that almost in despite of his conscious desires Sullivan finally won the one art he could win and gave lustrous and inextinguishable enchantment to the world." Donald Douglas

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p1 N 4 '28 700w

"A defense of Sullivan's musical reputation against his contemporary detractors seems the knocking down of a straw man. Almost fifty years of increasing popularity and appreciation surely constitute their own vindication. But in 'estimating the value and musical importance' of each opera Mr. Dunhill does perform a service to the lay disciples of Gilbert and Sullivan. Through his briefly comprehensive and readable analysis of each score he emphasizes the individual importance of one of the two elements

DUNHILL, T: F:—Continued
they are too wont to consider an inseparable welding of words and music."
+ — Nation 128:24 Ja 2 '29 120w
Spec 140:626 Ap 21 '28 100w
Times [London] Lit Sup p269 Ap 12 '28 900w

DUNKERLEY, WILLIAM ARTHUR. See Oxenham, J:, pseud.

DUNLAP, ORRIN ELMER. Story of radio. 226p il $2.50 Dial press
621.384 Radio communication 27-20091

The story of the achievements of radio, in which Radio itself is allowed to speak in the first person, for most of the narrative. Illustrated from photographs of inventors and their devices which have contributed to communication via the air.

Booklist 24:234 Mr '28

"Barring occasional imaginative figments, the book holds place as an excellent treatise on what everybody should know about radio."
+ — Boston Transcript p4 F 8 '28 230w
Cleveland Open Shelf p3 Ja '28

"The marvelous story is all there, from the first faint intimations of the strange force, through the gradually unfolding knowledge and the experiments by which Marconi plucked its secrets from the air, to its present half-revealed state and its promises of more magic performance in the near future. Mr. Dunlap tells it without technical mystifications, making history, experiments, methods, achievements all so clear and interesting that scientific knowledge is not necessary for their understanding."
+ N Y Times p20 O 2 '27 480w
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:507 O '28
St Louis 25:375 D '27

"The book is interesting as well as informing —though the reader may wish at times that the author had not adopted the puerile device of having 'Radio' tell his own story."
+ — Springf'd Republican p10 Ap 4 '28 280w

DUNN, ROBERT WILLIAMS. Company unions; employers' "industrial democracy"; with an introd. by Louis F. Budenz. 206p 50c Vanguard press
331.152 Employees' representation in management. Trade unions—United States 27-19727

"The purpose of this book is to present the progressive trade union slant on company unions and to outline their significance, purpose, and practices, as well as certain methods for meeting their advances. This is done chiefly by sketching certain specific company unions now in operation and showing how the workers fare under these plans."—Preface

"Limited in its appeal, this volume will prove invaluable for students of contemporary labor conditions." S. A. Coblentz
+ Bookm 66:693 F '28 50w
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p16 Ap 29 '28 510w

Reviewed by Theresa Wolfson
Nation 126:168 F 8 '28 250w

DUNSANY, EDWARD JOHN MORETON DRAX PLUNKETT, 18th baron. Blessing of Pan. 277p $2 (7s 6d) Putnam
28-3170

There was a strange tune which came floating down upon the village just at sunset from Wolding Hill and the young girls of the village began to follow the sound. The Vicar was worried and wrote to the Bishop for help, but the Bishop only suggested a holiday. The piping continued and more people followed its eerie call. Again the Vicar appealed for help and found only old Peterkin, whom men called mad. Eventually the whole village went for worship to the Old Stones on the hill, led by the piper, and the Vicar became the priest of the old, old religion. And Arcadian peace settled over Wolding.

Booklist 24:282 Ap '28

"Of late years Lord Dunsany has taken to writing novels wherein even the magic of his style can achieve no finer outline than a gossamer web hung in darkling woods. In such books as 'The King of Elfland's Daughter' and 'The Charwoman's Shadow' and now in 'The Blessing of Pan' you get no more than a tenuous adumbration of what once shone in an incomparable genius of its own kind." Donald Douglas
— Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p21 Mr 11 '28 950w
Boston Transcript p5 F 25 '28 600w
Cleveland Open Shelf p55 Ap '28

"For all its many excellent qualities, apt descriptions, neat invention, sly humor, and pointed expression of thoughts and regrets that must find an echo in countless hearts, the book seems to lack some necessary lyric impulse."
+ — Living Age 334:88 Ja 1 '28 250w (Reprinted from Daily Telegraph)

Reviewed by Edwin Muir
Nation and Ath 42:122 O 22 '27 50w
New Repub 54:200 Mr 28 '28 150w

"Accept his cast of absolutely homogeneous rustics, accept their precious, limited, orderly existence which is gradually turned into a wild tangle of primitive virtues and you will find 'The Blessing of Pan' as fine a piece of romantic nonsense as has been woven in many a year."
+ N Y Times p6 F 5 '28 330w

"Not one of its author's most successful fantasies; it is happiest when least fantastic. But his mind is penetrated by beauty, and this beauty never quite fails to make itself felt." L. P. Hartley
— + Sat R 144:630 N 5 '27 100w

Reviewed by J: Gerard
Sat R of Lit 4:790 Ap 21 '28 630w

"This little history is an alluring and oddly cordial admission of fantasy; the homespun and the imaginative threads are so finely interwoven that nothing frankly incredible mars its wistful persuasion."
+ Spec 139:743 O 29 '27 450w

"A very willing suspension of disbelief is essential to the enjoyment of Lord Dunsany's book."
Times [London] Lit Sup p785 N 3 '27 480w

DUNSTERVILLE, LIONEL CHARLES. Stalky's reminiscences. 298p $2.50 Macmillan [7s 6d J. Cape]
B or 92

These recollections of the original of Rudyard Kipling's boy hero include experiences at Westward Ho, in Devonshire, with his schoolmates, Kipling and Beresford, and army adventures later, in India, Malta, China and the World war.

"No one who remembers and loves Stalky & Co. can afford to miss this delightful sequel. It is impossible not to feel that Kipling's 'Stalky' is exactly what General Dunsterville must have been when he was a boy."
+ New Statesman 30:768 Mr 24 '28 780w

"Our author, undoubtedly a better soldier than a writer, manages, nevertheless, to be casual, witty and vivid and, above all, that curious product known as an English Gentleman—tolerant, shrewd, cocksure and as secure in his British-complexioned world as a nut in its shell."
+ N Y Evening Post p9m D 22 '28 110w

"They are cheery, conversational, informal, without a touch of pomposity or formal biographical solemnity. The reader will lay them down without knowing much more than he did when he picked them up, but he will in the meantime have made the acquaintance of a genial gentleman who also happens to be that rare bird a professional soldier with a high sense of humor."

+ N Y Times p2 Jl 1 '28 950w

Pratt p40 autumn '28

St Louis 26:358 N '28

Sat R 145:499 Ap 21 '28 680w

"He alternately delights and tickles us with an olla podrida, which, if not so exciting as his great Persian adventure (though that is touched on), is vastly more human. He explains that his name in anagram can read, 'Never sit dull,' and his book will certainly not allow a reader to sit dull for a single moment. In it is revealed the true story of Kipling's Stalky & Co.; the intimate history and training of an Indian regiment are given with an abundance of breezy detail; and there are hosts of good stories."

+ Spec 140:535 Ap 7 '28 180w

Times [London] Lit Sup p238 Mr 29 '28 1100w

DUNTON, JAMES GERALD, ed. C'est la guerre! the best stories of the World war. 338p $2.50 Stratford

Short stories—Collections 27-24664

A compilation of sixteen war stories of exceptional merit, reprinted from various periodicals and collections. Contents: Balm of Bar-le-Duc, by S. M. Avery, Belated evidence, by E. W. Springs; Bo'sun Magee discovers a war, by R. deS. Horn; The captain's shower bath, by J: Farrar; Fear, by J. W. Bellah; Good morning, Major, by J. P. Marquand; "Hands across the sea," by V: Rousseau; Happy Birthday, by K: Detzer; "Hard Luck" Lowery, by Eugene Cunningham; Mademoiselle from Armenteers, by S. M. Avery; Martinet, by Ared White; The phantom major, by Larry Barretto; Protect-your-men, by B. A. Williams; Souvenirs, by W: H. Upson; The spy, by Llewellyn Hughes; The unconquerable Jennings, by J. D. Newsom.

"Many may find that their favorite tale has been omitted, but the anthology seems fairly representative of what the writer has sought to depict, and what the former soldier has thought fit to remember concerning the years 1914 to 1918. Most of us will find something to interest us in so widely spread an assortment."

+ Boston Transcript p5 F 4 '28 250w

"In range and merit the short stories here collected are uneven. Naturally, several of the tales, the works of recognized short-story writers, stand out above the mediocre average, as do one or two of a more curious type."

+ — N Y Times p12 Ja 1 '28 520w

Springf'd Republican p7f Ap 15 '28 180w

DURAND, HERBERT. Field book of common ferns. (Putnam's nature field bks.) 219p il $2.50 Putnam

587.3 Ferns 28-15262

The book, which is similar in format to his "Taming the wildings," is a manual for the identification and culture of fifty species of ferns found in the eastern United States. There are 52 illustrations from photographs and many outline drawings, but the book contains no index.

Booklist 25:13 O '28

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:461 O '28

DURSTINE, ROY SARLES. This advertising business. 331p $3 (10s 6d) Scribner

659 Advertising 28-21634

Breezy, informative articles on the advertising business from the inside, written by a partner in one of the large New York advertising agencies. The material has been rewritten, in part, from articles appearing in various magazines.

"Nobody knows the trade of advertising better than Roy S. Durstine. And nobody, up to date, has treated it so trenchantly and amusingly as it is handled in 'This Advertising Business.' . . He has given us a volume of singular clarity and compactness, of interest and value not only to those who sell through advertising, but also to those who buy through that medium —which means pretty much all of us." S: H. Adams

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p25 N 11 '28 700w

"This is a breezy book. And it does what breezes ought to do: it clears the air, brings refreshening. . . The book must be criticized, however, for a fault of which its author seems to be himself aware. He speaks of the papers as 'random notes in great disorder,' and it is to be regretted that his summary is so correct. The effect of the whole is a little incoherent. One is left a bit breathless. If the breeze blew less choppily, it would be a better book."

+ — N Y Times p22 O 14 '28 400w

St Louis 26:382 D '28

DUSSAUZE, ALICE. Little Jack Rabbit; tr. by Allan Ross Macdougall. (Little lib.) 125p il $1 Macmillan

27-18537

"Nightingale, fox, cuckoo and wild boar are a few of Little Jack Rabbit's neighbors in this charming story translated from the French."—Wis Lib Bul

Booklist 24:165 Ja '28

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:229 Ap '28

"Simply told and full of the feeling of the French countryside, this is just the book for a small child who loves real animal stories without too much 'make-up' about them. The illustrations deserve special commendation for their character, truthfulness, and real understanding of what a child likes." M. W. Bianco

+ Sat R of Lit 4:305 N 12 '27 70w

Springf'd Republican p7f D 4 '27 60w

Wis Lib Bul 24:92 Mr '28

DUTTON, CHARLES JUDSON. Clutching hand. 293p $2 Dodd

28-8132

A well-known lawyer is found dead in a new and expensive car, in a lonely spot on a foggy night. A young fellow who is admittedly in difficulties and who appears to have stolen money and jewels from his father's safe is implicated in the lawyer's death when the gun in the dead man's hand is traced to the boy. But the investigators search for the owner of the clutching hand glimpsed for a moment in the fog as it groped thru the window of the car.

"Mr. Dutton so maneuvers a collection of time-tried clews (some of them forged), a couple of false confessions and a handful of credible motives as to lend attraction to a simple, uncomplicated tale of gun-play, ill-starred love, blackmail and robbery." Will Cuppy

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 Ap 8 '28 100w

Boston Transcript p4 Ag 1 '28 200w

N Y Times p13 Ap 15 '28 200w

DUVAL, ELIZABETH W. This earth we live on. 156p il $3 Stokes

910 Geography—Juvenile literature 27-22468

"Mrs. Duval first presents the spinning globe —both in words and picture. Then with great clearness and simplicity, and with much concreteness of illustration—always using colorful maps and pictures—she demonstrates the phenomena of the earth we live on."—Sat R of Lit

"Here is one of those books, always interesting and useful, that are the outcome of a personal need. In the education of her own child Mrs. Duval could find no book that would give to the subject of geography the vitality and reality, vividness of actual life, that it ought to have. So she wrote this book."

DUVAL, E. W.—Continued

+ N Y Times p36 D 4 '27 110w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:68 Ja '28

"Obviously, there is no new material in the book. But it deserves attention because of the presentation. Mrs. Duval does not write like a geographer nor like one who has been kindled by geographic thinking. Rather she writes like one who has suffered and seen children suffer from stupid, dull geographies. Considering the tremendously wide range of brute facts which she feels a child must swallow, Mrs. Duval has done a pretty good job at finding natural and interesting ways of introducing them, though I am not sure she has helped much with the real problem of digestion." L. S. Mitchell

+ — Sat R of Lit 4:536 Ja 21 '28 480w

DWIGGINS, WILLIAM ADDISON (HERMANN PUTERSCHEIN, pseud.). Paraphs. (Publications of the Soc. of calligraphers) 82p ltd autog ed $7.50 Knopf

814 28-12038

A paraph is the bold flourish added to a signature; and, by derivation a statement made in the spirit of bravado. These beautifully written fragments, tho labelled paraphs by the author, are a true expression of his philosophy.

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p27 S 9 '28 100w

"Well written, with a beautiful command of English, quasi-serious for the most part, although by no means all of the same character."

+ Boston Transcript p2 Je 2 '28 180w

"These prose poems reveal the play of a humorous and whimsical mind, and in spite of the disconnection between them all are interesting. The head pieces at the beginning of each chapter are as tenuous as Japanese water flowers. In toto you get the aroma of something very bright, very delicate and not of this world." Laura Benet

+ N Y Evening Post p8 Je 23 '28 300w

DWIGHT, MARIANNE. See Orvis, M.

DYER, WALTER ALDEN, and FRASER, ESTHER STEVENS. Rocking-chair; an American institution. 127p il $2.50 Century

749 Chairs 28-15403

Rockers of every kind are described and illustrated in this useful little book on a distinctively American creation which is usually ignored in books on antiques.

Booklist 25:17 O '28

N Y Times p20 Je 24 '28 380w

"An intelligently written and instructive account of the origin and subsequent development of the rocking-chair, presented in a pleasing and chatty manner."

+ Springf'd Republican p7f Jl 22 '28 260w

Wis Lib Bul 24:220 Jl '28

E

EAGLETON, CLYDE. Responsibility of states in international law. 291p $6 N.Y. univ. press

341 International law and relations 28-22570

The author, assistant professor of government, Washington Square college, New York university, discusses the nature of responsibility; the responsibility of the state for acts of its own agents, for acts of individuals, for mobs and civil wars, for contractual claims; and the measure of reparation.

"Professor Eagleton gives us a survey of a subject which would require a life-time of study by a lawyer who had international claims to prepare. He is so accurate and so fair that he has given a realism to most academic problems of international government." F. B. N.

+ Boston Transcript p8 O 6 '28 380w

Times [London] Lit Sup p634 S 6 '28 50w

EAKIN, FRANK. Revaluing Scripture. 249p $2.25 Macmillan

290 Religious literature. Christianity and other religions. Bible—Criticism, interpretation, etc. 28-11412

A study in comparative religion. Dr Eakin describes the bibles of the great religions of mankind, their origin, general content and character, and their sphere of influence, and compares them with the Christian Bible.

Boston Transcript p2 Je 20 '28 120w

"This brief but enlightening survey of those holy books which form the documentary basis and record of the great religions of the world furnishes an indispensable orientation for the problem of determining the place and use of the Bible in Christianity." W. E. G.

Christian Century 45:735 Je 7 '28 130w

Churchman 138:19 S 8 '28 130w

"The author's human interest is manifest throughout; the attention is arrested and held; the Bible is made the more wonderful in that it has gripped so many thoughtful men who have used it with purposes varied and motives many. Doctor Eakin's volume might well furnish the material for 'required course' in most, if not in all of our Theological Seminaries and Bible Schools." M. G. Evans

+ Crozer Quarterly 5:364 Jl '28 460w

EARHART, AMELIA. 20 hrs. 40 min. 314p il $2.50 (10s 6d) Putnam

629.13 Aeronautics—Voyages 28-21910

Amelia Earhart, first woman to cross the Atlantic by air, adds to the logbook of her voyage (written in pencil and some of the time in darkness during the flight) a bit of personal history, the story of how she came to be connected with the flight of the Friendship, and what she hopes may have been accomplished by it. There are a great many photographic illustrations.

Booklist 25:57 N '28

"Miss Earhart is tremendously alive. She sees, hears, smells, and records her sensations, not only in the diary of the long flight, but in other parts of her book." E. J. David

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p4 S 23 '28 650w

Boston Transcript p6 S 22 '28 500w

"It is as a flier, taking part in a sane, sensible pioneering effort to advance, in even slight measure, the study of aeronautics, that Miss Amelia Earhart, I am sure, would wish to be judged by the readers of her book. She invites no judgments, however, makes no bid for personal approval. Her aim, aside from telling with the utmost coolness and humor what actually happened on a now famous transatlantic flight, is, plainly, to try to reduce the whole subject of aviation, in the reader's thought, from the spectacular to the commonplace." R: E. Byrd

+ Christian Science Monitor p12 S 19 '28 1000w

Cleveland Open Shelf p132 D '28

"A simple and straightforward narrative of a great achievement, stamped with the modesty, quiet humor, and keen intelligence of its famous author."

+ Nation 127:553 N 21 '28 30w

"Perhaps the book surprises most by its sustained, and apparently unconscious, quality of being entertaining. From beginning to end it twinkles and chuckles with a quiet sense of humor that is forever flashing out, even in moments of the greatest seriousness, danger and desperate outlook."

+ N Y Times p10 S 16 '28 900w

"As far as is known, Miss Earhart has had practically no previous writing experience, which makes it all the more amazing to find her narrative one that would do credit to an old hand. She has succeeded so well primarily because she seems to have determined to tell her story simply and without any literary pretension whatsoever."

+ Sat R of Lit 5:240 O 13 '28 200w

Reviewed by J: D. Kenderdine
Survey 61:182 N 1 '28 620w

EASTMAN, EDWARD ROE. These changing times; a story of farm progress during the first quarter of the twentieth century; foreword by L. H. Bailey. 257p $2.50 Macmillan

630.1 Agriculture—United States. Farm life
27-23159

The editor of the American agriculturist reviews the progress of agriculture in the United States during the past twenty-five years and sums up the enormous benefits that have come to the farmer thru improved methods of communication, the application of mechanical power, the development of cooperative marketing, the extension of rural schools and agricultural education and vastly improved conditions for women and children.

"The whole treatment is impressionistic and the analysis is superficial or conventional. There are no new suggestions or points of view. The book will prove interesting, however, to the general reader who wants a broad conception of comparatively recent rural developments." T: C. McCormick
Am J Soc 33:1020 My '28 100w

"He is a keen student of agricultural development in this country, and he has kept in close touch with farmers and farming throughout his career. Thus the reader of his book is led to expect an interesting study of the farm situation by a sympathetic, yet competent observer, and his anticipations will not be disappointed." P. D. V.

+ Boston Transcript p9 D 3 '27 650w
Hist Outlook 19:44 Ja '28 170w
J Home Econ 20:202 Mr '28 50w
Nation 127:23 Jl 4 '28 160w

"An adequate description of the events and tendencies that have made farming a much different and a more attractive occupation at the end of the first quarter of the new century than it was before 1900. Mr. Eastman's viewpoint is characteristically rural in his recognition of both sentimental and business values, while he writes with the optimism that sends every farmer hopeful into his fields each Spring. And he writes well." Wheeler McMillen

+ N Y Times p10 Ja 1 '28 1100w
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:446 O '28
Times [London] Lit Sup p469 Je 21 '28 100w
Wis Lib Bul 24:86 Mr '28

Reviewed by B. Y. Landis
World Tomorrow 11:135 Mr '28 200w

EASTMAN, MAX. Marx and Lenin: the science of revolutions. 267p $2 Boni

323.2 Revolutions. Marx, Karl. Lenin, Nikolai, pseud. (Vladimir Ilich Ulyanov)

"Max Eastman, though a communist, has for ten years been a press agent for a new 'science' of revolution. In Marx and Lenin he evaluates the Marxian heritage, but becomes highly critical of its utopianism, its lack of synthesis with the new advances of biology and psychology, and its inadequate philosophical bases. In Lenin may be found a pattern of the modernized concepts which will give to revolution 'purpose rather than a belief' and will make of the Marxist 'a scientific engineer of revolution.' Whether or not you can conceive of violent revolution as 'scientific' this book is decidedly valuable for perspective on the problems and attitudes of perhaps the world's greatest governmental and economic experiment."—World Tomorrow

---

Reviewed by L. P. Edwards
Am J Soc 34:403 S '28 300w
Bookm 68:xxxv O '28 100w

"The book proper is devoted to the thesis that Marx was a philosopher, Lenin a scientist, of revolution. The study is adequately documented and certainly makes out its affirmative case. The clearness of the case suffers, however, from the fact—admitted by Eastman with regard to both the characters—that each of them was both a scientist and a philosopher, in the sense above indicated. Since each was both, why fasten an exclusive label upon either? One reply is that the author's primary interest was in revolution rather than in revolutionaires and that he used the historical and biographical materials purely for illustrative purposes. So conceived, the book is a beautiful piece of work and convincing." T. V. Smith

+ — Int J Ethics 38:480 Jl '28 1000w

Reviewed by Malcolm McComb
J Philos 25:471 Ag 16 '28 1000w

"It contains a vast amount of shrewd good sense about revolutions, mixed, in my judgment, with some nonsense." H: R. Mussey

+ — Nation 127:159 Ag 15 '28 1000w

Reviewed by T. H. Marshall
Nation and Ath 40:632 F 5 '27 320w

"In order to understand how the founder of Bolshevism got to be that way the Marxian background is indispensable; and this, it seems to me, Mr. Eastman has described with admirable force and clarity. His freedom from bias is another matter." Simeon Strunsky

+ — N Y Times p4 Ap 1 '28 2000w

"One wonders after reading this superb piece of historical psychoanalysis whether, after exposing the infantilism of the Hegelian dialectic as chanted by the Marxian apostles, Max Eastman ought not to psychoanalyze his own revolution as a vestigial Freudian wish. But this is a book that no one who delights in the processes of a fine brain that can express itself beautifully should miss. Laski and Bober state in clear terms what the Bolshevists say they mean; Eastman reveals what is really on their minds." R. W. Bruère
Survey 60:183 My 1 '28 400w
World Tomorrow 11:347 Ag '28 110w

EASTMAN, MAX. Venture. 398p $2.50 Boni
27-24010

"The story of Jo Hancock, a Harvard youth with no fixed place in society, who comes to New York, there sets up as a 'portrait poet,' then goes into business as a coffee distributor and finally is caught between two currents—the romantic and the ruthlessly practical—and stranded."—N Y Evening Post

---

Booklist 24:322 My '28

"Not so much a story to read as it is an alluring, almost jubilant proposal to act. Written by a man who loves his integrity, and who accordingly broke loose from routine thinking to follow his mad ideal, the book is a challenge to our character. Before he became a novelist Max Eastman was a crusader, and he remains both. It is quite natural that he should have published this first story only after years of sparring for a more equitable world."

+ Bookm 67:xxxviii Mr '28 220w

"It is a little difficult to decide whether or not Mr. Eastman is writing with his tongue in his cheek. At times his novel takes on the extravagance of satire or even farce; again the serious preachment of one who has understood life and love and art; and occasionally, as in the use of the real names of real persons in the strike episodes, it seems to aim at history." Mary Ross

EASTMAN, MAX—Continued
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p9 Ja 1 '28 780w
Boston Transcript p3 D 17 '27 350w

"'Venture' is no sop for our morbid thin-blooded intelligentsia. It is a he-man's book that should appeal to every red-blooded American, tired unto death of the elaborately spun, soul-tripping subtleties of contemporary fiction. A book full of stirring adventure, plots and counter-plots, society ladies and silk-strikers, love and life." Alter Brody
+ Nation 125:740 D 28 '27 600w
New Repub 54:78 F 29 '28 260w

"This account of a likable person who could not 'live real life' very well because he hadn't been able to make 'a few fundamental decisions' is presented truthfully and clearly. And as a theme it has significance. And the book is pleasant." T: Boyd
+ N Y Evening Post p14 Ap 14 '28 180w

"It is hardly less than propaganda. Yet as propaganda it is vigorous and powerful, a livelier and more interesting presentation of a viewpoint than can be obtained from the rostrum in debate."
+ — N Y Times p9 D 11 '27 700w

"Tinged with his social and political beliefs, 'Venture' is at times undeniably propagandist. Probably Mr. Eastman never can write a novel that is free from his particular attitude of protest. His most notable good quality is his vigor. We get from his pages a fine sense of living to the full, for the novel in character as well as in incident is rich and meaty."
+ Sat R of Lit 4:557 Ja 28 '28 360w

EASTON, BURTON SCOTT. Gospel before the Gospels. (Paddock lectures for 1927-1928) 170p $1.75 Scribner
226 Bible. New Testament—Gospels 28-8770

"For some time now it has been known to New Testament scholars, and even to the 'general reader' who is interested in Biblical studies, that a new movement has been on foot in Germany, known as the 'Formgeschichtliche.' The movement has brilliant adherents, and thoroughly deserves to be reckoned with. Meanwhile, the information about it available in English has been all but insignificant. There was therefore need for a full and detailed presentation of the subject in English, with an evaluation of its contribution to Synoptic study. And this is what Dr. Easton has given us in his Paddock Lectures."—Churchman

---

"Dr. Easton's book is disappointing. What seemed at first sight to be an original and creative study of the New Testament in the light of the latest findings of contemporary scholarship proves to be little more than a running summary of and comment upon these findings. From this standpoint the book is valuable—we know of no better survey of the fundamental literature of New Testament higher criticism which has appeared during the past generation and before." J: H. Holmes
+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p13 Ag 5 '28 180w
Boston Transcript p8 Mr 31 '28 180w
Reviewed by S. V. McCasland
Christian Century 45:701 My 31 '28 350w

"The information about 'Formgeschichtliche' available in English has been all but insignificant. There was therefore need for a full and detailed presentation of the subject in English, with an evaluation of its contribution to Synoptic study. And this is what Dr. Easton has given us in his Paddock Lectures. With characteristic clarity, conciseness and precision he has stated the position of leading proponents of the school, and has examined carefully what 'form history' has to offer in the way of constructive historical criticism of the Gospel sources." F: C. Grant
+ Churchman p19 Ap 7 '28 950w

"It is fortunate that the only book on 'Formgeschichte' in English is also a first-rate exposition and critique." F: C. Grant
+ Churchman p19 My 7 '28 1000w

"In these six lectures, which were delivered on the Bishop Paddock Foundation in the Seminary in which he is a professor, Doctor Easton has provided a very valuable résumé of the results of recent scholarship. It can hardly fail to be of the greatest service to those who have not the opportunity of watching the development of thought at first hand."
+ Crozer Quarterly 5:243 Ap '28 600w
Reviewed by H: J. Cadbury
J Religion 8:628 O '28 750w

"The volume is small; an immense amount of scholarly research and speculation are covered in the restricted space. But it is highly interesting, if not easy, reading."
+ Springf'd Republican p10 D 11 '28 400w
Reviewed by C: S. Brown
Survey 61:98 O 15 '28 80w
Times [London] Lit Sup p942 N 29 '28 240w

EATON, JEANETTE. Story of light. (City and country ser.) 79p il $1.25 Harper
628.9 Lighting—History 28-16135

"Did you ever think what the world would be like if the only light we had came from the sun and moon?" From this imaginative beginning the author tells the story of light from man's first use of fire to the present-day marvel of electricity.

Booklist 25:74 N '28
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:507 O '28

EATON, RICHARD, ed. Best continental short stories of 1927. 254p $2.50 (12s 6d) Dodd
Short stories—Collections (25-765)

The fourth annual issue of this anthology represents almost all the countries of continental Europe except France.

"It is a readable collection, composed of tales that for the most part genuinely reflect the mood of the communities from which they spring as well as of their authors. And it is a useful book, opening a broad perspective on the literary achievements of many unvisited places. That Mr. Eaton has chosen well bespeaks his industry and good sense in such matters." Eugene Lohrke
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p11 Ag 5 '28 700w

"Each story reproduces a cross section of national life. Each, therefore, will have its individual appeal for all readers following the development of contemporary literature."
+ Boston Transcript p3 Je 2 '28 250w

"Mr. Eaton proves himself a most sagacious discriminator. His method of choice is as sound as his taste is shrewd; and both are exerted here to an admirable issue."
+ Dial 85:441 N '28 70w

"Taken as a whole, this collection leaves much to be desired. Either Europe can do better or Mr. Eaton can. For our part, we still have faith in the venerable Continent." Arthur Herman
— N Y Evening Post p5 Ag 11 '28 250w

"Many of these stories have the naïve qualities of older tales. Their technique is that of story-telling, they are about simple and child-like people, farmers and fishermen, the people whose life is lived in obscurity. Miracles happen, magic is employed, the powers of darkness come into play. There is no question of psychology, of the impulses bred by a complex civilization. It is a tale we are hearing, as it is heard in the bazaars of the East, or in taverns. And the tale always has interest if it is well told."

+ N Y Times p11 Je 17 '28 420w

"There is nothing in 'The Best Continental Short Stories of 1927,' which offers the work of all European writers except French ones, to give the reader the feeling that significant or original work is being done abroad."
— N Y Times p17 Je 17 '28 150w

EATON, RICHARD, ed. Best French short stories of 1926-27; and, The yearbook of the French short story. 285p $2.50 (12s. 6d) Dodd

Short stories—Collections (24-29533)

This collection of twenty representative short stories gathered from the French magazines by the editor and translator is the fourth volume in this annual compilation. Henry Bordeaux, Paul Morand, and Charles Sylvestre are among the authors included.

Booklist 24:321 My '28

Ind 120:189 F 25 '28 220w

"Despite a certain admixture of dross, Mr. Eaton's anthology is by no means without golden ore and will compare not unfavorably with most of the current compilations of American short stories."
+ — N Y Times p8 F 12 '28 580w

EBERLEIN, HAROLD DONALDSON, and RAMSDELL, ROGER WEARNE. Practical book of Italian, Spanish, and Portuguese furniture. 254p il $10 (42s) Lippincott

749 Furniture 27-25314

"This book deals with the furniture of Italy, Spain, and Portugal from the Renaissance to the early years of the nineteenth century. It gives in concise analytical and readily accessible form the historical and critical information necessary to a knowledge of the subject, and it is planned to serve as a handbook for convenient reference over the period covered." —Foreword

Booklist 24:197 F '28

"Perhaps the chief merit of his thorough and painstaking handbook lies in the fact that he does not stop with the end of the Renaissance as so many writers on Italian and Spanish furniture do, but takes the story on into the early nineteenth century." W. P. Eaton
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p18 D 18 '27 280w

"As a guide for the amateur this book goes into far too much detail, while neither the quality nor the quantity of the criticism contained in it entitles it to rank as a serious contribution to the, as yet small, literature on this subject. Further, it is badly proportioned."
— Times [London] Lit Sup p172 Mr 8 '28 100w

ECKSTORM, MRS FANNIE (HARDY), and SMYTH, MARY WINSLOW, comps. Minstrelsy of Maine; folk-songs and ballads of the woods and the coast. 390p $3.50 Houghton

811.08 Folk songs, American. American ballads and songs 27-24515

The anthology has two sections, the first devoted to the oldest songs of the Maine woods, dating approximately from 1825 to 1875, and the second to ballads of the sea and the coast of Maine.

Booklist 24:316 My '28

"Their book, 'Minstrelsy of Maine,' is satisfying in its completeness and its readable yet scholarly treatment. Especially interesting is the chapter on 'The Pursuit of a Ballad Myth' which may be, to those unacquainted with the tortuous and exciting methods of ballad hunting, almost a revelation." R. A. Kissack, Jr.
+ Bookm 67:102 Mr '28 150w

"Any Maine man who has heard some one sing such a broadside as 'Dixie Bull Was a Pirate Bold' will be glad to see the whole story in print. Others, more critical, will wish that this story were shorter and more highly colored with strong poetic lines. In no instance have these editors given us the music of the ballads they have collected. If they had, one would feel far more enthusiastic about this collection. For a ballad without music is like a pumpkin pie without the seasoning."
+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p20 Mr 11 '28 380w

"The reader is bound to be entertained and absorbed in being so close to the uncomplicated jubilance of these sailors and loggers as he gets in such songs as 'The Little Brown Bull, Canday-I-O, The Little Barber, The Wesley Shackers, The Banks of Newfoundland. The book merits a place in any collection which includes such volumes as Sandburg's American Songbag, or Lomax's Cowboy Songs, or Louise Pound's American Ballads and Songs."
+ Dial 85:442 N '28 160w

"It takes rare discrimination to know what to throw away; and, like most ballad enthusiasts, these editors have erred on the side of including too much. To ballad collectors the most interesting part of the book is the portion telling of their ballad quests." Wilbert Snow
+ — Nation 126:298 Mr 14 '28 520w

"The editors have performed their task with unusual skill and insight. No one who has summered along the coast from Rockland east will allow his shelves not to contain at least one copy, for he will catch here the tang of the 'smoky sou'wester' or the eerie mystery of the fog as it blankets island and shore from the east. And the life of the back country lives again in such old shanty songs as 'Driving Logs Schoodic' or 'Canaday-I-O.'"
+ Springf'd Republican p6 D 19 '27 550w

Wis Lib Bul 24:221 Jl '28

"In point both of scholarly and popular presentation of its material, this volume should be favorably received by lovers and students of folksong. As a collection of lumbermen's ballads it takes its place alongside Roland P. Gray's 'Songs and Ballads of the Maine Lumberjacks' and Franz Rickaby's 'Ballads and Songs of the Shanty-Boys,' but it is a completer work than either of these." Louise Pound
+ Yale R n s 18:203 S '28 260w

EDDY, GEORGE SHERWOOD. Religion and social justice. 210p $1.50 Doubleday, Doran

261 Sociology, Christian. Social problems 28-716

Sherwood Eddy believes that there is more immediate and imperative need to humanize and Christianize our industry than to evangelize Asia and Africa. The gospel he preaches is a Christianization of the whole life and all its relationships—industrial, social, sexual, racial and international.

Booklist 24:268 Ap '28

"This book is not important as a presentation of the question of religion and social justice. Yet Sherwood Eddy's work has value, and precious value. For it contains as simple and sincere a statement of the reaction of a sensitive soul upon the social conditions of our so-called Christian civilization as I have seen in recent days. It is a tale, humbly and beautifully told, of a brave and honest soul seeking the way of life in an essentially unchristian social order." J: H. Holmes
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p19 Ap 1 '28 500w

"He has given a living, throbbing, vital human document filled with emotion as well as argument. He searches a man's soul in a way that is uncomfortable even if one can answer some of the economic and social arguments." T: C. Richards
+ Boston Transcript p4 Mr 17 '28 900w

"This book is good, but there is not much original matter in it save that his presenting and treating of long-discussed social problems is fresh and new. The book begins and ends with a recital of the author's personal religious experiences, which will always win the respect of any honest reader." A. L. B.-C.

EDDY, G: S.—Continued

+ — Churchman p19 Je 30 '28 350w

"He sets forth this gospel of a religion trying to secure social justice with clarity, simplicity and intense earnestness, making it throughout a personal appeal, something for which each individual should feel himself personally responsible, and emphasizing this viewpoint by occasional instances of personal achievement of consequence."

+ N Y Times p12 F 12 '28 500w

EDDY, WALTER HOLLIS. Nutrition. 237p $2.50 Williams & Wilkins [11s 6d Balliere]

612.39 Nutrition. Vitamines. Food 28-15139

"The author of the book thus states his purpose, a purpose well attained in the second half and somewhat unevenly in the first: 'The main object has been not to write a guide to correct eating, as one compiles a book on etiquette, but to try to express in simple language the process and the problems in the field of nutritional science today.' "—J Home Econ

---

"What comprises a complete food, what foods we need, how much we should eat, and the story of vitamines from their discovery through their analyses, and how they function, is told to the layman in a language free from technicalities."

+ Am J Pub Health 18:1328 O '28 90w

Booklist 25:108 D '28

"The second part of the book contains an interesting, valuable presentation of vitamines. . . This half of the book is of interest both to the student with some background in nutrition and to the layman with a curiosity about present day vitamin work. Part one, which deals with general food requirement, is not quite so satisfactory, either in scientific content or in manner of presentation." Katharine Blunt

J Home Econ 20:675 S '28 200w

Pratt p18 autumn '28

EDEN, EMILY. Semi-attached couple; with an introd. by John Gore. (Rescue ser.) 287p $2 Stokes

This is the reprint of a novel written twenty years after Pride and Prejudice and obviously patterned after the more famous work. The story describes the marriage of Lady Helen Eskdale, just out of the schoolroom, and Lord Teviot, the great catch of the season. The very excess of Teviot's ardor frightens and repulses his bride. The couple is gradually estranged until a separation, followed by the husband's severe illness, demonstrates to Helen her real love for him and reconciliation follows. The story, which introduces several other romances, is a picture of the social life of the period.

"Though the author of 'The Semi-Attached Couple' was evidently a close student of the adorable Jane, her novel is no mere imitation, but a tale with much spirit and many merits of its own."

+ N Y Times p8 Ap 29 '28 630w

"Her style was of the lucid, quietly tonic kind, and reminds one sometimes of Miss Austen and sometimes of the Misses Somerville and Ross. Some of her characters, moreover, have parallels, more or less close, in Miss Austen's pages."

Springf'd Republican p7f F 19 '28 1100w

"Here is no very great moral or social problem to be discussed; and instead Miss Eden had room for endless, but again calm and undisordered, observation of the way in which people lived in her time. She was witty and rather aloof, not through cynicism but through security; and this gave an ease to her observation and to her wit which must have made her novel fascinating to her contemporaries."

Times [London] Lit Sup p955 D 15 '27 1050w

EDEN, EMILY. Semi-detached house; with an introd. by Anthony Eden. (Rescue ser.) 256p $2 Stokes [7s 6d E. Mathews]

This volume in the Rescue series is a reprint of an English novel first published in 1859. During her husband's absence on a diplomatic mission abroad, a bride of a few months takes a "semi-detached" house in the country. The bride is of the socially elect, and has grave misgivings about her neighbors in the house. The Hopkinsons are a charming family, however, and Blanche plays fairy god-mother to the girls. The story, with its romances and amusements, and its near-villains, the Baron and Baroness Sampson, provides a pleasant, mildly vivacious picture of social life in the mid-nineteenth century.

Spec 140:692 My 5 '28 150w

"The moral problem, what is to be done with the middle classes, is not very profoundly considered, nor does it to any at all considerable extent interfere with the lightness and humour of an excellent novel, full of amusing characters and very wittily written."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p360 My 10 '28 220w

EDGELL, GEORGE HAROLD. American architecture of to-day. 401p $6 (25s) Scribner

720.973 Architecture—United States 28-8477

The author is professor of fine arts and dean of the faculty of architecture, Harvard University. He calls his book "a layman's review for laymen." The four profusely illustrated chapters into which he has divided his subject take up the development of American architecture. There is an extensive bibliography, but unfortunately no index.

Booklist 24:353 Je '28

Reviewed by Axton Clark
Bookm 67:581 Jl '28 130w

"At last we have a comprehensive and authoritative survey of American architecture, written so as to interest the layman, superbly illustrated and describing the achievement of American architects in every important field of construction, from state-houses to stadia, country estates to sky-scrapers. It is a book which deserves very wide reading and hearty commendation." W. R. Agard

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p4 Ap 22 '28 500w

Dial 84:525 Je '28 100w

"As it is devoted to good rather than to bad examples, and points out in what the goodness consists, and is fully illustrated, it is admirably adapted to its purpose, which is to form good taste in architecture."

+ Eng N 101:444 S 20 '28 450w

Reviewed by Douglas Haskell
New Repub 55:126 Je 20 '28 730w

"What he has to say may be taken as authoritative, but the book is designed for the layman and is written in clear, non-technical language. The many illustrations make it of unusual value."

+ No Am 225:adv My '28 120w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:337 Je '28

Pratt p25 autumn '28

Spec 141:197 Ag 11 '28 200w

"Anyone who has had his interest in the subject aroused will find here material to fill in the outlines of his thought and aid in the formation of critical judgment."

+ Springf'd Republican p7f Mr 11 '28 2300w

Reviewed by Geddes Smith
Survey 61:44 O 1 '28 50w

Theatre Arts Mo 12:845 N '28 720w

Wis Lib Bul 24:122 Ap '28

EDWARDS, DOROTHY. Rhapsody. 224p $2.50 Knopf [7s Wishart & co.]

28-3334

"A collection of short stories, ten in number, by a writer whose style curiously resembles that of Katherine Mansfield." (Boston Transcript) Contents: Rhapsody; A country house; The conquered; Treachery in a forest; Cultivated people; Summer-time; Sweet grapes; A garland of earth; A throne in heaven; Days.

Booklist 24:364 Je '28

Reviewed by Elizabeth Wyckoff

Bookm 67:214 Ap '28 120w

"Rhapsody is hardly an accurate designation for the mood of the ten short stories in this volume. They are without exception in a minor key; there is some writing, one might say, in the antique modes; the harmonization is thin. But chiefly there is signally lacking that lyric flood of sustained, powerful melody or that richness of orchestral color which the title calls for. . . Miss Edwards has tried to do a very difficult thing, and she has not succeeded." C: S. Ascher

— Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p18 Ja 29 '28 630w

"These stories by Dorothy Edwards are not thrilling. They are too much like life. They remind one of the conscientious diaries of prosaic people. It is quite evident that the author of these stories knows a great deal about music. But there is a curious sameness to all her people, in their points of view and their ideas of entertainment. This new author is worth attention, if you happen to admire the literary fashion she so worthily represents." D. F. G.

Boston Transcript p3 F 11 '28 550w

"Her stories always build themselves up around a queer, subtle, often rather ridiculous, psychological situation; and with this queerness and absurdity she manages to fuse a strain of real poetry and sometimes of tragedy. Her stories derive from, though they do not imitate, Chekhov. She has written a remarkable book." Leonard Woolf

+ Nation and Ath 41:749 S 10 '27 450w

"Whether her curious lack of, or disregard for, any of the current styles will be permitted to survive among the sturdier forms which have already received our blessing is a matter for conjecture. At the very least her delicate book will afford variety and refreshment, if only for a day." Tess Slesinger

+ N Y Evening Post p12 F 4 '28 620w

"The ironies, the implications and the frustrations of these glimpses into widely varying households suggest those searching tales which made Katherine Mansfield famous, but the manner of the telling is quite other than hers. For this manner has a polished elegance which is so perfect that it appears entirely spontaneous and simple. 'Rhapsody' is a series of penetrating, discerning portraits of everyday life among a group of intelligent folk set down in an English which is well-nigh flawless."

+ N Y Times p14 Ja 29 '28 400w

"All of the people are alive, but in a timid, droll fashion like wrens or sandpipers. It is this precious quality, which is undoubtedly part of the author's intention, that keeps one from enjoying the book with intensity." E. C. Beckwith

N Y World p11m My 6 '28 170w

Times [London] Lit Sup p356 My 19 '27 300w

EDWARDS, RICHARD HENRY; ARTMAN, JOSEPH MANSON; and FISHER, GALEN MERRIAM. Undergraduates; a study of morale in twenty-three American colleges and universities. 366p $4 Inst. of social and religious research; Doubleday, Doran

371.8 Colleges and universities—United States. Students 28-23793

"By means of an intensive study of life in twenty-three American colleges the authors of 'Undergraduates' expose many of the factors at work on the development of student morale." —Boston Transcript

---

"While 'Undergraduates' is interesting as a survey, it is not so valuable as it might have been had the authors not attempted to crowd so many topics into one volume." G. E. M.

+ — Boston Transcript p2 O 10 '28 520w

R of Rs 78:36 N '28 50w

"A scarcely discriminated mass of gossip and half-cock opinion has been edited by a group of inquirers with a bias toward the sensational and the result is offered as a picture of undergraduate life. . . To one reader, at least, the volume represents an unfortunate waste of time and skill, and exhibits results which could have been duplicated more easily, were they needed, in the reading of current college fiction or undergraduate journalism. A thousand unsupported judgments are a thousand unsupported judgments, no more. There is no validity in numbers. I had rather have a wise interpretation of one instance, fully and objectively considered." H: N. MacCracken

— Sat R of Lit 5:210 O 13 '28 800w

Spec 141:sup785 N 24 '28 950w

"The task of compilation must have been a tremendous one. Within the limits of the method, however, it has been carried through successfully. Everything is here: fraternity politics, the football team, student government, the 'Y,' compulsory chapel, the tyro Ph.D., and the harassed president. The organization is neat and plausible, from the emergence of the freshman from his home environment through all the vicissitudes of his student life to his contact with his pastor, his professor and his president. The report is a faithful mirror of the surface of reality. The reader will see in it precisely what he would see if, as a privileged visitor, he were to pay a casual and unannounced call upon the campus; and this no doubt is valuable. But even competence has its limitations. The fact is that few of us would care to be judged on the basis of any casual visit, however open-minded, nor even by what the neighbors and their servants say in their more expansive moments." C. E. Ayres

— + Survey 61:174 N 1 '28 680w

EDWARDS, WILLIAM HAYDEN. Tragedy of Edward VII. 355p il $5 Dodd [18s Gollancz]

B or 92 Edward VII, king of Great Britain

The tragedy of Edward VII, as the author sees it, was his royal birth, the fact that he had no normal childhood, no personal freedom, and was withheld from exercising his great gifts, both personal and political, till so late in life.

"Whatever may be thought of such a thesis, the reader will find that it has been vividly and impressively worked out against the whole of that background of political, social and family life in which the King found himself involved up to the time of his death in 1910." E. N.

+ Boston Transcript p7 N 28 '28 1950w

"His book is a curious one. I think that he is quite wrong in his view of Edward's abilities and of the part which he played in British and in world politics. His book is, therefore, fundamentally unsound, and yet it is written with such ability and cohérence that it is very interesting. . . The closer you examine his account, the more obvious does it become that he has no real evidence at all for his main thesis." Leonard Woolf

— + Nation and Ath 43:823 S 29 '28 1100w

"Herr Edwards has made a gallant and sometimes interesting attempt to say something new about a number of people, but his ignorance of his subject unfortunately prevents him from making his misrepresentations even plausible."

— New Statesman 146:761 S 29 '28 750w

"It is as an irritant that this provocative 'sketch' of King Edward is to be enjoyed. No one is better aware than Mr. Edwards himself

EDWARDS, W: H.—Continued
that he has written many a smart sentence, not only with a pen dipped in acid but with a tongue in the cheek." P. W. Wilson
N Y Times p8 N 25 '28 2550w

"The author, like most foreigners, misconceives the functions of an English monarch and attributes to King Edward a much more active part in our foreign policy than he really took."
— Spec 141:455 O 6 '28 150w

"The author writes from a strongly original and personal point of view. His work is commendably free from the narrow prejudices which we find in most German writers about the King; but it is too impressionist, and he will scarcely succeed in convincing his readers that King Edward was not only a very well-informed man of the world . . . but was also a great and far-seeing statesman."
— + Times [London] Lit Sup p675 S 27 '28 730w

EHLERS, VICTOR MARCUS, and STEEL, ERNEST WILLIAM. Municipal and rural sanitation. 448p il $4 McGraw

628 Sanitation. Sanitary engineering. Public health. Hygiene, Rural 27-21003

"Up-to-date and comprehensive, including sewerage and sewage disposal; water supply, water treatment and protection; refuse collection and disposal; mosquito, fly and rodent control; milk supplies and sanitation; food sanitation; plumbing; ventilation; light; housing; school sanitation; industrial hygiene; tourist camps; swimming-pool sanitation; disinfection; vital statistics; public health organizations; etc."—Pratt

---

"The treatment of the subjects is practical and there are numerous illustrations and diagrams. The book can be used as a text and should prove useful to sanitarians, city officials, inspectors and the like." A. P. Miller
+ Am J Pub Health 18:83 Ja '28 180w
Booklist 24:271 Ap '28

"The plan, scope and method of presentation of the book are highly commendable. Unfortunately, the index is scanty."
+ — Eng N 99:969 D 15 '27 320w

"May furnish useful reference material for home economics classes, especially in its summaries of housing legislation and standards for lighting and ventilating, and in its description of public health organizations."
+ J Home Econ 20:202 Mr '28 60w
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:155 Mr '28
Pratt p18 winter '28

EHRENBERG, RICHARD. Capital and finance in the age of the renaissance; a study of the Fuggers and their connections; tr. from the German by H. M. Lucas. 390p $4.50 Harcourt [21s J. Cape]

336.4 Finance—Europe. Fugger family [28-21069]

Several volumes of "Fuggers news letters" have already familiarized English readers with the name of this famous European banking house. In 1896 "Das Zeitalter der Fugger" by Dr Ehrenberg was published in Germany. This first English edition of the work omits certain sections not of general interest. The work is a study of the economic revolution of the Renaissance and a history of the financiers who influenced it, particularly the Fuggers. Other chapters describe the great international bourses of the period, and trace the evolution of the modern stock exchange.

"The book is stronger in its matter than in its manner. It was written some thirty years ago by a scholar for scholars—in fact, by a German scholar for German scholars. It has immense erudition, but always attractively presented; it ranges from rather stiff doses of analysis of economic doctrines and social forces to rambling sections in which the contents of financial account books and balance sheets are mechanically set down." Max Lerner
— + Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p13 N 4 '28 650w

"With admirable insight and logic Dr. Ehrenberg lays bare the mainsprings of the stupendous development connoted by the phrase 'from barter to money and credit' and 'the rise of capitalist economy.' " L: Rich
+ N Y Times p29 O 28 '28 1100w

"Dr. Ehrenberg's account of the Fuggers and their times is scholarly without being tedious, and penetrating without too meticulous a consideration of alternatives and potentialities. While written chiefly for historians, it should prove to be a most valuable economic treatment of the sixteenth century for lay readers of history."
+ Sat R of Lit 5:557 D 29 '28 540w

"It must be said that Dr. Ehrenberg's cumbrous style and excessive love of minute detail will deter all but the most enthusiastic of economic students from profiting by his instructive researches."
— + Spec 141:171 Ag 4 '28 90w

"Dr. Ehrenberg fails to make a coherent narrative out of the numerous episodes which he describes. The fault is to some extent due to his over-thoroughness, and in particular to his practice of tracing out the fortunes of individual firms long after they have ceased to play an important part in affairs."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p304 Ap 26 '28 1100w

EIKER, MATHILDE. Lady of stainless raiment. 340p $2.50 Doubleday, Doran 28-23112

Here is an ironic study of a cool, selfish, unloving woman who mercilessly pursues perfection. Outwardly Claudia fits the pedestal she occupies, for she happens to be beautiful. Worshipping, Julian Haldane marries Claudia, and the process of his disillusionment is the story.

Booklist 25:120 D '28
Reviewed by Norah Meade
Bookm 68:349 N '28 170w

"A really impressive novel, disarmingly—at times almost awkwardly—disingenuous, which carries conviction by its own integrity; a novel, in other words, which deserves and will get the interest of thoughtful and intelligent people." Mary Ross
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p5 S 23 '28 850w

"In the conception of the book, the handling of character and situation, Miss Eiker reveals how remarkably she has grown and is still growing. The book is not merely a story, it is pungent social criticism." D. L. M.
+ Boston Transcript p2 S 26 '28 1400w
Cleveland Open Shelf p121 N '28

"It is written with beauty and distinction and colored throughout with the delicate irony shown in Miss Eiker's earlier books." M. E. U.
+ New Repub 56:309 O 31 '28 120w

"Miss Eiker's latest novel fulfills the promise of her previous books. Her characters are clear, consistent and alive. The one weak point in the novel is a sop thrown to those who demand a happy or at least a hopeful ending."
+ — N Y Times p8 S 23 '28 750w

"This book has a great many of the qualities which go to make a fine novel, not the least of which is readability. What it lacks is substance."
+ — Outlook 150:954 O 10 '28 380w

ELIOT, CHARLES WILLIAM. Talks to parents and young people; ed. by Edward H. Cotton. 161p $1.75 Beacon press

173 Home. Family. Youth. Conduct of life 28-21949

These papers of Dr Eliot have been recovered from various magazines and grouped under two sections: Talks to parents and Talks to young people. Contents: Part I, Bringing up a boy, Advantages of poor men's sons, The most promising student seen in fifty years of teaching, The small family, The policy of silence, The woman that will survive, The higher education for women, The normal American woman, Husbands and fathers, The part of the man in the family; Part II, Self-control, The solid satisfactions of life, Rational college sports, Look forward, A religion for youth.

"A collection of mellow yet bromidic wisdom."
Bookm 68:xxxviii O '28 30w

Boston Transcript p2 S 12 '28 40w

"In all the papers the thinking is so sound and clear, so deeply rooted in the everlasting verities and so true to human experience and the expression is so simple and direct that the little book deserves to become a classic among ethical guides. The boys and girls and young married people of today could find none more dependable."
+ N Y Times p14 S 2 '28 360w

ELIOT, GEORGE, pseud. (MRS MARY ANN [EVANS] CROSS). Family life and letters, by Arthur Paterson. 254p il $5 Houghton [21s Selwyn & B.]

B or 92

A short biographical memoir is followed by a collection of George Eliot's family letters which, with a few exceptions, are now published for the first time. Most of these letters were written to the sons of George Henry Lewes, to whom she was always "dearest Mutter." Some letters of Mr Lewes to his sons are included and a few from the boys themselves.

"Readers who after a course in the novels want more of George Eliot's characteristic tenderness and sympathy will find plenty of it in these personal letters. The irreverent, of whom the present reviewer must be counted one, may find them a bit sticky." G: F. Whicher
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p5 Ag 19 '28 1050w

Reviewed by E. F. Edgett
Boston Transcript p2 Jl 28 '28 1500w

New Statesman 31:264 Je 2 '28 670w

Sat R of Lit 5:195 O 6 '28 130w

Springf'd Republican p7f My 13 '28 900w

"There is very little appearance of George Eliot as a celebrity on a pedestal in these letters; but she is seen in her simplest and kindest aspect through the eyes of 'the creatures I have got to love.' "
Times [London] Lit Sup p287 Ap 19 '28 820w

ELLAM, J. E. Religion of Tibet; a study of Lamaism. (Wisdom of the East ser.) 127p $1.50 Dutton [3s 6d Murray]

294.32 Tibet—Religion. Lamaism [27-25404]

An exposition of Lamaism, the form of Buddhism which exists in Tibet, which gives a brief section to the origin and specifics of Buddhism, shows its connection with Lamaism, and the state of Lamaism in Tibet at the present day.

"We cannot subscribe to all his views about the origin of Mahayana doctrines, and would suggest that on such points his statements be checked by reading in works like Keith's 'Buddhist Philosophy' (1923), Eliot's three volumes on 'Hinduism and Buddhism' (1921), Stcherbatsky's 'Conception of Buddhist Nirvana' (1927). But as a small and quickly read outline the book is to be recommended."
+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p16 Mr 18 '28 140w

"Even one but mildly interested in the great religions of the world cannot fail to find this little book worth reading and digesting." J. W. M.
+ Boston Transcript p3 F 25 '28 600w

Times [London] Lit Sup p966 D 15 '27 360w

ELLIOTT, HARRISON SACKET. Process of group thinking. 229p $3 Association press

374.24 Social psychology. Debates and debating. Clubs 28-8010

"The substance of Mr. Elliott's presentation is a discussion of the technique of conducting study classes, conferences and conventions. In this field the author is perhaps the best qualified leader in contemporary religious circles."—World Tomorrow

---

"A valuable book."
+ Cleveland Open Shelf p96 S '28

"It is a 'how' book, and fortunately it is written in such simple and direct language that the how-minded—as distinguished from the why-minded—readers will find difficulty in inventing excuses for not reading it. Professor Elliott has lived in the medium of group-discussion, has, in fact, been one of the nuclei of its life in this country. He has garnered the fruits of a long and valid experience, and he has now presented these to the public in organized, usable form." E. C. Lindeman
+ New Repub 55:312 Ag 8 '28 1450w

"Out of his wide experience, Mr. Elliott describes the combination of analytic and synthetic activity and the disciplined self-restraint requisite for a real leader of group thought. There are hundreds of specific and practical suggestions. No educator or minister has any right to conduct another conference until he has read this book." Frank Lorimer
+ World Tomorrow 11:310 Jl '28 700w

ELLIOTT, MAUD (HOWE) (MRS JOHN ELLIOTT). Lord Byron's helmet. 110p il $1.50 Houghton

B or 92 Byron, George Gordon Noël, 6th baron 27-19977

"This is the story of a relic. Lord Byron's helmet was brought to America by Samuel Gridley Howe, who devoted five years of his life to the cause of Greek independence, and his daughter—a century later—returned it, so that it now graces the collection of Byron mementos in Athens. The author writes appreciatively of the work of her father and entertainingly of her journey to Greece. There is an account of the ceremonies which marked the consummation of her mission—altogether a graceful occasion."—Books (N Y Herald Tribune)

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p31 D 4 '27 90w

"It makes a most delightful little book in itself, and appeals vividly to the romantic sense in us all." I. W. L.
+ Boston Transcript p2 N 2 '27 550w

"You will enjoy the picturesqueness of Mrs. Elliott's journey to and from her destination, her welcome, the ceremony at return of the helmet to the Greek people, scores of bright comments upon the Greece of to-day, her pangs at parting with a souvenir of priceless value, her accounts of receptions and picnics. This is a sprightly panorama of a fascinating country and is brightened with remarks full of the characteristic common sense of the Howes."
+ Educ R 76:70 S '28 280w

ELLIOTT, RICHARD MAURICE. Sunny side of Asia. 249p il $3 Century

915 Asia, Western—Description and travel
India—Description and travel 28-9261

The author makes a landward journey across Asia from the Mediterranean to the China sea, traversing the Syrian desert, Persia and Baluchistan, crossing northern India and Burma to Indo-China. His book is an intelligent and interesting commentary on the journey, illustrated from excellent photographs taken by the author.

ELLIOTT, R: M.—Continued

"Painstaking in making notes, keen in observation, Mr. Elliott also draws from a rich background. For example, most writers before the Taj Mahal pelt the reader with dry dates. Mr. Elliott writes: 'The Taj Mahal was being built about the time the Pilgrims were felling logs for their cabins at Plymouth.' " A. B Maurice

\+ Bookm 67:460 Je '28 110w

"In spite of its casualness, and many evidences of hasty workmanship to which the author himself pleads guilty, 'The Sunny Side of Asia' is an unusual, occasionally preposterous, and at times a delightful, book." Marguerite Harrison

\+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p7 My 27 '28 780w

Cleveland Open Shelf p119 N '28

" 'The Sunny Side of Asia' is the immediate reaction of an intelligent observer to Oriental places and peoples. Mr. Elliott succeeds in carrying his audience along with him. He makes no pretenses; he does not attempt to robe himself in literary purpie; he is actuated by neither propaganda nor prejudice, and his observations are therefore the result of general culture rather than particular study."

\+ Ind 120:533 Je 2 '28 120w

Wis Lib Bul 24:252 O '28

ELLIOTT, WILLIAM YANDELL. Pragmatic revolt in politics; syndicalism, fascism, and the constitutional state. 540p $3.75 Macmillan

320.1 State, The. Syndicalism. Socialism. Pragmatism 28-17156

"The book presents what must appear a well taken thesis in political criticism; namely, that such modern panaceas as communism, syndicalism, fascism—all of them, in the author's view, the fruits or perversions of pragmatic philosophy—come very much short of meeting the needs of men in community, since such dogmas are concerned too extensively with the mechanics of social organization and too slightly, if at all, with those questions of 'moral personality' which are vital to the durable social economy of human beings."—Dial

"In a book that is at once both able and interesting, Professor W. Y. Elliott, of Harvard University, has provided us with a guide to the debate that is of real value. He not only perceives the issues clearly; but since he has a definite standpoint of his own from which to expound them, his statement is as constructive as it is critical. He is, too, refreshingly free from the jargon of the schools. The lay reader, to whom an academic treatise on politics may seem a formidable adventure, may take up the book in full confidence that he will find there simple and straightforward analysis." H. J. Laski

\+ Bookm 68:182 O '28 3850w

Boston Transcript p3 Jl 14 '28 530w

"Informed and wise as the point of view is, the lay reader is bound to be somewhat oppressed by the unemphatic, bemusing redundance of the argument. The materials of a trenchant discourse could doubtless be selected from these 500 overworded pages, but as they stand they must seem addressed primarily to specialists."

— + Dial 85:444 N '28 150w

"The need for some clear statement of the relation between philosophy and concrete political movements is so great that Professor Elliott has earned our gratitude simply by making the attempt to achieve it. Indeed, the temptation is to let approval of the program of this book overcome grave doubts as to the clarity and coherence of the performance." A. E. Murphy

\+ — Int J Ethics 39:239 Ja '29 2400w

Reviewed by H. W. Schneider
New Repub 57:23 N 21 '28 680w

St Louis 26:347 N '28

"Professor Elliott has written a fresh, vivid, and interesting book, which deserves to be widely read by everyone interested in political philosophy. Indeed, taken as a whole, it is an extraordinarily stimulating introduction to the contemporary scene. It has its faults. Like most collections of essays, it suffers a good deal from repetition. There is, further, a certain irritating verbosity of style, and an undue concealment from the reader of what Professor Elliott precisely means by some of the terms he uses. But one is left with the feeling that Professor Elliott is tremendously in earnest about tremendously important things. He has something real and definite to say, and he says it with vigor and emphasis." H. J. Laski

\+ — Sat R of Lit 5:83 S 1 '28 1100w

ELLIS, ROBERT SIDNEY. Psychology of individual differences. 533p $3.50 Appleton

150 Psychology 28-18406

The author's object is to explain, for those who have already had an elementary course in general psychology, how and why individuals differ. The field of discussion is primarily individual differences in native or inherited traits, tho differences in acquired traits are discussed to some extent. The point of view is essentially biological, experimental, and statistical, and but little attention has been given to pathology and psychoanalysis.

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 D 30 '28 130w

Boston Transcript p4 Ag 15 '28 700w

St Louis 26:345 N '28

"The first popular psychology based on the scientific study of individual traits by means of mental measurements. Pre-supposes some knowledge of general psychology—which deals with average or normal mental traits. Considers differences occasioned by heredity, environment, age, sex, race, and so on, and devotes a final section to applications. A valuable addition to the library."

\+ Wis Lib Bul 24:299 N '28

ELLWOOD, CHARLES ABRAM. Cultural evolution; a study of social origins and development. (Century social science ser.) 267p $2.50 Century

301 Sociology. Civilization. Culture 27-24089

The professor of sociology in the University of Missouri traces the cultural evolution of mankind thru its typical forms,—the development of tools, agriculture, war, clothing and bodily decoration, the fine arts, the family, and government. The work embodies theories developed by the author during more than twenty years of study and teaching.

Reviewed by M. G. Smith
Am Econ R 18:507 S '28 200w

Reviewed by W: F. Ogburn
\+ — Am J Soc 34:544 N '28 1250w

Booklist 24:310 My '28

J Religion 8:335 Ap '28 100w

Reviewed by M. R. Davie
Sat R of Lit 4:890 My 19 '28 550w

"A clear and orderly introduction to the subject of the development of the various phases of human culture." H. E. Barnes

\+ World Tomorrow 11:229 My '28 350w

ELLWOOD, GEORGE MONTAGUE. Art of pen drawing; a manual for students, illustrators, and commercial artists. (Practical drawing ser.) 207p il $4.50 Scribner [12s Batsford]

740 Pen drawing. Illustration of books. Illustrators 28-26148

"A practical account by an Englishman, of the technique of drawing in pen and ink, including a variety of valuable hints on how to avoid the usual pitfalls that beset the beginner. There is advice on how this form of art may best be applied to industrial work in illustration and advertising, and a survey of contemporary English pen work with examples of the great masters of all periods, with brief comments on the text. Almost no American work is included."—Booklist

Booklist 24:274 Ap '28
New Statesman 31:372 Je 23 '28 100w
Pratt p23 spring '28

"Fascinating but dispiriting reading."
Times [London] Lit Sup p329 My 3 '28 150w

ELSNER, ELEANOR. Magic of Morocco. 319p [2] il $3.50 Dodd [10s 6d H. Jenkins]

916.4 Morocco—Description and travel

Having discovered and interpreted the romance of the Basque country and of France, the author set out to find the magic of Morocco. This is the illustrated journal of her travels in French Morocco and Algeria, written in the pleasing style of her earlier books.

Boston Transcript p4 D 26 '28 650w
Spec 141:892 D 8 '28 130w

ELSNER, ELEANOR. Romance of the Basque country and the Pyrenees. 319p il $3.50 Dodd [10s 6d H. Jenkins]

914.66 Basque provinces. Pyrenees [27-25145]

This enthusiastic account of the Basque provinces, three French and four Spanish, is a tourist's record, with excursions into the past, sketches of national heroes and descriptions of the customs of the Basque people. Illustrated.

Booklist 24:397 Jl '28

Reviewed by R. O. Sawtell
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p13 S 16 '28 350w
Boston Transcript p4 Ap 18 '28 650w

"This is a pleasantly written book, which will interest those who have been in the Western Pyrenees, and may persuade some who have not been to go there."
+ New Statesman 30:122 N 5 '27 200w

"Miss Elsner has done a jolly book, full of first-hand observation and romantic tales, and agreeable to read." F. H. M.
+ N Y Evening Post p13 Ap 7 '28 100w

"The present book is more than a sketchy tourists' guide. It pictures the country in a very charming way, it shows an acquaintance with most of the pertinent published material now available, and it introduces the reader to the people, their environment and their ways of living."
+ N Y Times p5 Je 24 '28 700w
Sat R of Lit 5:94 S 1 '28 70w

"Her book has two admirable features: it paints in easy and pleasant style a life-like picture of the country and some of its great human figures; and it is a good practical guide towards what is best to see and where to see it."
+ Spec 139:sup575 O 8 '27 520w

"Neither guidebook nor history but a little of both. Mrs. Elsner quickens what might have been a lifeless tourist-book by incursions into the past and present life of the people, by giving the biographies of such national heroes as Pellot."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p844 N 17 '27 180w

ELTON, CHARLES. Animal ecology; with an introd. by Julian S. Huxley. 207p il $4 Macmillan [10s 6d Sidgwick & J.]

591.15 Zoology—Ecology [Agr28-111]

"Ecology is at the same time the oldest and the youngest department of the biological sciences. In the olden days, practically all biology was confined to natural history in which great volumes of data were accumulated. As a science, however, it becomes necessary to summarize the findings of natural history in general laws and ecology is trying to express in scientific laws the relations of different species to each other as members of a community; as the author expresses it, ecology is the sociology and economics of animals and plants. Among the problems suggested may be mentioned the distribution of animal communities in different kinds of environments, the effects of the several environmental factors upon the extent of communities, and the variations from time to time in the numbers of individuals of different species."—Sat R of Lit

"This book deals in an original fashion with the branch of biology that deals with the relations obtaining between organism and environment."
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p15 Ja 22 '28 250w
New Statesman 30:820 Ap 7 '28 2000w

"The author has done much interesting work especially in the Arctic where ecological relations are simpler than elsewhere and has made a distinct contribution to biology in this text."
+ Sat R of Lit 4:543 Ja 21 '28 250w

"Elton's work is suggestive and stimulating." W. P. Taylor
Science n s 68:455 N 9 '28 850w

"All who love Nature should make Mr. Elton's acquaintance."
+ Spec 139:952 N 26 '27 90w
Spec 140:sup369 Mr 10 '28 450w
Springf'd Republican p6 Ap 23 '28 450w

"The book is interesting and valuable, and will serve as an excellent introduction for biological students who are not disposed for the sterner disciplines of morphology and embryology."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p931 D 8 '27 160w

ELTON, GODFREY. Against the sun. 284p $2.50 Houghton [7s 6d Constable]

28-24062

Anthony's duties as a member of Parliament frequently take him from home. His wife is understanding, but feels that she and Anthony are losing the best of life in subordinating their love to his career. Her sudden death brings the truth of this home to Anthony. He spends the rest of his life, at home and in India, searching for the experience that will give her back to him.

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p16 N 11 '28 380w
Boston Transcript p4 N 24 '28 880w

Reviewed by Raymond Mortimer
Nation and Ath 43:397 Je 23 '28 60w
N Y Evening Post p9m D 22 '28 160w

"The book could be one either of adventure or ideas. The author has made it both, and has thereby lost what advantage he would have had had he concentrated on either one or the other."
— + N Y Times p31 N 18 '28 520w

"'Against the Sun' is not a complete success because Mr. Elton never makes quite plain where his hero's shoe pinches; we see the fantastic behaviour that irritates ordinary people, but cannot tell what gives rise to it. For the purposes of fantasy Mr. Elton has set his story in an atmosphere not quite of this world, but the interdependence of incidents and atmosphere is not so close as it was in his earlier book. A pity, for Mr. Elton has an interesting and imaginative mind." L. P. Hartley
— + Sat R 146:56 Jl 14 '28 280w

"Simplicity, though of a delicate and unusual kind, dwells like a hidden spring of tears in this serious and touching book. . . It has the candour and gravity of a Confession of Faith." R. A. Taylor
+ Spec 140:946 Je 23 '28 180w

ELTON, GODFREY—Continued

"Mr. Elton is alternately very sentimental and very 'smart'; on the one hand he presents us with the rather dismal and cloying love of a rising young politician for his wife, on the other he gives us the cynical banter of a misanthropical savant."

— Times [London] Lit Sup p489 Je 28 '28 110w

EMERSON, CAROLINE D. Hat-tub tale; or, On the shores of the Bay of Fundy. 185p il $2.50 Dutton

28-19759

Two strange little animals lived in a little house on the shore of the Bay of Fundy. Tuck had one paw like a spoon and one like a fork, and he lived entirely on salads. Nip had a fish hook on the end of his tail and lived entirely on the fish he caught with the fish hook. Nip was always getting into scrapes and Tuck always got him out of them. And really they had a very happy life by the Bay of Fundy.

Booklist 25:127 D '28

"Ever so many interesting things happen to these little animals; and yet when one first reads the book Nip and Tuck are not quite real and the illustrations seem fittingly nondescript. Their appeal is gradual—as one thinks about them they come to life. This is also true of the map of the Bay of Fundy, which makes the end papers for the book. Although pictorially it is very nice, like the characters whose home it describes, it is slight and unconvincing." L. K. Johnson

— + Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p6 Ag 26 '28 1150w

"Nip and Tuck have many curious adventures, delightfully described by Miss Emerson, and charmingly pictured by Miss Lenski."

+ Boston Transcript p2 S 12 '28 230w

Cleveland Open Shelf p113 N '28

Nation 127:552 N 21 '28 80w

"Once in a while Caroline Emerson's story acquires a quality worthy of mention; but such occasions are rare, and it is a great pity that the work of that gifted artist, Lois Lenski, is not given more space and emphasis in the format. Craft for craft, the illustrators for children today are a long way ahead of the writers for children. And it would appear that the main cause of that phenomenon is that the illustrators take greater pains to produce good work." Hugh Lofting

— + Sat R of Lit 5:355 N 10 '28 150w

Springf'd Republican p7e D 16 '28 130w

ENDICOTT, WENDELL. Adventures in Alaska and along the trail. 344p il $5 Stokes

917.98 Alaska—Description and travel. Hunting—Alaska 28-15595

The account of a hunting, fishing and camping trip in Alaska, which pictures also the wild life and scenic beauty of the country. Besides the Alaskan trip the author recounts his adventures at some of his fishing grounds in the Florida Keys, the New England coast, North Carolina, Canada and New Mexico. There is also a chapter on the Pendleton round-up.

Booklist 25:24 O '28

Boston Transcript p4 Je 30 '28 370w

"Mr. Endicott calls Alaska our last frontier, but insists that it is the best and greatest and most interesting of them all. He writes of its possibilities in agriculture, mining and commerce with enthusiasm, while its scenery, its glaciers, mountains, rivers, valleys, forests, its miles upon miles of luxuriantly blooming wild flowers, call forth his endless praise. The illustrations, of which there are over a hundred and fifty, are from photographs and are exceptionally good."

+ N Y Times p15 Jl 15 '28 420w

Sat R of Lit 5:129 S 15 '28 70w

ENGBERG, RUSSELL CARL. Industrial prosperity and the farmer; with the aid of the council and staff of the Institute of economics. (Inst. of economics. Investigations in agric. economics) 286p $2.50 Macmillan

330.1963 Agriculture—Economic aspects. Agriculture—United States 27-18230

"Mr. Engberg, who possesses a thorough knowledge of the technical phases of farm organization and management, has assembled the data necessary to test, both analytically and statistically, the effects of industrial changes upon agriculture."—Director's preface

Reviewed by L. H. Bean

Am Econ R 18:106 Mr '28 680w

"On the whole, the study is well done and the conclusions seem justified." Wright Hoffman

+ Ann Am Acad 137:271 My '28 180w

Nation 126:620 My 30 '28 50w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:200 Ap '28

EPHESIAN, pseud. See Roberts, C. E. B.

EPSTEIN, RALPH CECIL. Automobile industry; its economic and commercial development. 412p il $4 Shaw, A.W.

629.2 Automobile industry and trade 28-3551

"Attempts to trace the economic and commercial growth of the American automobile industry. Manufacturing methods and processes are discussed only as a background for the proper understanding of market and financial developments."—Preface

Reviewed by C. P. White

Ann Am Acad 139:219 S '28 300w

Booklist 24:351 Je '28

N Y Times p8 Mr 4 '28 320w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:388 Jl '28

ERNST, FRANK ARTHUR. Fixation of atmospheric nitrogen. (Industrial chemical monographs) 154p il $2.50 Van Nostrand [12s 6d Chapman & H.]

661.117 Nitrogen—Fixation 28-16195

"A book not so much for the trained worker as for the general reader seriously interested in the problems presented by fixation of atmospheric nitrogen. Includes brief discussion of the necessity for and sources of nitrogen, the development of the nitrogen industry, the three present commercial processes, and the place of the industry in world economy."—J Home Econ

Booklist 25:108 D '28

"It has been a great delight to review this small, sketchy, but very worthy book. Published as an Industrial Chemical Monograph, it is more of a condensed review of the general subject, but this is no fault of the author. Rather, he has done a splendid piece of work and, monograph or review, the book should find attentive readers among those who desire the brief, boiled-down story of this industry from three hours' reading." C: A. Brown

+ Ind & Eng Chem 20:985 S '28 250w

J Home Econ 20:678 S '28 50w

ERNST, MORRIS LEOPOLD, and SEAGLE, WILLIAM. To the pure . . . ; a study of obscenity and the censor. 336p $3 Viking press

176.8 Liberty of the press. Prohibited books 28-30424

Two lawyers present the case against censorship and sketch in its historical background. They are chiefly interested in literary obscenity, in revealing the absurdities and futilities of the existing censorship laws and the contradictions in practice. Appendices include a list of books banned in Boston in 1927, a list of publications whose importation into Canada is prohibited, and a bibliography.

"'To the Pure' might have been titled 'To the Sure.' It is a brave and unanswerable challenge to that real menace and supreme bore: self-satisfaction. It is an eloquent plea for that

'free trade in ideas,' through which Justice Holmes predicts that ultimate good may be reached." Bertha Wallerstein
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p1 D 23 '28 850w

"They have compiled and written a book which I believe is the sanest, calmest, and most reasoned discussion of obscenity and censorship available today." K: Schriftgiesser
+ Boston Transcript p4 N 10 '28 1550w

Reviewed by Heywood Broun
Nation 127:567 N 28 '28 1300w

"The argument of this book is one that no candid soul can read without assent and commendation. It is wise, it is well informed, and it is passionate for truth and right-dealing on the theme of sex in literature. It provides the indignation which the exercise of the censorship periodically arouses with more secure ground than the liberal intuition and more valid reasons than the opinion current concerning this or that opus assaulted by the police power. Hence it is a book that the holders and users of this power could read to no less advantage than their victims, and the public with the same advantage as both." H. M. Kallen
+ New Repub 57:47 N 28 '28 1200w

Reviewed by H: J. Forman
N Y Times p11 D 2 '28 880w

"The book does not solve the practical question of censorship, granting that 'something must be done,' but it proves very thoroughly and completely that most activities in that direction are too ridiculous to merit anything but laughter." Herschel Brickell
+ No Am 226:adv D '28 100w

"Its point of view throughout is that of the special pleader. There is insufficient recognition of the idealism that is back even of 'vice crusades' and of such organizations as the much advertised and much maligned Watch and Ward Society. There are, too, suggestions and extreme statements advanced in the fervor of argument that are open to question, and will be questioned, jubilantly, by the other side. Taken as a whole, however, it is undoubtedly the most complete, enlightened, reasonable, and informing study of its prickly subject that has yet been made." Ferris Greenslet
+ — Sat R of Lit 5:333 N 10 '28 1450w

"That part of the material which deals with the history of censorship in England and America is often interesting. The argumentative presentation is flashy and trifling."
— + Springf'd Republican p10 O 27 '28 1200w

"The authors deplore existing laws without losing their tempers at those who carry them out. They leave the reader to decide for himself how ridiculous certain rulings are, citing such instances as the banning in one city of a book which is required reading in a university across the river, and the so-called moral turpitude during one period of a volume which is pronounced innocent within a few months. To the Pure serves as an authoritative document to writers, publishers, and sellers of books as well as a source book of information to laymen who ask 'what's all the shooting for?' when they read of the censoring of a current book or play." Lee Ginter
+ World Tomorrow 12:521 D '28 120w

ERSKINE, JOHN. Delight of great books. 314p $2.50 Bobbs [8s 6d Nash & G.]

804 Books and reading. English literature—Addresses, essays, lectures 28-8639

Many of these essays on the great books of the past and how to approach them in order to get the greatest delight from them have had serial publication in the Delineator. Contents: On reading great books; Canterbury tales; Malory's Le morte d'Arthur; The Faerie queene; Romeo and Juliet; The tempest; Paradise lost; Walter Scott; Don Juan; Moby Dick; The ordeal of Richard Feverel; Huckleberry Finn; Candida; Modern Irish poetry.

Booklist 24:356 Je '28

Reviewed by G: F. Whicher
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p21 My 13 '28 1000w

Boston Transcript p2 Ap 14 '28 550w

"If you want to read a book that will not fail to give you a thorough acquaintance with books, you can find little that is more stimulating than John Erskine's account of 'The Delight of Great Books.' " E. F. Edgett
+ Boston Transcript p5 Ap 28 '28 180w

Christian Century 45:766 Je 14 '28 100w

Cleveland Open Shelf p75 Je '28

"Mr. Erskine is an admirable and enjoyable guide among the masterpieces. His unravelling of the fable of The Faerie Queene is an exceedingly neat piece of work; his retelling of Paradise Lost, which he calls surprisingly the earliest expression of the modern spirit, is equally good. His students in New York are to be felicitated upon their possession of Professor Erskine. But should he tell them that Candida is the best comedy of our era?" S. K. R.
New Statesman 32:130 N 3 '28 250w

Reviewed by Harriet Sampson
N Y Evening Post p8 Je 2 '28 800w

"In each of these discussions, which are brilliantly and sympathetically written, Mr. Erskine aims to illumine the viewpoint and purpose of the writer and to show how true to the eternal truths of human nature his work remains."
+ N Y Times p23 My 27 '28 500w

Reviewed by Harry Hansen
N Y World p10m Mr 25 '28 420w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:340 Je '28

R of Rs 77:15 My '28 80w

Reviewed by Arthur Colton
Sat R of Lit 4:942 Je 9 '28 1800w

ERSKINE, JOHN. Penelope's man; the homing instinct; end papers by D. Putnam Brinley. 275p $2.50 Bobbs

28-28481

A slyly jocose re-rendering of the history of the Odyssey in which Mr Erskine's version differs radically from Homer. This latter-day Odysseus was in no great hurry to get home and spent his time dallying with the lotus-eaters and other ladies en route as long as they would have him. He was a man of pleasant, but scarcely heroic proportions, and he touched up his tale considerably in rehearsing it to Penelope.

Reviewed by G: F. Whicher
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p5 N 25 '28 650w

Boston Transcript p5 D 8 '28 380w

Reviewed by E. F. Edgett
Boston Transcript p5 D 22 '28 300w

" 'Penelope's Man' has wit, charm and intelligence. Naturally. But the book lacks force. It scratches, it tickles, it pinches—but it never once strikes or stabs. It reads easily, too easily. It pleases but it vanishes from the memory as quickly as it flits across it. It is the warm reflection of the flame which was once 'Helen of Troy.' " R. E.
— + N Y Evening Post p9m N 17 '28 680w

"Mr. Erskine has paid the penalty of reworking the same formula in a world that bawls for a succession of novelties. But he still manifestly enjoys himself, and if one can usually predict what he is going to say in any given situation, it is still a pleasure to observe how he says it." J: Chamberlain
N Y Times p7 N 25 '28 700w

Springf'd Republican p7e D 23 '28 320w

ERVINE, ST JOHN GREER. Four one-act plays. 95p $1.50 Macmillan [3s 6d Allen & U.]

822 [28-12116]

Contents: The magnanimous lover; Progress; Ole George comes to tea; She was no lady.

Booklist 25:20 O '28

ERVINE, ST J: G.—Continued

"St. John Ervine's one-act plays are well known to all Little Theater groups. They have the folk quality, the sincerity and the truth of the Manchester or Abbey theater schools, and, if adequately acted, their effect is certain." W. P. Eaton

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p11 Ag 19 '28 60w

+ Boston Transcript p6 S 15 '28 300w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:580 N '28

"Even such an accomplished writer as St. John Ervine may disappoint—and these four plays are frankly disappointing. In spite of the fact that the dialogue is easy and colloquial, and individual characterizations are neatly drawn and actable. It takes that, and something more, to make a convincing one-act play."

— + Theatre Arts Mo 12:689 S '28 160w

"There have not been written in our generation plays in which austere truth and sympathetic imagining are more strongly interwoven than in those written by Mr. Ervine at his best. The pieces now collected exhibit the variations in his manner."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p311 Ap 26 '28 680w

Wis Lib Bul 24:251 O '28

ERVINE, ST JOHN GREER. How to write a play. 126p $1.75 Macmillan [5s Allen & U.]

808.2 Drama—Technique 28-28543

"I do not propose in this book to tell the reader how to become a successful dramatist; for, if I knew that secret, I should become one myself. All that I propose to do is to state some elementary facts about dramatic craftmanship, and I will illustrate my statements by examples drawn from the works of established authors." —The author

"For the most part it is written with commonsense; its faults seem to be due to Mr. Ervine's uncertainty about the audience he is addressing."

+ — New Statesman 32:22 O 13 '28 150w

"He does not, of course, pretend that he can make a dramatist, but for his simple claim that some unnecessarily bad work may be improved by taking thought and noting precedent there is ample justification in this book of elementary instruction."

+ Sat R 146:442 O 6 '28 120w

"Mr. Ervine's strenuous, hard-headed, and very illuminating little volume . . . packed from beginning to end with expositions of dramatic technique and with trenchant criticism of plays and playwrights of the past and present, offer a shrewd and characteristically provocative analysis of the dramatic conventions."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p731 O 11 '28 730w

ERVINE, ST JOHN GREER. The mountain, and other stories. 237p $2 Macmillan [7s 6d Allen & U.]

28-20726

The title story of this collection of short tales is about poor helpless Mr Sefton whose lifelong ambition it had been to see a mountain. He finally brought his dreams to the Jungfrau and there died, its victim.

Booklist 25:120 D '28

"There is a certain lack of vigor and vitality in these tales. Perhaps they form a too harmonious whole; perhaps the even tenor of the author's mood devitalizes them. Whatever it may be, on closing the volume one carries away the memory of a series of faces in a photograph album rather than the impression of having met and understood a number of personalities." V. P. Ross

— + Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p2 S 9 '28 500w

"And so it goes—humor sometimes, pathos sometimes, even terror at moments, but always clear vision, honest sympathy, straight-forward narration and a style freed from all fripperies or gymnastics and therefore choice. A delightful book indeed!" S. L. C.

+ Boston Transcript p6 S 15 '28 280w

"Excellent as superior journalism is excellent, they hardly recall the novelist of 'Changing Winds' and cause one almost to forget the dramatist of 'John Ferguson.'"

— + Nation 127:275 S 19 '28 50w

"The stories are of varying merit, but it is difficult to believe that Mr. Ervine was really impelled to write any one of them. Craftsmanship is there, but inspiration is lacking."

New Statesman 31:268 Je 2 '28 210w

"On the whole. there is too much sameness in his characters to allow any one of them to make an outstanding impression. The book should not be read through at a sitting. Spread through a week of evenings, it should do its author credit."

+ — N Y Times p8 S 23 '28 900w

"His stories are excellent in form, move rapidly, and rarely fail to achieve the effect they intend—and Mr. Ervine is master of many effects. The sad thing is that among so many good pieces there should be none that captures the heart or the imagination absolutely." L. P. Hartley

+ — Sat R 145:569 My 5 '28 100w

"An interest in the odd characters and misfits of life, and a deep sympathy with the under-dog, are his prevailing sources of inspiration. His tales are often little more than sketches or studies. But his clerks and conjurers and old ladies have real vitality, and their fortunes and misfortunes move us poignantly to laughter or tears. The title-story is particularly fine both in conception and treatment."

+ Spec 140:691 My 5 '28 100w

"The gruesome little dialogue 'Eight O'Clock' and certain other studies in this book were previously published in 'Eight o'Clock and other Studies,' now out of print. We should presume that most of the Irish group were not very new, but they are extremely effective. Compared with them the story of the demon conjurer is distinctly inferior."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p332 My 3 '28 340w

ESDAILE, ARUNDELL JAMES KENNEDY. Sources of English literature; a guide for students. (Sandars lectures, 1926) 131p $2.40 Macmillan [6s Cambridge univ. press]

016 Bibliography—Bibliography 28-20978

"Mr. Esdaile, of the British Museum, in delivering these Sandars Lectures at Cambridge in 1926, designed them principally 'to help the inexperienced student to find his way through the vast accumulations of bibliographical sources which confront him,' a function fulfilled by the annotated lists of bibliographies general and particular, catalogues of great libraries, booksellers' and collectors' guides, existing private libraries, etc."—New Statesman

"The ground is well covered, and only specialists may perhaps complain of omissions. Considering its nature, however, it seems a pity that the bulk of the matter was not liberated from the original lecture form and presented frankly in tabulated lists, for, a few introductory pages apart, this is a book to be referred to rather than read. Fortunately it has an adequate index."

+ — New Statesman 31:334 My 26 '28 150w

"To have made available in one place so much specialized information that ordinarily is to be found only within the brains of the best reference librarians, and to have done it with clearness and distinction, is an achievement of which Mr. Esdaile may be distinctly proud—his book is consistently useful and interesting." G. M. Troxall

+ Sat R of Lit 5:76 Ag 25 '28 380w

Times [London] Lit Sup p362 My 10 '28 200w

ESTEVEN, JOHN, pseud. See Shellabarger, S:

ETHERTON, PERCY THOMAS, and TILTMAN, H. HESSELL. The Pacific; a forecast. 261p il $3 Little [12s 6d Benn]

950 Pacific ocean. Eastern question (Far East). United States—Foreign relations. World politics 28-14917

Colonel Etherton, author of "The crisis in China" (Book Review Digest, 1927), goes into the problems of the immediate future which face Japan and China, the solution of which will materially affect the United States and Great Britain—problems such as industrial exploitation and territorial expansion, which have in them the elements of war.

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p13 Jl 1 '28 330w

Boston Transcript p7 S 8 '28 1000w

Nation 127:275 S 19 '28 60w

New Statesman 31:198 My 19 '28 560w

N Y Evening Post p5 S 22 '28 80w

Reviewed by N: Roosevelt

N Y Times p8 N 18 '28 250w

"While the book has a faint but unmistakable apprehension running through the pages, it is accountable by the logic of its résumé. While occasionally expressing the naïveté of the British soldier, the authors have endeavored to go into the problem dispassionately, and have arrived at their conclusions in a manner difficult to reproach." L. T. Griswold

+ Outlook 149:475 Jl 18 '28 210w

St Louis 26:360 N '28

"Colonel Etherton is no alarmist; indeed he ends on a note of optimism with which not everybody will agree. The value of the book lies in the clarity with which the problems of the Far East are set forth and Britain's interests defined. This is a book which every student of international politics should have in his library."

+ Sat R 145:569 My 5 '28 150w

"It is, of course, an axiom that history is shaped not by facts, but by what people think are facts, modified by their prejudices and other emotions, and many of the theories here advanced are held by considerable numbers, especially among the 'Old China Hands' of the clubs of the treaty ports in China. Hence, this presentation performs a service, providing it is regarded as an opinion and not as a scholarly historical narrative to be accepted without critical examination."

Sat R of Lit 5:411 N 24 '28 450w

"This story of what the future holds in store for the countries bordering the Pacific ocean is typical of the 'half-baked' writings of western military and journalistic authors who have taken a look at certain eastern parts and then feel competent to speak with authority on the whole! Colored by a philosophy which believes that force still determines the course of international relations, and that the peoples of the temperate zone are predestined to rule the world, the book sets forth in hasty and superficial fashion the widely recognized problems and rivalries in the Orient today."

— Springf'd Republican p6 Ag 20 '28 230w

Times [London] Lit Sup p295 Ap 19 '28 170w

EVANS, ABBIE HUSTON. Outcrop; with a foreword by Edna St Vincent Millay. 86p $2 Harper

811 28-11347

Nature poems of which Edna St Vincent Millay writes: "These are the poems of one more deeply and more constantly aware than most people are, of the many voices and faces of lively nature. More than once, in reading them, you will find yourself stock-still before some object with which you have rubbed elbows all your life but which you have never truly seen till that moment."

"Miss Evans merely 'outcrops' the modern tendency—with here and there a betraying feminine throw-back. Her poems reflect the physical 'bone-stone' viewpoint of the modern nature poet. She fails to do more than reflect; she does not interpret. She observes minute things accurately, sturdily, and often with a competently original slant. . . As Edna Millay generously writes in the foreword, Miss Evans has an intense awareness—but it takes something a little more subtle than sheer awareness to make a good poet." Ruth Lechlitner

— + Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p14 S 16 '28 450w

"One can scarcely feel that 'Outcrop' contains many nuggets, but there is gold dust of beauty which shines from the page while reading although it is readily blown away into forgetting. The book is fully in harmony with the attitude of many modern poets. They do draw attention to the beauty all around us, the poems are so gracefully done as to defy adverse criticism, but even a second or third reading leaves no deep or lasting impression." F. M.

Boston Transcript p2 Je 9 '28 480w

"The feeling in the poems is always authentic, but the poet's sincerity is rarely matched by an equally original technique. No single poem has the breathless intensity of perfection, none is absolutely successful in capturing what she so obviously desires to convey. She will achieve it when her method has something of that bleak and bony quality, that essential toughness of fiber and difficulty of approach that she has learned to love in her chosen landscape." Babette Deutsch

— + New Repub 56:81 S 5 '28 360w

"A book of true feeling and fine, simple speech. The lyricism of these poems is valid and is born in a naturalness revealing the essential poet mind." G: O'Neil

+ Outlook 149:33 My 2 '28 260w

"Not alone can she sound the force of weathered rocks, the changing pasture kindnesses, or the lively silence in lone woods, she can hold true something steadfast, something permanent, as fixed as is the outcrop in the land. Her expression is completely native, without trace of exotic symbolism." H. H. Flanders

+ Sat R of Lit 5:276 O 20 '28 350w

Wis Lib Bul 24:251 O '28

EVANS, DANIEL LUTHER. New realism and old reality; a critical introd. to the philosophy of the realists. 214p $2.50 Princeton univ. press [11s 6d Milford]

149.2 Realism. Philosophy, Modern 28-4894

"Mr. Evans studies his theme from three viewpoints, the new realism in its relation to science, to philosophy and to religion, and in each case he explains what and why is its protest against or divergence from the older philosophies, and how it evaluates the contributions of each to knowledge, synthesizes them and applies them to life. While he seems to be sympathetic to a large extent with its aims, methods and conclusions, he criticizes its limitations frankly and acknowledges his own idealistic bias. Its shortcomings are of slight consequence, he thinks, in comparison with 'the very significant services' it has rendered to philosophy. At the end he discusses these services at some length and suggests the possibility of eventual reconciliation between the two great theories of philosophy now at war, realism and idealism."—N Y Times

---

Boston Transcript p4 Ja 14 '28 300w

"The author has, to an admirable extent, gathered, correlated, and critically discussed a large amount of difficult and complicated material, and he has done so with such a degree of objectivity and fairness as to make the work an extremely valuable and commendable one." G: Dykhuizen

+ Int J Ethics 38:488 Jl '28 230w

"The author's method and technique are somewhat unsatisfactory. This technique is the technique of the sectarian polemic, but not of philosophical criticism. The book is really a

EVANS, D. L.—Continued
criticism of new realism from the standpoint of an idealist, or rather, of the special kind of idealist indicated by the author's name for his own position, 'realistic idealism.' The author's frankly confessed bias is evident throughout the book." Marten ten Hoor
— J Philos 25:575 O 11 '28 3400w

"The book is admirably unbiased in its examination and presentation and in its critical attitude is always judicial. The author modestly describes it as merely an 'introduction' to the study of literature dealing with the realistic system of philosophy, but it is sufficiently comprehensive for the needs of any but the advanced student and the specialist. The beginner and the general reader, however, will need to remember that philosophy has evolved an extensive technical nomenclature and that unless they have had some philosophical training will need to keep close at hand an up-to-date dictionary."
+ N Y Times p25 F 19 '28 360w
Times [London] Lit Sup p368 My 17 '28 1100w

EVANS, IDA M. Jeweled herd. 301p $2 Sears
[2] 27-20815

"Mr. Ira Packard and Alma, his wife, live in New York in a barren flat, with an elevated railroad outside the window. Alma writes nice cheery letters to the home town, which they left four years before, telling of Ira's prosperity; but she is overwhelmed to hear that a girl friend who made a wealthy marriage is coming on a visit to spy out their poverty. In a great hurry she forces Ira to don a Greenwich Village pose of self-imposed poverty-for-the-benefit-of-starving-mankind. . . Ira finds himself the fad among a very select group of bejeweled neurotics. . . And Ira and Alma find themselves estranged from each other."—N Y Times

"The Packards are much more lively and amusing than most of the young couples in light fiction, for all their rather mercenary outlook upon the planet. Their creator puts them through their hectic act with a skillful hand."
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 Ja 15 '28 110w

"Miss Ida M. Evans is a very clever novelist, which is saying something, although the suspicion that the characters occasionally walk on stilts to show themselves better might enter a reader's mind."
N Y Times p13 Ja 1 '28 450w

EVARTS, HAL GEORGE. Fur brigade; a story of the trappers of the early West. 279p $2 Little 28-19246

The fur trade during the years 1815 to 1835 in the Northwest forms the background of this novel. Hunter Breckenridge, the hero, is the strong silent type of man; the woman he loves is called by the Indians a word signifying Hair-that-shines. Thru ghastly experiences with Indians in the wilderness these two gravitated toward each other and at last came together for the rest of their lives.

Booklist 25:120 D '28
Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 S 9 '28 100w

"The skill with which Mr. Evarts has woven his romance into the early history of the West, before even the days of pioneering, the thoroughness of his knowledge, not only of our own early history, but of Indian lore and customs, excites our admiration even though at times the very regularity of the conquering hero's victories is a little monotonous. For a book of the adventure type it is written in a singularly unemotional style."
+ — Boston Transcript p5 Ag 25 '28 140w

" 'Fur Brigade' is a veritable thriller, with a freshly successful adventure for every chapter. Hunter Breckenridge is indeed a glamourous hero—of an unbelievable strength and purity—though some of us may be ungrateful enough to prefer a stroke or two of adversity."
+ N Y Times p16 Ag 12 '28 270w

"Without intricacy of plot or interest of character drawing, this tale of the trappers of the early West is good reading, if only for its picture of a little known period of frontier history. The adventures of Hunter Breckenridge are not only exciting in themselves, they are based on incidents that happened, and all the characters introduced had their prototypes in the life of the times." W. R. Brooks
+ — Outlook 150:795 S 12 '28 100w
Wis Lib Bul 24:307 N '28

EVEREST, ARTHUR ERNEST. Higher coal-tar hydrocarbons. 334p il $7 (18s) Longmans
[2] 547.2 Hydrocarbons. Coal-tar [27-24223]

"Dr. Everest brings into handy compass the known facts concerning a comparatively neglected field comprising the acenaphthenes, flourenes, phenanthrenes, and some hydrocarbons of unknown constitution. Numerous bibliographical references and formula diagrams."—N Y New Tech Bks

"A valuable compilation of the most important available information on the higher hydrocarbons of the cyclic series. The author has done a very difficult task well." M. L. Crossley
+ Ind & Eng Chem 20:328 Mr '28 380w

"Within a handy compass, the book contains a considerable store of both scientific and industrial information, and is accordingly a useful addition to the technical literature of coal-tar products." G. T. M.
+ Nature 121:1013 Je 30 '28 800w
N Y New Tech Bks 13:4 Ja '28

EVERSON, FLORENCE MCCLURG, and POWER, EFFIE LOUISE. Early days in Ohio; a story of a pioneer family of the Western Reserve. 265p $2 Dutton
28-25554

"The story offered here of the pioneer days of Cleveland and vicinity is a fine example of the art of imparting historical information in narrative form." (Foreword, by Superintendent of Cleveland Schools) The story tells of a pioneer family, father, mother and three children who built their log cabin, made maple sugar in the snow, went hunting in the woods, and traded with the Indians in the settlement that grew to be the city of Cleveland.

Boston Transcript p7 D 15 '28 260w
Cleveland Open Shelf p112 N '28

" 'Early Days in Ohio,' in spite of the alluring subject and of the attempt to make the writing friendly and pleasantly juvenile, is merely dull. And children are twice as impatient of dulness as their elders."
— Nation 127:554 N 21 '28 80w

EVOE, pseud. See Knox, E. G: V.

F

FABIAN, WARNER, pseud. Unforbidden fruit.
[2] 319p $2 Liveright
28-14831

"The author of 'Flaming Youth' has set out to reveal the effects, upon a group of sensitive, restless girls, of the restricted life in a woman's college."—N Y Evening Post

"Despite a number of serious defects, the book does to some extent achieve its purpose of revealing the effects of a woman's college upon its unnaturally restricted inmates. The faults are those of rubber-stamp characterization, high-pressure romance, and wildly impossible melodrama. But his thesis, obscured though it is, touches upon an important truth."

+ — Bookm 67:xxii Ag '28 220w

Boston Transcript p4 Ag 11 '28 200w

"The book has many obvious literary faults. These cheapen the book and lower it in spots to a mere dull tale of impossible collegiate adventures—a tale which belies the admirable aim of the author. Nevertheless, in the emotional undercurrent and the abnormal psychological complications, however obscured, there is an important strain of truth and revelation." Tess Slesinger
+ — N Y Evening Post p6 Je 9 '28 650w

"Mr. Fabian makes the truly remarkable discovery that the female of the species when young, is interested in sex, and not beyond experimenting in it occasionally. Otherwise, the book is trash and will probably sell half a million copies." Herschel Brickell
— No Am 226:adv Ag '28 100w

"One must emphatically register a doubt as to whether the author can substantiate his claim that the set he chronicles represents nearly one-fifth of the campus community. In any case, the fact that he injects an inferior quality of paprika into his story of this one-fifth and refers not at all to the other four-fifths makes the dish he sets before us both unrecognizable and unpalatable. . . As literature the tale is negligible. The characters have the substance, the diversity, and the vivacity of firecrackers; the plot is little more than a series of flashily popping incidents."
— Sat R of Lit 5:110 S 8 '28 300w

FABRE-LUCE, ALFRED, Locarno, the reality; tr. from the French by Constance Vesey. 209p $3 (9s) Knopf

341.2 Locarno treaties, 1925. Europe—Politics. League of nations 28-11980

A discussion of European politics and, in particular, of French policy. The author, tho a believer in the League of nations, considers it insufficient at present to meet European problems and sees hope in Locarno "because this time it is less a case of a treaty than of a plan to preserve peace from day to day, by different means, but in an unvarying spirit."

Booklist 25:10 O '28

"For a dispassionate and realistic exposition of European politics the student of foreign affairs would do well to read Locarno." F. R. Dulles
+ Bookm 67:699 Ag '28 110w

Boston Transcript p4 My 26 '28 210w

Reviewed by H. E. Barnes
Nation 127:296 S 26 '28 720w

"M. Fabre-Luce does not write as a 'pan-European' pacifist. He is, in this book, interested simply and solely in the safety and prosperity of France. His essay is closely thought and compactly written. To read it is a wholesome exercise in political realism." Hiram Motherwell
+ New Repub 56:53 Ag 29 '28 680w

New Statesman 31:494 Jl 21 '28 120w

Reviewed by D. R. Maue
Outlook 149:715 Ag 29 '28 180w

FAGAN, MRS ELISABETH. Things were different. 311p $2.50 Dial press 28-23465

A quiet story which moves childhood in mid-Victorian England to young womanhood and thwarted romance in India, and back again to gentle old age in England after the war. Simply and with little effort the author creates her changing backgrounds, against which the character who tells the story and her friend and despoiler, beautiful, artful Mollie, are clear contrasts.

Boston Transcript p6 D 8 '28 150w

"If 'Things Were Different' had been cast in diary form, the volume would have been more successful. As it is, no one will have much trouble reading it, especially the more charming first chapters."
— + N Y Times p7 O 21 '28 520w

"It is a delicate business letting a good girl tell the story of a bad one—that way, so often, smugness lies—but in 'Things Were Different' the danger is avoided to the extent of keeping the reader's sympathy with the girl of the first person, even if his interest may flicker over to her less worthy rival."
+ Sat R of Lit 5:543 D 22 '28 280w

FAGAN, JAMES BERNARD. And so to bed; a comedy in three acts. 145p $2 Holt

822 Pepys, Samuel—Drama [27-4657]

A play about Samuel Pepys which begins where the great diarist ended, in June, 1669, and gives the supposed amorous events of one afternoon and evening in his life.

Booklist 24:275 Ap '28

"A merry little play. If only there were a Sullivan to create old English music, what an operetta it would make." W. P. Eaton
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 Ja 1 '28 180w

"A particularly delightful period comedy."
+ Cleveland Open Shelf p5 Ja '28

"The writing is not distinguished, and does not pretend to be; it is, in fact, quite unequal. But the sum of 'And So to Bed' has its own agreeable finality. The whole quality of it belongs to the English tradition more than to ours. It is reminiscent, touched with a fragile music from the past and with an old inheritance of grace and worldliness." Stark Young
+ — New Repub 53:17 N 23 '27 600w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:45 Ja '28

"However faithful or false Fagan has been to the Pepys of history and of literary tradition need not bother the casual playgoer. In dialogue and situation that are flavored boldly but never preciously with the outspoken punctilio of Restoration England, he has given full-bodied and plausible life not only to Pepys himself but also to his jealous and volatile wife; to the flashy fascinations of Charles II, to the singer and mistress of the King, Mrs. Knight; and to the minor courtiers of the British Navy's godfather." O. M. Sayler
+ Sat R of Lit 4:339 N 26 '27 1200w

Wis Lib Bul 24:54 F '28

FAGUET, EMILE. Politicians and moralists of the nineteenth century. 317p $4.50 Little [15s Benn]

844 Authors, French [28-13692]

Studies by a distinguished French critic, of six thinkers, political and literary, whose influence is still potent in French thought today. Contents: Author's preface; Stendhal; Tocqueville; Proudhon; Sainte-Beuve; Taine; Renan.

Boston Transcript p2 My 23 '28 900w

Reviewed by Ernest Boyd
Ind 120:483 My 19 '28 1200w

"No volume could better reveal the extraordinary range of Faguet's interests or the breadth of his sympathies." Van Wyck Brooks
+ Ind 120:508 My 26 '28 1350w

"He meets the test of the great critic: when he has done, he has made it almost superfluous to read the works of his subjects. The writing constantly sparkles with epigram."
+ Nation 127:527 N 14 '28 220w

"The level of eminence in this third volume is higher than in that of the other two, and the writers and thinkers included are, I think, more characteristic of the French mind in the nineteenth century than those in the other volumes." Leonard Woolf
+ Nation and Ath 42:687 F 4 '28 950w

"M. Emile Faguet was one of the most important and most influential critics of the latter nineteenth century. He is still influential —wherever he is read. He is not a writer for the student whose judgments are still unformed. His criticism is too incisive, too clear and convincing, difficult to refute. But the mature thinker, with judgments and prejudices ready formed, or with knowledge and experience sufficient to form them, will find in M. Faguet a stimulating opponent or an invaluable ally. Very easy to read in French, he does not carry well into English; the French conversational style is not as ours."

FAGUET, EMILE—Continued
+ New Statesman 30:540 F 4 '28 250w

Reviewed by L. V. Updegraff
N Y Times p2 Jl 29 '28 480w

"Faguet's criticism is learned, penetrating, persuasive, and acute, and these studies, which have become classical in France, were rated highly in this country a generation ago by so discriminating a judge as Lord Acton. Their appearance in translation is welcome."
+ Sat R 145:71 Ja 21 '28 820w

"All these essays have their virtues; and they form a good introduction to French political thought during the nineteenth century."
+ Spec 140:240 F 18 '28 230w

Times [London] Lit Sup p34 Ja 19 '28 680w

FAIRCHILD, FRED ROGERS, and COMP-[2] TON, RALPH THEODORE, eds. Economic problems; a book of selected readings. 601p $2.75 (12s) Macmillan

330 Economics. United States—Economic conditions 28-11978

"A collection of extracts from the current controversial literature of economic problems, intended to provide the undergraduate, who has worked through a course of Elementary Economics, with material for criticism, on which he can exercise his new knowledge. The extracts bear upon American problems and are well chosen for their purpose."—Times [London] Lit Sup

---

"A stimulating and provocative book of readings, from widely scattered sources." J. I.
+ Am Econ R 18:719 D '28 120w

Boston Transcript p4 S 5 '28 330w

Times [London] Lit Sup p688 S 27 '28 80w

FAIRCHILD, HENRY PRATT, ed. Immigrant backgrounds. (Wiley social science ser.) 269p $2.75; school ed $2 Wiley [13s 6d Chapman & H.]

325 Immigration. Nationalism and nationality. Americanization 27-15395

"Immigrant Backgrounds aims to present the social, economic, political, geographical, cultural, racial, and other influences in the various countries and social groups which send a large number of immigrants to the United States. There are, besides the introductory chapter, fifteen chapters, each one devoted to a separate group and each written by an authority who is oftentimes a representative of the race described."—Am Pol Sci R

Reviewed by R. E. Park
Am J Soc 34:380 S '28 280w

"Although there is naturally some unevenness in a book of this nature, the different parts are written in a most readable style and with a real insight into the conditions under which the various immigrants have previously lived. Political scientists will find much valuable information in this book."
+ Am Pol Sci R 21:925 N '27 150w

Booklist 24:100 D '27

Reviewed by J. T. Adams
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p18 D 9 '28 250w

Boston Transcript p5 Ja 14 '28 700w

Cleveland Open Shelf p61 My '28

N Y Times p20 Ap 29 '28 550w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 32:630 D '27

Pratt p9 spring '28

St Louis 25:372 D '27

"The book is patchy and uneven and often over-elementary, but it is also full of interesting statements, many of them likely to do good by illustrating the folly of attempting an over-rapid Americanization. The slightest sketches are those dealing with the British, the Russians, and the Latin-Americans, but the whole volume is essentially a first introduction to a number of important questions."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p47 Ja 19 '28 250w

FAIRCHILD, HOXIE NEALE. The noble savage; a study in romantic naturalism. 535p $7.50 Columbia univ. press [25s Oxford]

820.9 English literature—History and criticism. Savages. Indians. Romanticism 28-10319

Professor Fairchild pursues the idea of the noble savage thru English romantic literature of the seventeenth, eighteenth and early nineteenth centuries. For the purposes of this study he excludes American literature, but extends the meaning of the term noble savage to include not only redskins but also Negroes and South Sea islanders.

"Mr. Fairchild traces the idea of the noble, innocent, pure, and uncontaminated savage through a great deal more literature than any public will ever want to revive, yet emerges with conclusions—not only about the creature of his research but about romanticism in general—which are of genuine interest."
+ Nation 127:sup380 O 10 '28 130w

St Louis 26:385 D '28

Reviewed by C. B. Tinker
Sat R of Lit 5:65 Ag 25 '28 2500w

"Professor Fairchild has written the fullest and most useful account yet attempted of the Noble Savage in all his varieties—red, black, brown, and white. Although he disclaims the expectation of being read by any save teachers and scholars, he has perhaps hoped to be disappointed, for his book, though quite competent in point of scholarship, is written in a style almost strenuously popular." F: A. Pottle
+ Sat R of Lit 5:67 Ag 25 '28 800w

Times [London] Lit Sup p629 S 6 '28 1500w

FAIRFIELD, OTHO PEARRE. Italian renaissance in art; a study in appreciation. 487p il $5 (21s) Macmillan

709.45 Art, Italian. Art, Renaissance 28-13070

The object of the book is to stimulate an appreciation of art in the readers. Beginning at "the awakening" the author discusses painting, sculpture and architecture in Italy thru the Quattrocento. The achievements of such men as Leonardo da Vinci, Fra Bartolomeo, Andrea del Sarto, Raphael, Michelangelo, and Titian are studied for their cultural value; "the treatment of the mechanics of art is reduced to the minimum."

"He offers a survey which, for lucidity of presentation and charm of style, is deserving of high praise; even where criticism comes in, as it does here and there all through the book, the result is informing to a high degree." E. N.
+ Boston Transcript p4 Je 30 '28 500w

"A study in the appreciation of art which describes objects clearly and contains such admirable reproductions as O. P. Fairfield's 'Italian Renaissance in Art,' has the most important points in its favor. On the historical side, both in general history and as regards the growth of movements in art, the book is less satisfactory and not infallibly accurate."
+ — Springf'd Republican p7f Jl 29 '28 200w

"This is an essay in the style of Ruskin without either his command of language or his technical knowledge."
— Times [London] Lit Sup p807 N 1 '28 150w

FAIRLEY, BARKER. Charles M. Doughty; a critical study. 256p $2.25 Oxford [9s J. Cape]
B or 92 Doughty, Charles Montagu [27-22203]

The book deals with the prose and poetry of Charles M. Doughty, the author of "Arabia Deserta." "Professor Barker Fairley comes forward with a brief critical survey. Ninety pages cover the Arabia, a hundred and sixty the cycle of poems. This division expresses the effect, if not the purpose, of Professor Fairley's monograph—an attempt to readjust the scale of comparative merit usually allowed to Doughty's prose and verse, and enlarge on the close relationship." (New Statesman)

Booklist 24:361 Je '28
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p8 Ap 29 '28 300w

"This tense, compact, vigorous little book is saturated with the crucial sap of the tough and difficult Doughty cult. . . That his book is more convincing where he deals with Arabia Deserta than with his author's verse is natural enough. But although the reader's feeling for poetry is bound to be startled and perhaps staggered by much of Mr. Fairley's enthusiasm, the general result is a suggestive and stimulating contribution to the growing body of Doughty interpretation."
+ — Dial 85:177 Ag '28 140w

"Mr. Barker Fairley in 'Charles M. Doughty: A Critical Study' discusses with appreciative sympathy Doughty's prose and poetry so little known to all but students of literature and Arabia." W: Whitman, 3rd
+ Ind 120:92 Ja 28 '28 300w

"Mr. Fairley supports his enthusiasm with subtle perceptions and a convincing assurance. He has written an able and a worthy introduction to Doughty's work, and it is to be hoped that it will have some effect in promoting Doughty's influence." Herbert Read
+ Nation and Ath 41:448 Jl 2 '27 1100w

"Here is a diverting exercise, though unlikely, I think, to yield to the generality of readers precisely those same results which Professor Fairley ingeniously derives from it."
New Statesman 29:280 Je 11 '27 1750w

"His explanations of Doughty's peculiar style leave me quite ignorant of what he means and rather doubtful whether he knows himself. But his exposition of the form of 'The Dawn in Britain' and the other poems does provide a useful bird's-eye view of the whole territory and his excellently chosen quotations may lead a number of readers to further exploration." E: Shanks
+ — Sat R 143:748 My 14 '27 450w

"This critique is the first large survey of Doughty's personality and work, and the difficult task could not have been more inspiringly done. It is orderly and helpful, and at the same time full of sensitive intuition." R: Church
+ Spec 138:sup854 My 14 '27 1000w

"Mr. Fairley has a deep admiration both for Doughty's prose and for his poetry. We also have an admiration, perhaps scarcely less than Mr. Fairley's, for 'Arabia Deserta' and 'Adam Cast Forth'; yet we are embarrassed by the completeness of Mr. Fairley's enthusiasm. It is not that his enthusiasm is unbridled in its expression. Mr. Fairley writes carefully and well, and there is much subtlety in his critical attitude; but to certain of his judgments we find ourselves quite unresponsive."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p332 My 12 '27 1100w

FAIRLIE, GERARD. Scissors cut paper. 302p $2 Little [7s 6d Hodder & S.]
A28-2006

Bill, escorting Derek's wife home in a taxi, hears a shot from the house, and, rushing up stairs, finds Derek murdered. When he returns to the street Anna and the taxi are missing, the taxi-driver murdered. Vic Caryll, an amateur sleuth, joins Bill in following a criminal trail which leads to Europe and the lair of a powerful international organization of forgers.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p9 Ag 12 '28 80w
N Y Times p18 Jl 29 '28 180w

"An excellent tale of adventure and amateur detectives, worked out neatly and, barring an initial improbability, plausibly."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p650 S 22 '27 180w

FARBRIDGE, MAURICE HARRY. Judaism and the modern mind. 300p $2.25 Macmillan
296 Jews—Religion 27-16107

"It is the sort of book which interprets both to the Jewish and the non-Jewish mind the meaning of that ancient faith in the midst of the shifting currents of the present time. The mid-section of the book attempts to set forth a modern view of the Bible, such as most scholars of the time would approve. It is in the last three chapters, those devoted to Jewish tradition, its nature, significance, and authority, that the heart of the problem is reached, and the views of the writer have their chief value."
—Christian Century

"When one takes up this book one imagines it can be dismissed in a few words, but, having read it, the reviewer has cause to complain of the limits prescribed for his criticism." F. J. F. Jackson
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p15 O 16 '27 620w

Reviewed by H. L. Willett
+ Christian Century 45:19 Ja 5 '28 350w
Cleveland Open Shelf p33 Mr '28

"His book is an earnest and thoughtful apologia for Judaism and at the same time a perfectly clear evidence of the folly of trying or desiring to check the waves of change by blowing upon them. . . It is hard to conceive how a thoughtful and intelligent Jew whose mind is really disturbed by present-day problems will find much help in the book. He can hardly fail to see that the chapters discussing miracles and higher criticism are completely inadequate and lead nowhere." M. S. E.
+ — Crozer Quarterly 5:242 Ap '28 500w

"Ernest and eloquent plea to modern Jews that they examine afresh and in the light of both historic evidence and present-day knowledge the foundations and the elements of their belief." F. F. Kelly
+ N Y Times p21 D 18 '27 120w

Reviewed by Alan Porter
Spec 141:57 Jl 14 '28 230w
Times [London] Lit Sup p571 Ag 2 '28 70w

FARINGTON, JOSEPH. Farington diary; v 7; ed. by James Greig. 321p il $7.50 Doubleday, Doran [21s Hutchinson]
B or 92 (23-7187)

"This is the last volume but one of Farington's already long, but always readable diary. It will be seen that Farington, now aged 65, shows no decline of his activities; he dines and drinks tea with his cronies as much as hitherto, and during this period—June 10, 1811, to December 18, 1814—he is the recorder and now and then the witness of events which have left their permanent mark on the world."—Times [London] Lit Sup

---

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p28 N 25 '28 250w
Sat R 144:673 N 12 '27 220w

FARINGTON, JOSEPH—Continued

"Farington is almost the ideal diarist. He lived a long time and moved in some of the most interesting circles of his day. He lived through great events; he was interested in almost everything; he went almost everywhere; he heard an amazing amount of gossip; and he noted nearly everything that came under his eyes. And, finally, what is best of all, he had no axe to grind; he had no enemies on whom he took this opportunity to vent his spite." W. C. Abbott

+ Sat R of Lit 5:396 N 24 '28 1150w

Spec 139:939 N 26 '27 450w

Times [London] Lit Sup p857 N 24 '27 1100w

FARIS, JOHN THOMSON. Romance of forgotten men. 313p il $6 Harper

920 United States—Biography 28-22304

These sketches of forgotten careers that helped in the making of the country's history include stories of "Baron" Stiegel, iron and glass manufacturer; the three Bradfords, Philadelphia publishers; Francis Vigo who financed the Clark expeditions; and Joshua Humphreys, called the father of the American navy.

"The style is easy and the book makes both pleasant and profitable reading. It has many well chosen illustrations."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p20 N 18 '28 220w

Boston Transcript p5 D 1 '28 420w

"These simply, interestingly told biographies of relatively obscure worthies of America's more picturesque past are particularly well illustrated." F. H. M.

+ N Y Evening Post p11 O 13 '28 90w

"A book, admirable in its avoidance of gratuitous conjecture, in which the author never obtrudes but gracefully pieces together his narrative and sources so that the characters speak humbly and quaintly for themselves." W. F.

+ Outlook 150:1374 D 19 '28 380w

"A volume containing a bibliography and an index is expected to be a work available for scholarly reference. It is a little disappointing to find in the former only a list of printed works which the author has used, omitting the numerous manuscript sources, 'old records, diaries, and letters,' mentioned in the author's foreword, which have given much of the flavor and value to the sketches. The index is also far from complete. The narratives themselves give plentiful evidence of being authentic and accurate, frequently identifying sources omitted from the bibliography." H. M. Ellis

+ — Portland Evening News p13 O 24 '28 600w

FARJEON, ELEANOR. Come Christmas. 62p il $1.75 Stokes [3s 6d Collins]

821 Christmas poetry 28-6996

Before-and-after Christmas verses for children, and a group of carols, with decorations by Rachel Field.

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p6 D 23 '28 80w

"All about the various emotions of the holiday season. Miss Farjeon is a poet first and foremost. She could not make a poor rhyme if she tried to, and there are always music and gayety and sincerity and beauty in whatever she touches." Rachel Field

+ N Y Evening Post p10m N 10 '28 80w

St Louis 26:391 D '28

"Rachel Field has delightfully decorated in line and color, particularly in color, Eleanor Farjeon's verse, which is often poetry, on specific aspects of the general theme of Christmas. True appreciation of Miss Farjeon's work will come from children a bit older than those who enjoy—for instance—'Jane, Be Good!'" W. R. Benét

+ Sat R of Lit 5:415 N 24 '28 80w

FARJEON, JOSEPH JEFFERSON. House of disappearance. 295p $2 Dial press

27-24262

Mr Elderly was the first to disappear from Greystones. One moment he was alone in his study with doors and windows locked from the inside, and the next he had vanished utterly. The police arrive before the household has missed him. Following a second disappearance and a double murder, Angela, the missing man's niece, and Peter, her young man, do some effective investigating and make several pleasing discoveries.

Booklist 24:249 Mr '28

"The best Farjeon to date." Will Cuppy

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 D 25 '27 100w

"Lovers of detective tales are not only advised but urged to read [this story]."

Boston Transcript p4 D 24 '27 460w

Cleveland Open Shelf p68 My '28

"Mr. Farjeon's new crook story is agreeably novel in idea and sufficiently exciting in narration to hold even a blasé reader's interest."

+ — New Statesman 31:58 Ap 21 '28 110w

"The trouble with Mr. Farjeon's novel is that there is too much mystery. There are but two people in the book of whom the reader may be reasonably sure that they are just what they pretend to be."

N Y Times p20 F 5 '28 180w

FARJEON, JOSEPH JEFFERSON. Shadows by the sea. 305p $2 Dial press [7s 6d Harrap]

28-6394

A wreck about a mile out at sea, a summer hotel looking out thereon, the proprietor mysteriously gone and his daughter valiantly holding on while weird happenings take place at the hotel. Then a nice young man evidently interested in both wreck and hotel keeper's daughter. And all ends as it should.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 Mr 25 '28 70w

Boston Transcript p5 Ap 14 '28 450w

"Here is a good, old-fashioned detective thriller, a really exciting one. I expected at any moment to be spirited away or to discover my murdered body under the bed." L. G.

+ N Y Evening Post p12 Mr 31 '28 90w

"The reader is kept guessing until the very end, and most of his guesses will be wrong."

+ N Y Times p13 Ap 15 '28 160w

Springf'd Republican p7f Ap 1 '28 80w

FARJEON, JOSEPH JEFFERSON. Underground. 307p $2 Dial press

28-25023

While having tea in a London restaurant Brown, a clerk, overhears two villains threatening danger to a young girl who has just left. Acting on impulse Brown hastens out after the trio. The chase takes him to Byford Moor in Northumberland. Two other chivalric youths have joined him en route, and the three make assault on the forbidding house on the moor which shelters besides the beautiful girl, a mystery, a subterranean cavern that produces weird sounds, and a murder.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 N 18 '28 100w

N Y Times p30 N 11 '28 220w

FARNHAM, MRS MATEEL (HOWE). Marshfire. 351p $2 Dodd

28-25955

Michael Fielding rushes nineteen-year-old Eleanor into marriage before she is really in love with him. When he realizes this, a few years later, he seeks in another woman the romance he missed with Eleanor. Thru all these years Michael's secretary has played her cards cleverly, waiting for Michael to turn to her in his disillusionment. Eventually Eleanor wakes to the situation and makes an effort to win back her husband's love.

"Despite the fact that enough discrimination has not been shown in eliminating detail for the sake of a keener focus on essentials, 'Marsh Fire' is realistically true to life, unlagging, and provocative, in spots, of a choke in the throat. Mrs. Farnham's style is not distinguished, but it is sincere." Edna Yost

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p7 D 2 '28 500w

"Her story is simple and direct, though at times unnecessarily hampered by the intrusion of the author's own interpretations. It is, however, a step in advance of Mrs. Farnham's prize novel, 'Rebellion.'" D. L. M.

+ — Boston Transcript p7 N 14 '28 1400w

"Mrs. Farnham has maintained the status quo with a well written, interesting story marked neither by exceptional subject matter nor an inspired style. But there is a straightforward manner of telling her tale, and an absorbing drama unfolding under the telling that adequately take the place of cleverness."

+ — N Y Times p6 N 18 '28 600w

"Mrs. Farnham deals with real problems, but she lets them beset less real people and she solves them in time for a half-happy ending."

+ — Sat R of Lit 5:491 D 8 '28 340w

FARNOL, JEFFERY. Famous prize fights; or, Epics of "The fancy." 260p il $3 Little

796.83 Boxing 28-15496

Here are described some of the most famous prize fights of history, from the gladiators of Rome to Carpentier v. Dempsey. The sketches recall the methods and personalities of the fighters, many of them forgotten champions of the past.

Boston Transcript p2 Jl 7 '28 530w

Reviewed by E. F. Edgett

Boston Transcript p5 Jl 28 '28 400w

"Mr. Farnol was hardly the man to tackle such a sordid subject as this. He visions the broad highway of pugilism as a pleasant path along which saunters a procession of impeccable heroes, from Entellus to Dempsey. Nor is his sentimentality lessened by his twittering, chirpy style."

— Nation 127:579 N 28 '28 50w

N Y Times p14 Ag 12 '28 460w

"Often we wish that he would pause a while from his give and take, thrust and parry, to tell us of the humanity that lies behind the set jaws and invincible eyes. A reference to Jem Ward as a painter, a mention of Dempsey discussing books, is almost all Mr. Farnol offers us. He has but written detailed reports of nineteen prize fights of the past and each of these epics of the Ring is undeniably akin to those that succeed and those that have gone before." A. C. C.

— + Spec 140:738 My 12 '28 520w

Springf'd Republican p7f Jl 22 '28 1700w

Times [London] Lit Sup p288 Ap 19 '28 70w

Wis Lib Bul 24:250 O '28

FARNOL, JEFFERY. Guyfford of Weare. 358p $2.50 Little [7s 6d S. Low]

28-20929

A typical Farnol romance of eighteenth century England. The Lady Helen D'Arcy is caught house-breaking at night by Sir Richard Guyfford from whom she has come to steal certain reckless letters written by a friend of hers. The romance thus unceremoniously begun is checked by Sir Richard's reputation, which is none of the best. It seems, however, that the misdeeds of a scapegrace cousin are unfairly attributed to Sir Richard, and when this is finally made plain, the many cross-purposes of the plot become one.

Booklist 25:121 D '28

"A romance with a swiftly running plot, quick dialogue and rollicking adventure."

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p43 S 30 '28 180w

Boston Transcript p2 O 31 '28 500w

"It is an amusing yarn, this latest tale by Jeffery Farnol, a romance quite unstained by any touch of realism, frankly belonging to the 'once-upon-a-time' type of fiction."

N Y Times p18 O 21 '28 600w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:546 N '28

"Mr. Farnol's new novel has characteristic spaciousness and verve. Mr. Farnol's gusto carries us gaily along, and this in spite of his too deliberately archaic style. No doubt there are readers who feel that they are getting more romance for their money when every page is freely sprinkled with 'Zounds' and "Sdeath' and 'Egad.' But, for ourselves, we are not among their number."

— + Spec 141:464 O 6 '28 90w

Springf'd Republican p7e N 11 '28 130w

"As a story, pure and simple, 'Guyfford of Weare' is successful, but it is difficult to understand why, in an effort to achieve an eighteenth-century style, Mr. Farnol should so often leave out pronouns and the definite and indefinite articles."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p668 S 20 '28 140w

Wis Lib Bul 24:306 N '28

FARRELL, JAMES. Girl everybody knew. 183p il $2 Harper

28-6520

The "story in jazz" of Ruby Burk, one-time magician's assistant, and Murray Jones, callboy, and their social and amorous encounters in London, Paris, Rome.

Boston Transcript p1 Ap 21 '28 120w

"A not very successful attempt to convey a completely sophisticated and cosmopolitan attitude. It is mildly amusing." T. S. Matthews

New Repub 55:259 Jl 25 '28 50w

"This bit of social history by James Farrell is another venture in the cockneyed humor introduced so amazingly and successfully by Donald Ogden Stewart. It is blurbed as 'a story told in jazz.' This is just a quaint way of saying that the story-telling is attempted in about every way but up-side down. Mr. Farrell would be much funnier if he didn't continually try to derive all his humor from a wise crack and made use of his situations."

N Y Times p33 Mr 18 '28 500w

"A captious commentary on the life of Americans in two hemispheres."

Springf'd Republican p7f Ap 22 '28 200w

"The tale suffers from confused presentation, but there are a number of comic incidents, especially in the last third of the book, which stand on their own merits."

— + Times [London] Lit Sup p761 O 18 '28 80w

FAULKNER, HAROLD UNDERWOOD. Economic history of the United States. (World today bookshelf) 301p $1.50; pa 80c Macmillan

330.973 United States—Economic conditions

28-3178

"This book purports to be merely an introduction to a wide field of study, and an effort to catch the salient features of the tremendous swing of our economic development and to state them simply and in their true perspective. The volume is designed primarily for adult readers who may not have the time and opportunity to pursue the subject in great detail, but it is hoped that it may be useful to younger students." (Preface) The author is associate professor of history in Smith college.

Reviewed by A. C. Ford

Am Econ R 18:286 Je '28 130w

FAULKNER, H. U.—Continued

"The salient features alone are selected for treatment and annoying statistics and factual details are minimized; the story therefore moves with a sweep and a vigor which is often lacking in a more authoritative and documented work. The author is not often tempted into incautious statements, but the sweeping generalizations sometimes call for modification or correction." E. L. Bogart

+ — Am Hist R 33:923 Jl '28 230w

Booklist 24:310 My '28

"The author brings out in a lucid way and with cogent reasoning a much neglected truth and factor. Commerce, trade, industry, taxes, transportation have made and unmade maps and nations, and it is well to know the part they had in making America. That task Professor Faulkner has done well."

+ Boston Transcript p3 Mr 3 '28 400w

Int J Ethics 38:494 Jl '28 60w

"To home economists this volume is interesting in that the historical facts, most of them familiar, are selected and restated to show the development of economic rather than political life and institutions."

+ J Home Econ 20:282 Ap '28 60w

"It is an excellent work for the general reader, set forth in clear language and flowing style, rather than in the didactic method of textbooks. It informs, without producing weariness or boredom." H. E. Barnes

+ New Repub 55:286 Ag 1 '28 520w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:327 Je '28

"A readable treatment of a subject that has heretofore received rather scant attention in the popular histories."

+ R of Rs 77:28 Mr '28 80w

Wis Lib Bul 24:124 Ap '28

FAUNCE, WILLIAM HERBERT PERRY. Facing life. 210p $2 Macmillan

170 Students. Conduct of life 28-21663

The president of Brown university talks to his students on their problems within and beyond the campus.

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p16 N 4 '28 70w

"It is an earnest book, tolerant and lucid, but one wonders just how much it will appeal to the self-sufficient collegian of today."

+ Boston Transcript p2 O 17 '28 200w

"A man who has lived long, thought deeply and come much into contact with life's problems has here distilled the very essence of what he has learned and presented it in brief, condensed form whose significant sentences, notwithstanding their weight of meaning, go straight to their mark."

+ N Y Times p18 S 23 '28 330w

St Louis 26:373 D '28

FAY, CHARLES RYLE. Great Britain from Adam Smith to the present day. 458p $3.75 (12s 6d) Longmans

330.942 Great Britain—Economic conditions. Great Britain—Social conditions. Great Britain—Industries [28-14399]

An economic and social survey of Great Britain during the last 150 years. Contents: The wealth of nations; Trade and transport; Agriculture and industry; Life and labour; Selected reading; Index.

Nation and Ath 43:432 Je 30 '28 680w

Spec 141:135 Jl 28 '28 170w

"The scale of treatment is rather that of a text-book, while the method suggests lectures: very good lectures, a nice combination of fact and comment, but suggestive rather than exhaustive, and a little loose in texture."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p495 Jl 5 '28 500w

FAY, SIDNEY BRADSHAW. Origins of the world war. 2v v 1, Before Sarajevo: underlying causes of the war; v 2, After Sarajevo: immediate causes of the war. 551;577p il $9 Macmillan

940.311 European war, 1914-1918—Causes. Europe—Politics 28-27688

"The appearance of Professor Fay's long-awaited work on the origins of the Great War means that the controversial stage in the question of war origins has been pretty well passed and that the problem has at last been examined as a whole by a professional historian of international standing whose impartiality is beyond cavil. Few books have ever been awaited with so much interest and impatience by the profession, for the author took high rank as a writer on the subject some eight years ago when he first exploded the myth of Germany's sole responsibility in the American Historical Review, and it has been generally felt that his detailed exposition of the problem and his reasoned opinions would go a long way toward clearing up the controversial points and supplying an authoritative statement. The feeling was fully justified, for here is no attempt to prove the responsibility of this or that individual, of this or that nation."—Nation

---

"It may be said that, with respect to the historical topic before us, whoever else is read, Mr. Fay must be read. And it would contribute powerfully to the understanding and peace of the world if all editors, politicians, preachers and teachers were required to read him before opening their mouths on the present state of Europe's tangled affairs. . . Beyond question the solid body of his argument will stand the test of wind and storm—a monument to his patience and erudition, an honor to American historical scholarship." C: A. Beard

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p1 N 11 '28 3300w

Boston Transcript p3 N 17 '28 1000w

"Professor Fay has spent years in careful investigation, there is almost nothing in the way of source material in any language that he has not seen and weighed, and his account is written with the same cool detachment with which he might have written of the origins of the Seven Years' War. The book marks a veritable epoch in the discussion of the greatest controversy and the most important problem of our time. It is a monument to American scholarship which will stand as the first purely scientific treatment of the question based upon adequate source material." W: L. Langer

+ Nation 127:sup622 D 5 '28 1100w

"Henceforth no one may presume to speak authoritatively concerning the causes of the Great War unless he has read and digested this memorable work by Professor Fay. It is a scholarly book notable for extensive research in source (as distinct from controversial) materials, for lack of preconceptions, for tireless searching out of elusive but essential details, for meticulous documentation, for a fine sense of judicial impartiality which leaves no room for charges of special pleading. It is an inherently interesting book; the three chapters dealing with the plot upon the life of the Archduke Francis Ferdinand possess high dramatic quality, and, together with the rest of the work, are written in a clear and straightforward, if not eloquent, style." E: M. Earle

+ New Repub 57:73 D 5 '28 2400w

"One of the most notable of recent American historical books." W: MacDonald

+ N Y Times p1 N 18 '28 3200w

"Intellectually, at least, Professor Fay has accomplished one of the aspirations of the physicist. He has produced light without heat. . . His conclusions are mild enough when compared with the fiery periods of the more ardent revisionists. Yet their very lack of passion, their quiet air of thoughtfulness, and the mass of skilfully arranged evidence gives them an entirely convincing quality. 'The Origins of the World War' is one of the two or three most important books of the year." J: Bakeless

+ Outlook 150:1412 D 26 '28 1150w

"The volumes will live among the best fruits of American scholarship." H. C. Engelbrecht
+ World Tomorrow 12:40 Ja '29 750w

FEDERN, KARL. Richelieu; tr. by Bernard Miall. 253p il $4 Stokes [12s 6d Allen & U.]

B or 92 Richelieu, Armand Jean du Plessis, cardinal, duc de 28-24401

"The purpose of this history of Cardinal Richelieu is to show the living personality of the man—to show it evolving, reacting to and acted on by other personalities—and to portray the conditions in France as he found them and transformed them. Little use has been made of Richelieu's so-called Memoires, which may, indeed, have been written on his initiative, and may in part have been dictated by him, but which are, none the less, a compilation from heterogeneous sources, and revised in an arbitrary fashion by other persons; and hitherto only a very small proportion of the work has been critically sifted and examined." —Preface

Boston Transcript p9 O 6 '28 250w

"Both a spirited narrative and an interesting characterization." Allan Nevins
+ N Y World p9m S 23 '28 300w

"Mr. Federn has his faults. The picture of the great Cardinal, however, is beautifully clear-cut, beautifully true. We hear nothing new of him, it is true; but how could we? There is no new evidence. The value of such essays as this is simply that they make us think. They appeal especially to that large class of readers who will face an essay but will not face a history book. And as such they do good work."
+ Sat R 146:690 N 24 '28 700w

"Herr Federn's power of depicting character is great but he gives an impression of exercising painful control over his delightful talent in a schoolmasterly effort to instruct."
+ — Spec 140:980 Je 30 '28 500w

"It is a pity that the author has not allowed himself rather more scope, for where he finds space for argument or moralizing he is often suggestive; nevertheless, for German and English readers requiring a clear, short and accurate account of the life of one of the most remarkable of French statesmen it is useful."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p463 Je 21 '28 730w

FEILER, ARTHUR. America seen through German eyes; tr. by Margaret Leland Goldsmith. 284p pa $1 New republic

917.3 United States—Social conditions. United States—Economic conditions 28-13314

"Dr. Arthur Feiler, the Socialist editor of the most powerful continental liberal daily, The Frankfürter Zeitung, spent in this country five brief months in 1925. . . His book, America Seen Through German Eyes, created somewhat of a sensation in intellectual Europe. . . Dr. Feiler's thesis is that we are developing in America a new and original culture. He recognizes that American capitalism is not merely an economic technique but temporarily, at least, a victorious culture, affecting the national outlook of all strata of labor, the middle class, the church, the farmer, the Negro, the reform movement, education, and politics. America is a new Leviathan, for good or evil, but authentically new. And Dr. Feiler is, thus far, one of its ablest anatomists."—Bookm

Booklist 24:397 Jl '28

"Though journalistic in atmosphere and speed, this book is typical of German scholarship at its best; its discrimination is implicit in its thoroughness, shot through with factual objectivity, persuasive in the flow and arrangement of material which we recognize as true."
+ Bookm 68:xxxvi O '28 200w

"This able and valuable little book presents an interpretation of American life as seen by a distinguished German journalist. There is nothing in the book itself to prove that his nationality has in any way colored Dr. Feiler's observations. Besides being a writer with a delightful and straightforward style, Dr. Feiler is the most accurate and understanding of reporters, and his analysis of America is both penetrating and illuminating. . . It is impossible to think of another book that tells the story of the American industry so concisely. We agree with Mr. Eduard C. Lindeman, who in his preface to this volume declares that no other post-war European interpretation of American life has 'reached an equal level of authenticity, insight, and discrimination.'" O. G. Villard
+ Nation 127:493 N 7 '28 320w

"In a compact volume of nearly 300 pages Dr. Feiler tells the story of America's present civilization both so comprehendingly and comprehensively that even the most captious reader would find it difficult to suggest any topic that has been slighted, or to dissent from any of the author's many assertions." Ernest Gruening
+ Portland Evening News p10 O 2 '28 1200w

FELD, ROSE CAROLINE. Heritage. 300p $2.50 Knopf 28-21736

The iron will of Sarah Wetherby and her fierce loyalty to the soil holds three generations of Wetherbys in heavy bondage to their New Hampshire farm. Rachel, the son's French wife, brings a bit of brightness and grace to the farm, but is disheartened by Sarah's fine scorn. Her spirit dimmed but not quenched, Rachel hopes passionately for some freedom and ease for her son Lucian. Yet he too is made prisoner to the land. Old Sarah is the slave driver to the end, pushing her men to the sodden limit of strength, rousing their women to sullen, impotent hostility.

Booklist 25:121 D '28

"Miss Feld, whose first novel this is, writes in a style that is direct and clear so that the appalling dreariness of the tale is crystallized by her fine sense of realism. Her characters are alive, as true as soil and stubble. Her heroine is conceived in granite." L. G. Marshall
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p15 O 7 '28 600w

"In drawing character, Miss Feld has shown herself very able. Her people really develop. With skill and insight she has probed the psychological problem of the effect on different characters of the same circumstances." F. K.
+ Boston Transcript p2 O 3 '28 500w

Cleveland Open Shelf p136 D '28

"A very promising first novel, full of fascinating new knowledge, which can be enthusiastically recommended. It describes an appalling farm and a terrible old woman, who dominates four generations morally weaker than herself. This book really tells one something new about America, and is at the same time very well written. Unlike so many good first novels, it does not read as if it were an autobiography. It is, if anything, too 'literary.'" Francis Birrell
+ Nation and Ath 44:19 O 6 '28 130w

"A novel of a single clean thrust, by virtue of the dominance of its theme, the assured presentation of its characters in their relation to each other and the environment, the simplicity and economy of its narrative done with a hand that never wavers or falters."
+ New Repub 56:160 S 26 '28 120w

"The book has much power and vividness, albeit the picture it reveals is gloomy and desolate." L. B.
+ N Y Evening Post p5 S 22 '28 100w

"In bleak and flinty language Rose C. Feld has unfolded a story of three generations on an inhospitable New Hampshire farm. The effect of the book, a first novel, is sardonic, powerful. One knows Miss Feld is telling truth." J: R. Chamberlain
+ N Y Times p9 S 23 '28 600w

FELD, R. C.—Continued
Reviewed by Ruth Suckow
N Y World p9e O 28 '28 450w

Reviewed by Herschel Brickell
No Am 226:adv N '28 30w

"The novel is deeply tragic, inevitably depressing. But there is no impression of exaggeration or false emphasis. Miss Feld tells her story with artistic integrity; her characters plod with purposeless, soulless steps to their hard deaths, and as they go we pity profoundly. This is a first novel of grim power."
+ Sat R of Lit 5:408 N 24 '28 170w

Springf'd Republican p7e D 30 '28 220w

"It is a tribute to Miss Feld's sureness of touch that Sarah Wetherby's ambition should seem neither stupid nor unreasonable, but only inevitable, and that the submission of her descendants should arouse a sympathy free from contempt."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p836 N 8 '28 180w

FELDMAN, HERMAN. Prohibition; its economic and industrial aspects. 415p $2 (7s 6d) Appleton

178.5 Prohibition 27-24758

A wide and impartial survey of the economic and industrial aspects of prohibition was undertaken for a series of articles published in the Christian Science Monitor. The conclusions at which the author arrived were based chiefly on statistical data. This book comprises the articles written for the Monitor by the assistant professor of industrial relations, Amos Tuck school of administration and finance, Dartmouth College.

"In discussing this valuable contribution to a popular issue, a reviewer is first constrained to comment on the calm, dispassionate manner in which the author has handled so controversial a subject. Sincerity and integrity are stamped on every chapter. In the breadth of his data, in his caution, in his rejection, because they do not permit intelligent deduction, of statistics which might easily be used to bolster up a conclusion, Dr. Feldman has attained a degree of 'statistical fair play' that may well serve as a model. Both 'wets' and 'drys' will find much comfort—and discomfort—in his results." Luther Conant, Jr.
+ Am Econ R 18:148 Mr '28 350w

Reviewed by Leonard Greenburg
Am J Pub Health 18:1325 O '28 480w

"In view of the many conflicting statements made for and against prohibition, many of them based on insufficient or no statistics, Professor Feldman's book should be read by everyone earnestly seeking to decide what should be his attitude toward prohibition as it concerns industry and economics."
+ Am Machinist 68:323 F 23 '28 180w

"While he has gathered some interesting information, it cannot be said that he has succeeded in proving anything beyond general tendencies." J. H. Leek
Ann Am Acad 138:191 Jl '28 180w

Booklist 24:232 Mr '28

"Needless to say, Mr. Feldman finds that the economic and industrial advantages of the law far outweigh the disadvantages. On the production side, disciplinary problems have become less serious, absences after pay days have decreased, and workers are steadier, more serious, and more capable. Mr. Feldman sees the relocation of money formerly spent in saloons to have benefited the soft drink producer, the movie industry, and the automobile manufacturer, as well as 'sending ripples of purchasing power over a wide area of trade.' " W. T. B.
Boston Transcript p2 F 4 '28 780w

Christian Century 45:736 Je 7 '28 110w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:248 My '28

"To those who are seeking the facts on this controversial subject, Professor Feldman's volume may be recommended as one of the most careful and unbiased surveys of the Prohibition question which has yet appeared." Irving Fisher
+ Pol Sci Q 43:605 D '28 1300w

"Out of Dartmouth has come the first scholarly American volume dealing impersonally with some of the facts of production, purchasing power and consumption in the light of prohibition. There is courage in the frank admission of lack of evidence when it can't be trusted or discovered. There is no evidence of partisan bias in suppressing or exalting evidence of value. There is critical judgment in the selection and rejection of data and in the interpretation of facts." Haven Emerson, M.D.
+ Survey 61:387 D 15 '28 450w

Times [London] Lit Sup p275 Ap 12 '28 200w

"The best study to date of the economic effects of prohibition. Favorable to prohibition, but free from exaggerated and unscientific claims."
Wis Lib Bul 24:52 F '28

FERGUSON, CHARLES WRIGHT. Confusion of tongues; a review of modern isms. 464p il $3.50 Doubleday, Doran

289 United States—Religion. Sects 28-29463

Mr Ferguson's interest in the unusual oddities among religious cults led to research which resulted in the survey of modern isms in the United States. These brief studies, sometimes penetrating, sometimes witty, include Spiritualism, Russellism, Buchmanism, Bahaism, the Swamis and Yogis, Shakerism, Mormonism.

Reviewed by Gilbert Seldes
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p9 D 30 '28 1000w

Boston Transcript p8 N 21 '28 680w

"He has written a sprightly document, but it is not wholly just." E. F. Edgett
— + Boston Transcript p8 D 15 '28 580w

"Ferguson has had a wonderful adventure in pushing through this strange wilderness of religion, sex, science, and business, an adventure which must have entailed an enormous amount of labor to judge from his selected bibliography." Woodbridge Riley
+ Sat R of Lit 5:455 D 8 '28 850w

FERGUSON, JOHN ALEXANDER. Man in the dark. 305p $2 Dodd [7s 6d Lane]

28-16165

The man was very much in the dark, for he was blind as a result of a war wound, and he did not know very much about the murder of Ponsonby Paget, altho he was present at the time. What he did know was that he was spirited away by a woman, whom he judged to be charming, and kept in close seclusion for a time. Then when the police were too close upon the trail he left his hiding place and the charming one. But when a marvelous operation restored his eyesight he set out to locate both the charmer and the murderer. In both quests he succeeded.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 Jl 1 '28 60w

"The apprehension of the murderer is well done, but the happy ending culminating in the probable union of the murderer's wife and the blind Kinlock, now with restored vision, is hastily and scrappily written."
+ — Boston Transcript p2 Jl 11 '28 150w

"The method is an excellent one for holding the interest. There is no time in the entire story when the reader is not as much in the dark as Sandy Kinloch."
+ N Y Times p16 Jl 15 '28 230w

"A really good detective story."
+ Sat R 146:305 S 8 '28 120w

Times [London] Lit Sup p453 Je 14 '28 110w

FERGUSON, JOHN CALVIN. Chinese painting. il $12.50 Univ. of Chicago press [62s 6d Cambridge univ. press]

759.9 Painting, Chinese 28-7612

"Mr. Ferguson lived thirty-five years in China in close touch with native critics and connoisseurs. . . After discussing 'Sources of Information,' of which an astonishingly large body in Chinese seems to exist, and the earlier painters, he takes the dynasties in historical order, concluding each section with a useful summary of characteristics. . . There are more than fifty collotype illustrations, and an index of Chinese names, in English and native characters, is given at the end of the book."—Times [London] Lit Sup

Booklist 25:60 N '28

"An extraordinarily beautiful volume. Chinese art as it really is and as it is valued by the country that fostered it is written into this book with authority and understanding."

+ J Religion 7:adv O '27 350w

"Students of the subject will find the first adequate presentation of the Chinese point of view, while those more casually interested will be delighted at illustrations of pictures which have never been available before. Artists will con it and realize that a people, remote in space and time were, after all, closest kin. In form the book is a credit to the University of Chicago Press. The illustrations from dim originals are adequate and the page and type delightful." Langdon Warner

+ Sat R of Lit 4:702 Mr 24 '28 950w

"Mr. Ferguson's comparisons between Chinese and European painting are illuminating because he really compares them in bulk and not on the basis of characters selected by the aesthetic theorists of one or the other. . . It is by the breadth, moderation and sanity of his views on art that Mr. Ferguson makes such a favorable impression."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p391 My 24 '28 1050w

FERRIER, J. KENNETH. Crooks & crime; describing the methods of criminals from the area sneak to the professional cardsharper, forger or murderer & the various ways in which they are circumvented & captured. 314p il $5 Lippincott [18s Seeley, Service]

364 Crime and criminals 28-17878

A former detective-inspector of Scotland Yard describes the methods used by various classes of criminals. A part of the book is given to a comparison of English and American methods in police work and there is a chapter on finger-printing.

"Mr. Ferrier's failure is literary; he does not know how to write a book. His stories, sketchy and usually mere incidents, get nowhere; they tell you little about either the work of detectives or the activities of criminals." W. D. Lane

— Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p16 Je 10 '28 900w

New Statesman 30:636 F 25 '28 200w

St Louis 26:312 O '28

Times [London] Lit Sup p110 F 16 '28 850w

FERRIERE, ADOLPHE. Activity school; tr. by F. Dean Moore and F. C. Wooton. 339p $4 Day

370.1 Education—Experimental methods. Education of children 28-27566

The professor of education in the Jean Jacques Rousseau Institut at Geneva is the author of this account of the new education movement in Europe. He describes the work of experimental schools on the continent and envisages the type and program of the school of the future. This is the first English translation of a work well known in the original French.

"In spite of long digressions this is as good a book as I can recommend to those interested to know what is being done in the 'new schools' all over the world." Margery Mansfield

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p18 O 21 '28 350w

Boston Transcript p4 S 15 '28 850w

"All educators will welcome this new volume with its account by one of the most able and earnest of those who are pushing forward the new educational movement in Europe of its fundamental principles, its methods and its aims."

+ N Y Times p20 S 23 '28 420w

R of Rs 78:36 N '28 50w

Reviewed by S. B. Butler

World Tomorrow 12:43 Ja '29 150w

FEVAL, PAUL, and LASSEZ, M. Years between; adventures of D'Artagnan and Cyrano de Bergerac; tr. by Cleveland Bruce Chase. 2v v 1, Mysterious cavalier; v 2, Martyr to the queen. 301;303p $5 (ea 7s 6d) Longmans

28-6308-09

There is a gap of twenty years between the lusty events chronicled in the "Three musketeers" and those of its sequels. Carrying on the Dumas tradition the authors have written the history of "the years between" in two volumes, relating the adventures of their own hero, the Cavalier Tancrède, and his gallant comrades, the rivals D'Artagnan and Cyrano. The period described is the end of the reign of Louis XIII and the beginning of the reign of Louis XIV.

"The first volume sketches, perhaps unconsciously (for the finer effects are often made unconsciously), one of the most striking portraits of D'Artagnan's great foe, Cyrano de Bergerac, which has yet been written. One's heart warms toward the sturdy Gascon and his stout Gascon oaths that have so rich and unique a flavor. Despite all the pains taken to render lovable the young cavalier hero, Anne of Austria's unacknowledged son, the reader remains comparatively cool toward him."

+ — Bookm 67:xxiii Ag '28 110w

"One discerns at once the reverent intelligence of two men who resolved not to use the reputation of a great romancer as a cloak for their own incompetence. Instead of an imbecile fabrication draped in a gaudy cloak and waving a tin sword they have perpetuated the essence of the great Dumas; and, best of all, have given us, too, a Cyrano de Bergerac stripped of poetic foibles, gifted with wit and engaging in a most thrilling duel with D'Artagnan." Donald Douglas

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p5 F 26

Reviewed by Ralf Bergengren

Boston Transcript p4 My 5 '28 950w

Cleveland Open Shelf p91 Jl '28 '28 1450w

"There have been endless and shameless imitators; but there has never been so successful and so genuine an imitation as the work of M. Feval and M. Lassez. No one can be Dumas except the great Dumas; and yet they have come close enough to fill the heart with joy and set it pounding like hoof-beats down a road at midnight." Donald Douglas

+ Nation 126:672 Je 13 '28 520w

"It is generally admitted that Dumas no longer reads as well as he did when we were twelve. He seems now the mere ghost of his old self, of our young conception of him; but it must be confessed that he is still far more substantial than his disciples. Their dialogue is the merest echo of his, which used to seem so natural and lively, and their action is somewhat insipid and monotonous."

— Nation and Ath 43:306 Je 2 '28 170w

"In spite of a good deal of slap-stick, mechanical claptrap, and awkward scene shifting, to tell a story so well is at least an achievement. Feval and Lassez have caught the Dumas genius for rapid narrative conversation; they have captured his unfailing zest for color and action." Ruth Lechlitner

+ — N Y Evening Post p12 Mr 31 '28 750w

FEVAL, P., and LASSEZ, M.—Continued

"The two volumes are brave, breathless affairs, written by authors who have captured much of the authentic Dumas élan, filled with the swirl and swing of an epoch so colorful that fiction itself treads hard on the heels of history." H: L. Stuart

+ N Y Times p9 My 20 '28 1050w

Outlook 149:72 My 9 '28 100w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:428 O '28

"With the turning of the first page we are in the midst of the colourful life of seventeenth century Paris, where the great Cardinal Richelieu wove his delicate webs of intrigue, and picturesque, swash-buckling soldiers of fortune occasionally succeeded in cutting them! . . . It would be unfair to do more than hint at the gorgeous adventures with which these two volumes are packed!" J: Gerard

+ Sat R of Lit 4:845 My 5 '28 300w

" 'The Years Between' throbs with love, romance and action. The story moves at a swift pace—it fairly races along. The characters are vivid; the dialog is typically rich. It is a story which is going to delight the hearts of thousands and leave them eagerly awaiting the volumes to come."

+ Springf'd Republican p7f Ap 8 '28 680w

"The authors accept the risk that you may ask yourself, as you read, the fatal questions whether the wine is not almost as rich and full as the original vintage, the wit almost as sparkling, the interest almost as well sustained. But, in truth, you soon forget to compare, and become engaged in the fortunes of the characters."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p390 My 24 '28 520w

FIELD, BRADDA. Earthen lot. 312p $2.50 Harcourt [7s 6d Constable]

28-5639

The life of Victoria Tressider, the child of English parents living in Malta, is traced in its rather drab unhappy course from childhood to the early disillusionment of marriage. After the death of her parents, Victoria lives with the old Admiral, her grandfather, and her aunts. It is not a sympathetic household, yet when she leaves it to marry a young musician she does not greatly improve her chance of happiness.

"Little is there to recommend except acute observations of surface details upon the part of the author." Marjory Davis

— Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p16 Ap 1 '28 400w

Boston Transcript p8 Jl 7 '28 250w

"It is surprising that a story (particularly a first novel) told with such deep imaginative feeling—and in spite of an unbroken descent into pathos—should never become mawkish. With an extraordinary combination of sensitiveness, sustained and progressive emotional interest, and fine reticence, Miss Field proves triumphantly her competence to present any subsequent material."

+ New Repub 55:130 Je 20 '28 250w

N Y Evening Post p13 Ap 21 '28 90w

"The book is ambitious in its many characters and attempt to present backgrounds, but it doesn't come off, perhaps because of its uninspired gloom." Margery Latimer

— + N Y World p11m F 26 '28 160w

"Bradda Field shows in 'The Earthen Lot' that she can observe and record, that she has an appreciation of the beauty, and a feeling for the futility, of life, and that she can write clear and flowing prose; but when the moment comes for more than this, a moment which she easily creates, Miss Field is not equal to it."

+ — Sat R of Lit 5:57 Ag 18 '28 280w

"She draws a gallery of very real characters, and at times touches a singular pathos. The old Admiral, Victoria's grandfather, is perhaps her chief triumph in portraiture."

+ Spec 140:58 Ja 14 '28 300w

"Miss Field's particular triumph is that, in ranging over Victoria Tressider's life . . . she manages to give a definite roundness and colour to each character Victoria meets and knows. The incidents that affect her, the suicide of her adored governess, for instance, are not seen as though they were part of the design of an insipid landscape, but as though they were vivid, actual events affecting the child actually in the present and not mystically in the future."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p42 Ja 19 '28 420w

FIELD, RACHEL LYMAN. Cross-stitch heart, and other plays. 177p $1.25 Scribner

812 27-24632

A collection of six one-act plays by one of Professor Baker's pupils and the author of the popular "Three pills in a bottle." Contents: The cross-stitch heart; "Greasy luck," The nine days' queen; "The Londonderry air," At the junction; "Bargains in Cathay."

Booklist 24:275 Ap '28

"Miss Field, knowing well the requirements of schoolboy and church club actors, has written for her audience and players. Her little plays are always in excellent taste, never straying far in either direction toward emotional extremes. Neither spectator nor actor is greatly to be aroused, but both may well be quietly pleased." E. B. S.

+ Boston Transcript p5 F 25 '28 400w

" 'The Cross-Stitch Heart' contains not only her best work for the theatre but some of the best writing she has done. The variety of these six plays is to be praised. It is such that no play can be singled out as best. For its own sort of thing each one is excellent." Josiah Titzell

+ N Y Evening Post p14 Ja 21 '28 350w

"This book should be a boon to those needing fresh and amusing dramatic material for amateur production."

+ Springf'd Republican p7f Ja 22 '28 160w

"Rachel Field has solved a real problem in writing plays for amateur production—that of creating situations and writing dialogue that is neither insipid nor beyond the capabilities of inexperienced players. Miss Field excels in the light touch of comedy, fantasy, pathos; her characters have charm and originality, her sets are simple of execution."

+ Theatre Arts Mo 12:226 Mr '28 160w

Wis Lib Bul 24:222 Jl '28

FIELD, RACHEL LYMAN. Little dog Toby. [2] (Little lib.) 118p il $1 Macmillan

28-22605

How Little dog Toby fell in love one summer's day with a beautiful French poodle Fufu, and then lost her for many years. In that time great adventures befell Little dog Toby, but Fufu remained much the same until they met once more on the wedding day of Fufu's mistress. After that they lived happily for many years on an estate in the country.

Booklist 25:127 D '28

"The pictures leave one longing for better drawing, but the story itself has atmosphere and charm and some historical association." A. C. M.

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p6 D 23 '28 70w

"Like all small things, the charm of the book consists in the manner of its telling. It is detail that children feed upon with delight, and detail is here supplied by them in good measure."

+ N Y Evening Post p10m N 10 '28 80w

" 'Little Dog Toby,' also illustrated by the author, has many of the qualities of the most desirable English Christmas stories." Dorothea Withington

+ Sat R of Lit 5:482 D 8 '28 130w

Wis Lib Bul 24:309 N '28

FIELD, RACHEL LYMAN. Polly Patchwork. 56p il 75c Doubleday, Doran
28-21895

Polly's grandmother made her a dress out of a patchwork quilt, and tho Polly hated to wear it, the patchwork dress helped her to win the spelling match and a beautiful silver medal. A pleasing little story, pleasingly illustrated in color.

Booklist 25:74 N '28

"This, to my mind, is one of the most charming and authentic things Miss Field has done." A. C. M.

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p6 Ag 12 '28 200w

" 'Polly Patchwork' is not a Christmas story in the strict sense of the word, but it has the old time flavor which makes it peculiarly acceptable at holiday time. Moreover, I think it is the best thing pictorially Miss Field has done." A. C. M.

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p6 D 23 '28 100w

Cleveland Open Shelf p113 N '28

"It is a delicious conception of a little girl's school dress made from a lucky patchwork quilt, and the illustrations are quite as knowing and cunning as the story." Laura Benet

+ N Y Evening Post p10m N 10 '28 60w

St Louis 26:391 D '28

Reviewed by Dorothea Withington

Sat R of Lit 5:482 D 8 '28 110w

FIELD, WALTER TAYLOR. Guide to literature [2] for children. 287p $1.72 Ginn
028.5 Children's literature. Children's literature—Bibliography. School libraries 28-20546

Mr Field's earlier book "Fingerposts to children's reading" is now superseded by the present helpful volume which lists and briefly describes 350 books for the home or school library for children from three to eighteen years. Appended are longer lists for school and public libraries. In the body of the book Mr Field discusses children's books and their illustrations, the teaching of literature, the public library, Mother goose, and kindred subjects.

Booklist 25:86 N '28

"On the whole the book is excellent, and even noteworthy in that he goes beyond a mere bibliography."

+ Boston Transcript p9 O 6 '28 200w

"The book gives in general the sort of advice, moderate yet in line with good modern practice, greatly needed in smaller or more remote communities, and the type of book-list helpful to mothers who must buy their children's books by mail." M. L. Becker

+ Sat R of Lit 5:351 N 10 '28 480w

Wis Lib Bul 24:299 N '28

FIELDING, ARCHIBALD. Net around Joan Ingilby. 302p $2 Knopf [7s 6d Collins]
28-22462

A reporter writes a suppositious story of the murder of Mrs Amcott so convincingly that the net of the law tightens round Joan Ingilby, suspect. When the reporter discovers that the girl his story accuses is the girl of his dreams he promptly becomes her protector, and tries his best to find the guilty person. It is Inspector Pointer who does that, with a result that surprised the reporter and may surprise the reader.

Booklist 25:125 D '28

"Mr. Fielding swings an old trick with complete success and some novel twists." Will Cuppy

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 S 9 '28 100w

Boston Transcript p5 O 13 '28 320w

"A complicated, sometimes ingenious, and always very improbable tale. Like the best detective stories it makes you wish to read it a second time, when the end has revealed the true criminal. But the behaviour of the characters is governed too much by the author's wish to be sensational, and too little by the reasonableness which we require for deductive reasoning." Raymond Mortimer

+ — Nation and Ath 42:941 Mr 24 '28 50w

"The author, in his eagerness to mislead the reader, has drawn rather more than the usual number of red herrings across the trail—so many, indeed, that one may as well give up any attempt at a logical solution. But the story is an absorbing one even though the author does not quite play fair with his readers."

+ — N Y Times p26 O 21 '28 200w

Springf'd Republican p7e S 30 '28 250w

Times [London] Lit Sup p293 Ap 19 '28 250w

FIGGIS, DARRELL. Recollections of the Irish war. 308p $4 Doubleday, Doran [16s Benn]
941.5 Ireland—History [28-10214]

The book gives the author's personal impressions of leaders and events on both sides of the Irish Channel in the conflict for Irish independence from the founding of the volunteers in 1913 to the truce of July, 1921, which led to the establishment of the Irish Free State. As man of letters and trained observer of affairs who himself played an adventurous part in these events Darrell Figgis is fitted to be their chronicler.

Booklist 24:357 Je '28

Reviewed by Padraic Colum

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p1 Ap 8 '28 2600w

"Mr. Figgis is a writer of some repute and he brings to his volume the qualities which have won him a reputation. He is not merely a chronicler. He gives interpretation to the events which he records, sets down occurrences in graphic narrative, illustrated oftentimes by an exquisite setting." P. J. C.

+ Cath World 127:628 Ag '28 480w

"This book is honest and it induces a great deal of near-political philosophy on the part of those who are given to such luxurious thinking. Besides it is well written."

+ Ind 120:261 Mr 17 28 240w

"The window through which he looked at events was blurred and fogged, and it was often fogged by his own breath. In the story he tells of Ireland the personal note he sounded was made into a nation's war-cry. But as a book, apart from political value, it has sound qualities. Such are insight of character, and a capability of seizing the philosophical meaning of the event."

+ — Nation and Ath 41:723 S 3 '27 620w

Reviewed by Jennings Rice

New Repub 55:338 Ag 15 '28 380w

"On the personal side, this narrative is a record of bitter disillusion. This, however, adds to its value as a historical document. The most vivid pages in this book are those in which he describes the underground manœuvres by which the agents of the I. R. B. succeeded in edging him out of the inner circle of Sinn Fein."

+ New Statesman 29:627 Ag 27 '27 800w

"Of the many books that have been written about that war this is one of the best in its relation of the events it describes to the historical past, one of the most comprehensive in its examination of the many facets of the situation, surely the most tolerant and broadly humane and far away the most eloquent, persuasive and competent from the literary standpoint." Shaemas O'Sheel

+ N Y Evening Post p5 Ag 18 '28 800w

"It is a book of gripping interest, replete with incidents of personal hardiness, suffering and devotion modestly recounted, and taking the reader again and again behind the scenes of what, all things considered, must rank as one of the most extraordinary political agitations of modern times." W: MacDonald

+ N Y Times p7 F 5 '28 920w

FIGGIS, DARRELL—Continued

"In this account of a complicated, exciting, and terrible period in Irish history the author himself looms large—much larger than the facts warrant. Yet in the main his account of the fact is true; he is fair to his friends and his adversaries." Ernest Boyd

+ Outlook 148:274 F 15 '28 700w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:413 Jl '28

Sat R 144:198 Ag 6 '27 500w

"Those who read the late Darrell Figgis's book can follow in detail the whole course of the Irish War from the anti-English side—that is, can follow its events. Psychologically, the puzzle and confusion of the whole business are increased by this story. . . He has written an outspoken, dispassionate, and deeply depressing book."

+ Spec 139:260 Ag 13 '27 400w

Times [London] Lit Sup p510 Jl 28 '27 780w

FINDLAY, JOSEPH JOHN. Foundations of education; a survey of principles and projects; v 2, The practice of education. 382p $3 Holt [10s 6d Univ. of London press]

370 Education (25-13460)

Volume one (Book Review Digest, 1926) dealt with the aims and organization of education. Volume two is concerned with the practice of education; curriculum, the corporate life of the school, child study, method.

Boston Transcript p4 Ap 18 '28 180w

"I like the Professor's discussion of rewards and punishment. He is reasonable; he is human; but he is in solid earnest."

+ Educ R 75:149 Mr '28 280w

"The great merit of this work is the fact that its systematic character does nothing to destroy its liveliness, and although many special items have to do with English educational problems, the book as a whole should be as interesting to American as to English readers. If a more sane and essentially fine book on education has been written since the peace of 1918, this reviewer has not seen it." E. C. Lindeman

+ New Repub 56:sup216 O 10 '28 950w

"It is impossible to blame Professor Findlay for coming down solidly on the side of sound method. It is possible, none the less, to have both freedom and method in the schools of today. Professor Findlay, perhaps, is placing himself below the level of his art for a purpose. There can be no doubt whatever of his service to the science of education."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p473 Jl 7 '27 200w

FINGER, CHARLES JOSEPH. David Livingstone; explorer and prophet. (Benefactors of mankind) 300p $2 Doubleday, Doran

B or 92 Livingstone, David. Africa—Description and travel 27-27478

Tho written especially for boys this story of David Livingstone will be read and enjoyed by older people. Mr Finger makes no claim of adding anything to the information about the great missionary and explorer, but he does the service of compressing into an easily readable narrative the heart of Livingstone's journals and travels which may seem to the reader of today formidable in length.

Booklist 24:247 Mr '28

"Finger does not fail to bring out that the man was bigger and grander than anything which he did. The tribute is all the more noticeable coming from a 'hard boiled' explorer rather than a churchman. The story of Livingstone is an epic in itself and it loses nothing at the hands of a man who has trodden the same trails and known something of what obstacles Africa has for the white man." T. C. R.

+ Boston Transcript p2 F 4 '28 530w

Cleveland Open Shelf p35 Mr '28

Cleveland Open Shelf p79 Je '28

"Mr. Finger's biography is written for the most part in true, pictorial English. He has drawn largely on Livingstone's own journals, which are masterpieces of clear narrative and sobriety. . . Mr. Finger is an explorer himself, with the great, simple insinuating modesty of an explorer. His experiences add concreteness to the volume, but make him too obvious a partisan."

+ — Nation and Ath 43:595 Ag 4 '28 500w

"Mr. Finger has set forth the career of one of the greatest nineteenth-century characters in a compact and intelligent short biography. He is widely read in the literature of exploration, and his writing is not American, for the good reason that although long resident in the United States, he is English."

+ New Statesman 31:734 S 22 '28 900w

N Y Evening Post p10 N 12 '27 220w

"Mr. Finger avoids the futile controversies that raged between Stanley and the other relief expeditions. He allows the soul of Livingstone to shine clear through the darkness and rightly lays stress on the lofty spirit animating the great traveler." W: McFee

+ N Y World pt1m Ja 22 '28 680w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:488 O '28

St Louis 26:47 F '28

"Mr. Finger has added little to our knowledge of the subject, but the story of Livingstone's heroism and devotion is vividly told."

+ Sat R 146:128 Jl 28 '28 100w

"There have been a number of biographies of David Livingstone written by men qualified in one way or another for the work, but none of the authors has possessed a greater sum of qualifications than Mr. Charles J. Finger. First and foremost he writes delightfully; then, too, he is not only in full sympathy with his subject, but his own adventurous life has well fitted him to appreciate the derring do of the great missionary explorer."

+ — Sat R of Lit 5:380 N 17 '28 300w

Times [London] Lit Sup p617 Ag 30 '28 110w

FINGER, CHARLES JOSEPH. Romantic rascals. 251p il $3 McBride

920 Rogues and vagabonds 27-25318

"The stories of a number of plausible gentlemen who aspired by fraud or daring, to cut a glittering figure in the upper levels of society." —Bookm. Contents: Lugui [!] di Barthema; Three splendid scoundrels: "Count" St. Germain, "Count" Cagliostro, Jeanne de Valois; The Tichborne claimant; John Cottingham; A pair of kings; Ali Pasha of Albania; Jorgen Jorgenson, protector of Iceland; King Cambiaso of Patagonia and Terra del Fuego.

"In 'Romantic Rascals' one perceives through its highly colored and amusing pages, the occasional glimmering of a real philosophy of character." Marjorie Greenbie

+ Bookm 67:324 My '28 170w

"Here is a book to lift you from the barren realism of your daily grind of arid offices and give you transport to the uttermost isles of rascality." Donald Douglas

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p3 D 11 '27 780w

"A list of rogues whose life stories Mr. Finger has made into a book full of out-of-the-way information and entertaining enough to beguile a train journey or an idle evening."

+ N Y Times p12 F 5 '28 400w

FINGER, CHARLES JOSEPH. Spreading stain; a tale for boys and men with boys' hearts. 245p $2 Doubleday, Doran

27-22474

A young inventor employed on a small and obscure railroad discovers a weed-killer of such terrific power that it gets beyond his control, spreads over the earth's surface like a black blight, destroying vegetation and leaving famine and death in its wake.

Cleveland Open Shelf p78 Je '28

"Here is the type of story offering splendid fantastic possibilities—the type of story capable of matching H. G. Wells at his best. But Mr. Finger, one is sorry to report, has not lived up to the possibilities of his theme. The tale as he tells it has some arresting qualities; but it can scarcely be regarded as an outstandng piece of work."

— + N Y Times p23 O 16 '27 520w

"The young man who is telling the story for Mr. Finger decides to write like DeFoe, with a Samuel Pepys influence. He does not get started with his tale as quickly as he might, for he takes time to give the young idea an idea of how to begin a book and a little slyly inserted literary introduction. That is, he tells how he happened to become an author. But when he gets under way the narrative is very absorbing." Robert Edwards

+ — N Y World p11m O 30 '27 230w

Sat R of Lit 4:405 D 3 '27 180w

FINGER, CHARLES JOSEPH, comp. Frontier ballads. 181p il $3.50 Doubleday, Doran

811.08 Ballads, American. Folk-songs, American 27-22438

For descriptive note see Annual for 1927.

Reviewed by Louise Pound

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p7 F 12 '28 150w

"Mr. Finger's musical notation is careful, but unfortunately almost illegible; with this exception, his work is satisfying from every point of view." Abbe Niles

+ — New Repub 54:77 F 29 '28 550w

Reviewed by R. A. Simon

N Y Evening Post p14 O 29 '27 280w

St Louis 26:104 Ap '28

FINGER, CHARLES JOSEPH, ed. Heroes from Hakluyt. 331p il $4.50 Holt

910.4 Hakluyt, Richard. Voyages and travels

The first chapter is an account of how Hakluyt came to write his great book; the other chapters are some of the well-known tales retold. The Cabots, the Frobishers, Sir Humphrey Gilbert, Drake, Cavendish, Cumberland's voyages, Hawkins, Sir Richard Grenville and the Spanish Armada receive the most attention.

"It has been Mr. Charles Finger's notion and task to enter Hakluyt's famous treasure house and prepare the true gold for the modern reader, a task he has accomplished in a manner both delightful and distinguished. Getting this book together has been far more than a labor of selection; it has meant editing, rewriting and the most skillful literary rebuilding, and this is just what has been done and done so well." H: Beston

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p8 N 18 '28 1450w

Reviewed by W: R. Benét

Sat R of Lit 5:486 D 8 '28 320w

FINLEY, WILLIAM LOVELL, and FINLEY, MRS IRENE (BARNHART). Wild animal pets. 311p il $3 (10s 6d) Scribner

591.5 Animals—Habits and behavior. Animals—Legends and stories. Photography of animals 28-8927

Wild animals of all sorts have responded to the friendly advances of the authors, who have taken into their family circle such unlikely pets as porcupine, badger, skunk, a condor and a quail. All of these have been photographed, and many others in their natural haunts. Much of the material in the book is reprinted from Nature magazine and elsewhere.

"Of interest both to children and grown-ups."

+ Booklist 24:351 Je '28

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p13 My 20 '28 80w

"That his knowledge is both complete and intimate is abundantly clear. Many unusual illustrations add to the value of his latest book."

+ Boston Transcript p2 Ap 28 '28 70w

Chicago Daily Tribune p15 Je 9 '28 80w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:332 Je '28

Springf'd Republican p10 Mr 2 '28 560w

Wis Lib Bul 24:164 My '28

FINNEY, ROSS LEE. Sociological philosophy of education. (Modern teachers' ser.) 564p $2.50 (10s 6d) Macmillan

370.1 Education. Sociology. Education—Curricula 28-6558

"The author's central idea is: 'Whatever is put into the school process of today comes out in the social process of tomorrow. . . Therefore, the educators are running not merely the schools, but, in the long run, the world itself.' "—Cleveland Open Shelf

---

"Despite the many contributions to the field of educational philosophy, during the past few years, this book stands forth as a contribution of no little merit, and it will be read with pleasure by all who are interested in the study of modern problems."

+ Boston Transcript p5 Je 2 '28 200w

Cleveland Open Shelf p96 S '28

"Professor Finney has made a significant contribution to the field of educational sociology and philosophy. If educators, in the large sense, are to direct the evolution of society, they must have a clear insight into the evolution and current functioning of ideals and institutions. The book is therefore to be recommended to teachers, administrators, and students of education. Many readers will undoubtedly find arguments in the book with which they do not agree, but the stimulation resulting from contact with such arguments will be worth while." H. H. Punke

+ School R 33:715 N '28 900w

FIORI, VITTORIO ERMETE DE. Mussolini; the man of destiny; tr. from the Italian by Mario A. Pei. 222p il $3 Dutton [6s Dent]

B or 92 Mussolini, Benito 28-7887

A sentimentalized account of Mussolini's life which, starting with some admiring stories of his boyish pranks, continues in the same vein of adulation thruout his career. The author is a friend of Mussolini's and was at one time on the staff of his paper, Il popolo d'Italia.

Booklist 24:361 Je '28

"Although it is naturally not without the interest which inheres in its subject, 'Mussolini, The Man of Destiny' is nevertheless too obviously partizan to merit serious consideration."

— + Bookm 67:xvii Jl '28 150w

"As we follow with the author the career of 'Il Duce,' we get a better idea of the versatility of the man and the many sidedness of his genius. It is a real Mussolini that comes before our eyes, a man of flesh and blood, one who has served a long and hard apprenticeship. After reading this book we can understand better the secret of Mussolini's hold over his people." O. M., Jr.

+ Boston Transcript p4 Mr 28 '28 1650w

Cleveland Open Shelf p134 D '28

Nation 126:387 Ap 4 '28 20w

"The whole book radiates the atmosphere of hero-worship. Still, it gives a readable account of Mussolini's early activities as Socialist and journalist, and his change of attitude towards the Socialist party during the war. One or two of these glimpses are vivid and probably true; but they throw a light not so much on Mussolini's greatness as on his theatricality."

New Statesman 31:546 Ag 4 '28 180w

No Am 225:adv My '28 110w

"Mr. De Fiori's style is extremely interesting and makes very pleasant reading quite aside from the fact that the book should be read for the sake of the information contained in

FIORI, V. E. de—Continued
it, if for no other. The book is illustrated with numerous photographs of Italy's Premier at various stages of his career." Milton Byron
+ Outlook 148:598 Ap 11 '28 200w
Pratt p42 autumn '28
St Louis 26:194 Je '28

"Whether accurate or not, reading between the lines, this book will help us to understand the new Italy better than much that has been written by outsiders." F. Y.-B.
+ — Spec 140:945 Je 23 '28 600w
Springf'd Republican p10 Ap 25 '28 650w

FIRKINS, INA TEN EYCK, comp. Index to plays, 1800-1926. 307p service basis Wilson, H.W.
016.8 Drama—Bibliography 27-27608

An index to nineteenth and twentieth century plays and collections of plays that have been most in demand. The list, which includes some translations, comprises 7,872 plays by 2,203 authors, and is arranged in an author index, and a subject and title index. Miss Firkins, the compiler, is reference librarian at the University of Minnesota.

"The importance of this reference aid to all libraries is obvious."
+ Booklist 24:191 F '28
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:166 Mr '28
Pratt p28 spring '28
Springf'd Republican p7f Ja 8 '28 180w

"Less complete in its range than Mr. Gamble's work but in its more limited way equally valuable, is Ina Ten Eyck Firkins' Index to Plays."
+ Theatre Arts Mo 12:452 Je '28 80w
Wis Lib Bul 24:54 F '28

FIRKINS, OSCAR W. Two passengers for Chelsea, and other plays. (Longmans' play ser.) 300p $2.50 (12s 6d) Longmans
812 28-7770

Thirteen one-act plays, suitable for amateur production. "There are comedies of New York society life, plays of trenchant situation, plays romantically set in Provence or Algiers. There are theatre-plays in which actors are brought in touch with ghosts; and there are literary plays, in prose and verse, in which Elizabethan lovers play out an astonishing romance in a tower, and the Carlyles sparkle in Lady Harriet Baring's drawing-room." (Publisher's note)

Booklist 24:356 Je '28

"Discloses a talent for racy dialogue and subtle situation which ought to recommend his work to the amateur 'art' theaters if to no others." W. P. Eaton
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p17 Ap 1 '28 150w

"Mr. Firkins's versatility is shown in the diversity of his subjects. 'An Odd Entanglement' is a comic affair of a near divorce between two couples, while 'The Rim of the Desert' is subtle, and completely portrayed by dialogue, except for an occasional remark of the sentinel."
+ Boston Transcript p8 Ap 7 '28 140w
Cleveland Open Shelf p117 N '28

"Mr. Firkins has done a surprisingly good piece of work. He handles his situations briskly, his dialogue aptly, and gives to his characters a semblance of reality which is too often lacking."
+ Ind 120:389 Ap 21 '28 150w
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:486 O '28
Pratt p30 autumn '28

"Mr. Firkins writes well, and handles his situations neatly. In fact, he writes almost too well, that is, his dialogue smacks of the library, rather than of life, and his characters lack differentiating objectivity. He is therefore at his best, not in the creation of new characters, or original situations, but in re-creating people who have lived, as in the Carlyle play, by far the most telling in the collection." Jane Dransfield
+ Sat R of Lit 4:913 My 26 '28 320w

"Two Passengers for Chelsea, a study of Thomas and Jane Carlyle, and The Undying Prince, wherein actors, from Burbage to Forbes-Robertson, come together to discuss Hamlet, are delightful essays in dialogue, full of dexterity, wit and provocative criticism. But in the theatre they would be shadows of themselves; their virtues would disappear."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p353 My 10 '28 80w
Wis Lib Bul 24:123 Ap '28

FISH, CARL RUSSELL. Rise of the common man, 1830-1850. (History of American life) 391p $4 (17s) Macmillan
917.3 United States—Social conditions. United States—Economic conditions. United States—Civilization 27-24315

"Professor Fish portrays the age which, for the first time, set out to make America a democratic society and was determined to end aristocratic privilege and social oppression among the white Americans. It was an epoch characterized, as none before or since in this country, by the obsessions of equality, optimism, idealism, enthusiasm, and confidence in the future, as well as in man's capacity to determine the nature of that future. Professor Fish calls attention to the remarkable diversity of culture in the United States at the time, and to the developing antipathy of the sections which presaged the coming of the Civil War."—New Repub

"An interesting and valuable piece of work. Though it contains much that is common knowledge to those who may have read ever so little on the period, it assembles much to be found only in out-of-the-way places." C. S. Boucher
+ Am Hist R 33:891 Jl '28 550w

"History written as it is written here becomes more than a mere recounted sequence of events—it becomes a significant and comprehensible current." M. P. Redfield
+ Am J Soc 33:1016 My '28 150w
Booklist 24:358 Je '28

Reviewed by V. L: Parrington
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p1 Ja 29 '28 480w

"It would be difficult to think of anything that would lay a better foundation for intelligent patriotism than a careful reading of the whole series." W. E. Garrison
+ Christian Century 45:319 Mr 8 '28 70w

"The present controversy over the nature and adequacy of a democratic way of life and political organization makes Professor Fish's volume peculiarly timely. His book brings out clearly the enormous differences in scientific and sociological knowledge, in political experience and in social conditions as between Jackson's day and our own." H. E. Barnes
+ New Repub 54:sup163 Mr 21 '28 350w

Reviewed by Herbert Solow
N Y Evening Post p13 F 25 '28 130w

Reviewed by A. S. Will
+ N Y Times p1 F 19 '28 450w

"There can be no question of the value, the suggestiveness, the range and vividness of it all regarded as a panorama. It does for the 'thirties and 'forties much the same sort of thing that Mr. Sullivan is doing for our own time. The striking thing in Mr. Sullivan's work is that he is content to be purely a panoramist—if the word may be permitted. He does no analyzing, he makes no attempt at fusion, at synthesis. Hence, his clear, sparkling, surface unity. But Professor Fish, the severely analytical historian, cannot be content to rest in those conditions. To intimate, to suggest, but scarcely to dogmatize on this bewildering subject, is part of his purpose. He does not want to formalize his subject so that the true character of the contradictory surface will be lost to view. The thoughtful reader who seeks his real intent will find it by bearing in mind his double purpose." N. W. Stephenson

+ Pol Sci Q 43:282 Je '28 1100w

Pratt p35 autumn '28

"The contributions of Professor Fish stand out in special distinction, partly, to be sure, because of greater novelty in subject-matter, but also because of his notably firm grasp of the period with which he deals." W: MacDonald

+ Sat R of Lit 4:664 Mr 10 '28 250w

Reviewed by H. E. Wilson
School R 36:472 Je '28 150w

"The author has for the most part made an admirable if not altogether original selection from the vast stores of literary, newspaper, diary and other fragmentary remains of a bygone era in American life to reconstruct the social ideas and forces of these formative and fluid decades." P. B.

+ Springf'd Republican p10 Je 29 '28 360w

"It is doing for an age what the new biographers have done for individuals; doing for a century what the modern newspaper, with its comics, its recipes, puzzles, fashion items, sports news, hints for home decoration does for the passing moment. It is reflecting people not as they would like to be, but as they are. It is making history readable, and it ought to make it popular." L: S. Gannett

+ Survey 60:188 My 1 '28 140w
World Tomorrow 11:278 Je '28 80w

FISHBEIN, MORRIS, ed. Your weight and how to control it; a scientific guide by medical specialists and dieticians; with an introd. by Wendell C. Phillips; including the Principles of nutrition, with diets and menus for reducing and gaining, by Flora Rose and Mary Henry. 260p $5 Doubleday, Doran

613.2 Corpulence. Diet. Nutrition. Menus
27-23231

Edited by Dr Morris Fishbein and contributed to by various medical specialists and dieticians this book provides scientific guidance for the regulation of body weight. In Part one, The relation of weight control to health, such topics are treated as the craze for reducing, the price of a boyish form, how glands affect weight, and dieting to reduce. Part two considers the principles of nutrition and the relation of diet to weight, with diets and menus for reducing and gaining.

"By far the most useful book on this subject for the average reader with which we are acquainted." M. P. Ravenel

+ Am J Pub Health 18:533 Ap '28 320w
Booklist 24:195 F '28

"This book will be an inspiration to the obese, a comfort to the plump and a bulwark for those who are thin but yearn for curves. To those who are excessively thin by design it will be anathema. It is, in fact, the rationale of the weight problem." L: Johnson

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 Ja 22 '28 550w
Boston Transcript p4 Ja 7 '28 300w
J Home Econ 20:201 Mr '28 70w
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:27 Ja '28

FISHBEIN, MORRIS, and WHITE, WILLIAM ALANSON, eds. Why men fail. 344p $2 Century

131 Psychoanalysis. Mental physiology and hygiene
28-8539

A collection of articles by eleven psychiatrists in which they discuss the causes of human failure and how they may be overcome. The majority of these failures in business, home and social life are traceable to some mental disturbance which more often than not can be overcome if recognized and faced. Such causes of failure as fear, queerness, depression, day-dreaming, and the sex element are among those discussed in these articles.

Reviewed by W. W. Peter
Am J Pub Health 18:953 Jl '28 350w
Booklist 24:382 Jl '28

"This is an important work, make no mistake about that. For aside from the value of its contents, the volume represents a new current in the affairs of man that few suspect and fewer still understand. In a brief review like this, its portent can only be suggested. 'Why Men Fail' may honestly be considered an important first step in establishing the relation of men at large with the medical profession in the heretofore nebulous domain of mental healing, so that all may read and understand." H. M. Hall, M.D.

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p4 My 20 '28 1200w

"These thirteen chapters, by eleven leading physicians are something more than interesting reading. They are full of vital suggestions, keen analysis and concrete examples. They suggest practical ways of overcoming the subconscious difficulties that are hindering you from realizing your full abilities." T. C. R.

+ Boston Transcript p4 Ap 25 '28 350w
N Y Times p18 Ap 22 '28 530w

Reviewed by G: Joel
N Y World p9m My 20 '28 100w
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:435 O '28
St Louis 26:179 Je '28

"We shall have a convincing and penetrating account of 'Why Men Fail' only when some one psychiatrist or psychologist with the same competence as these writers, devotes himself to this problem not casually but as the central purpose of his professional career. Meanwhile we may be grateful for this approach." Joseph Jastrow

Sat R of Lit 4:755 Ap 14 '28 1050w

"The book is in the finest sense a popularization. In the sanest, clearest and most helpful way it presents to the layman much of what he needs to know about what is dangerous to his welfare." H. A. Overstreet

+ Survey 60:609 S 15 '28 520w
Wis Lib Bul 24:157 My '28

FISHER, HAROLD HENRY, and BROOKS, SIDNEY. America and the new Poland. 403p $3.50 (15s) Macmillan

943.8 Poland—History. Reconstruction (European war)—Poland. European war, 1914-1918—Poland. Poland—Relations (general) with United States. United States—Relations (general) with Poland
28-10637

From material in the Hoover war library of Stanford University the authors have constructed this history of Polish-American friendship dating back to the Civil war, the story of Poland during the war, and of American aid in the restoration of Poland since the war.

"There is something seriously lacking in a book of this title which finds room only in a foot-note for mention of Dr. Robert H. Lord, principal adviser of the American Commission to Negotiate Peace on questions affecting Poland, and which overlooks the circumstance that the chief of the Polish commission of experts at Paris bore the name, honored in American history, of Pulaski. As the book stands, the achievements of the American Relief Administration and other agencies of humanitarian and economic assistance occupy something less than two-thirds of its space. It is presented with enough 'local color' to attract the general reader and enough solid information to constitute an impressive picture of America's contribution to Poland's recovery from the effects of war and political transformation. The book is by no means free from editorial carelessness." J. V. Fuller

— + Am Hist R 33:900 Jl '28 520w

FISHER, H. H:, and BROOKS, S.—Continued

"The book is well written and readable. It has a carefully selected bibliography and an index." W. O. Brown

+ Am J Soc 34:556 N '28 350w

Boston Transcript p1 My 12 '28 700w

Reviewed by C. R. Hall

Hist Outlook 19:346 N '28 950w

"Mr. Fisher does skillfully what he sets out to do—explains intelligently the events of our own day with just enough of the past to make them intelligible. It is not the only way of writing history, but it is a very good way; and, thanks to the generous abundance of the Hoover War Library at Stanford University, the book is copiously documented." J: Bakeless

+ New Repub 56:184 O 3 '28 760w

"Mr. Fisher is inclined to forgive much that is obviously to the discredit of both the old and the new Poland. Yet he does not omit it from his book. Therein lies its chief virtue. It is a well intentioned and quite engrossing presentation of the subject from which the reader may learn all that the author wants him to know and a great deal of what he does not." L: Rich

+ — N Y Times p3 Ag 26 '28 1450w

Pratt p37 autumn '28

R of Rs 77:28 Je '28 120w

St Louis 26:292 S '28

FISHER, RUDOLPH. Walls of Jericho. 307p $2.50 (7s 6d) Knopf

28-18899

A cross-section of Harlem showing every strata of society and every shade of color from white and those who pass as white, thru yellow, yellow-brown, chocolate and black. The story shows up the stormy relationships of these groups with each other. Shine, the young hero, is a piano mover of prodigious size and strength. He thinks himself hardboiled. It takes Linda, pretty housemaid to the uplifting Miss Cramp (white), to teach him the truth. These two fall in love, and tho nearly swamped by Harlem squalls, make port.

Reviewed by Eric Walrond

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p5 Ag 26 '28 1250w

Cleveland Open Shelf p136 D '28

New Statesman 31:704 S 15 '28 230w

"Here is the genuine meat of Harlem which needs none of the highly seasoned, largely untrue sensationalism which has given so distorted a picture of Harlem Negroes when some others have attempted to write of that region of Manhattan. More, Dr. Fisher has caught the real humor of the Negro and the result is the first light novel of Negro life." W. F. White

+ N Y World p7m Ag 5 '28 750w

"The story of the rather tempestuous courtship of Shine and Linda is beautifully told."

+ Sat R 146:250 Ag 25 '28 300w

"The story moves lightly and rapidly; with a native naturalness and a deal of color. Yet back of all the sprightliness there is a serious voice. A voice that says neither Yea nor Nay, but merely suggests that all this is worthy of thought. It is this serious note that lends stability to the book as a whole. . . Jinx and Bubber, the Damon and Pythias of Harlem, yet continually quarreling, are two of the most delightful colored characters our fiction has yet given rise to."

+ Sat R of Lit 5:110 S 8 '28 280w

"Mr. Fisher is scrupulously fair. He does not whiten the Blacks. But he writes of them with keen sympathy and understanding, and as one who believes that they 'have a future.' Apart from its 'problem' interest, the story is well worth reading. It has vigour, humour, satire, and charm."

+ Spec 141:252 Ag 25 '28 160w

"Mr. Rudolph Fisher, one of the most interesting of contemporary negro writers, has given in The Walls of Jericho a sympathetic and extraordinarily impressive account of negro thought and habit. As a storyteller he holds the reader's attention from first to last; his story has vigour and naturalness, and it is told with unfailing and pungent humour."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p630 S 6 '28 500w

FISHER, VARDIS. Toilers of the hills. 361p $2.50 Houghton

28-23667

A chronicle, crude and earthy as the land which they worked, of Dock Hunter and his wife Opal and their many children on their dry farm in the Idaho hills.

" 'Toilers of the Hills' may well win a place among the permanent stories of our pioneers—which is remarkable for what is apparently a first book of prose. Certainly the country itself has seldom been better done. . . So telling is this portrayal of the conquest of the Idaho hills, so vivid the descriptions of the outdoor world, and so vigorous and effective the style, that one deplores the fact that the characters selected for the pivot of the story should be so brutish in mind and habit and so depraved in speech." C. B. Sherman

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p4 N 11 '28 650w

"Mr. Fisher has won a literary triumph out of matter as recalcitrant as the Idaho hills, against which his people hurl themselves. . . He has brought a new speech into American fiction and made it an organic element in a new variation upon the essential American theme." R. M. L.

+ New Repub 57:50 N 28 '28 180w

"This material is neither novel nor attractive. But it is strongly shadowed and directed by the unity of Mr. Fisher's conception. The ugly and the insignificant alike are touched into beauty by their adaptation to a pattern which in its very familiarity transcends the commonplace. Turned to other uses, Mr. Fisher's style might have seemed artificial. Here, its simple, lyrical cadence is the essential instrument for bringing the pattern to life." Margaret Wallace

+ N Y Evening Post p9m N 17 '28 450w

"If this novel had been written in the period that brought forth Dreiser's 'Sister Carrie' and Frank Norris's 'McTeague,' it would probably survive today as an interesting and competent attempt to break away from the molds of earlier American fiction. It essays to tell the truth of life in a dry-farming section of Idaho, yet it follows in the wake of so many novels about life in farming communities, that it must perforce cause only a mild splash."

N Y Times p7 O 28 '28 450w

Reviewed by Herschel Brickell

No Am 226:adv D '28 50w

FISKE, CHARLES. Confessions of a puzzled parson, and other pleas for reality. 273p $2 (7s 6d) Scribner

261 Sociology, Christian. Church. United States—Religion 28-20784

These essays by the bishop of Central New York are pleas for reality in religion. Certain unpleasant aspects of Christian enthusiasm come in for criticism—the standardization of religion, the multiplication of church organizations and the activities of professional uplifters and social reformers. Contents: A penitent and puzzled parson; Bringing in the millennium; The church and the law: a protest; The church's loss of prestige; Saving souls through church suppers; Creeds and Christian unity; The glory of the Christian faith; Christian loyalty and church liberality; A bishop looks at the church; Marriage: temporary or permanent?; Companionate marriage; The new home and the woman.

"When he tackles certain fundamental questions he shows himself an essentially reactionary churchman outraged by the performance of a world which insists upon going forward upon its way and leaving him behind. Yet even when we dissent most vigorously from Bishop Fiske's ideas we rejoice in his expression of them. No man so honest and good-natured can alienate our sympathy or silence our applause."

— + Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 N 4 '28 320w

"The essays are frank expressions of an earnest soul who pleads for discussion without uncharitable judgment of those who differ. But on certain questions his prejudice is so strong that he does not always succeed in taking his own advice."
Boston Transcript p3 S 8 '28 600w

"His discussion of the various matters he takes up is clear as crystal in its statement. Its two most outstanding qualities are humor and sound common sense."
+ N Y Times p14 S 2 '28 420w

"With his general criticisms many will agree, though it needs to be pointed out that what he calls the 'contagion of the parish house' has largely resulted from the attempted adaptation of religion to modern social needs. His constructive suggestions are somewhat less cogent than his adverse criticisms. This is particularly true in the realm of dogma."
+ — Springf'd Republican p10 Ag 28 '28 560w

"Giving full weight to its contradictory parts, every one who knew even slightly the author in his more genial, more temperate, earlier days, must regret the publication of this farrago of vituperation." Florence Kelley
— Survey 61:449 Ja 1 '29 820w

"Full of humour, with an undertone which manifests a knowledge of the secrets of men's hearts, this work may be regarded as an unusual work on pastoral theology."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p839 N 8 '28 200w

FITZGERALD, EDWARD. See Foy, E., pseud.

FITZPATRICK, BENEDICT. Ireland and the foundations of Europe. 451p $4 Funk

914.15 Ireland—Civilization. Europe—Civilization. Ireland—History 27-24646

The author of "Ireland and the making of Britain" tells the story of the work of medieval Irish scholars and missionaries in restoring the civilization of Europe and establishing Christianity. The story covers a period of about five hundred years, beginning with the mission of St Columbanus and his company in the sixth century, and ending with the works of the monastic founder, Marianus Scotus, and his successors in the eleventh and twelfth centuries.

Boston Transcript p6 Ja 14 '28 180w
Cath World 127:630 Ag '28 320w

"The book is informative and the chapter on Johannes Scotus Erigena is valuable. But Mr Fitzpatrick's book is uncritical, and it is spoiled on too many pages by a perfervid nationalism." Walter Mennloch
+ — Dial 85:164 Ag '28 330w
Nation 127:68 Jl 18 '28 160w

Reviewed by Shaemas O'Sheel
+ N Y Evening Post p8 Jl 7 '28 720w

"Shows the aggressive Irish spirit at its best." W: MacDonald
+ N Y Times p7 F 5 '28 400w

"Despite our objection to its too ambitious title and its rather arrogant preface, we have read this book with ever increasing pleasure. It is really what it professes to be—a work of surpassing interest both for the student and the general reader. We congratulate Mr. Fitzpatrick on the result." Robert Dunlop
+ — Sat R of Lit 4:926 Je 2 '28 1200w

"If his work cannot be classed as scientific history, it cannot be disregarded, for it offers a wealth of interesting material and has revealed sources that others can evaluate."
+ — Springf'd Republican p10 D 22 '27 160w
Times [London] Lit Sup p88 F 9 '28 850w

FITZPATRICK, EDWARD AUGUSTUS, and HUTSON, PERCIVAL W. Scholarship of teachers in secondary schools. 2v in 1 109; 208p $2 Macmillan

371.1 Teachers. Teachers—Training 27-12950

"The authors made exhaustive studies of the practical conditions from various angles. The amount of training and the nature of the training were investigated. Comparisons are made of the courses offered by the secondary schools, those pursued by the teachers in training, and those later taught by them as teachers in secondary schools. The placement or misplacement of teachers is analyzed into its conditioning factors. Each essay contains practical recommendations based on the facts as gathered and interpreted."—School R

Educ R 74:183 N '27 200w
Sat R of Lit 4:485 D 31 '27 850w

"Besides many valuable practical suggestions, the book furnishes examples of scientific investigations carefully executed. In the range of data and in saneness in interpretation, the treatments are important contributions in the field of teacher-training and teacher placement." I. Hu
+ School R 36:477 Je '28 350w

FLANAGAN, MRS HALLIE (FERGUSON). Shifting scenes of the modern European theatre. 280p il $3.50 Coward-McCann

792 Theater—Europe 28-29742

The author is director of the experimental theater at Vassar college. She writes of a recent tour of European theaters and the work that is being done in the theaters of London, Dublin, also Paris, Leningrad, Prague, Vienna and the rest, introducing the great playwrights and producers who are shaping the theater of today.

"Mrs. Flanagan writes with a notable combination of fluency in words and ideas. She vitalizes everything she views; she has an intelligent and interesting, an unusual thought upon everything coming within the range of her vision." W. E. H.
+ Boston Transcript p4 D 19 '28 480w

"By her artless art she mirrors the living theatre of the Continent which she studies, and pictures it in the social environment which creates and nourishes it. By transmitting the impressions of a witty and judicious personality she manages to give the most intelligible and the best proportioned account of the contemporary European theatre now available in English." Hiram Motherwell
+ N Y Times p7 D 23 '28 1350w

FLAUBERT, GUSTAVE. Golden tales; with a preface by George Saintsbury. 323p $2.50 Dodd [7s 6d Nash & G.]

The longest of the four tales in this collection is the Temptation of St Anthony, which George Saintsbury in the preface pronounces Flaubert's greatest work. The other tales are A simple heart; The legend of St Julian the Hospitaller; Herodias.

Reviewed by B. R. Redman
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 My 20 '28 200w

"Whether it be in the remarkable telling of the Saint's temptations or in the quiet tale of simple Felicite, a unique quality is present. It is the result of painstaking and labored rewriting through which all Flaubert's manuscripts (except the early ones) went, and out of the torture of twisting phrases this way and that until they sounded prettily on the ear and read easily to the eye comes every wonderful bit that we find in the short stories. Pity that a translation has robbed them of most of their beauty."
+ Boston Transcript p4 Je 9 '28 250w
New Statesman 31:194 My 19 '28 1350w

FLAUBERT, GUSTAVE—Continued

"It is a pleasant thing to have translations (which are on the whole excellent) of Flaubert's 'Trois Contes' and 'La Tentation de Saint-Antoine' in a single neat and unpretentious volume. The book justifies itself without needing to appeal to Professor Saintsbury's introductory essay. That is a superadded delight."

\+ Times [London] Lit Sup p393 My 24 '28 800w

FLEG, EDMOND. Life of Moses; tr. from the French by Stephen Haden Guest. 276p $3 Dutton [12s 6d Gollancz]

220.9 Moses 28-29464

The author is a Frenchman. He is also a Jew, a poet, and a student of the ancient Hebrew writings. His life of Moses is written from the standpoint of the Jew, in a poetic, semi-Biblical style and is a compound of Old Testament and Talmudic material.

"A highly imaginary and heavily dramatized life of Moses. Heavily pretentious, written in semi-biblical language, terribly serious, mystical and inspired, it is the kind of book which only the sternest sense of a reviewer's duty can force me to read. It seems to me to be more oppressive than impressive." Leonard Woolf

— Nation and Ath 44:110 O 20 '28 150w

"Fleg's 'Life of Moses' is on the whole the truest, the best and the most wholesome that can be put into the hands of a reader today." Dr S: Schulman

\+ — N Y Evening Post p9m D 22 '28 600w

"The task the author set himself to make of Moses a human figure, yet the majestic friend of the Eternal, is achieved with an almost startling mastery. There is a texture singularly fine and shimmering to the prose that the translator must have been, at times, at his wit's end to render. And yet he has rendered it. For so far as the reader is concerned the book might have been written in English." H: J. Forman

\+ N Y Times p9 D 23 '28 1500w

"An extremely interesting effort at the biography of an almost legendary figure, written with poetic imagination and with a fine sense of fitness in language."

\+ Outlook 150:1372 D 19 '28 60w

Sat R 146:474 O 13 '28 580w

"To those who wish to know something of the atmosphere of the Rabbinical literature, with its allegories, its fantastic imaginings, and its many high spiritual conceptions, this 'Life' is to be recommended." C: C. Torrey

\+ Sat R of Lit 5:554 D 29 '28 500w

"The Life of Moses is a great subject, and Monsieur Edmond Fleg, a distinguished French writer, himself a Jew, might, one would have thought, have been an excellent biographer. But we are disappointed. M. Fleg's method is to take the Old Testament, the Talmud, and all the Hebrew commentators on them both, and to further commentate and elaborate himself. He makes no attempt at an historical interpretation of the times, the ways of thought of the people, or the rôle which Moses played."

— Spec 141:380 S 22 '28 120w

"If not in the usual sense history, it reaches in parts so high a level of dramatic interpretation as in the fuller meaning to be entitled to the name. It is only just to add that to this effect the translator has in no small degree contributed."

\+ Times [London] Lit Sup p676 S 27 '28 1000w

FLETCHER, JOSEPH SMITH. Black house in Harley street. 281p $2 Doubleday, Doran

"J. S. Fletcher's latest contains practically all of the more violent tricks of the trade, with hypnotism as the main exhibit and the Countess of Maxton's diamonds a close second. No secret is made of the super-fiend's identity—it's Dr. von Mildart, leader of a frightful underworld gang, who engineers explosions, captures yachts, robs the peerage and invents tortures of diabolical ingenuity."—Books (N Y Herald Tribune)

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p14 Jl 22 '28 110w

N Y Times p18 Jl 29 '28 180w

FLETCHER, JOSEPH SMITH. Double chance. 276p $2 Dodd [7s 6d Nash]

28-13910

Clinton Mannersley escapes from prison and returns home hoping to clear himself of the charge of forgery. Instead he is accused of the murder of his uncle, which occurs the night of his return. Clinton's sweetheart believes in his innocence but the evidence is all against him. There is none against the man whom Clinton suspects, however, until Scotland Yard supplies it.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 Je 10 '28 100w

"The reader (like the detective) picks out the villain fairly early, and the main interest of the book lies in the ingenious investigations that are necessary to prove his villainy. If only for a change, this method—not, of course, altogether original—seems to us worth exploitation. The plot with the overwhelmingly 'surprising denouement' is rather played out—the surprise is so often disappointing. Here, at any rate, Mr. Fletcher has given us a tale which is well above even his own standard of readableness and interest."

\+ New Statesman 31:302 Je 9 '28 110w

N Y Times p16 Jl 1 '28 200w

"An ingenious, pleasantly written yarn, though the author lets his cats out of the bag somewhat prematurely."

\+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p489 Je 28 '28 80w

FLETCHER, JOSEPH SMITH. I'd venture all for thee! 305p $2 Doubleday, Doran

28-11817

"A stirring yarn of romantic adventure on the Yorkshire coast of England just after the Stuart Rising in Scotland in 1745. Its hero is a young Scot whose family, earls of Scotland, had thrown all they had into the ill-fated attempt of Charles to regain the English throne and, the last living member of his race, he flees across the border disguised as a cattle drover. The reader meets him at a busy town in Yorkshire, where his disguise is suspected by the leader of a band of criminals who lay plans to capture him for the price that has been set on his head. For the next few months the young Scot leads a busy life, and the reader follows his fortunes, sometimes promising but oftener black and threatening, with tense interest."—N Y Times

---

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 Ap 8 '28 130w

"If Mr. Fletcher continues to do this sort of thing so well, Sabatini must look to his laurels. I have, however, a suspicion that this novel is not recently written, that it was published in England some years ago, and that it now appears for the first time in an American edition. I may be wrong in this, but whether the story is old or new, it is equally appealing to the taste of the reader of historical fiction." E. F. Edgett

\+ Boston Transcript p9 Mr 31 '28 450w

"It is an exciting tale, whose interest the author has doubled by a colorful background of time and place. In a foreword he says that this background is historically accurate and that in his young hero he has embodied the true story of one of his forebears."

\+ N Y Times p24 Ap 1 '28 180w

FLETCHER, JOSEPH SMITH. Murder in the Pallant. 309p $2 Knopf [7s 6d H. Jenkins]
28-3693

"A respectable old solicitor in a sleepy country town is discovered murdered in his office, his watch and jewelry stolen from his person and his cash rifled from his drawer. The sapient police superintendent of the town quickly declares it to be a plain and obvious case of burglary followed by murder, but in the course of a few chapters becomes equally certain that an entirely different theory is correct. So it goes on. Bit after bit of new evidence turns up to confound his surmises and alter the incidence of suspicion, until it is found that on the night of the crime the quiet solicitor's office was a buzzing centre of roguery, and the superintendent, more by luck than by judgment is able to lay his hands on two scoundrels, one a particular crony of his own."—Times [London] Lit Sup

Booklist 24:283 Ap '28

"Say what you will, a Fletcher mystery—and this is a typically good one—does carry you painlessly and eagerly along from the ensanguined discovery to final handcuffs, and certainly part of the trick has to do with the author's respect for our old friend verisimilitude." Will Cuppy
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p16 Ja 22 '28 110w

"Readers who expect a good mystery story from Mr Fletcher will not be disappointed in this volume."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p820 N 10 '27 120w

FLETCHER, JOSEPH SMITH. Pinfold. 314p [2] $2 Doubleday, Doran [7s 6d Long]
28-29728

Instead of his usual mystery story this time Mr Fletcher has written a quiet, sombre story of Yorkshire rustic life, which in its narrowness and bondage to the soil is likened to that of animals penned in the village cattle pound, or pinfold.

" 'The Pinfold' is slow moving and at times a very dull tale. Its interest is mainly antiquarian, and the somewhat 'penny-dreadful' action the author does interpolate is just that—an interpolation."
— Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p20 N 4 '28 200w

" 'The Pinfold' is reminiscent of the vigor of the George Eliot, Thomas Hardy tradition in the English novel, and one hopes that Mr. Fletcher will not hereafter make the mystery story his exclusive province." Edwin Seaver
+ N Y Evening Post p9m D 1 '28 130w
Sat R of Lit 5:560 D 29 '28 130w

FLETCHER, JOSEPH SMITH. Three days' terror. 320p $2 Clode
28-9468

A mysterious group threatens to bring a reign of terror to London if the Prime Minister does not pay over a huge sum of money within three days. The warning is ignored, and on the specified day a cataclysm strikes Charing Cross. Henry Graham, newly elected member of Parliament, is appointed to seek out the heart of the terrifying mystery.

"Of the master's livelier treatises." Will Cuppy
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 My 6 '28 100w
N Y Times p25 My 6 '28 280w

FLETCHER, JOSEPH SMITH. Wrist mark. 288p $2 Knopf
28-25956

While Colonel Engleden was governor of Southmoor prison two prisoners escaped and were never heard of again. Many years later Colonel Engleden recognized the men in a Yorkshire village, but before he could communicate his knowledge he was murdered. The Colonel's nephew and a friend arrive in haste to investigate. The only clue is a birth-mark on the wrist of one of the former convicts; with that as a starting point they begin the hunt.

"The sleuthing is A No. 1." Will Cuppy
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 N 18 '28 150w

Reviewed by Russell Crouse
N Y Evening Post p9m N 10 '28 480w

"Mr. Fletcher is not at his best in this story."
— N Y Times p34 N 25 '28 120w

"None of it is as exciting as it should have been, though the book will no doubt do well enough for confirmed Fletcher addicts."
— + Sat R of Lit 5:440 D 1 '28 140w
Springf'd Republican p7e D 2 '28 200w

FLEXNER, JENNIE MAAS. Circulation work in public libraries. (Library curriculum studies) 320p $2.50 A.L.A.

025.6 Library science. Libraries—Circulation, loans 27-26961

The first of a series of proposed A.L.A. texts for use in library schools is a textbook on the functions, aims, methods and routine of circulation work, based on an analysis of data gathered from more than fifty libraries. Questions and bibliographies are given with each chapter, and there is an index.

Booklist 24:45 N '27
Boston Transcript p2 Ap 14 '28

"Every phase of the library work that may properly be classified as circulation work has been treated by Miss Flexner in a sane, tolerant, sympathetic, understanding fashion. Anyone engaged in any phase of library work will read the book with profit and enjoyment."
+ Libraries 33:42 Ja '28 300w
Pratt p6 spring '28
Wis Lib Bul 24:52 F '28

FLIGHT, CLAUDE. Lino-cuts. 51p il $3 Dodd [2] [10s 6d Lane]

760 Linoleum-block printing 28-28346

An illustrated handbook on the modern art of cutting and printing from linoleum blocks. The plates, in color and black and white, illustrate finished blocks and the steps necessary to print them in color. Materials and tools for the linocutter are described and sketched.

Booklist 25:110 D '28
Times [London] Lit Sup p42 Ja 19 '28 330w

FLORENCE, PHILIP SARGANT. Economics and human behaviour; a reply to social psychologists. (New science ser.) 95p $1 Norton [2s 6d K. Paul]

330 Economics. Social psychology 28-26347

"The conflict that has come about between the protagonists of the ancient science of economics and the new science of psychology is the theme of this recent addition to the [New science] series. P. Sargant Florence, who gives both sides a fair hearing and then, after the manner of the practical judge, suggests a compromise, was formerly a member of the New York Bureau of Industrial Research and is now lecturer in economics in Magdalene College, Cambridge University."—N Y Times

Reviewed by Z. C. Dickinson
Am Econ R 18:276 Je '28 580w
Booklist 24:347 Je '28

"His thesis is ably presented in language which the layman can understand."
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p19 D 18 '27 160w
Int J Ethics 38:364 Ap '28 180w
N Y Times p18 Ja 15 '28 350w
Pol Sci Q 43:307 Je '28 350w

FLORENCE, P. S.—Continued
Reviewed by Bruno Lasker
Survey 61:43 O 1 '28 120w

Times [London] Lit Sup p356 My 19 '27 250w

Wis Lib Bul 24:187 Je '28

FLOWER, WALTER NEWMAN. Franz Schubert; the man and his circle. 369p il $5 Stokes [15s Cassell]

B or 92 Schubert, Franz Peter 28-26938

An authoritative story of the life of Schubert which gathers fresh illumination from correspondence never used before. The author centers his attention on Schubert and his friends, and does not attempt to analyse or appraise Schubert's compositions.

"Newman Flower's interesting work includes much new material made available by two years of research. In his foreword he disclaims any attempt to deal critically with Schubert's music. His aim is to present a picture of the man and his circle, and this he has done with a wealth of detail and as completely as his temperament allows. But the perfect Schubert biographer must be more in sympathy with the Viennese spirit than Mr. Flower has shown himself to be." Blanche Bloch

+ — Nation 127:577 N 28 '28 700w

"He succeeds in giving all the important facts (including one not usually given), and in painting a dim, laborious, but fairly convincing portrait of his sitter."

— + Nation and Ath 44:sup236 N 10 '28 100w

"A pretty full, faithful, well-documented and profusely illustrated account of the composer's life and one that, on the whole, is the best record of Schubert that we have in English." W. J. Turner

+ — New Statesman 31:756 S 29 '28 1650w

"Mr. Flower's style is workmanlike, without frills or excursions into 'fine writing.' Many will think it rather too workmanlike and matter-of-fact for the treatment of such a subject. Nevertheless, it is, despite a certain bareness, a good chronicle of Schubert and of his friends and of the Vienna of a century ago, where he lived his humble life and dreamed his magic music." T. R. Ybarra

+ — N Y Times p5 N 25 '28 1200w

"No doubt, Mr. Flower's book has gained in flavor and interest by the use which its author was allowed to make of sources not hitherto tapped, or only sparingly so. All would have been for the best, had Mr. Flower stuck to his facts and not occasionally indulged in suppositions and conclusions for which there does not seem to exist real warrant." Carl Engel

Sat R of Lit 5:424 D 1 '28 500w

FOERSTER, NORMAN. American criticism; a study in literary theory from Poe to the present. 273p $3.50 Houghton

801 Literary criticism. American literature—History and criticism 28-13812

In this study of the development of criticism in America Mr Foerster analyzes the literary creeds of Poe, Emerson, Lowell and Whitman.

Booklist 25:20 O '28
Reviewed by Johan Smertenko
Bookm 68:361 N '28 300w

"Mr. Foerster's exposition is so evenhanded, so good tempered, so studiously objective and proportioned that no sane man could accuse him of bias. He may not have said the last word on the subject, but he has said his say on the final grounds." Newton Arvin

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p4 Je 17 '28 1350w

"Lucid and beautifully planned treatise." J. F. S.

+ Boston Transcript p4 Je 30 '28 680w

"One wishes that in his attack on present-day critics he might have been a little more specific and in his illustrations of the past somewhat more terse, that this enlightening study need not be, as it sometimes is, dull."

+ — Dial 85:267 S '28 60w

Reviewed by Van Wyck Brooks

+ Ind 120:580 Je 16 '28 1050w

"Mr. Norman Foerster has done an important service that long waited to be done: he has analyzed the literary theories of Poe, Emerson, Lowell, and Whitman. His task was no easy one, for, except in Poe's essays, these theories are scattered through a great number of works; and he has extracted, compared, and pieced together these critical obiter dicta with no little acumen. All this was worth doing; and Mr. Foerster (within his limitations) has done it well. I trust that no one interested in American literature and criticism will over-look this book . . . It is a matter for regret that the positive scholarship of Mr. Foerster's book should be vitiated by the tedious party war-cries and the empty party labels that still unite the academic battalions which have rallied to Mr. Irving Babbitt." L: Mumford

+ — New Repub 56:50 Ag 29 '28 1300w

"In spite of all the curious inconsistencies, the woolly metaphysics, incoherence and special pleading, quite out of proportion to the matter at hand, there is a challenging element in the mass of material Mr. Foerster has collected from American criticism and his looting of the idealistic thinkers of the ancient past. But the present writer has little confidence in the conception that American criticism made possible such literature as we have. Apparently, Mr. Foerster takes some stock in Lowell's dictum, for it appears at the front of his book." Edwin Clark

— + N Y Times p2 Jl 8 '28 1800w

Pratt p29 autumn '28

"Mr. Foerster's exposition is full, detailed, and clear: he has that abundant familiarity with his worthies which years of mediation between them and college classes inevitably bring; he writes with a distinction not usual in American academies; but that is all. His familiarity strikes me as being without insight, so that his book appears as an ordering of externals and details, using all the expository devices of the classroom, the skilful repetitions, and the masterly summaries in italics, but not a sensitive empathy of the central life." H. M. Kallen

— + Sat R of Lit 5:512 D 15 '28 1500w

Springf'd Republican p10 My 26 '28 200w

"We have many reasons for being grateful to Mr. Foerster—the fairness of his exposition, the originality of his analysis, the thoroughness of his research—but not the least is the clarity of his statement of the humanist program, a clarity which is certain to aid in further discussion of these important problems. His book is not pungently written; it is not 'exciting'; it is not revolutionary. But it does two things and it does them well: It gives us the background of American criticism—a task which the cultural nationalists ought to have undertaken years ago; and it states with admirable precision the most carefully formulated and perhaps the most influential of contemporary critical systems. In respect to criticism, America is making progress and that progress Mr Foerster's book is certain to further." Granville Hicks

+ Springf'd Republican p7f Je 10 '28 2150w

"His method hardly justifies the description of 'critical analysis' which he applies to it. It shows more of the collector's industry than the selector's concentration. He seeks by quotation and paraphrase to reformulate the critical thought of each of his subjects, and he does it in such a way that it is often difficult both to disentangle the main thread of his argument or of his subject's thought and to be certain which it is that is being put before us. . . Certainly, Mr. Foerster's book, despite its diffuseness, should be of help to those, whether in Europe or in America, who are seeking amid the conflicting forces of to-day for something more than a negative compromise."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p704 O 4 '28 2000w

Wis Lib Bul 24:250 O '28

FOGHT, HAROLD WALDSTEIN, and FOGHT, MRS ALICE MABEL (ROBBINS). Unfathomed Japan; a travel tale in the highways and byways of Japan and Formosa. 438p il $5 (21s) Macmillan

915.2 Japan—Description and travel. Japan—Social life and customs. Education—Japan. Formosa—Description and travel. Education—Formosa 28-20108

A conventional travel book written by an educator and his wife who visited Japan as the guests of the National association for the encouragement of learning. Naturally the authors have a good deal to say about educational matters, but they write of other phases of Japanese life too, and of the Japanese notables whom they came to know.

"There is always room for one more book about Japan, especially when, as in the present case, the two authors have new material at hand. Not all the material of the book is new, by any means, but the book is so wholly personal, so intimate in its manner, that it gains the impression of freshness and originality." D. L. M.

+ Boston Transcript p7 S 15 '28 480w

"Though the authors traveled widely and observed discriminatingly, and though their descriptions are in many parts novel and delightful, the book as a whole is distinctly tedious."

— + Living Age 335:156 O '28 60w

"This book is both interesting and instructive and gives about as comprehensive a picture of Japan and the Japanese as one could ask. As educators, the authors had access to most of the notables of Japanese society and they present interesting character sketches of these men together with their views on the future of Japan." Milton Byron

+ Outlook 150:1171 N 14 '28 120w

Springf'd Republican p10 N 1 '28 520w

"The book is a little intense in tone and rather too detailed in unimportant places to attract more than a limited number of readers."

— Times [London] Lit Sup p1015 D 20 '28 220w

FOLLETT, BARBARA NEWHALL. Voyage of the Norman D., as told by the cabin-boy. 255p $2 (7s 6d) Knopf

910.4 Seafaring life 28-8376

"A 'profound devotion to pirates and things piratical' sent the thirteen-year-old Barbara Follett voyaging from New Haven to Nova Scotia in a sailing vessel. Her experience, retold in a series of letters to a distant friend, is now printed in book form for the delight of other girls and boys, followers of the sea, and people with theories about education."—N Y Evening Post

Booklist 24:407 Jl '28

"A vivid, unaffected book."

+ Bookm 67:xviii Jl '28 50w

"She relies on none of the cheap puerilities which made Daisy Ashford temporarily famous, nor is she another Opal Whitely. Her writing has to be judged as writing, not as juvenilia. And it is good. She is a trained reporter. Her memory is like a card-index. But she can be poetical as well as piratical." W: McFee

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p3 My 20 '28 850w

"It is a fascinating book from several points of view; chiefly, I think, because it is a good piece of writing apart from any consideration of the author's age. Barbara shows the same delight in natural beauty which came out so strongly in her 'House Without Windows,' but she expresses it more easily and more maturely. Her sense of form, of the dramatic suspense of a story, has grown and her feeling for the drama and humor of character has developed." H. H. Owen

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p8 Jl 1 '28 630w

"Positively and favorably, the young author has strong narrative ability. She can sustain action, give the impression of moving onward, ever onward. She has a real love of the beautiful. And what is more, her knowledge of sailing ships—if it is authentic, and we cannot vouch for it either way—is considerable." A. C.

+ Boston Transcript p4 Je 16 '28 400w

"The book as a whole is self-conscious, insincere, studied in its effects, and this is chiefly because the author is not equipped for adventure; she has merely a sense of excitement."

— Nation 127:300 S 26 '28 100w

"Her narrative misses but few tricks of successful writing. So much of the youthful zest for material details seeps through that the reader himself is likely to start for the dictionary to look up sails or knots. In her story are the humor and sagacity belonging to children and simple men, and there is rare sensitiveness to all delight and beauty. Not in the least callow are the descriptions of gulls and fogs and gales. These patches set in a story of true ingenuousness form a book of unusual and lingering charm." Harriet Sampson

+ N Y Evening Post p13 Mr 24 '28 440w

Reviewed by Margery Latimer

N Y World p7m Jl 1 '28 300w

"It is not in the least like the earlier book, but it is in every respect as remarkable. The young lady fell in love with sail, and one would have to search far in all the extensive literature of the sea for any more moving appreciation of the beauties of a winged vessel than may be found here. We are all a little uneasy in the presence of prodigies, I think, but there is nothing to be uneasy about with Miss Follett. She is an excellent writer regardless of age, and she has proved that, unlike so many of her elders, she can do two entirely different types of book equally well."

+ No Am 225:adv My '28 150w

St Louis 26:329 O '28

" 'The Voyage of the Norman D.' is a fine, sustained and vivid piece of writing that would do credit to a writer of any age, and I very much doubt whether an older mind would have got so much out of the experience or brought nearly so much to the writing of it." M. W. Bianco

+ Sat R of Lit 4:943 Je 9 '28 650w

"The charm of the book is drawn largely from freshness of observation and a keen exhilarating, youthful enthusiasm; she was realizing a long-cherished ambition by making a voyage in a sailing ship, and inevitably she saw skies and waves, sails and men in a light that is denied to maturer eyes. By itself, however, this circumstance must only have resulted in a naive and possibly amusing narrative. 'The Voyage of the Norman D.' is very much more than that, for its ingenuousness is preserved, yet embellished, by a literary craftsmanship which would do credit to an experienced writer."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p360 My 10 '28 120w

FOOTE, JOHN TAINTOR. Trub's diary. 270p $2 (7s 6d) Appleton

28-10884

Trouble, a lively bull pup, called Trub for short, sets down his adventures day by day and his observations on his men and animal friends.

Booklist 25:71 N '28

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p9 Ag 12 '28 80w

FOOTE, J: T.—Continued

"Few present day writers have been so successful in their stories of dogs as has Mr. Foote. You cannot help liking Trub and his adventures and his observations are so inexpressibly funny that the diary is a genuine delight."

\+ Boston Transcript p2 Je 27 '28 130w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:364 Jl '28

"Few can tell a racy dog story as he does, and the reader must be dull who does not find a laugh in nearly every page of this entertaining book."

\+ Times [London] Lit Sup p453 Je 14 '28 110w

FOOTNER, HULBERT. Cap'n Sue. 314p $2 Doubleday, Doran [7s 6d Hodder & S.]

28-7954

A story of bootlegging and love in the backwaters of the Chesapeake. A boy and girl on neighboring farms of doubtful worth in southern Maryland get mixed up in a bootlegging game when a plausible stranger arrives and talks the girl into co-operation with him. The neighbor lad tries to keep Sue out of it but must content himself with working hard on the farm until Sue's fling has its disappointing ending and she turns back to him.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p9 Ag 19 '28 60w

N Y Times p22 N 4 '28 200w

"For feather-weight summer reading, 'Cap'n Sue' may perhaps do. But really—it should have been born a movie."

Sat R of Lit 5:92 S 1 '28 150w

Times [London] Lit Sup p649 S 22 '27 180w

FOOTNER, HULBERT. Queen of clubs. 313p $2 Doubleday, Doran [7s 6d Collins]

27-24946

The improbable adventures of an heiress who runs a night club for her own amusement, falls in love with a noble-hearted crook, and is generally, tho innocently, involved in the schemes of a blackmailer.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 F 5 '28 70w

"The central idea of 'Queen of Clubs,' that a debutante should purchase a night club, has engaging possibilities. Mr. Footner never forgets that his task is to tell a story. He tells a yarn and no more, never once investing his characters with an atom of personality, or humanity. They are tintypes in an age hopelessly addicted to photographs."

— \+ Boston Transcript p7 Ap 7 '28 200w

"The element of mystery enters only to a slight degree, and that toward the end of the book. The story is entertaining enough, and if you are able to believe, for the time being, in such a girl as Carola the rest is easily swallowed."

\+ — N Y Times p14 Ja 15 '28 220w

Times [London] Lit Sup p245 Mr 29 '28 110w

FOOTNER, HULBERT. Velvet hand. 333p $2[2] Doubleday, Doran

28-29077

Four new episodes in which Madame Storey proves her skill. Contents: The viper: The steerers; The pot of pansies; The legacy hounds.

N Y Times p30 D 9 '28 130w

Reviewed by W. R. Brooks

Outlook 150:1418 D 26 '28 120w

FORBES, ESTHER (MRS A. L. HOSKINS). Mirror for witches. 214p il $2.50 Houghton [7s 6d Heinemann]

28-12074

The story of a child rescued by an English sea captain, Bilby, who witnessed the holocaust of witches at Mont Hoël in Brittany, in which her parents were burned to death. Soon after, Bilby sailed for America to join the colony at Massachusetts Bay, taking the child with him, and there, known and famed as Bilby's Doll, she lived her brief life, close by the town of Salem. Her foster-mother hated her, and her determination to brand Doll as a witch combined with the terrors and hallucinations of the child's own fear-ridden mind to drive her into a real witch frenzy. Convinced that she was guilty of sundry acts of witchcraft, the good Puritans of Salem had her tried as a witch and cast into jail. But she was never hung. A fate less kind, if anything, was reserved for her.

Booklist 24:403 Jl '28

"She tells a story, a truly enchanting, bewitching story, on which your bed-side light is likely to shine until you reach that last fine paragraph which seems to me admirable. Without any false archaisms or spurious affected quaintness of style, she manages with modern words to give a seventeenth century tone and flavor." J: Macy

\+ Bookm 67:429 Je '28 180w

"Miss Forbes has drawn this unworldly character with a high degree of astuteness, and though the book is impregnated with a fantastic color, yet it is reasonably and logically developed. There is ample suggestion of the old New England here, a remarkable creation of a witch-trial, and a flowing and clear prose that is admirably heightened by its slight formality." Herbert Gorman

\+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p3 Ap 29 '28 1200w

"This is a terrific novel, a marvelous novel, a page of history torn open ruthlessly and thrust before our eyes. It is a novel which gives us furiously to think; a little, for all its weird mood of unearthliness that relieves it from being sordid, to tremble." I. W. Lawrence

Boston Transcript p4 Ap 28 '28 2600w

Reviewed by E. F. Edgett

Boston Transcript p5 My 19 '28 420w

"It is a remarkable piece of work, a thing of beauty in itself, and a subtle study of a strange and hectic period in our history. Nor for one phrase does Miss Forbes depart from the rich leisure of her style, embroidered as it is by the passions of a New England that concentrated its intensity on persecution of evil—a sublimation of passion, as it were."

\+ Chicago Tribune p13 Ap 28 '28 400w

Cleveland Open Shelf p90 Jl '28

"Set against a background of primitive New England, touched with the awful splendor of ancient magic, this latest novel by the author of 'O Genteel Lady' possesses a dark and beautiful fertility."

\+ Ind 120:581 Je 16 '28 160w

Reviewed by A. B. Parsons

\+ Nation 126:616 My 30 '28 900w

"She has held up not only a mirror for witches, but a magic reflection of New England's past. Even her style, a highly artificial affair that could be disastrous in less capable hands, is quite convincing. It might well be the result of saturation in old documents, letter books and diaries, or a slightly diminished echo of the old English rhythms of speech which yet survive in rural New England." K. A. Porter

\+ New Repub 55:256 Jl 25 '28 420w

N Y Times p8 Ap 29 '28 950w

"The excellent story of Doll's life is dimmed a bit by the excitement in the language and then, having been overappreciative, the style itself seems to dim toward the end of the book. But if the book were read slowly and in the decent, devout spirit of piety and humbleness, read slowly, one chapter each Sunday, you would not feel this flatness at the end—such flatness coming from unholy overexcitement at the beginning." Margery Latimer

N Y World p10m Ap 29 '28 950w

Reviewed by Harry Salpeter
+ N Y World p8m My 13 '28 900w

Reviewed by Herschel Brickell
No Am 225:adv Je '28 80w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:428 O '28

"A charming, archaic-looking volume, with vigorous, modern wood-cuts. Described vividly, in a style which is excellent when it forgets to be as archaic as the format. The book, however, ends with a tour de force which, while excellent as narrative, prevents its being a real 'mirror' of all witches, but a study of only one." S. F. Damon
+ — Sat R of Lit 4:881 My 19 '28 350w

"The atmosphere of the book is entirely true to the seventeenth century. And the characters which move in this atmosphere are clearly and delicately drawn. They come very near, in spite of their remote setting. The tiny, stunted figure of Doll is full of pathos and beauty, and Jared, with all the characteristics of the conventional sea captain, yet succeeds in being individual and charming." Edith Olivier
+ Sat R of Lit 4:930 Je 2 '28 850w

"This is an unusual novel. Admirably produced."
+ Spec 141:409 S 29 '28 280w

Springf'd Republican p7f Je 3 '28 600w

Reviewed by Beulah Amidon
Survey 60:559 S 1 '28 350w

Wis Lib Bul 24:191 Je '28

FORBES, MRS HARRIETTE (MERRIFIELD). Gravestones of early New England and the men who made them, 1653-1800. 141p il $10 Houghton

718 Sepulchral monuments. Stone-cutters
27-28096

"Mrs. Forbes carries out her study in a logical and comprehensive way. First dealing with the stone itself, she investigates the source from which it came, whether it was of native or foreign material, how it was bought and sold, who made it and how and where they got their designs. Then in half a dozen or more chapters she takes up the work of representative stone-cutters who worked in and around Boston and in near-by towns during the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries, telling who they were, how they worked, the important stones they cut, and how those carvings were a mirror of the time."—N Y Times

---

"It is curiously fascinating, curiously free from either the 'quaintness' of the collections of inscriptions or the morbidity you might suppose would attach to a volume illustrated with scores of photographs of tombstones. Naturally her work is not complete, even within the New England field, but it may inspire a few kindred studies for other parts of the country."
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p15 F 12 '28 400w

"What might very well be a painfully dry subject has in this book been given a real interest, especially to anyone who delights in early Americana. . . The text is gratefully free from the labored facetiousness with which many writers would have felt it necessary to adorn a book on this subject." E. B. S.
+ Boston Transcript p3 Ja 28 '28 480w

"Her book, with its many scores of illustrations beautifully reproduced from excellent photographs of gravestones, finds in these examples of craftsmanship a key that unlocks and brings into the light many interesting phases of the life of New England through 150 years." F. F. Kelley
+ N Y Times p6 Ja 8 '28 550w

Reviewed by G: D. Seymour
+ Sat R of Lit 5:56 Ag 18 '28 500w

"It is certain to attract attention and be welcomed by antiquarians, professional or amateur, as far afield as it may reach."
+ Springf'd Republican p10 D 23 '27 350w

FORBES, HELEN CADY. Araminta. 229p il $1.75 Macmillan
27-24269

Eleven-year-old Araminta finds a baby that has been "thrown away." She is reluctant to give it up, but when the baby's grandfather comes to claim it, he invites Araminta to visit his home in Boston where she has a most wonderful time. Illustrated.

Booklist 24:210 F '28

Boston Transcript p3 Ja 14 '28 230w

"Certainly here is childhood actually recreated in no fairy world, but as it lies about us in our blindness, with the writer's adult sense of humor and discernment of beauty generously translated into the very terms of a child's mind. This is high praise and must be modified immediately by the rather rueful reflection that the story is after all 'slight.' "
+ Sat R of Lit 4:536 Ja 21 '28 600w

FORBES, ROSITA (TORR) (MRS ARTHUR THOMAS MCGRATH). Adventure. 309p $4 Houghton [15s Cassell]

910 Voyages and travels [28-22016]

One of the world's most traveled women chooses from an abundant store of experiences the high moments of many journeys for retelling here. The title is apt, for this is pure adventure—of the spirit as often as of the body. Mrs Forbes herself calls the book "a gipsy salad—some incidents, excitements and impressions of twelve highly-seasoned years."

"The book combines a keen sense of the unusual and the fascinating with the personal philosophy and characteristic emotional reactions of a justly famous woman adventurer."
+ Boston Transcript p4 S 5 '28 140w

Ind 121:189 Ag 25 '28 120w

"The East is not always as breathless as Rosita Forbes makes it, but the magazine readers for whom these reminiscences were originally written do not want to be disillusioned. They like their romance, and nobody knows better than Miss Forbes how to give it them."
New Statesman 31:204 My 19 '28 180w

Reviewed by Harry Hansen
N Y World p7m Ag 12 '28 680w

Times [London] Lit Sup p328 My 3 '28 810w

Wis Lib Bul 24:303 N '28

FORBES, ROSITA (TORR) (MRS ARTHUR THOMAS MCGRATH). Pursuit (Eng title Sirocco). 314p $2 Macaulay [7s 6d Butterworth]
28-11399

Anne, a young English girl, and Lilian her friend, an older woman with an unhappy history, journey to Morocco to escape unwelcome attentions. The suitor in each case follows to the desert, where a childhood friend of Anne's turns up and a man from Lilian's past. The effect of the desert setting, complete with Foreign legion, hostile Arabs and mutual raids, is heightened by the sirocco which blows continuously, driving men and women into a frenzied emotional tangle.

"A stirring tale full of authentic color."
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p8 Ag 12 '28 100w

"The descriptions of the desert, of the sirocco and its deadly influence, of the dreary life led by the Legionnaires, are all realistic enough, but they have all been done before and to our mind in a far more convincing way. Doubtless, however, the book will appeal to those who like a quickly moving narrative written in a style that borders on the exotic." G. B.

FORBES, ROSITA—Continued
+ — Boston Transcript p3 Jl 7 '28 400w

"The story is lively and exciting."
+ Nation and Ath 42:464 D 17 '27 110w
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:428 O '28
Springf'd Republican p7f Ag 26 '28 170w

"Mrs. Forbes is curiously unconvincing when she writes fiction about the Africa that she knows so well. The greater part of 'Sirocco' takes place, at any rate, on the fringe of the Back of Beyond; but, perversely, the most pleasant to read is the comparatively unimportant introductory part of the book in London and the country. The story there is much more concisely told and is both interesting and amusing."
— + Times [London] Lit Sup p978 D 22 '27 80w

FORBES-LEITH, FRANCIS ARTHUR CORNELIUS. Checkmate; fighting tradition in Central Persia. 242p il $3.50 McBride [12s 6d Harrap]

915.5 Persia—Description and travel. Persia—Social life and customs 27-25319

"Major Forbes-Leith's opportunities for observation were unique. As overseer of the huge estate of a Persian nobleman it was his task to control the economic life of some 30,000 ryatts, to administer the law, to command a private army. His powers, derived from the Persian nobleman who employed him, were virtually absolute. There is seldom an instance in which the government impinged upon his authority. This is the story of his experience."—Books (N Y Herald Tribune)

"The story of his experiences is in turn sad, amusing and exciting, and without any great attempt to analyze the peculiar situation in which he was placed he gives an objective picture of life in Persia which no self-conscious investigator could ever draw." F. R. Dulles
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p14 Ja 8 '28 400w
Ind 120:320 Mr 31 '28 200w

"Major Forbes-Leith gives in his reminiscences a vivid illustration of the difficulties besetting the foreigner who attempts to introduce reforms into this conservative eastern country. The volume is written in an entertaining narrative form." K. P. Kirkwood
+ New Repub 53:252 Ja 18 '28 200w
Reviewed by P. W. Wilson
N Y Times p11 Mr 18 '28 300w

"The thrills of these pages are not found in adventures with birds, beasts, and fishes, but in an expedition against famous brigands, intrigues of subtle headmen, the revolt they fostered, and an impossible real journey which ensued."
+ Sat R of Lit 4:596 F 11 '28 300w
Times [London] Lit Sup p363 My 10 '28 160w

FORD, COREY (JOHN RIDDELL, pseud.). [2] Meaning no offense. 177p il $2 Day

817 Parodies 28-29061

John Riddell—or rather Corey Ford—is book reviewer for Vanity Fair. In these pages, he appears at the door of Mrs Ethel Reader, and as Trader Riddell opens his bag of hilariously devastating parodies on best sellers and best selling authors. The cartoons by Covarrubias are of Eugene O'Neill, Mrs Martin Johnson, Theodore Dreiser, Katherine Mayo, Sinclair Lewis, Carl Van Vechten, and William Beebe.

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p9 D 23 '28 150w

"The plan of the whole collection of 'Meaning No Offense' is more gorgeous as burlesque than the contents. But there is little the matter with fully half the contents: you couldn't ask for better, nor more pertinent, parody, for instance, than 'My Trans-Broadway Hop'—which knocks the signed stories of a host of aviators into so many cocked parachutes. Nor could you desire a more telling skit than 'Dead Novelists Are Good Novelists.' "
+ — N Y Times p4 D 9 '28 1100w

" 'Meaning No Offense' contains the best parodies we have seen since the heyday of Christopher Ward. And the Covarrubias illustrations are prime." W: R. Benét
+ Sat R of Lit 5:315 N 3 '28 1350w
Springf'd Republican p6e D 16 '28 200w

FORD, FORD MADOX. Last post. 285p $2.50
Boni [7s 6d Duckworth]
28-2237

The interest in this last book of the series shifts from Christopher Tietjens, hero of Some do not, No more parades, and A man could stand up, to his brother Mark. Embittered by events at the close of the war, Mark has vowed never to leave his bed nor to speak again while he lives. The final twist to his own affairs and the new chapter in Christopher's romance are imparted to the reader thru the stream of Mark's consciousness as the events of a single afternoon, mingled and confused with scenes from the past, flow thru it.

Booklist 24:322 My '28

"Does this last of the Tietjens books the fourth of the series, come off? The answer is that, so far as technique is concerned, it comes off extraordinarily well. That it is practically flawless. The question immediately arises, however, whether a flawless technique is the whole story. 'The Last Post' at times is terribly like a psychopathic ward in some fabulous hospital for world-war wreckage." W: McFee
+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p3 Ja 15 '28 1400w

"Despite the sophistication of the style, this novel cannot escape a certain inchoate quality that goes with its informality. It is as though the author had evolved the art of avoiding art, and came in that way too near to reality for the pleasure of those who still seek what they will call deeper reality in sweeter compositions. Nevertheless, those who have followed the other books of this series will not have to be urged to take this one up." S. V. V. W.
+ — Boston Transcript p4 F 8 '28 480w

"To those who cared only moderately for the first two books, this will not seem important. They will suffer more who held them to be among the few fine novels of our time."
— Dial 84:251 Mr '28 170w

"In this particular book one lives inside the brains of three or four of the principal characters and suffers with each of them. After a few chapters of this sort one experiences a forgotten emotion to read five or six comfortable objective novels by Anthony Trollope."
Ind 120:117 F 4 '28 170w

"Mark himself is so dull, so insanely attached to a whole set of outworn conventions, that his stream of consciousness ceases to be interesting. Mr. Ford struck his high point in 'No More Parades'; he should not have been permitted to write 'The Last Post,' which, far from rounding off his work, will do much to destroy its validity."
— Nation 126:191 F 15 '28 120w

"His characters are all very competently drawn, but they are all stock figures; Mr. Ford has never seized the reality behind the mask. As he is neither a curious nor a subtle writer, in enveloping his theme in confusion Mr. Ford has not succeeded in evoking a sense of the confusion of life, which is enthralling, but has merely raised an artificial psychological hubbub which obscures and retards the action, and irritates the reader. The style is loose, the psychology commonplace; and the whole, indeed, is a disappointing pendant to a meritorious if far too wordy trilogy." Edwin Muir
— Nation and Ath 42:752 F 18 '28 220w

"This allusive method of narration, if somewhat wearing for the reader, is wonderfully effective for conjuring up a living story, for giving us the feeling that we are actually inside the events."

+ — New Repub 53:279 Ja 25 '28 180w

"Last Post suffers from being so hopelessly a sequel. The intricate arrangement of the chapters into long digressions of the characters' thoughts, all resonant with the echoes of the three books that have gone before, makes it extremely obscure to anyone who doesn't know all that they have thought in the same tortuous method already. Last Post is hasty and inconclusive compared to the first two books. To read it by itself is a distinct effort, just as it is a magnificent experience to have read the whole."

— New Statesman 30:533 F 4 '28 550w

"The first three novels did not come off half badly. There were power and incisiveness in his depiction of the strain, the dullness, the muddle, the terrifying senselessness of warfare as seen both in the trenches and behind the lines. Now the concluding volume has appeared. As a picture of the passing of Tory domination, 'The Last Post' is singularly unmoving; as a novel, it is sheer fake." C. P. Fadiman

— N Y Evening Post p14 Ja 21 '28 700w

"The book itself has little to say on its own behalf; in fact, it could hardly have less to say; it may be dismissed unqualifiedly as inchoate in formation and aimless in expression, with no more consistency of texture than the sands of the desert and no more lucidity than a thundercloud."

— N Y Times p9 Ja 15 '28 620w

"This is in no sense a pleasant book, but it is a brilliant display of technique on the part of a great craftsman. The convolute method of telling a story is well used, and there are tense and moving moments, for all the madhouse atmosphere of the action." Herschel Brickell

+ No Am 225:adv Mr '28 200w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:193 Ap '28

"Of all the 'Tietjens' novels 'Last Post' is surely the greatest tour-de-force; its action takes place in a day, yet seems timeless; the chief actors assemble as though for the brief appearance of a curtain-call, yet each brings the sense of a full lifetime with him. It moves with the tempi of life, sometimes tediously slow, sometimes at break-neck speed." L. P. Hartley

+ Sat R 145:199 F 18 '28 750w

"Now that the magnificent war-passages no more transfigure the lives of the group into smoke and flame, the tone is naturally more quiet and sometimes even listless. But one is left with a real sense of having lived through this surprising afternoon, heard these people and even listened to their thoughts. There is something clean and bitter and astringent in the ruthless narrative."

+ Spec 140:168 F 4 '28 180w

"The technic of the book is perhaps the most interesting thing about it, although even there the interest is a tour-de-force rather than a genuine development of artistic structure. It goes without saying that the action of the book takes place almost entirely in the minds of the characters, and surely the 'stream of consciousness' method has been pushed as far as it will go when the chief figure is paralyzed, able to communicate to others only by motions of his eyelids." H. K.

Springf'd Republican p7f Mr 18 '28 560w

Times [London] Lit Sup p47 Ja 19 '28 220w

"We have followed with admiration each volume of this very notable cycle, which represents the fabric of the English nation and English character under the action of unbearable stresses; and though this last is rather a pendant than a conclusion, less tumultuous and not lifted up by the tremendous war-passages of its predecessors, our admiration is anything but diminished."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p60 Ja 26 '28 500w

FORD, FORD MADOX. Little less than gods. 361p $2.50 Viking press [7s 6d Duckworth]

28-23919

This Napoleonic tale is based on the assumption that Marshal Ney did not lose his life before a firing squad but that his friend the Baron de Frèjus sacrificed himself in Ney's stead. George Feilding, a young Englishman, and Madame de Frèjus are lovers. Their story with its whispered tragedy is woven into the larger theme in which an eccentric millionaire, one Assheton Smith, plays almost as large a part as the central figure of the story, Marshel Ney.

"Mr. Ford has told this story with a skill that appears to me undeniable. He has evoked the atmosphere of that dramatic and tragic period when Napoleon returned to France for his last snatch at power with a power that is peculiarly his, and he has written the book in a prose that lends itself curiously to the expression of sudden tense emotion." Herschel Brickell

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p5 N 4 '28 900w

Reviewed by Edgar Johnson

N Y Evening Post p9m N 3 '28 680w

"Only the recollection of the superior claims of his modern tetralogy makes one qualify to some degree the praise due this magnificent sortie into the past." W. E. Troy

+ N Y Times p7 O 28 '28 750w

Reviewed by Herschel Brickell

No Am 226:adv D '28 50w

"This new book is brilliant. Mr. Ford cannot manage to be anything else except in his forewords which we wish he would not write. But it is slight, an expanded short story."

+ — Outlook 150:1290 D 5 '28 220w

"Anyone who hopes to find in 'A Little Less Than Gods' a coherent picture or even a vivid impression of France during the Hundred Days and the aftermath of Waterloo, will be disappointed. The book, Mr. Ford tells us, was to have been written in collaboration, presumably with Conrad, and Conrad's influence is as marked as if he had really had a hand in it. A most romantic figure, this George Feilding, and one after Conrad's own heart. But Conrad would surely have simplified him. The narrative is confusing if it is not confused; it is overloaded with the ironical manner." L. P. Hartley

+ — Sat R 146:692 N 24 '28 550w

"In 'A Little Less Than Gods' Mr. Ford's art is less immediately convincing than in many of his novels. An air of unreality hangs over this book, and the figures, brilliantly outlined as some of them are, seem nevertheless to be puppets rather than human beings. It is an able piece of work in an unusual genre and like 'Salammbo,' it gives a mixed atmosphere of tragic grandeur and fatality to the past." R: Curle

— + Sat R of Lit 5:398 N 24 '28 640w

"As always, he is flamboyant and highly individual. But, at all events, he has given us a romance full of life, colour, and character, though his style is sometimes too consciously exquisite."

+ — Spec 141:896 D 8 '28 100w

"If there are certain longueurs in the narrative, the book has the great merit, only found in the best historical novels, that no real personage who comes into it is a figurehead. Wellington, Louis XVIII, Blücher, make appearances of varying length, but they all do so as beings of flesh and blood, with a dignity worthy of their place in history."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p802 N 1 '28 450w

FORD, FORD MADOX. New York is not America; being a mirror to the states. 292p $2.50 Boni [8s 6d Duckworth]

917.471 New York (city)—Description. United States—Description and travel

27-24545

"Mr. Ford knows a good deal about America, but pretends to know nothing except New York,

FORD, F. M.—Continued
and a certain section only of that, being intent upon presenting New York City as the enemy of the United States. He enjoys himself hugely as he discourses lightly of New York architecture and food, language and parties, books and plays, students, millionaires, and what not."—New Statesman

---

Booklist 24:244 Mr '28

"Witty, animated and most amusing book." Van Wyck Brooks
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p7 Ja 22 '28 920w

Cleveland Open Shelf p50 Ap '28

"New York is Not America is 'a mirror to the States,' but it is not as good as the same author's Mirror to France. The method, highly allusive, discursive, pleasant, makes hard reading in the end."
— + Dial 84:161 F '28 100w

"There is a quick, joyous, anecdotal air about all he says, a shrewd observance, a calculation, a fine wit."
+ Nation and Ath 41:613 Ag 6 '27 150w

"Mr. Ford wields an astonishingly agile and skilful pen, and there is hardly another writer in English who can throw off in a style so vivacious as many shrewd, diverting, and provocative impressions of a city or a people. He makes it plain that this impudent book was written mainly for his American public, but English readers will probably like it better."
+ New Statesman 30:120 N 5 '27 280w

"It is not as good as the book on France, for Mr. Ford is not this time so well acquainted with his subject; but it is humorous, witty, interesting—almost everything but wise." C. P. Fadiman
+ — N Y Evening Post p12 D 24 '27 800w

"It is genial, yes; as chatter across the dinner table it would be excellent. From it one would conclude that Ford Madox Ford is a most pleasant companion. As column stuff in a daily newspaper it would likewise go big. But dignified by inclusion between covers, assuming personality (for a book, as a person, must have personality) it seems anemic. The observation is casual, the thinking superficial."
— + N Y Times p2 Ja 15 '28 930w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:173 Mr '28

"Mr. Ford is charming about New York; but the America which, they have told him, cannot possibly be New York, does not so much bewilder as altogether elude him." Bernard De Voto
+ — Sat R of Lit 4:607 F 18 '28 880w

"When Mr. Ford is amusing he is very amusing, as he has the unusual gift of making three jokes at once. But, unfortunately, he often falls far below his own level; and when he is not amusing, his windedness must surely be the longest in the world. Some pages of this book have an inimitable sparkle; others read almost as if he had hired a champion stenographer for the day and was determined to get his money's worth."
+ — Spec 139:396 S 10 '27 110w

Times [London] Lit Sup p603 S 8 '27 460w

FORDER, HENRY GEORGE. Foundations of Euclidean geometry. 349p $8 Macmillan [25s Cambridge univ. press]

513 Geometry [27-24478]

"Textbook for advanced students, the object being 'to show that all the propositions of Euclidean Geometry follow logically from a small number of Axioms explicitly laid down, and to discuss to some extent the relations between these Axioms.' "—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

---

N Y New Tech Bks 12:33 Jl '27

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:150 Mr '28

"This is an important book on geometry, going back to first principles and attempting to place the science on a sound footing. Mr. Forder has seen the need of a connected and rigorous account of the researches of the critical mathematicians who have succeeded in putting this analysis 'on what seems to most an unassailable basis,' and the result is this work."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p410 Je 9 '27 60w

FORESTER, CECIL SCOTT. Daughter of the Hawk (Eng title Shadow of the Hawk). 304p $2 Bobbs [7s 6d Lane]

28-20923

The story opens with a barbarous scene on a penal island off the South American coast when, following the accidental discovery of pirate treasure, prisoners and guards go mad with greed, killing off each other and the authorities, while a single prisoner escapes with a fortune in precious stones. The story closes with a scene in a girl's boarding school in England. Thus does the tenor of life change for one Henry Dawkins, who leaves the hardy lot of adventurer to take up the mild duties of guardian to a ten-year-old girl. And thus does the book change in character from an unusual yarn of adventure to a gentle chronicle of childhood.

"Every now and then he has caugnt himself up, in terror lest he was doing a second 'Little Lord Fauntleroy,' of which there was no danger, and thrown in something very sophisticated and tiresome. But next time we wish he would let himself be happy. For Mr. Forester was endowed by the fairies with the gift of the romantic. And it is futile, in the long run, to turn your back on the fairies!" I. W. Lawrence
+ Boston Transcript p3 S 29 '28 1700w

" 'The Daughter of the Hawk' begins excellently with vivid revolutions in South America. Then it develops into an arch story of a rough he-man's difficulties in England with a ten-year-old girl he has adopted. Another novel that cannot be recommended."
— Nation and Ath 43:302 Je 2 '28 60w

N Y Times p30 O 28 '28 180w

"The first third of this book is melodrama of a very nice sort. . . At page 97 the book goes blooey! From top-hole melodrama it degenerates into a nasty little idyl, a gooey affair that might have been written by Louisa May Alcott."
— + Sat R of Lit 5:282 O 20 '28 260w

Times [London] Lit Sup p453 Je 14 '28 180w

FORESTER, CECIL SCOTT. Louis XIV; king of France and Navarre. 246p $4 Dodd [10s 6d Methuen]

B or 92 Louis XIV, king of France 28-17869

A short life of "Le roi soleil" which has nothing distinctly new to say but presents the great monarch and his times in a readable narrative.

"How Louis XIV hedged himself about with a network of etiquette, how his one variation of this game was the making of senseless wars, is exceedingly well told in C. S. Forester's book. The plan of the volume is flexible, admitting bits of amusing personal narrative between forceful recounting of international bickerings and diplomatic plots." F. H. Winterburn
+ Bookm 67:585 Jl '28 230w

"From beginning to end the author has so handled his subject as to make it fully as absorbing in interest as his story of Napoleon." F. P. H.
+ Boston Transcript p2 Jl 21 '28 420w

"Mr. Forester has produced a most readable re-hash of all the serious biographical works, not forgetting contemporary records, even when they are but the breath of scandal. His narrative is gay and dramatic enough to sustain the interest, even though one might wish for less of 'the vulgar little joke' that too often 'comes irresistibly to mind.' "
+ — New Statesman 30:804 Mr 31 '28 180w

N Y Evening Post p8 My 12 '28 80w

"Mr. Forester's study need not be disconcerted in a library if placed on the shelf between Strachey's 'Queen Victoria' and Guedalla's diabolical 'Second Empire.' It is keen, comprehensive and comprehending, scholarly and entertaining. He can reconstruct an era and then polish off the chapter with an epigram." Howard Devree

+ N Y Times p10 Jl 8 '28 1800w

"Mr. Forester has written a very entertaining biography of Louis the Great, in which he does substantial justice alike to that magnificent sovereign and to the theory of kingship which reached its zenith in him and its nadir in his two successors."

+ Sat R 145:330 Mr 17 '28 120w

"The best which can be said of Mr. C. S. Forester's historical biography is that it goes with a swing from beginning to end. The writer quotes no authorities, accepts doubtful matter as proved, and races through the long reign, leaping from love to war as though all were fair where an historian deals with either."

+ — Spec 140:654 Ap 28 '28 120w

"Clear and straightforward, written with an eager interest that is contagious, and illustrated with portraits that, like old-fashioned window-panes, let in filtered beams of light."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p236 Mr 29 '28 650w

FORGIONE, LOUIS. Men of silence; with an introd. by Walter Littlefield. 323p $2.50 Dutton

Camorra—Fiction 28-29233

A woman is murdered in her apartment in an aristocratic quarter of Naples. It is thought that her husband has committed the crime, but when his mangled body is discovered far from the spot, the police suspect the Camorra. The events occur in June 1906. Five years later the reign of the Camorra is brought to an end. In repeating the story of the downfall of the notorious criminal society, Mr. Forgione is dealing with actual events taking place in a background entirely familiar to him.

"Mystery users will do well to sample this 'actual obituary of the most fantastic and powerful criminal organization in the history of the world,' as Walter Littlefield calls this Camorrist narrative in his introduction. Obituary, historical novel, or realistic account, as you please (since little or no fictional disguise is attempted), Mr. Forgione proves that detective stories from the life are likely to be several times more interesting than the general run of criminal groceries." Will Cuppy

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p36 D 2 '28 150w

" 'The Men of Silence' should make good reading for those Americans who are thrilled by 'racketeering.' They will, however, find the story rather tame compared with many of the domestic variety, and the style anachronistically romantic in view of the machine-gun staccato methods introduced by Hemingway and popularized by his disciples in the daily newspapers." Percy Winner

N Y Evening Post p12m D 8 '28 300w

"The story is extremely complicated, thrilling, exceptionally interesting."

+ N Y Times p30 N 18 '28 750w

"We found this book particularly interesting after all the mystery tales which find their way in increasing numbers to our desk. We don't know how you feel about it, but every little while after following about so many crimes from the cross marking the spot to the culprit himself we begin to lose our faith in detective stories." W. R. Brooks

+ Outlook 150:1294 D 5 '28 130w

"The book should appeal not merely to those who delight in a good detective story vividly told, but to those who are interested in social conditions in some of the darker parts of Italy before the war." Allan Nevins

+ Sat R of Lit 5:513 D 15 '28 580w

FORGIONE, LOUIS. River between. 254p $2.50 Dutton

28-9652

Oreste and his father, old Demetrio who is slowly going blind, are prosperous Italian contractors living at the edge of the Palisades above the Hudson River. Oreste's wife has left home because of constant quarrels with her father-in-law. On her return, however, a new relation opens between them and presently, allied against the son, they leave home together.

"In the crucible of his fancy the story of a house of laborers beside a dusty suburban roadway glows with the fiery exaltation of antique poetry." Pitts Sanborn

+ Bookm 67:593 Jl '28 480w

"Mr. Forgione has painted in a vivid, realistic background for his story of immigrant life in an Italian settlement on the Palisades. But his characters are either vague and shadowy or else extremely artificial." L. G.

+ — N Y Evening Post p8 My 19 '28 110w

"The whole book is unconvincing. There is a constant straining after effects which are never achieved. Stilted phrases, clichés, misplaced slang, forced symbolism follow one another in a distressing array, and the characters exist only in name and physical description. In spite of the promise of the first twenty pages which draw the background of the Italian community rather well practically nothing follows to raise the book above the level of cheap melodrama."

— + N Y Times p9 My 27 '28 380w

"His second novel, 'The River Between,' is better than the first. It is more imaginative, less bound to fact. The writing is sounder, free from the occasional roughnesses of the wrong kind, to be found in 'Reamer Lou.' And there is better understanding of the character of woman. The men have the same compelling vitality. . . If you prefer jazz and petting parties, keep out of this book. It is not that kind. It is a book for men. But it has none of that false he-man stuff of the movies and the brave Western yarn of the magazines." J: Macy

+ N Y World p10m Ap 22 '28 700w

"Has the merit of an unusual situation, in addition to a great deal of excellent writing. I feel that Mr. Forgione is a young novelist very much worth knowing about." Herschel Brickell

+ No Am 225:adv Je '28 100w

"The building-up of the narrative seems crude in these days of widespread dexterity; the cumulative tragedy is a little too top-heavy, lacking adequate emotional foundation. As a record of American life, however, 'The River Between' is illuminating, and therein lies its real importance."

+ — Sat R of Lit 4:973 Je 16 '28 250w

Springf'd Republican p7f My 13 '28 230w

FORMAN, SAMUEL EAGLE, ed. Sidelights on our social and economic history. 516p $2.25 Century

330.973 United States—Social conditions. United States—Economic conditions 28-3830

The book is intended as supplementary reading to the high school textbook of United States history. The selections, from two to six pages in length, have been taken from many sources including both books and periodicals. The topics covered are the European background, agriculture and the westward movement, commerce and manufactures, currency, labor, transportation and the everyday life of the people.

"Of the usefulness of the book to students there can be no doubt. The selections, excellently chosen, are for the most part, the kind of swift easy reading which serves to recall and impress the facts learned through the tedious but necessary memory process."

+ Boston Transcript p4 Mr 21 '28 250w

FORMAN, S. E., ed.—Continued

"Mr. Forman's 'Sidelights' is an excellent collection of extracts, largely from secondary sources but including also some primary source material, illustrating the social and economic aspects of American life. The book is intended to serve as collateral reading for students who are following some more consecutive and systematic history." W. E. Garrison

+ Christian Century 45:319 Mr 8 '28 250w

Reviewed by K. E. C. Carrigan
Hist Outlook 19:344 N '28 200w
St Louis 26:348 N '28

FORMILLI, CAESAR TITUS GIUSEPPE. Stones of Italy. 247p il $7 Macmillan [20s Black]

914.5 Italy—Description and travel [28-13831]

"Professor C. T. Formilli, a well-know authority on Italian art and antiquities, has written an interesting book in which old stories, and descriptions of places, and works of art, are varied by anecdotes concerning prominent people in the Italy of to-day. The book is finely illustrated by reproductions of the author's water-colour drawings."—Spec

---

"The real 'color' of the book is superb. The artist sees beauty, form, color, that escape the rest of us. The effects in light and shadow are especially good. They are a joy and an inspiration. And after all the text does interpret con amore, the beauty, the glory, the history and the sights of Italy." T. C. R.

+ Boston Transcript p4 Mr 10 '28 280w
New Statesman 30:xxii N 5 '28 520w
Sat R 144:707 N 19 '27 250w

Reviewed by Beatrice Erskine
Spec 139:sup833 N 12 '27 100w

"Professor Formilli has produced a beautiful book in which the illustrations and the text, being by the same hand, are in complete harmony. The writing is simple and distinguished, and the survey of fine monuments and buildings is fitly rounded off by a short account of one whom he calls 'the living stone'—Benito Mussolini."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p952 D 15 '27 80w

FORREST, ALFRED EDGAR. Silent guests. 305p $2 Covici, P.

28-1591

"While seeking traces of a vanished heir to a fortune, a Philadelphia lawyer follows vague clues which lead him to a remote region of the Canadian wilderness. Here he loses all track of his quarry, but encounters a Scotch philanthropist who is conducting on his estate the humanitarian work of reclaiming ex-felons. The lawyer accepts hospitality of the Scot; the two become fast friends, and the visitor falls in love with the other's sister, a delicate, abnormal girl, the prey of psychic fits. These three pass through a multitude of strange and eerie adventures which, though improbable and unsubstantial in the extreme, do not lack power of attack upon the imagination."—Sat R of Lit

---

Reviewed by Donald Douglas
Bookm 66:xxxviii N '27 60w

"Sentiment and the supernatural in about equal parts flavor this leisurely mystery-romance." Will Cuppy

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 Ag 28 '27 100w

"If you like mystery tales involving spirits of the departed, secret chambers, hidden wills, dark and dour pasts behind the male characters and pleasant futures ahead of the pretty female ones, the 'Hidden Guests' is the book for you."

Boston Transcript p5 S 10 '27 350w
N Y Times p9 Ja 8 '28 220w
Sat R of Lit 4:263 O 29 '27 120w

FORRESTER, GLENN CLIFFORD. Falls of Niagara. 155p il $2.50 Van Nostrand

557.47 Niagara Falls. Geology—Niagara Valley 28-16220

This is the geological story of Niagara Falls, illustrated from photographs and drawings which show the geological formation of river, cataract and gorge. The closing chapter describes a tour of the Falls for the visitor interested in the geological as well as the scenic features. A bibliography is added.

"There is much genuine information in the book which renders it valuable apart from its salient topic of the formation of Niagara."

+ Boston Transcript p3 S 22 '28 130w

"Likely to widen the reader's appreciation not only of Niagara Falls, but also of the general significance of geologic change."

+ J Home Econ 20:771 O '28 60w
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:567 N '28

FORSSELL, NILS. Fouché; the man Napoleon feared; tr. from the Swedish by Anna Barwell. 255p il $4 Stokes [12s 6d Allen & U.]

B or 92 Fouché, Joseph. France—History—Revolution

The biography is a Swedish view of one of the most sinister figures of the French revolution, the man who was Napoleon's minister of police.

Reviewed by J: Carter
Bookm 68:341 N '28 520w

"Without being in any sense great the book is good, for it does not spoil altogether a subject which is most entrancing." Albert Guerard

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p3 D 9 '28 1150w
Boston Transcript p9 O 6 '28 300w

"The whole book is such a mass of frothy and grotesque rhetoric, and there are so many minor inaccuracies that it cannot be considered a serious contribution to revolutionary literature."

— Nation and Ath 43:301 Je 2 '28 580w

"Simply a popular rechauffe of other works. It is disappointing to find that Fouche, the arch-conspirator of the Napoleonic era, becomes rather a dull as well as a despicable character under Dr. Forssell's pen. . . Nor is Dr. Forssell, at least in translation, an interesting expositor of Napoleon's own acts and policy. But there has been no good book on Fouche in English, and this work goes some distance toward filling the gap." Allan Nevins

— + N Y World p9m S 23 '28 180w

"Mr. Forssell's book was first published in Sweden three years ago, and has now been revised and enlarged and translated into not very fluent English. It gives, however, a remarkably clear portrait of this singularly unattractive figure."

+ — Sat R 145:669 My 26 '28 640w

"The real worth of the book appears in a brief but masterly account of Fouche's work as Minister of Police. This could not be better done. He says what he can for the detestable and clever villain whom he depicts and he gives us a full and most excellent Bibliography." W. K. F. Semuig

+ Spec 140:sup725 My 12 '28 950w

FORSTER, EDWARD MORGAN. Eternal moment, and other stories. 245p $2.50 Harcourt [5s Sidgwick & J.]

28-11816

A collection of six rather long short stories, all of them written previous to 1914. Most of them are fantasies. The first and longest is a satirical picture of the future when civilization has become completely mechanized. Contents: The machine stops; The point of it; Mr Andrews; Co-ordination; The story of the siren; The eternal moment.

Booklist 24:403 Jl '28

"Through all the half dozen stories of the volume there runs a rich vein of fantasy." Mary Ross

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p3 Ap 22 '28 750w

Boston Transcript p4 My 12 '28 700w

Nation 126:653 Je 6 '28 60w

"Except for two stories and 'Mr. Andrews,' a charming trifle, the volume is rather disappointing. 'The Eternal Moment,' though witty and profound in flashes, is unconvincing psychologically." Edwin Muir

+ — Nation and Ath 43:184 My 12 '28 650w

Reviewed by D. B. Woolsey

New Repub 56:54 Ag 29 '28 270w

"Only in the last does the familiar spinster emerge. The other stories are visions of judgment or of the machine age, they are tenderly earthy and full of that demure malice with which the author delights to punish the bonne élève. Though slight, they are all of merit, pagan, supernatural, youthful—in the best senses of those maltreated words. The Eternal Moment itself is weaker though revealing the full Forster world." Cyril Connolly

+ — New Statesman 30:797 Mr 31 '28 250w

"I have not seen a more amusing collection of short stories in some years, and I am not aware of an English writer who can evoke the awkwardness of living more deftly or with so much speed." T: Beer

+ N Y Evening Post p8 My 12 '28 1200w

"A superbly told story, 'The Eternal Moment' comes close to being also a profound one. It makes clear once again the impotence of both fine intelligence and fine emotion when there is nobody to appreciate or share them. It ranks with the best of Forster's work. The book to which it gives its name ranks lower, but presents a new side of the distinguished writer." L: Kronenberger

+ N Y Times p9 My 6 '28 730w

Reviewed by Herschel Brickell

No Am 255:adv Je '28 60w

Pratt p43 autumn '28

" 'The Story of the Siren' has been printed separately and there must be, I imagine, many lovers of English prose who know its first paragraph by heart. To me, the ironic fantastic tales are the least satisfactory." L. P. Hartley

+ — Sat R 145:530 Ap 28 '28 700w

Sat R of Lit 5:250 O 13 '28 380w

"This distinguished, disillusioned book, with all its cool graces of style, is bound as a companion volume to The Celestial Omnibus. If it does not captivate like that lovely group of fantasies it is because the author is less fortunate with his themes. Forecasts of existence after death cannot but fail in aesthetic effect since the imagery of immortality became so nebulous, though Mr. Forster's ethic is definite and penetrative." R. A. Taylor

+ — Spec 140:543 Ap 7 '28 320w

"All the stories are a good bit more substantial than fantasies are likely to be, and there are passages that remind us of E. M. Forster, the novelist—a person whom the reviewer distinctly prefers to E. M. Forster, the short story writer."

Springf'd Republican p7f My 20 '28 120w

"Because it was Mr. Forster who wrote these six stories they are all interesting, have each of them some effect of penetrating below the appearance, of seeking, if now and again a trifle impatiently, the true essence of life. But the phase, the mood seems to be that of dissatisfaction. It is as if Mr. Forster were at that time almost painfully aware of the fatuity of existence and sought something too uneasily to explain it."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p256 Ap 5 '28 680w

FORT, JOHN P. Light in the window. 201p $2 Dodd

28-12810

Ambrose Pierce was an idealist trying to find his way in a materialistic world. He had been brought up by his father, a Southern colonel, with little knowledge of sex; his ideas of women were all romantic. Weathering all his earlier near-love affairs he went down to defeat when he met Marjorie during his first year at Harvard law school. She was a woman absolutely devoid of ideals or good sportsmanship. When the truth came to Ambrose he first tried to drink himself into oblivion and failing in that, threw himself into it.

"Ambrose Pierce, who almost alone supports the considerable interest of this novel of frustration, bafflement and eventual disillusion, is a striking figure. This tenderminded, sensitive and rather sentimentally romantic hero fails of grasping life in the end, through circumstances in his environment and innate trends which Mr. Fort has portrayed with much skill and sympathy."

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p13 Ag 19 '28 300w

Boston Transcript p6 Je 30 '28 300w

"In spite of artistic defects Mr. Fort's book is so sincere, so humbly supplicating, that one cannot but like it. Full of faults, it is endearing when taken in the round."

+ — N Y Times p9 My 20 '28 630w

"Mr. Fort goes to great length to explain this simpleton to us; he does, to a certain extent, explain him, but he does not create sympathy for him. Some neurotics please us, interest us, arouse our intense compassion, but Mr. Fort presents a neurotic so weak, so childish, as merely to annoy us."

— Sat R of Lit 5:41 Ag 11 '28 130w

FOSDICK, HARRY EMERSON. Pilgrimage to Palestine. 332p il $2.50 Macmillan [8s 6d S. C. M.]

915.69 Palestine—Description and travel. Palestine—Historical geography 27-25565

Dr Fosdick's pilgrimage to the Holy Land followed the course of the history of Palestine from the time of the Hebrews at Sinai to the Zionist movement of today. The single illustration is a sketch map in color of the Holy Land.

Booklist 24:244 Mr '28

"I have seen no book by Dr. Fosdick which has pleased me more than this. It is the ideal travel book." J: H. Holmes

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p13 Mr 11 '28 500w

Boston Transcript p6 F 18 '28 400w

Cleveland Open Shelf p52 Ap '28

"A wealth of information has been presented in a most readable volume. . . When Doctor Fosdick gets us out in the open he is at his best—and his worst. At his best, in his colorful descriptions, and the accuracy of the portrayal of what he has seen. At his worst, when he permits his emotions to control his historical sense. . . With a thorough knowledge, we take it, of the history of the documents of the Old Testament, the writer has had a peculiar disregard for their respective historical values." I. G. M.

+ — Crozer Quarterly 5:234 Ap '28 500w

J Religion 8:323 Ap '28 80w

"Apart from its being the work of the well-liked Dr. Fosdick, the book will be enjoyed for its own merits, because it is laden with good things and ballasted with truth." Kathleen Field

+ N Y Times p11 Mr 4 '28 1000w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:304 My '28

"His book makes an excellent introduction to Biblical history. There is nothing quite like it in the abundant literature of the subject."

+ R of Rs 77:4 Ja '28 60w

"Creating a special appeal to the Bible student, the book is of wider interest. Many a casual reader, who enjoys vicariously a trip he cannot take in person, will absorb with pleasure the author's seasoned impressions of Palestine."

FOSDICK, H. E.—Continued
+ Springf'd Republican p7f Ja 1 '28 850w
Times [London] Lit Sup p175 Mr 8 '28 420w

"Of many books dealing with the Holy Land, the writer has read not one which can surpass in interest and literary beauty, Dr. Fosdick's latest volume, A Pilgrimage to Palestine. No traveller to that land can afford to sail without this book." S. R. Harlow
+ World Tomorrow 11:40 Ja '28 500w

FOSS, HUBERT JAMES, comp. and ed. Heritage of music; essays, by R. R. Terry, W. G. Whitaker, and others. 264p $2.75 (7s 6d) Oxford

780.4 Music. Musicians 28-8739

"Here Mr. Foss has gathered studies of ten great composers, as well as two excellent essays on modern trends in music, each written by a notable musician and music scholar. In asking these writers to contribute, Mr. Foss requested 'not a biography or a criticism but a summing up of the place the composer holds in musical tradition and his present and past influence,' and the request has been largely adhered to."—R of Rs

---

"Distinctly the most important and satisfactory of these papers is the one on Franz Schubert by Professor Donald Francis Tovey. There will probably be discoverable no other essay more learned, more sympathetic, more illuminating and more readable than this valuable contribution of Professor Tovey's. For its sake alone 'The Heritage of Music' is worth owning." P: Bowdoin
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p17 Je 10 '28 1000w
Living Age 333:1125 D 15 '27 510w

"Intellectual distinction is a conspicuous quality of several of the essays in 'The Heritage of Music'; it adds polish to the knowledge and just perception that distinguish most of them." B. H. Haggin
+ Nation 126:618 My 30 '28 180w
N Y Times p12 Ja 15 '28 900w
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:287 My '28

"The book is interesting and instructive reading."
+ R of Rs 77:16 F '28 160w

"The book avoids textbook form and is freshly readable and intelligent. As each author is allowed to express his own opinion, there are some points that may challenge discussion."
+ Springf'd Republican p12 D 13 '27 480w

"Hardly one of our specialists is really happy with his theme. Space is severely limited, yet all beat about the bush. . . Undoubtedly the most arresting things in the book—though every page of it, of course, is informed and informative—are Mr. Tovey's essay on Schubert and Mr. Turner's on Mozart; and Mr. Turner's is the better of the two, because it is more essential, more concentrated."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p637 S 22 '27 800w

FOSTER, HARRY LA TOURETTE. Caribbean cruise. 350p il $3 Dodd

917.29 Caribbean sea. West Indies—Description and travel 28-27797

Mr Foster has travelled so widely and has written so many books for travelers that he knows exactly what to include. This guide book for the Caribbean tour gives all the necessary information in the author's pleasantly informal style.

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p14 Ja 13 '29 250w

"Written with a freshness and graphic quality that make it interesting. The dozen and more maps add greatly to its usefulness."
+ N Y Times p8 D 23 '28 300w
Outlook 150:1373 D 19 '28 80w

FOSTER, HARRY LA TOURETTE. If you go to South America. 443p il $2 Dodd [10s 6d Lane]

918 South America—Description and travel 28-4337

A guidebook giving all the information the traveler needs for the grand tour of South America. Before conducting the traveler on the various tours, counsel is given about climate, clothes, customs, costs, currency, etc. Illustrations and maps.

Booklist 24:318 My '28

"This volume is a compactly presented and remarkably complete guide, generously illustrated and mapped. It will be found to contain practically everything that the about-to-travel individual desires to know."
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p25 Mr 11 '28 220w

"If one is contemplating a South American tour the handbook of travel which Harry L. Foster has written will prove both helpful and adequate. He not only gives the necessary data for each city and side trip, but brings a wealth of legend and vivid color to the journeys."
+ Boston Transcript p3 Mr 17 '28 130w
Cleveland Open Shelf p119 N '28

"A very useful volume destined to be a godsend to many an inexperienced traveler in South America."
+ Ind 120:461 My 12 '28 220w

"A companionable guidebook, rich with information of most varied sorts, which any intending traveler will find it worth while to form the habit of consulting as soon as he begins to make plans for his journey. The author has spent a good deal of time in South America, has traveled all over it, written books about it, guided other travelers to its interesting places."
+ N Y Times p24 F 19 '28 400w
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:437 Je '28
Pratt p36 autumn '28

"The account of travel facilities is brought well up to date."
+ R of Rs 77:26 Mr '28 110w
St Louis 26:290 S '28
Wis Lib Bul 24:160 My '28

FOSTER, HERBERT HAMILTON. High school administration. (Century educ. ser.) 665p $2.75 Century

379.17 High schools. School management and organization 28-1305

"This book is designed primarily to serve as a textbook in university and training-school courses in school administration, and as a manual for inexperienced secondary school principals. It presents a comprehensive study of all phases of high school administration and derives a set of workable principles upon which experience shows effective methods and practices can be based."—Boston Transcript

---

Booklist 24:347 Je '28

"Very few books of its type cover the high school administration field so thoroughly and present so many practical phases in education as this volume does. The material is built upon experience and not theory."
+ Boston Transcript p5 Mr 3 '28 200w
Cleveland Open Shelf p96 S '28
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:377 Jl '28

"Although the book is an improvement in many respects over those which have been written previously on high-school administration, it is difficult to see wherein it is any more scientific than its predecessors in the field. The principles set forth, however carefully thought out and worded, are generalizations, the supporting facts for which are lacking or at least not furnished by the author. So far as the contents of the book indicate, there is a total lack of scientific procedure. The book is very readable and should stimulate critical examination and further research." G. A. Lackey

— + School R 36:707 N '28 750w

FOSTER, MAXIMILIAN. Crooked. 304p $2 Lippincott

28-8367

A grasping wife drives her young husband into crooked business practices by her incessant demands for money, clothes, good times. When the crash comes she makes ready to leave with a wealthier man who, discovering her game, abandons her. The husband meanwhile has found sympathy elsewhere and a chance for a new start.

"Maximilian Foster had an idea which might have been developed into an excellent novel, but in Crooked, the idea is buried beneath shoddy language and a cheaply theatrical plot."

— Bookm 67:xxiv Jl '28 140w

Boston Transcript p4 Ap 14 '28 250w

"The theme is developed in a plot of chartable perfection, a march of point-proving episodes and mounting suspense; a model of novelistic carpentry. The style is utterly undistinguished, but a sermon is preached, a moral is drawn and a story of human beings is told."

+ — N Y Times p8 Ja 29 '28 600w

"It contains a lot of stock figures and a lot of stock situations, but it is none the less an interesting story by a very competent writer whose profound sincerity is possibly the novel's chief fault." Vincent Starrett

+ — N Y World p7m My 27 '28 70w

"The book was written rather hastily, it would appear, for the characterization is incomplete, the style jerky, and the conversation somewhat impossible. It is a story with a good, though not novel idea behind it, which has been hastily and poorly worked out."

— + Sat R of Lit 4:635 F 25 '28 230w

FOSTER, WILLIAM TRUFANT, and CATCHINGS, WADDILL. Road to plenty. (Publications of the Pollak foundation for economic research) 231p $2 Houghton; Pollack foundation

330.1 Consumption (economics). Economics. Business 28-2938

In the form of conversations between a business man, a lawyer, a professor and the "gray man" in a west-bound Pullman car a plan is presented for removing the disparity between production and consumption. Something breaks the continuous flow of money as it passes from producer to consumer. Both save something and the natural deficiency caused by saving must somehow be made up. To meet the need the business man proposes a federal board whose duty it shall be to stabilize the business flow in the same way that the Federal reserve board steadies the money flow.

Reviewed by H: R. Mussey

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p18 Ap 15 '28 800w

"These gentlemen have made a very interesting story of an economic question." T. C. R.

+ Boston Transcript p2 Je 2 '28 380w

"The book is well worth reading. In fact, the reviewer suggests that it is a course in economics that is 'easy to take' and from which every engineer and industrialist will get profit. In making the book easy to read the authors have made it wordy, but that defect can well be pardoned in view of the value of the content." E: J. Mehren

+ Eng N 100:634 Ap 19 '28 780w

J Home Econ 20:363 My '28 120w

"This praiseworthy attempt to popularize an important economic subject makes the book rather difficult reading for anyone accustomed to systematic presentation, for it is so halting, diffused and broken up by the arts of fiction. It is to be hoped that the loss thus incurred will be compensated by a wider interest." G: Soule

+ — New Repub 54:128 Mr 14 '28 480w

Reviewed by P. W. Garrett

N Y Evening Post p10 F 18 '28 600w

Reviewed by Hiram Motherwell

N Y Times p54 D 2 '28 560w

Pratt p10 summer '28

"The authors have accomplished two things which might have seemed to be impossible in the same book. They have written so popularly and entertainingly that the Road to Plenty has already been printed serially in several daily newspapers. At the same time, the matter is so solid that serious students are attracted." O. T. Mallery

+ Survey 60:610 S 15 '28 500w

Wis Lib Bul 24:121 Ap '28

World Tomorrow 11:423 O '28 160w

"Interpreted as a stimulating plea for a more intensive study of the possibilities of long-range planning in government expenditure and private industry, 'The Road to Plenty' will command practically universal support. Apart from this, however, the book impresses me as mistaken and mildly dangerous. It is new and distinctive largely in its emphasis, and that emphasis is misplaced." T. S. Adams

+ — Yale R n s 18:179 S '28 1050w

FOSTER, WILLIAM ZEBULON. Misleaders of labor. 336p $1.75 Trade union educ. league, 2 W. 15th st., N.Y.

331.88 Trade unions—United States 28-853

The United States combines the most advanced industrial system in the world with the most backward labor movement. The author explains the conditions which are responsible for the backwardness of the trade-union group, denounces its reactionary leadership and suggests how the unions may be built into more effective organizations for fighting labor's battles.

"The volume is probably the most complete and detailed indictment of American trade unionism from the communist point of view which has yet appeared. It is clear evidence of the bitterness of the struggle between the ordinary American labor leaders and the communists; and it throws much light on the aggressive and determined opposition to Soviet Russia which has found expression in A. F. of L. conventions since the end of the war. Despite its obvious shortcomings, this book will prove valuable to the student because it is such a complete statement of the position of present left wing unionism." E: Berman

Am Econ R 18:525 S '28 330w

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p13 Ag 19 '28 450w

Boston Transcript p2 My 9 '28 250w

Reviewed by A. J. Muste

Nation 126:216 F 22 '28 880w

N Y Evening Post p13 Mr 3 '28 90w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:253 My '28

"If you want to know the worst that can be said about the American labor movement and about the corruption, stupidity and inefficiency of its officialdom, you will find it in Misleaders of Labor. The book is a tract and has the virtues and vices of that type of literature. The indictment is here, not the defense. There are inaccurate statements, statements that are highly debatable but nevertheless set down without qualifications, sentiments unsupported by evidence." A. J. Muste

— Survey 60:611 S 15 '28 280w

World Tomorrow 11:231 My '28 20w

FOULKE, WILLIAM DUDLEY (ROBERT BARCLAY DILLINGHAM, pseud.). Songs of eventide; Heloise; Maya. 202p $2.50 Bobbs

811 28-22603

Songs written late in life, by the author of several books of verse. Two long narrative poems, Heloise, and Maya, form more than half of the book.

"This is the eventide of life of which Mr. Foulke sings resignedly, with a philosophical acceptance of his lot in these later years when he must look for the last event of death to come along some day. The quality of his poetry is never arresting; always he floats in a conventional bark."

— Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p17 N 25 '28 100w

"Through all these poems there is a sense of deep sincerity, leading, in such experienced hands, to expression of great strength and beauty. Tolerance in its finest, most thoughtful sense characterizes those poems which treat of religions, similar in aspiration though differing in form."

+ Boston Transcript p4 O 10 '28 220w

FOURNIER, ALAIN. The wanderer; tr. from the French by Françoise Delisle. 306p $2.50 Houghton

28-29726

Transcribing in large part scenes and episodes from his own youth in rural France, the author, subsequently killed in the war, has written a simple yet compelling tale of a French schoolboy and visionary who looms an epic figure even to his schoolfellows. They call him Le grand Meaulnes, which is the title of the French original. His story is an adolescent search for an ideal,—glimpsed, won, lost, and forever sought. The introductory biographical sketch and tribute is by Havelock Ellis.

"This wanderer and idealist was Alain-Fournier himself. From his own life he drew the incidents of the story; from his childhood he remembered the wealth of exact details with which it is filled. He combined these details, however, in such a way as to produce an atmosphere of impossibility, a poetry of distance. Perhaps this was his real achievement; that is, to see familiar objects as if by starlight, at the moment when they assume new, strange, temporary and yet eternal shapes." Malcolm Cowley

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p4 D 2 '28 880w

Boston Transcript p2 D 5 '28 650w

"Not much of a plot to move one to superlatives. Place that plot against the background of the most mysterious part of France, the lonely Solonge; tell the story from the point of view of a younger boy who adored the wanderer and was awed by his experiences, and fill it with the terrific emotional dreams of adolescence, and you have something that accounts for the fact that ever since it was written 'The Wanderer' has been winning more and more of the great French critics to the belief that it is one of the great modern French novels." Fannie Butcher

+ Chicago Daily Tribune p21 D 8 '28 650w

"One cannot think readily of any modern book which treads the line so straightly between subjective intensity and objective form. . . It is not possible to touch the heart more nearly. This book is full of a tenderness without mercy." Vincent McHugh

+ N Y Evening Post p9m D 1 '28 750w

" 'The Wanderer' is a Melchizedek of a book, without parents, without perceptible line of descent from any of the established literary families, a strange, glamorous volume, bright, bitter and tragic, like the life of its author. He died, still in his first youth, with a German bullet through his forehead on September 22, 1914. . . Its loveliness is not quite of this world. It is a tender, fantastic, melancholy beauty. The novel breathes unreality, uneasiness, disregard for logic and workaday matters, as though it had been written by one in a high fever." F: F. Van de Water

+ N Y Evening Post p11m D 8 '28 700w

"As all great novelists have done, he has created a world of his own, allied to and having its roots in the actual world, but in no way a copy of it. His story is true to life, as great folklore and legends are true to it." C. B. Chase

+ N Y Times p9 D 9 '28 830w

"It is a fascinating tale. While it never departs from what might be actually happening even at this late date, the atmosphere is not of the present. The great triumph of the author is that he makes the whole thing convincing without ever depriving it of its strangeness. Meaulnes himself is disappointing at the end; one believes more in his dream than in his character." Theodore Purdy, Jr.

+ Sat R of Lit 5:425 D 1 '28 450w

FOX, SIR FRANK. Mastery of the Pacific; can the British empire and the United States agree? 254p $3 Sears [8s 6d Lane]

327 United States—Foreign relations. Great Britain—Foreign relations. Pacific ocean. Eastern question (Far East) [28-20676]

"Sir Frank Fox sets out to explain American foreign policy to the British, and to the American people themselves. He sees the United States succeeding, or supplementing Great Britain as bearer of the White Man's Burden, 'tidying up shabby corners of the universe and putting order and progress where there had been anarchy and stagnation.' His plea is for co-operation between the two English-speaking peoples to preserve the status quo in the Pacific and avert the domination of China by the Japanese."—Nation and Ath

Boston Transcript p6 Jl 3 '28 700w

"Incidentally, he discusses Anglo-American relations during and since the war with unusual sympathy and candour." C. E. Fayle

Nation and Ath 43:179 My 12 '28 80w

"He makes great play with the idea that aggressive Imperialism is the instinctive policy of the United States, but he fails to explain what territorial designs she can have that need cause us uneasiness."

— New Statesman 31:338 Je 16 '28 180w

Spec 140:685 My 5 '28 130w

Times [London] Lit Sup p542 Jl 26 '28 330w

FOX, MRS HELEN (MORGENTHAU). Garden Cinderellas; how to grow lilies in the garden; with a foreword by Ernest Henry Wilson. 269p il $5 (21s) Macmillan

716.2 Lilies 28-7987

The author, who has had twelve years' experience in growing lilies, has written a book for the amateur or for the "gardener who longs to have a few Lilies in the front yard or in the flower border amongst the Columbines and Delphiniums, but does not know which ones to order or how to treat them after their arrival."

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p21 My 13 '28 210w

"Having grown lilies for fourteen years, the author knows not only most of the kinds she describes, but the discouragements which are the lot of the amateur grower. But the book does not record her own experiences merely. It brings together the best available information on the subject, and is all the more valuable by reason of the foreword written by Ernest H. Wilson of the Arnold Arboretum." F. P. H.

+ Boston Transcript p4 Ap 18 '28 100w

FOX, RALPH WINSTON. Storming heaven. 319p $2.50 Harcourt [7s 6d Constable]

28-20727

After a season of adolescent adventures on the San Francisco water front, John goes to Russia with his returning emigrant foster parents. His experiences there, in scenes described by the author in "People of the steppes" (Book Review Digest, 1925) are a full and exciting odyssey of love and politics thru which

John moves, an eager vagabond, storming heaven but never reaching it.

"In this long novel there is hardly a dull page. The manner in which it is done gives little assistance; it is trite, amorphous. And yet it glows with color, vitality, change."
+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p15 O 28 '28 260w

"His encounters are neither very exciting nor very highly colored. His experiences with low life are rather monotonous and for the environment are comparatively mild."
— Boston Transcript p8 S 15 '28 70w

"A surprisingly vital novel, frontier-enlarging and streaked gloriously with promise. . . 'Storming Heaven' is the uneven work of a young creative talent, luxuriantly gifted and, perhaps with a slight ironic arrogance, trying its hand on a plot and a trio of main characters obviously beneath its best efforts." C. P. Fadiman
+ Nation 127:498 N 7 '28 860w

"I think that 'Storming Heaven' is the best modern picaresque novel that I know. The hero is irresistible, a Sheik for the sophisticated. Mr. Fox is interested in love as well as in politics, in the intricacies of character as well as the ways of wild peoples. His book makes the world more interesting. And though his style is often highly coloured, a certain dryness of mind behind it gives the book great distinction. I recommend 'Storming Heaven' to every sort of reader who is not easily shocked." Raymond Mortimer
+ Nation and Ath 43:144 My 5 '28 140w

"This book does not quite come off, either as fiction or propaganda." D. B. W.
— New Repub 56:335 N 7 '28 180w

"It is a romantic modern Odyssey, rather too romantic in certain passages, but conveying on the whole an amazing impression of authenticity. Mr. Fox's danger is an excess of romanticism." Cyril Connolly
+ — New Statesman 31:17 Ap 14 '28 500w

"With no remarkable descriptive powers, with no attempt at anything but a simple, straightforward narrative, the author presents a picture of the country during the difficult years following the revolution as prosaic as the record of such abnormal circumstances could well be, yet altogether convincing, perhaps the more so because of the simplicity of its relation."
+ N Y Times p7 N 25 '28 520w
Reviewed by Herschel Brickell
No Am 226:adv N '28 30w

"The story of an American boy, a wharf rat with little to recommend him to your interest but the adventures he goes through traveling about present day Russia in his later 'teens. The story is as chaotic as the scene." W. R. Brooks
— + Outlook 150:795 S 12 '28 130w
Reviewed by L. P. Hartley
Sat R 145:501 Ap 21 '28 150w

"A turgid and rather bewildering fictional narrative."
— Sat R of Lit 5:491 D 8 '28 120w

"The book is by no means a mere collection of traveller's reminiscences, for it has a romantic love interest; in short there is something for all tastes, and everyone should enjoy it."
+ Spec 140:776 My 19 '28 130w

"The fascination of this story lies in the unfolding of its varied episodes, its liveliness, its absence of sentimentality and its broad range."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p288 Ap 19 '28 650w

FOY, EDDIE, pseud. (EDWARD FITZGERALD), and HARLOW, ALVIN FAY. Clowning through life. 331p il $5; cheaper ed $3 Dutton

B or 92 Foy, Eddie, pseud. (Edward Fitzgerald) 28-3416

The popular comedian tells the story of his lively career—which began in New York in the middle 'nineties—thru Alvin F. Harlow. Photographs, chiefly of Mr Foy and his friends and associates of the stage, are included.

Booklist 24:319 My '28

"Here is a life that bubbles with real, unhidden champagne and shines with a naïveté that might have been expected of one who had lived in less space and time." Harry Staton
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p5 Mr 11 '28 530w

Cleveland Open shelf p87 Jl '28

"To say that the autobiography of this passe comic is quite the most interesting book ever produced by an American actor would be an apologetic compliment. It is, rather, the only one of its kind that has seemed to me to be worth reading—a fat book and full of diverting memories. For though his art—if you insist upon the word—of late years was not thrilling, Eddie Foy's career, partly by accident and partly through temperament, was passed in unusually exciting scenes." L: Sherwin
+ N Y Evening Post p12 Mr 10 '28 820w

"While the greater part of Eddie Foy's book is devoted to his theatrical career, the early chapters have a distinct interest quite apart from the theatre. It is in these chapters that he tells of his boyhood in New York, where he was born in 1856, and in Chicago. He remembers the Draft Riots and gives a vivid description of what he saw of them."
+ N Y Times p2 F 26 '28 1050w
Reviewed by Harry Salpeter
N Y World p10m F 5 '28 1250w
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:217 Ap '28
Springf'd Republican p10 Mr 7 '28 580w

"Though he omits almost all specific mention of his actor's tools, Mr. Foy unconsciously explains his own vast popularity, due to his even vaster human understanding and sympathy, by his spirited retelling of the rich experiences which helped to shape his life and character."
+ Theatre Arts Mo 12:308 My '28 650w

FRANCE, ANATOLE. Anatole France abroad, by his secretary, Jean Jacques Brousson; tr. by John Pollock; with a preface by Ernest Boyd. 388p $5 McBride [10s 6d T. Butterworth]

B or 92 France, Anatole 28-10320

" 'Anatole France Abroad' (published in France as 'Itinéraire de Paris à Buenos Ayres') is the completion of a portrait that M. Brousson started in an earlier book. His Anatole France is a man seen without any of the disguising veils of sentimentality, idolatry or apology. The master is human here, a cross between a pagan wit and an old satyr, a man who could be cruel and selfish and obscene and witty and brilliant and profound and sad. Piecing his volume together from scores of short scenes, notes and recaptured conversations, M. Brousson builds up a figure that is intensely human, often exasperating and always amusing."—Books (N Y Herald Tribune)

"I don't think we are justified in taking too much stock in all this vituperation. Brousson is working off his anger. Meanwhile he has presented us with a book that is vastly entertaining and one which throws France's character into strong relief."
+ — Bookm 67:185 Ap '28 1250w

"M. Jean Jacques Brousson's Boswellian and slightly malignant reminiscences will play their part in defining the character of Anatole France." Herbert Gorman
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p6 Ap 15 '28 800w

Boston Transcript p2 My 23 '28 500w

"I doubt if many will take very seriously the drama of these tragic comedians. One reads the book rather for the insight it gives into the peculiar temper and character of Anatole France in his old age. The more M. Brousson describes him the more he corresponds to one's conception of a Latin skeptic and hedonist, a disillusioned but charming sensualist." Ernest Boyd

FRANCE, ANATOLE—Continued
Ind 120:387 Ap 21 '28 1100w

Nation 127:714 Ag 1 '28 70w

"One of the charms of this book is that its descriptive qualities are as excellent as the writer's gifts as a reporter."
+ New Statesman 31:515 Jl 28 '28 1500w

"It seems a little callous to approve of this chronicle, and yet it indisputably is bright, colorful, reporting by an immensely gifted observer. If Anatole France comes through as an old lecher, he also comes through as a gorgeous conversationalist, a fascinating companion and—making one's own reservations—as Anatole France. The translation of John Pollock and the preface of Ernest Boyd are both superlative." R. A. Simon
+ N Y Evening Post p13 Ap 28 '28 680w

N Y Times p5 My 13 '28 850w

"There are touches which show M Brousson to be a writer of considerable talent and an acute observer. But he prefers to deal in chambermaid's gossip, perhaps because it is salable."
+ — Springf'd Republican p12 My 18 '28 660w

"Until counsel for the defence rises M. Brousson's readers will take leave to doubt whether the creator of such tender and whimsical figures as M. Bergeret and Sylvestre Bonnard can have been in his own soul quite the callous humbug that M. Brousson depicts."
— Times [London] Lit Sup p578 Ag 9 '28 320w

FRANCE, ANATOLE. Prefaces, introductions and other uncollected papers; tr. with a foreword and notes by J. Lewis May. (Works; in an English tr.) 235p $2.50 Dodd [7s 6d Lane]

844 28-3957

The hitherto uncollected papers which form the contents of this book are newspaper articles, literary reviews, and some of the many prefaces and introductions to books by other authors, written by Anatole France. The compiler and translator has prefaced each paper with an account of its source.

Bookm 67:187 Ap '28 550w

Dial 84:436 My '28 120w

"Not all in this moderately thick volume will seem to have been worth preserving. On the other hand, there is a certain amount for which every one may be grateful, recrudescences of the France wit, cold flashes of the France intellect."
+ N Y Times p2 F 12 '28 850w

"They cannot fail to be of considerable interest to the student of France's work."
+ Sat R 144:283 Ag 27 '27 120w

"Considering the good print and paper, ample margins and attractive title-pages, this is wonderful value. France was Protean in his interests, and not even Dr. Johnson could write a better preface. 'Jeunes Mesdames' is really a little masterpiece."
+ Spec 139:352 S 3 '27 110w

Reviewed by Magdalen King-Hall
Spec 141:sup537 O 20 '28 70w

FRANCE, ANATOLE. Unrisen dawn; tr. with an introd. by J. Lewis May. (Works; in an English tr.) 252p $2.50 Dodd

844 [28-23216]

A complete collection of the speeches and addresses of Anatole France, with a foreword by the publisher of the French edition, Edouard Pelletan, and an introduction by the translator, J. Lewis May.

"In this volume we have the official France, the fighter for truth and justice, the redresser of wrongs, the trumpeter of Freedom and Progress; and windy enough some of the performances are. The admirer of Anatole France the stylist, the exquisite pagan, the humanist, the man of letters, will find little in this volume to give him pleasure." D. B. W. Lewis
— Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p1 O 7 '28 2000w

Boston Transcript p5 O 20 '28 150w

Reviewed by Sylva Norman
Nation and Ath 43:707 S 1 '28 600w

St Louis 26:385 D '28

"They have the ring of honest conviction, though with one or two exceptions. They seem too ephemeral to have been worth translation, except for the laudable purpose of making the English edition of France's works complete. Mr. Lewis May (himself a biographer of France) contributes a useful introduction."
Times [London] Lit Sup p578 Ag 9 '28 400w

FRANCK, HARRY ALVERSON. Fringe of the Moslem world; being the tale of a random journey by land from Cairo to Constantinople, with enough of present conditions to suggest the growingly antagonistic attitude of the followers of Mohammed toward those who profess Christianity. 426p il $4 Century

915.6 Levant—Description and travel. Turkey—Description and travel 28-21329

The well-known "vagabond" traveler invades Egypt, Palestine, Transjordania, Syria and especially the new Turkey. With the memory of former journeys still fresh in his mind he compares the present day Moslem world with that world of twenty years ago.

For biographical sketch of Harry Franck see Wilson Bulletin 3:330 N '28

Booklist 25:66 N '28

"Mr. Franck has that rare faculty of extracting the utmost interest from strange lands and strange peoples. He never tires by trivial reiteration or over emphasis. He is as alive to the humor and the brightness of impressions as he is to those higher lights of travel which, in their careful analysis, impart information. The people, the trains, the cafes, the country villages, the city streets pass rapidly in view in these pages. He makes a keen analysis of peoples and nations." S. L. Cook
+ Boston Transcript p4 O 20 '28 300w

Cleveland Open Shelf p132 D '28

Living Age 335:156 O '28 40w

N Y Times p44 D 2 '28 280w

Reviewed by Herschel Brickell
No Am 226:adv N '28 70w

"We recommend this book highly to anyone who wishes to make the acquaintance of Turkey—it is an excellent introductory volume to the Near East, and it is sure to create a desire for more. It might also be used to good advantage as a guide book since there are many references to the vagaries of Turkish travel." Milton Byron
+ Outlook 150:1171 N 14 '28 380w

St Louis 26:388 D '28

"Not only does he say nothing very new, but he also says few things that are true. Not because he is deliberately trying to create a false impression—on the contrary one sees signs, now and then, of a desire to see both sides of a question—but because he has picked up his information from too many odd sources or from no source at all; because, too, he has merely skimmed the surface, and not all the surface at that." Nermine Mouvafae
— Sat R of Lit 5:583 Ja 12 '29 1200w

FRANK, BRUNO. Days of the king; tr. from the German by H. T. Lowe-Porter. 165p il $2.50 (7s 6d) Knopf

Frederick II, the Great, king of Prussia—Fiction 27-24265

"Three episodes from the life of the enigmatic Frederick the Great, fictionally presented with considerable power and reality. Bruno

Frank is one of the leading figures of the middle generation in Germany."—Nation

Booklist 24:322 My '28

Bookm 67:xxxviii Mr '28 150w

"The author of this book is unknown in America and does not rank among the best known writers in his own country. Yet so fastidious a critic as Thomas Mann has acclaimed his genius for clarity. Clarity he has, indeed, if this story is a fair sample, and also grace and distinction, with an instinct for selection and condensation which reveals the classical balance of his mind. . . The translation is excellent and without any annoying traces of the German original." W: K. Stewart

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p5 Ja 1 '28 1150w

"Of the contents of the book there is not much to say. It is called 'fiction which cloaks real persons and real events,' but not much of a cloak is thrown over the Prussian King, Frederick the Great, and the other characters are mere puppets. There is no plot and very little creation of any sort." J. W. M.

— Boston Transcript p4 Ja 21 '28 550w

Cleveland Open Shelf p68 My '28

"It is a beautiful example of the bookmaker's art, illustrated with delightful vignettes by Adolph Menzel. The three episodes in which his essentially gentle and sentimental nature is emphasized are well-written bits of historical fiction."

+ Ind 120:93 Ja 28 '28 120w

"The Days of the King seem a little remote from our interests, but it reflects an important aspect of modern Germany, which is turning in the hour of its defeat to its former heroes. And more important still, no one can fail to admire the dexterity and literary quality that the author displays."

+ — Living Age 334:92 Ja 1 '28 250w

Nation 126:169 F 8 '28 100w

"Herr Frank's skill in handling his prose, so beautifully clear even in translation, is not enough to give his book the flavor of strong literature. His use of pathos is admirably well controlled, and he achieves some good dramatic effects. At the same time, however smooth his technique may be, however correct his essential facts, one does not wholly trust Herr Frank's interpretation." Rose Lee

+ — N Y Evening Post p12 Ja 14 '28 600w

"Frederick is a living man, a great suffering personality, quite understandable. All of which, with urbanity and simplicity, has been related with artless skill to give a great figure clearly to the world—another man overcoming grave defects—to raise him above the clouds of doubt and legend as an example of humane courage and service to man."

+ N Y Times p7 D 11 '27 1000w

"The experience of reading these sketches is almost as impressive as meeting their hero in actual life must have been. Bruno Frank brings before us in matchless manner Frederick the Great as he appeared and as he was—slovenly of dress, shrill of voice, unkingly of speech, yet determined to be a beneficent god to his subjects whom he despised. The book is appropriately printed in an old French type of much beauty, and it is unusually well translated."

+ Sat R of Lit 4:502 Ja 7 '28 500w

Times [London] Lit Sup p253 Ap 5 '28 750w

FRANK, BRUNO. Trenck; the love story of a favourite; tr. from the German by Eden and Cedar Paul. 297p $2.50 Knopf

Trenck, Friedrich, freiherr von der—Fiction

28-21737

Friedrich, Baron von der Trenck, youngest cadet in the Guards, is singled out by King Frederick the Great for special favor. He aspires even to the love of the king's sister. But meteor-like as is his brilliant rise, his position is insecure, his fortune turns, and he is broken, banished. The story of the favorite, his king and his love, is set against the colorful background of the eighteenth century.

"One must confess that Bruno Frank has tried to do too much and that his story shifts uneasily from the history of Trenck to the history of Frederick, and therein history and romance are never quite woven into one tapestry. The characters speaks too often like puppets giving lectures on the cause of war. Nonetheless, there is the unforgettable picture of the man half demon and half angel, who built an empire from the arid marshes of Berlin and used his own cold and humane cynicism to give splendor and glory to his own people." Donald Douglas

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p7 S 23 '28 500w

Boston Transcript p5 O 20 '28 300w

"Though his best chapters are the purely narrative ones, one can see that he views his historical material in critical perspective, a perspective that does not exclude irony and humor. He works like a modern man with whatever tools the modern historian can furnish him." C. P. Fadiman

+ — Nation 127:693 D 19 '28 150w

"Trenck and Frederick overshadow each other by turns, but neither is allowed to be more than a wooden actor. Voltaire, of course, makes his entrance, and walks down a garden path, talking like the historical figure he is. There is plenty of adventure in this tale, but little humanity." T. S. Matthews

— + New Repub 56:308 O 31 '28 300w

"Frank's romantic adventurer stands out against the shifting social and political life of the rococo Berlin of Frederick the Great, a convincing, pathetically human figure, the clay vessel that dared swim with the iron pots." F: H. Martens

+ N Y Evening Post p8m O 20 '28 80w

"Herr Frank is a consummate craftsman recreating a past century, and with detachment revealing in the scene man's failure to avoid the primal passions of self-destruction."

+ N Y Times p14 S 30 '28 750w

Reviewed by Ruth Suckow

Outlook 150:1255 N 28 '28 120w

Springf'd Republican p6 N 19 '28 500w

FRANK, BRUNO. Twelve thousand; a play in three acts; tr. from the German by William A. Drake. (Theatre of today) 86p $2 (6s) Knopf

832 28-6538

"The scene happens to be a small German principality at the time of the American Revolution and the action happens to concern itself with the happily frustrated efforts of a princeling to sell twelve thousand of his subjects to the English king for service against the rebellious American colonies. A humble secretary, two of whose brothers have been sold as he says 'on the hoof,' conspires with the repentant mistress of the prince to prevent the outrage. With her consent he uses the signet ring to transmit a sealed message to King Frederick of Prussia and at the last moment the deus ex machina, arrayed in all the glory of a Prussian uniform, arrives. King Frederick will not permit the transportation of such troops through his dominion, and so, though the heroic secretary will doubtless hang, his people are saved." —Nation

Booklist 24:316 My '28

"One is amazed upon finishing the play, that so little complication has been introduced—that so little story has been unfolded. Yet such keen interest has been aroused by the single situation that disappointment can scarcely be felt." Glenn Hughes

+ Bookm 67:590 Jl '28 150w

"Simple, quiet, yet deeply felt, little play. As Mr. Nathan points out in his introduction, the play is interesting as showing a distinct reaction in Germany to the fevers of expressionism and a return to dramatic simplicity." W. P. Eaton

FRANK, BRUNO—Continued

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p4 F 19 '28 150w

Boston Transcript p4 Ag 11 '28 200w

"Bruno Frank (pleasantly translated by William Drake) handles his material not only with skill but with an engaging unpretentiousness as well. One knows pretty well, to be sure, just how everything is going to turn out, but one would rather resent any effort to vary a formula which affords such pleasant and complete emotional satisfactions." J. W. Krutch

+ Nation 126:356 Mr 28 '28 480w

"A fairly interesting play, with moments of romance, humor, and some dramatic power." F. R. Bellamy

Outlook 149:23 My 2 '28 1100w

Theatre Arts Mo 12:361 My '28 100w

Times [London] Lit Sup p445 Je 14 '28 130w

FRANK, TENNEY. Catullus and Horace; two poets in their environment. 291p $3 Holt [10s 6d Blackwell]

874 Catullus, Gaius Valerius. Horace (Quintus Horatius Flaccus) 28-7872

All that is known of the lives of these two Latin poets, born nineteen years apart, is summed up by the author, the stories of their lives being joined by a chapter describing the social life and literary changes during the years separating their activities.

"This is an enchanting book. Mr. Frank's work is a book for the general reader." J: J. Chapman

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p39 S 30 '28 1000w

Boston Transcript p5 Je 30 '28 430w

Reviewed by C: S. Baldwin
Dial 85:346 O '28 1500w

"His virtue is not that he has brought Catullus and Horace to us—they would not know how to get here—but that he has taken us to them. And this is an unusual merit in contemporary biography, where so frequently we see age insulted and time denied. Mr. Frank, while making Horace 'live,' reveals more of his sides than I have ever seen revealed in a single book; and at the same time there is not a pedantic syllable in what he says. Such freshness without vulgarity, such reality without melodrama is a welcome thing, and for it Mr. Frank cannot be too highly praised. There is only one moment when in my opinion he slips. He speaks of 'the parlor socialism' of Catiline and his clique. What does that mean—particularly in view of the fact that certain members of the clique were strangled for their opinions in a dungeon at the foot of the Capitol?" Mark Van Doren

+ Nation 126:410 Ap 11 '28 620w

"Professor Frank's book is well annotated for the careful student, with reference and suggestion, and certainly too easy and free of pedantry not to hold the general reader. There is a disarming lack of stuffiness. In revision, one supposes the minor slip which alludes to Mæcenas as a 'benedict' will be corrected; and the index can stand a thorough going-over—it is really distressingly slipshod. But the net gain is tremendous: two poets, in their environment, have been recreated." Rolfe Humphries

+ — New Repub 54:sup405 My 16 '28 1500w

"These two studies are among the few new contributed of sound, scholarly criticism to appear this year."

+ N Y Times p6 Jl 8 '28 630w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:578 N '28

"The book has the great essential of being provocative. The fact that it provokes the present reviewer again and again to argument and opposition is nothing in the very least against it. One thing is very hard to say: whether the book is addressed to scholars only or to the general literary public. I should have said the later except for the fact that so much of the quoted matter is left in the Latin. If, on the other hand, the book is for the scholar, it seems as though there were much that might be left out and certainly the translations are unnecessary." C. W. Mendell

Sat R of Lit 4:1052 Jl 21 '28 530w

"The one unfavourable criticism which we submit [is that] the book is too slap-dash, often in style, sometimes in statement. We confess to having read Professor Frank with an interest not seldom interrupted by irritation at his insensitive phraseology and his offhand assertions."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p485 Je 28 '28 1100w

FRANKAU, GILBERT. So much good. 371p $2 Harper [7s 6d Hutchinson]

28-2380

The story of the loves and several marriages of Margery Nolan, an Australian girl. Margery's first brief attraction is for Henry Anderson, an English scientist. With him she has a fugitive affair. She refuses to marry him, accepting instead a much older and much richer man, from whom she elopes after a bit with her first love. Alan dies in the war before they can be married. Margery marries another man. Even this is not the end of her experiences. The completed cycle brings her back to Henry Anderson whom for quite different reasons, she must once more refuse.

"There does gleam through the shoddy sentimentality of the story a little of that courage in facing the facts of life and carrying on that has been apparent both in life and literature since the war." E. D. Goldsmith

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p16 Mr 18 '28 400w

"This new story has less charm than other novels by Captain Frankau. It lacks the author's usual story-telling talent, and above all it outlines a dull biography in a tedious manner." D. F. G.

— Boston Transcript p2 F 1 '28 680w

"There is a kind of courage about the book. There is very little apology for Margery's conduct, from Margery or from the author. This straightforward honesty gives a certain robustness—possibly enough to enable 'So Much Good' to shake off the shroud of its plot." Laura Mount

+ N Y Evening Post p12 F 11 '28 300w

N Y Times p9 Ja 22 '28 520w

Sat R of Lit 4:829 Ap 28 '28 300w

"In spite of the author's great abilities, we find a lack of freshness. Wit and worldly wisdom, intensity, and interest, Mr. Frankau gives us. Yet we miss the authentic note of Peter Jackson."

+ — Spec 140:90 Ja 21 '28 380w

"The author makes the character of Margery attractive despite her unfortunate love affairs, and the lively, if not very searching story holds the reader's interest to the final pages."

+ Springf'd Republican p7f F 19 '28 220w

"Margery Nolan is an upstanding and convincing character, and Mr. Frankau is at his best when he is dealing exclusively with her. His other characters have all a woodenness about them, and it would not be difficult to find incidents in the book that seem false and out of proportion; but 'So Much Good' is primarily the story of Margery Nolan and as such it is a success."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p78 F 2 '28 410w

FRANKFURTER, FELIX, and LANDIS, JAMES MCCAULEY. Business of the Supreme court; a study in the federal judicial system. 349p $5 Macmillan

353.5 United States. Supreme court. Courts—United States. United States—Constitutional law 27-24024

A comprehensive study of the organization, history and workings of the federal judiciary.

The book begins with a consideration of the problems which faced the first Congress; it concludes with a discussion of the present and future business of the Supreme court. The story of the other federal courts is also recorded.

"This is an exploratory piece of research in a field of great importance whose neglect is astounding. The principal complaint against the book is that it stays too consistently loyal to the historical order of events, and fails to cut through the other way and summarize its analytical findings about the influences which shaped the Court." H. D. Lasswell

+ — Am J Soc 34:230 Jl '28 280w

"Lucid and thorough exposition." J: Dickinson

+ Am Pol Sci R 22:463 My '28 1350w

Booklist 24:269 Ap '28

Reviewed by W: Seagle

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 Ja 8 '28 1050w

"The facts are thoroughly and accurately ascertained, the presentation is interesting and vigorous. The character of the Supreme Court's business is changing under our eyes and in an illuminating table we are shown how different it has become." Max Radin

+ Nation 126:541 My 9 '28 560w

"The result is a significant study of law in its making, and of the diversity of weaves and patterns, social and economic, as well as strictly legalistic, that are wrought into the web. Only scholarship linked to scientific imagination and literary skill can lift pedestrian facts so far above their common level. The qualities are here in happy combination." B: N. Cardozo

+ New Repub 53:329 F 8 '28 2000w

N Y Times p3 Jl 15 '28 450w

"The work is based on wide research, is well arranged and pleasingly written. It suffers, if anything, from the excess of its virtues. It would seem at times that the learned authors had attempted to transplant the whole tree of knowledge when a carefully chosen basket of the fruit thereof would have been more acceptable." E: S. Corwin

+ — Pol Sci Q 43:272 Je '28 1050w

"A fine, reliable and important story."

+ World Tomorrow 11:348 Ag '28 30w

FRANKL, PAUL THEODORE. New dimensons; the decorative arts of today in words and pictures. 80p il $6 Payson & Clarke

740 Decoration and ornament. Art industries and trade. House decoration. Architecture 28-13982

"There are 122 [pictures], mostly showing furniture, fabrics and interiors, but also including some examples of modernistic architecture or architectural decoration and a few studies of abstract 'form.' The author, who is both a teacher and designer, himself designed some of the furniture shown in the illustrations. More of the designs are French, and there is a good representation of German work, which is undoubtedly the most 'homelike' and most easily assimilable of the patterns displayed here. There are 80 pages of text in Mr Frankl's book besides the pictures."—Springf'd Republican

---

Booklist 25:17 O '28

"Mr. Frankl's illustrations are numerous and interesting. They serve to indicate better than his text the variety of forms which the decorative arts have taken and to suggest that in some of the most successful manifestations the past has not been entirely swept aside but intelligently used." R. M. Fisk

+ Bookm 67:701 Ag '28 520w

Reviewed by Catherine Bauer

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p7 Je 17 '28 650w

Reviewed by H. I. Brock

N Y Times pl4 Je 17 '28 1450w

"The book is useful in many ways but its chief purpose is to serve as a primer for American readers, and that it does nobly and eloquently. It will win many converts." Harry Hansen

+ N Y World p7m My 27 '28 660w

"We have a lot of admiration for the work which Mr. Frankl has done. But we disagree emphatically with a great deal of the reasoning by which he justifies it. Almost invariably when an artist begins to define his creed, begins to dogmatize, he gets into difficulties. In the process of rationalization most of the truth drops out. For us, the illustrations were the most interesting part of the book. They show actually what is being done, and they are well selected—although a number of them seem to us to contradict flatly the laws of modern decoration which the author has laid down." W. R. Brooks

— + Outlook 149:438 Jl 11 '28 350w

"Mr. Frankl's book will be welcomed chiefly for the pictures he has assembled. . . The author is most helpful when he is analyzing the underlying principles of interior decoration without doctrinaire intention. As a whole, the chapters have little organic connection and no great value, and unfortunately they do not afford a detailed account of recent European and American experiments in decoration."

Springf'd Republican p8 My 30 '28 820w

FRANKLIN, BENJAMIN. "My dear girl"; the correspondence of Benjamin Franklin with Polly Stevenson, Georgiana and Catherine Shipley; [ed.] by James Madison Stifler. 279p il $3.50 Doubleday, Doran

B or 92 Hewson, Mrs Mary (Stevenson). Hare-Naylor, Mrs Georgiana (Shipley). Shipley, Catherine Louisa 27-22033

These letters to his three young friends, Polly Stevenson, Catherine and Georgiana Shipley reveal yet another side of the many-sided Franklin. The greater part of the letters are addressed to Polly Stevenson, daughter of Mrs Margaret Stevenson, for nearly fifteen years his landlady in London. The Shipley girls were the daughters of Bishop Shipley, a friend in whose Hampshire home Franklin often visited.

Reviewed by D. C. Seitz

Bookm 67:208 Ap '28 130w

"It is a charming and wholly delightful Franklin whom we meet in these pages. We find him as the loved friend and confident of a group of young women, writing to them amusingly, winsomely, affectionately, kindly and, what is more noteworthy, remaining, as in Polly's case the absolutely trusted friend until death. In his bits of necessary explanation and connective narrative the editor has done his work with discretion and charm." J. T. Adams

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p16 F 26 '28 460w

Cleveland Open Shelf p64 My '28

"The letters gathered here throw a charming sidelight on one of the most lovable of Franklin's many-faceted and always deeply human nature."

+ N Y Times p20 Ap 15 '28 430w

No Am 224:adv D '27 100w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:167 Mr '28

"The book as a whole is a useful compilation, and the well-chosen illustrations add to its value."

+ Sat R of Lit 4:457 D 17 '27 380w

"The gentle, kindly side of his nature and his love for young people are shown in every one of his letters. And at the age of 84, his letters have the same clever phrasing and charm of style which characterized all that came from his pen. The book is both entertaining and, as far as it goes, revealing."

+ Springf'd Republican p6 Ja 23 '28 550w

FRANKLIN, HAROLD B. Motion picture theatre management. 565p il $5 Doubleday, Doran

792 Moving picture theaters 28-4613

A complete manual of motion picture theater management from the cashier's cage and the advertising display in the lobby to the last detail on the stage behind the screen. The author also includes a discussion of plans, equipment, and personnel for the new motion picture theater building. Many illustrations and diagrams.

Booklist 24:353 Je '28

"It is completely technical in its intention. The problems of management and organization, structure and equipment, personnel, production, advertising, finance, and budgeting are clearly and ably discussed. The range of its possible application is wide."

+ Bookm 67:xxxvi Mr '28 100w

"As Mr. Franklin is president of a chain of theatres himself, he speaks with great authority, and the ambitious student of things theatrical would do well to study him. There are chapters on every conceivable event in the daily doings of a theatre, large or small; there is technical information galore; there is some very practical advice concerning publicity and advertising. Briefly, the book is a compendium of all that might prove useful to the budding theatrical man."

+ Boston Transcript p6 F 25 '28 230w

Cleveland Open Shelf p101 S '28

"The book has real meaning for Mr. Franklin's present and future colleagues in the theatre of the cinema, and to them the intelligent character of his descriptions of the many problems at some time or other involved in the exhibition of the wordless play will no doubt appeal."

+ N Y Times p30 Mr 4 '28 350w

FRASER, CHELSEA CURTIS. Boy's busy book. 471p $2.50 Crowell

680 Handicraft. Manual training 27-23621

"Manual of instruction and suggestion for making various articles. Deals mainly with woodwork."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

Booklist 24:324 My '28

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:154 Mr '28

"Mr. Fraser's book will be a great help to any parent trying to carry out the author's advice."

+ Sat R of Lit 4:492 D 31 '27 130w

Wis Lib Bul 24:256 O '28

FRASER, FERRIN L. Lovely ladies. 224p $2.50 Sears

27-24193

" 'Being the love affairs of ten women in the life of a young man,' and, as such, it would ill become an innocent bystander to deny a word of it. All ten of the incidents seem to have happened when Billy Everett, Harvard man, millionaire and apprentice author, was too juvenile to possess a great deal of wit or wisdom, but that need prevent no seeker after ways and means from sampling his adventures in various lands and seas, including the South Pacific."—Books (N Y Herald Tribune)

"Mr. Frazer specializes in amorous dialogue of a not too subtle but frequently amusing sort."

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p21 Ja 15 '28 150w

"A very engaging and ingenious story. It is a very amusing thousand-and-one nights sort of tale that pleases most from its novelty."

+ Boston Transcript p4 D 24 '27 230w

" 'Lovely Ladies' is flip, improbable and pert. Though it gets off to a bad start because the beginning has not quite the courage of its pertness, it wears its manner more easily as it proceeds."

New Repub 53:149 D 21 '27 120w

"A collection of exceedingly thin but not altogether dull stories. Billy is a very charming person, and so are most of the lovely ladies, but the patterns of his adventures are rather shopworn." L. G.

+ — N Y Evening Post p14 D 3 '27 100w

"One of the adventures—'The Lovely Lady'—is really a surprise. The rest of the stories run true to type in recording the amorous encounters of a young man with a smile and a million. Some of them are amusingly up-to-date exaggerations of the most hackneyed plots."

Sat R of Lit 4:440 D 10 '27 250w

FRASER-HARRIS, DAVID FRASER. Coloured thinking, and other studies in science and literature. 276p $2.50 Brentano's [5s Routledge]

824 Science. Literature

"Dr. Fraser Harris's title essay will enable the reader, with luck, to determine whether or not he may be harboring a psychochromæsthete in his home or on his list of acquaintances. Psychochromæsthetes, he explains, are persons whose mentation is chromatic, or who think in colors. He illustrates his thesis with examples from real life, including the French symbolists and more recent cases. Other studies deal with childishness among adults, mythology, Huxley and Shakespeare."—Books (N Y Herald Tribune)

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 O 28 '28 90w

"The author is versatile, as his personal titles as well as those of his chapters show. His main interest is in spreading the gospel of the place of science in the scheme of life; and he does it well, by that meaning judiciously, interestingly, not always deeply."

+ Sat R of Lit 5:256 O 13 '28 150w

Times [London] Lit Sup p339 My 3 '28 70w

FRASER-SIMSON, MRS CICELY. Swinging shutter. 328p $2 Dutton [7s 6d Heinemann]

28-21191

It was in a lonely house on the Scottish moor, where lived her aunt, that Shirley first heard of Dallas Merriman. In some way he was connected with her aunt's stepson Roger and also with her doctor, a Dr Tellman. Something was wrong and Shirley was the only one to whom Aunt Rosa could appeal. The trail led to London and back again to the house with the creaking shutter, and here at last Dallas Merriman was unmasked.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 S 23 '28 120w

Boston Transcript p2 S 29 '28 320w

"This mystery (not detective) story has quite unusual dramatic qualities. It is a real 'thriller,' full of tense scenes and good 'curtains.' But its plot is ludicrous."

+ — New Statesman 30:414 Ja 7 '28 170w

"The atmosphere of mystery and horror is well sustained throughout, and the ending is as logical as it is satisfactory."

+ N Y Times p34 N 25 '28 160w

Reviewed by W. R. Brooks

Outlook 150:999 O 17 '28 130w

"The last part of the book redeems it from mediocrity by the rapid action and unusual setting."

— + Springf'd Republican p7e D 2 '28 130w

Times [London] Lit Sup p64 Je 26 '28 110w

FRAZER, SIR JAMES GEORGE. Man, God and immortality; thoughts on human progress. rev ed 437p $3 (15s) Macmillan

290 Man. Society, Primitive. Religion, Primitive. Immortality 27-21924

These passages chosen from the writings of the author of the "Golden bough" present the more general conclusions to which his studies of society and religion have led him. These conclusions have been separated from the mass of facts upon which they are based, for the convenience of readers who have neither the time nor the taste to pursue the subject in detail. The selections have been revised and edited by the author himself.

"For those who cannot follow the mazes of the author's larger works, this volume will prove a boon, and in some cases will lead the reader into the larger and more detailed field."
+ Boston Transcript p2 D 24 '27 250w

"This anthology of Frazer's . . . will, I hope, be widely read and used. There is magic in it." J: A. Maynard
+ Churchman 138:18 S 29 '28 120w
J Religion 8:155 Ja '28 40w

"We venture to differ from the author when he expressed the opinion that if his work survives to posterity, it will be on account of his record of quaint and savage customs which will then have long passed away. If for no other reason, it will endure as a monument of pure, lucid, and flexible English of never-failing charm. There is, however, little danger that Sir James Frazer's work will survive only as a storehouse of anthropological facts, or as a model of scholarly and graceful writing. In the course of his extensive studies there is scarcely a problem in social anthropology, in the comparative study of religion, in fact, in the whole range of the evolution of the mind of man, upon which he has not touched, and, it must be admitted, whether we agree with his conclusions or not, which he has not illuminated."
+ Nature 121:855 Je 2 '28 1000w
No Am 225:adv Ja '28 40w

"Not far off three hundred extracts of varying length make up the book and each is the summing up of many pages of more bulky works, themselves the product of months or years of laborious application. It may seem to the layman both rash and ungracious to throw doubt upon conclusions backed by such erudition and set forth with such literary charm. Yet no one who has actual experience of the so-called lower races can read without feeling that though it is both pleasant and profitable to read, the author often fails to carry conviction because he lacks first-hand experience."
+ — Sat R 144:666 N 12 '27 1300w
Springf'd Republican p7f Jl 29 '28 150w

"Without wishing in the least to detract from the scientific value of the opinions here conveniently brought together, one may fairly say that the more immediate appeal of the present volume lies in its literary charm."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p236 Mr 29 '28 1050w

FREEMAN, LEWIS RANSOME. The nearing North. 385p il $3.50 Dodd

917.12 Northwest, Canadian—Description and travel. Hudson Bay 28-23033

While photographing scenes in the Canadian mountains the idea occurred to the author of following the scenic course of the great Canadian rivers by canoe and by boat. In the four parts of this book, illustrated from camera pictures, he describes his journeys: Trailing Mackenzie up the Peace; Down the Athabaska, Slave and Mackenzie; Down the Saskatchewan and Nelson to Hudson Bay; The Hudson Bay route—by land and sea.

Booklist 25:67 N '28
Cleveland Open Shelf p134 D '28

"There is always a good story in Freeman's adventures, wherever the scene may be."
+ R of Rs 78:40 N '28 60w
St Louis 26:388 D '28

FREEMAN, RICHARD AUSTIN. As a thief in the night. 312p $2 Dodd

28-22667

Harold Monkhouse was dead, and at first it was considered "death due to natural causes." But his brother became suspicious; an inquest was held and—"death due to arsenic poisoning." The eminent Dr Thorndyke investigated the case and solved not one mystery but two.

For biographical sketch of R. Austin Freeman see Wilson Bulletin 3:322 N '28

"Were it not that the author is a physician, one might be inclined to doubt that the murders in this story could have been accomplished in the way he describes. Granting the possibility of the method described, nó one but a physician who is at the same time an extraordinarily clever detective could ever have solved the mystery. Dr. Thorndyke fulfills both these requirements."
+ N Y Times p26 O 21 '28 150w

"Dr. Thorndyke, with a minimum of waste cerebration, solves the mystery of one of the most ingenious and unusual crimes we ever heard of. His theories are amazingly clever and absolutely watertight." W. R. Brooks
+ Outlook 150:999 O 17 '28 100w

"Mr. Freeman has devised one of the cleverest murders in fiction, and hid it so successfully that only his own Dr. Thorndyke could have been able to expose the method and the perpetrator."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p940 N 29 '28 130w

FREEMAN, RICHARD AUSTIN. A certain Dr Thorndyke. 304p $2 Dodd [7s 6d Hodder & S.]

28-5868

The first half of the story is concerned with love, gun running, mutiny and fever on and off the west coast of Africa. A certain Johnny Walker, alias James Cook, alias John Ormond, in order to escape conviction of the theft of jewels has fled to Africa and found all this awaiting him. The second half of the book tells of Dr Thorndyke in London, quietly working out the details of the theft from the faintest clues, and of the bearing it had on the case of "Johnny Walker."

Booklist 24:364 Je '28

"One of Mr. Freeman's best, which is saying much." Will Cuppy
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p18 F 26 '28 130w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Books (N.Y Herald Tribune) p30 Ap 15 '28 130w

"There is an odd charm about the Freeman detective stories. They are serious and careful, with topics neatly defined, and motives carefully explained. There is a Victorian flavor about them, at variance with the present-day slip-shod tales of blood and mystery."
+ Boston Transcript p2 Mr 10 '28 320w

"The detective story is all right. The doctor really is scientific, and the crime might really have occurred. As for the romance, some of Osmond's exploits are moderately exciting, but when it comes to love, Mr. Freeman is out of his element." H. E. D.
+ — N Y Evening Post p13 F 25 '28 80w

"Mr. Freeman deals generously with the buyers of his book. He gives them a satisfactory yarn coming and going."
+ Springf'd Republican p7f Ap 29 '28 100w

"A rattling good story, full of excitement, rich in careful and convincing local colour. and provided with some very pretty love-making under unusual conditions is no setting for Dr. Thorndyke. But all this is only Mr. Freeman's artfulness. Thorndyke is quietly biding his time in King's Bench Walk, and when the poor hero and heroine find themselves in an impossible position on the Gold Coast, with only the hero's mysterious past between them and happiness, the author unleashes him."

FREEMAN, R: A.—Continued
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p821 N 10 '27 260w

Wis Lib Bul 24:162 My '28

FRENCH, ALLEN. Taking of Ticonderoga in 1775: the British story; a study of captors and captives; based upon material hitherto unpublished. ltd ed 90p $2.50 Harvard univ. press [11s 6d Milford]

973.331 Ticonderoga, N.Y.—Capture, 1775. Arnold, Benedict 28-21231

"This slender volume settles decisively one of the minor, but exceedingly interesting military questions of the Revolution: the question of the part played by Benedict Arnold in the capture of Ticonderoga. Was he an equal sharer with Ethan Allen in the command of this expedition? Was he present at the capture, and did he join with Ethan Allen in calling upon Captain Delaplace to surrender the fort? . . . Mr. French now proves beyond the slightest question that Benedict Arnold did have equal command of the expedition, and that he was as prominent in the actual capture as Ethan Allen."—Sat R of Lit

---

"This short brochure of ninety pages is of importance in clearing up the question of who held chief command in the taking of Ticonderoga. The dispute has been over one of the minutiae of history and is not greatly important, but it now appears to have been settled."
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p27 S 23 '28 320w

"The author found his subject and his evidence neatly delimited for him. The controversy as to the services of Ethan Allen and Benedict Arnold was an old one and well thrashed out. New evidence from the Gage Papers provided the necessary outside criterion. Now one might almost say, in the language of diplomacy, 'the incident is regarded as closed.' Benedict Arnold emerges as a more credible witness to truth than his partner in the northern enterprise. Mr. French is very deft in weaving the elements of the story together."
+ Hist Outlook 19:349 N '28 300w

"The whole is written in the same charming style which makes all of Mr. French's authoritative and valuable studies so vastly readable and entertaining."
+ Ind 121:189 Ag 25 '28 480w

"It is based upon recently revealed material in the Gage papers, and throws a great deal of light upon the long-debated questions of the parts played at the capture of the fort by Benedict Arnold, Ethan Allen and others." Herschel Brickell
+ No Am 226:adv O '28 100w

"Mr. French's well-written monograph gives us a footnote to history with definitive accuracy. It adds one more item to the evidence that Ethan Allen had a distinct streak of meanness, it shows more distinctly the gallant side of Arnold before he developed into a traitor, and it furnishes us our first British account of the capture." Allen Nevins
+ Sat R of Lit 5:274 O 20 '28 600w

Times [London] Lit Sup p714 O 4 '28 170w

FRENCH, MARY (FRENCH) (MRS DANIEL CHESTER FRENCH). Memories of a sculptor's wife. 294p il $5 Houghton

B or 92 French, Daniel Chester 28-24031

Among the most vivid of Mrs French's early recollections is her impression as a small child of the death of Lincoln. Her long book of delightful memories, both before and after marriage to her cousin Daniel Chester French, goes back to that first childhood impression, and as it comes down the years to the present, unfolds a wealth of anecdote concerning her gifted husband and the brillant men and women who have been his friends and hers.

"Her book is not momentous. It is chatter, but very pleasant, entertaining chatter, and one lays it down with the sensation of having spent an evening in the midst of people who enjoy life." Garreta Busey
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p24 N 25 '28 350w

"The author's style is light and amusing. She shows a natural gift for bits of description and for creating atmosphere with a few words. The book is particularly good because it is free from all pretentiousness. It is an authentic and charming record of many delightful artistic and literary associations." D. F. G.
+ Boston Transcript p5 N 7 '28 550w

"One reason for the notable degree of interest with which Mrs. French clothes her story must be that she herself enjoyed zestfully the experiences and contacts of her life, while another reason is to be found in the double fact that all the people of whom she writes are interesting in themselves, and that her selective, dramatic instinct led her to present each one dramatically in connection with interesting events." F. F. Kelly
+ N Y Times p6 D 30 '28 1350w

"Recollections that, often rather thin, are always amusing and very readable."
+ — Sat R of Lit 5:559 D 29 '28 300w

Reviewed by Lilian Whiting
Springf'd Republican p7e D 2 '28 1000w

FRENCH, WILLIAM. Some recollections of a Western ranchman, New Mexico, 1883-1899. 284p $3.50 Stokes [10s 6d Methuen]

917.89 Ranch life. New Mexico—Description and travel 28-7784

Stories of an English ranchman's experiences in frontier days in New Mexico.

Booklist 24:397 Jl '28

"As a simple and unassuming record the book ranks high." C: J. Finger
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p20 Mr 25 '28

Boston Transcript p8 Ap 7 '28 150w

"He has a breezy style and plenty of good yarns to spin."
+ New Statesman 29:818 O 8 '27 220w

"Altogether, it is a graphic and engaging picture of life on ranch, in town and round about generally in the Southwest in the '80s and '90s. But it would have been still more entertaining if the author had exercised some selective criticism upon his reminiscences."
+ — N Y Times p20 My 20 '28 350w

Reviewed by C: J. Finger
N Y World p10m F 26 '28 480w

Spec 139:1052 D 10 '27 160w

Times [London] Lit Sup p685 O 6 '27 680w

Wis Lib Bul 24:160 My '28

FREUD, ANNA. Introduction to the technic of child analysis; auth. tr. supervised by L. Pierce Clark. (Nervous and mental disease monograph ser.) 59p $1.50 Nervous & mental disease pub.

136.7 Child study. Psychoanalysis 28-12029

"The first book on the subject of child analysis has been written by Anna Freud, Professor Freud's daughter, with true Freudian clarity, simplicity, and profundity. This small volume contains four lectures read before the Vienna Psychoanalytic Society. It is therefore technical in the sense that it covers the whole field of psychoanalytic technique, but at the same time it will be of inestimable value to parents, educators, psychologists, and psychoanalysts."—Nation

---

"What do Freudians propose to do with children? Granted, as they claim, that the causes of adult neurosis extend far back into childhood and infancy, what can they do in the way of early cure? From the lips of Freud's own daughter, Anna Freud, comes a frank and interesting answer." Margery Mansfield

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p14 S 16 '28 1000w

"It is a genuinely important contribution to our efforts in child study." Rosetta Hurwitz
+ Nation 126:672 Je 13 '28 550w

Reviewed by A. S. Lorand
N Y Evening Post p10 Je 16 '28 800w
St Louis 26:373 D '28

FREUD, SIGMUND. Future of an illusion; tr. by W. D. Robson-Scott. (Int. psychoanalytical lib.) 98p $2 Liveright [6s Inst. of psycho-analysis; Hogarth press]

201 Psychoanalysis. Religion—Psychology

"Considers the psychological importance of religious ideas in the preservation of cultures, and concludes that in the past they have been invaluable in reconciling the masses of men, both to the uncertainties of their physical destiny and to the necessary repression of individual instincts upon which every genuine civilization is premised. Now, however, in the opinion of the author, religious ideas are deprived of efficacy, since the advance of knowledge has shown them to be illusions—in fact a form of neurosis, to be eliminated only by proper education of the individual at the proper season."—Dial

---

"Disentangled from argumentation and debate, the essay is not merely a brilliant defense of the modern psychology of religious consciousness, but a beautifully integrated study in the cultural patterns of religious formations."
+ — Bookm 68:xxiii N '28 120w

"Freud has written a book with which probably the majority of people will disagree, but for the thoughtful, and particularly those who have followed somewhat the development of the psychoanalytic movement, it is filled with interest because it deals with those issues that are vital to every human being." W: A. White, M.D.
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p4 D 9 '28 750w
Boston Transcript p4 Ag 11 '28 450w
Boston Transcript p8 N 10 '28 520w

"The first part of the essay is a concise and admirable account of the psychological conditions of civilization, but the rest is prolegomena and declarative notes rather than the consecutive, or persuasive, development of a thesis."
Dial 85:444 N '28 130w
Nation 127:500 N 7 '28 100w
Nation and Ath 43:736 S 8 '28 750w

Reviewed by E: Sapir
New Repub 56:356 N 14 '28 500w

"His solution is warped by the limitation of his mind and the incompleteness of his knowledge of the better part of the human soul. ir which, one may hold, and not in totem and tabu, lies the real essence of religion. Sigmund Freud is a busy bee, distilling a somewhat acrid honey from diverse blossoms. But he cannot sing, he can only hum. If he insists on trying to sing, we must be firm with him, and tell him to go back to his acrid honey, leaving song to nightingales and hermit thrushes." C: Johnston
— N Y Times p4 Ag 12 '28 1050w

"There is, on the face of it, something a little pathetic in the supposition that a treatise of a hundred pages could thus draw man, still so imperceptibly removed from the prehistoric, really into the open. But the very naïveté of the appeal shows Dr. Freud in his true character as a deliverer of his fellows. How much he has done for us is as yet impossible to estimate, but we can be certain that it is a great deal." E: Shanks
Sat R 146:212 Ag 18 '28 1250w

"It is exceedingly simply and lucidly written, with hardly a technical term. . . Whatever we may think of Dr. Freud's point of view (and it will be exceedingly unpalatable to some), few will be able, after reading this book, to deny the nobility of his mind, his courage, and his lofty disinterestedness."
+ Spec 141:197 Ag 11 '28 1250w
Times [London] Lit Sup p748 O 18 '28 620w

FREUD, SIGMUND. Problem of lay-analyses; introd. by S. Ferenczi. 316p $2.50 Brentano's

131 Psychoanalysis 27-22733

"Psychoanalysis has virtually established itself as a valuable adjunct to the medical sciences. That its practice should not be solely limited to physicians, particularly in Austria, is the thesis of Dr. Freud's Socratic discussion that occupies half of his book. The remainder is an autobiography of the eminent doctor, in which he assures us that he had a solid medical education and conducted no small amount of research before propounding his theories."—Living Age

---

Booklist 24:191 F '28

"The very easiest way for those with little time at their disposal to get a good idea of psycho-analysis is to read Freud's short Autobiography, tacked in at the tail end of the book and not even mentioned on the cover. To the literary critic this short autobiography of Freud is a very impressive performance because of its simplicity, its honesty, its freedom from fake and humbug, and its genuine literary ability." M. M. Colum
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p1 Jl 29 '28 500w
Living Age 334:92 Ja 1 '28 70w
Nation 126:247 F 29 '28 100w

Reviewed by S. D. House
New Repub 54:23 F 22 '28 780w
No Am 224:adv D '27 30w
Pratt p7 spring '28

"Few critics will agree with Dr. Ferenczi that Freud has 'a striking gift to make himself easily understood to the laity,' or that this book is 'exemplary in its lucidity.' On the contrary, many have recorded with regret that to Freud, a man of many gifts and some rare ones, has not been added the gift of exposition. In the second essay, in which Dr. Freud tells with a commendable candor the history of his mental life, we have a welcome contribution. Here is a readable account of the successive stages in his doctrine and his relations to other workers in the field. Here the method is narrative, and in narrative his clinical sense comes to his aid."
+ — Sat R of Lit 4:459 D 17 '27 400w
Spec 140:sup615 Ap 21 '28 650w

"The autobiography is fascinating reading." I. H. Coriat, M.D.
+ Survey 59:653 F 15 '28 1150w

"The book will interest those already familiar with the author's contribution to psychology, though it is not calculated to win many converts."
Times [London] Lit Sup p622 S 6 '28 950w

"This book should be read by everyone who has any interest whatsoever in psychoanalysis." A. H. Ruggles
+ Yale R n s 18:182 S '28 320w

FROST, MRS ELIZABETH (HOLLISTER). Lost lyrist. 96p $2; ltd ed $5 Harper

811 28-21291

Poems whose underlying note is one of sorrow over the death of a beloved one. Many of the poems have appeared in magazines either in this country or in England.

Reviewed by Genevieve Taggard
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p7 S 30 '28 620w
Cleveland Open Shelf p130 D '28

"This volume is of uneven quality. Obvious sentiments obviously expressed—reminiscent of Sara Teasdale at her worst—are juxtaposed with cleanly phrased, finely chiseled lines. . . Unmistakable genuineness marks these poems, good or bad. The bad have not, at least, the fault of pretension; they are honest, if banal. The good, though they are of less frequency, show not only sorrow, compelled to utterance, but one shaped with fine economy, subtly over-and-undertoned, into verse which approaches perfection." Elling Aannestad

FROST, ELIZABETH—Continued

+ — New Repub 56:309 O 31 '28 250w

"'The Lost Lyrist' is rather infrequently good. The emotions are only those of anguish and longing—always restrained, but always unrelieved. Isolated poems of the sort she writes are occasionally desirable, but a whole book of them is depressing." J. D. Tasker

— + Outlook 150:1174 N 14 '28 100w

"Gifted with a genuine ease, she has chosen to limit her lute to those notes which are either the most difficult or the most derivative."

— Sat R of Lit 5:199 O 6 '28 320w

FROST, ROBERT. West-running brook. 64p il $2.50 Holt

811 28-29523

The first volume of Robert Frost's poems since "New Hampshire" (Book Review Digest, 1923). The love of nature is the dominant note in the book.

"He has allowed several poems to creep into the volume which needed more careful polishing. A few are treason to his reticence. Physically slight as his latest volume is, one could have wished it even smaller, so that it might contain nothing less than his best. The courage that is bred by a dark sense of Fate, the tenderness that broods over mankind in all its blindness and absurdity, the vision that comes to rest as fully on kitchen smoke and lapsing snows as on mountains and stars—these are his, and in his seemingly casual poetry, he quietly makes them ours." Babette Deutsch

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p1 N 18 '28 1200w

Reviewed by E: B. Hall

Boston Transcript p5 D 15 '28 1500w

"The best poems in Mr. Frost's new volume will repay a third or a fourth or a fifteenth reading. Certain pages of the book remain for me, after several attempts to find more in them than meets the eye, trivial; and certain others are merely good enough. But at least five poems here have all of their author's unique excellence, which is to say that they are not to be compared with the poems of any other living man, and to say that they give an absolute, almost undiscussable pleasure." Mark Van Doren

+ — Nation 128:110 Ja 23 '29 500w

"'West-Running Brook' is Robert Frost at his ripest and best. There is not a single poem which could be spared from the volume, which is entirely too short for the reader's appetite. There has never been effort, strain, overemphasis in his poetry. 'West-Running Brook' brings with it all these gifts and a richer melody, a smoother line than ever." J: Crawford

+ N Y Evening Post p9m N 24 '28 600w

Reviewed by Percy Hutchison

N Y Times p2 N 18 '28 1550w

"The quality of the book is unquestionably high." Herschel Brickell

+ No Am 226:adv D '28 150w

Reviewed by G: O'Neill

Outlook 151:111 Ja 16 '29 270w

"The ripe repose, the banked emotion, the nicely blended tenderness and humor are everywhere. Growth? Change? A new note? The answers may be found in two lines of one or Frost's first poems, a premonitory couplet written before 1900:

They would not find me changed from him they knew,
Only more sure of all I thought was true.

No reviewer has written, no critic will write, a better summary." L: Untermeyer

+ Sat R of Lit 5:533 D 22 '28 1250w

"It is no disrespect to Robert Frost to say that 'West-Running Brook' shows no advance over his earlier works. He is not the kind of poet in whom one looks for change. 'A Boy's Will' clearly forecast his later volumes and 'North of Boston' marked the development of an outlook on life and a literary manner which he has never modified in essentials. He is what he was, and one trusts that, even in an age when many poets seem to lose their powers, he will be what he is." G. H.

Springf'd Republican p7e D 30 '28 1200w

Reviewed by Leon Whipple

Survey 61:169 N 1 '28 120w

"His present book arouses mingled admiration and disappointment. Our admiration is for the sincerity and delicate insight with which the theme is handled. Our disappointment is because of the smallness, limitation, almost barrenness, of the theme itself. It may be true that a perfectly carved cameo is a greater work of art than a clumsily constructed pyramid; but it is equally true that the greatest poems lead us out into the vast complexity of life and do not keep us indefinitely in a little walled-in nook, however beautiful." F: E. Pierce

+ — Yale R n s 18:365 winter '29 360w

FROTHINGHAM, PAUL REVERE. All these. 314p $3.50 Harvard univ. press [16s Milford]

920 Biography 27-25321

A collection of essays by a Unitarian minister and man of letters. Mr. Frothingham wrote these articles for the Harvard Theological Review and other periodicals. Contents: Introduction, by M. A. De W. Howe; Memoir, by R. Grant; John Cotton; John Fiske again; John Ruskin; The historian as preacher; The mysticism of Maeterlinck; By way of contrast; Edward Everett Hale; William Everett; George Hodges; Cromwell's head; A great character: Charles W. Eliot.

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p8 Ap 29 '28 130w

"Here is interesting reading not only for those who knew Paul Revere Frothingham through personal contact or in the many organizations of which he was a valuable member, but to the stranger as well. There is in it much interesting information, and frequent presentation of characters in a new and inspiring light. It is written in a smooth and graceful English that on platform or in pulpit never blurred the message that he brought his audiences." F. M.

+ Boston Transcript p4 Ja 4 '28 720w

Ind 120:285 Mr 24 '28 50w

"There is a literary charm in these chapters aside from their critical value. One gets a new slant on some of these personalities, or perhaps makes their acquaintance for the first time, and the introduction is performed so suavely and gracefully as to lure the reader from page to page."

+ Springf'd Republican p6 Mr 12 '28 320w

Times [London] Lit Sup p154 Mr 1 '28 50w

FROTHINGHAM, THOMAS GODDARD. American reinforcement in the World war; with an introd. by Newton D. Baker. 388p $3 Doubleday, Doran

940.373 European war, 1914-1918—United States. United States. Army, A.E.F. 27-25564

Captain Frothingham tells how the United States organized for war, describing and correlating the various forces, industrial, military and naval which brought into being and sustained the American army on the western front. Ex-secretary of war, Newton D. Baker, has written a 30-page introduction.

Booklist 24:277 Ap '28

"Considering the amount of ground which this work covers, it is admirably arranged, sufficiently documented yet not impeded by statistical detail."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p26 Ap 15 '28 180w

Reviewed by F. P. Hull

Boston Transcript p6 D 3 '27 2300w

"Captain Frothingham gives a very thorough study of our preparations, military and industrial, of the transportation and supply of troops, and of the extent and effect of our participation at the front. But the principal value of the author's contribution to the literature of the war lies in the fact that it is written with, and consequently is a record of, all of the fervor of the war-time feeling of the nation." Owen Culbertson

N Y Evening Post p13 Ja 7 '28 300w

"The best brief account of all phases of America's participation in the World War yet published." N: Roosevelt

+ N Y Times p4 Ja 1 '28 1300w

"Capt Frothingham has written a book with perspective and the authority of first hand acquaintance with the original records, some of which have not been before made available. His appraisal not only of our part in winning the war but his estimates of the factors making for victory seems calculated to stand the test of searching analysis."

+ Springf'd Republican p10 Ag 10 '28 650w

Reviewed by Royden Williamson

Yale R n s 18:172 S '28 70w

FRY, ROGER ELIOT. Flemish art; a critical survey. 63p il $3.50 Brentano's [6s Chatto & W.]

759.9 Painting, Flemish. Art, Flemish 28-10110

"At the time of the Flemish Loan Exhibition at the Royal Academy last spring, the National Art Collections Fund asked Mr. Fry to give a lecture on the pictures. This lecture, which had to be somewhat abridged for the platform, is now attractively printed in its complete form with twenty-two plates. Thus it forms both a record and an interpretation of the most remarkable pictures of a unique exhibition."—Sat R of Lit

---

Booklist 24:353 Je '28

"Mr. Fry's distinctions are convincing enough in so far as they relate to the general run of Flemish painters, but when he considers Rubens and Rembrandt he is the victim of his prejudices." T: Craven

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p22 Mr 18 '28 1050w

Reviewed by C: K. Trueblood

Dial 85:162 Ag '28 720w

Ind 120:533 Je 2 '28 220w

"This brief book is a revaluation of the leading Flemings in the light of Mr. Fry's theories of color and form. As in all of Mr. Fry's writings the results are enjoyable as well as instructive, and one brings away a refreshingly increased appreciation of Hubert van Eyck, Roger van der Weyden, Quentin Matsys, and Rubens."

+ Nation 126:620 My 30 '28 80w

"Apart from his disregard for the non-artistic sources of works of art, Mr. Fry's essay, it need hardly be said, has high distinction."

+ Nation and Ath 41:643 Ag 13 '27 900w

" 'Flemish Art' will hardly rank with Mr. Fry's more important books. Despite its brevity, however, it is an illuminating résume of an important field of painting." E. H. Walton

+ — New Repub 56:26 Ag 22 '28 200w

New Statesman 29:573 Ag 13 '27 1050w

" 'Flemish Art' will neither add to nor detract from a great and well deserved reputation. It is too slight and too orthodox to induce critical polemics of any sort." H. L. Matthews

N Y Times p6 Mr 4 '28 400w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:160 Mr '28

St Louis 26:354 N '28

"He has contrived to sketch in the salient features of the history of Flemish art, and to characterize them by contrast with other schools, notably the Italian, and all in a little more than fifty pages. Such a tour de force of compression could only be achieved by one who, like Mr. Fry, really knows his subject and really understands the essentials of art. He is austerely rigid in keeping to his argument and avoiding the blandishments of irrelevant eulogy; in fact, he is severely critical and does not allow the occasion to warp his judgment, as too many did during that wonderful show: he never forgets Italy."

+ Sat R 144:254 Ag 20 '27 180w

"Mr. Fry has the grace of holding firm convictions without sitting in the seat of the scornful, and his appraisal of the Flemish painters from the point of view of Modernist esthetic is both novel and instructive. It results in some amusing revaluations, notably in the promotion of the generally ignored Petrus Christus to nearly first class rank."

+ Sat R of Lit 4:597 F 11 '28 180w

Spec 139:192 Jl 30 '27 400w

"Mr. Fry's comments are sensitive, penetrating and sound."

+ Springf'd Republican p12 Mr 30 '28 520w

"It is, of course, to be seen from the style and mode of approaching the subject that this is a reprint of a lecture; but in general Mr. Fry has not abated any of his customary austerity, no doubt because his method of criticism, though not in any way a popular method, is so original and complete within itself that it demands no knowledge from his audience."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p546 Ag 11 '27 780w

FRY, THORNTON CARLE. Probability and its engineering uses. 476p $7.50 Van Nostrand [30s Macmillan]

519 Probabilities 28-7844

"A large part of the book is concerned with the theory of probability and the methods employed. It forms an advanced treatise on probability (though beginning with the elements) and contains a good deal of matter and illustration not too easy to come by. The latter part of the book deals with engineering problems in which the theory of probability is of use. The author is a member of the Technical Staff of the Bell Telephone Laboratories."—Times [London] Lit Sup

---

N Y New Tech Bks 13:22 Ap '28

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:457 O '28

"This is a valuable book which will interest the pure mathematician as well as the engineer."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p554 Jl 26 '28 70w

FUESS, CLAUDE MOORE. Men of Andover; with introd. by Alfred Ernest Stearns. 248p il $3 Yale univ. press [13s Oxford]

920 Phillips academy, Andover. United States—Biography 28-10958

"These biographical sketches issued in commemoration of the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of Phillips Academy serve as an eloquent reminder of the richness of Andover's traditions. Few schools in America can boast a more illustrious heritage. As the present headmaster, Mr. Alfred Ernest Stearns, remarks in a foreword, this volume should serve 'as an incentive to increased pride in the past and new enthusiasm for the future.' Various chapters are concerned with the Washington family at Phillips Academy, with Paul Revere, who designed the school's seal, and with such outstanding figures as Josiah Quincy, Samuel F. B. Morse, Nathaniel P. Willis and Oliver Wendell Holmes."—Books (N Y Herald Tribune)

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 Je 17 '28 100w

FUESS, C. M.—Continued

"To bring out such a presentation of the part Andover has played in the formative years of a nation and to make clear the interweavings of men and manners as they in turn affect the progress of the academy, is not alone a labor of intrinsic worth, but at this time when Andover is receiving tribute from all manner of men and for all of its varied services it is distinctly a fitting work. Dr. Fuess's labors for the academy have been many and this latest may conceivably take chief place among them." C. B. Palmer

+ Boston Transcript p2 My 19 '28 1550w

N Y World p7m Jl 15 '28 140w

"Although these chapters were written for the excellent quarterly periodical published by the school, the Phillips Bulletin, Mr. Fuess has in great degree evaded the limitations of conventional eulogy. While properly laying stress on the connection of the subject with Phillips academy, he employs the true technic of biography in a majority of the sketches, and his writing has agreeable vivacity and color. Many outside the company of the school's graduates will be glad to make the acquaintance of these 'Men of Andover.' "

+ Springf'd Republican p6 My 14 '28

Times [London] Lit Sup p617 Ag 30 '28 130w

FUESS, CLAUDE MOORE. Rufus Choate, the wizard of the law. 278p il $3.50 Minton

B or 92 Choate, Rufus 28-8613

The book is not so much a biography as a study of the personality of the great trial lawyer and the secret of his power as an orator.

Booklist 24:361 Je '28

"It offers a polished skeleton, the ribs of which are padded with platitudes by way of flesh, and the movements of which are controlled by wires conveniently in the hands of the author." Eugene Lohrke

— Bookm 67:437 Je '28 70w

"Well written and interesting as the biography is it somehow fails to let the reader live through life with Choate. Choate flashed and left an afterglow, says Mr. Fuess, and the mood of the biography seems less the mood of the flash than of the afterglow." T: R. Powell

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p24 Ap 1 '28 620w

"Mr. Fuess brings a modern and interesting style to his task, a style which makes his story enlivening today and saves his subject from the earlier conventionalities. Thereby he does Choate a service." S. L. Cook

+ Boston Transcript p2 Mr 17 '28 1700w

Cleveland Open Shelf p63 My '28

"Scores of toy-balloon Americans whose lives might furnish material for good individual essays are being deliberately inflated to dirigible size nowadays. Here is one of them. There was no need for this book; and Mr. Fuess, a straightforward and earnest plodder, has therefore been compelled to pad and puff."

— Nation 126:495 Ap 25 '28 50w

Reviewed by Van Wyck Brooks

New Repub 54:330 My 2 '28 650w

"Why there should be a new biography of him is beyond the reviewer's understanding. It does not disclose the secret of the great man, nor does it recompose his life as it was lived or felt. There is no reconstruction and reanimation of the internal activity of a mind and soul; no progressive revelation of a complete life." Joseph Collins

— N Y Evening Post p8 My 12 '28 850w

Reviewed by C: W. Thompson

N Y Times p1 Jl 1 '28 1300w

"He has given us a clear impression of a personality more imposing and picturesque than the Barnums and the Jesse Jameses, and that is what he evidently set out to do." C. G. Bowers

+ N Y World p10m Mr 18 '28 730w

No Am 225:adv Ap '28 100w

"Mr. Fuess, sensing this need for a human-interest story of America's foremost lawyer and orator, has given us the intimate picture of Choate with all his idiosyncrasies and eccentricities. And he shows him to us in his more playful moments, when he would stem the flow of his powerful oratory to poke a little innocent fun at his adversary." Milton Byron

+ Outlook 148:597 Ap 11 '28 220w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:342 Je '28

R of Rs 78:22 Ag '28 60w

"We have here a lively style and an engaging sense of humor which make the real Choate stand out through the oddities which were a part, even if an unconscious one, of his great influence at the bar."

+ Springf'd Republican p6 Je 25 '28 730w

FUGITIVES; an anthology of verse. 164p $2.50 Harcourt

811.08 American poetry—Collections 28-3959

A collection of verse first published in a magazine called The fugitive, the joint enterprise of the authors represented. These are Donald Davidson, William Yandell Elliott, James Marshall Frank, Stanley Johnson, Merrill Moore, John Crowe Ranson, Laura Riding, Alex Brock Stevenson, Allen Tate, Robert Penn Warren, Jesse Wills.

Booklist 24:316 My '28

Reviewed by Babette Deutsch

Bookm 67:442 Je '28 200w

Boston Transcript p3 Ap 25 '28 80w

Cleveland Open Shelf p44 Ap '28

Dial 84:523 Je '28 100w

"A reader who comes upon the volume without preparation may find it difficult going at first. Mr. Ransom, Mr. Tate, and Miss Riding are not for those who read and run; nor for that matter are the other eight, though Mr. Davidson, whose poems commence the collection, is reasonably 'clear.' But such a reader will find it worth his while to give all of the poems his careful attention. Intricate both in form and in content, they will produce a kind of pleasure he has not known if his contact has been only with the widely advertised schools of American poetry. The Fugitives dispersed though they now are, were together long enough to discover how poetry can be created, and their anthology is valuable if only as evidence of that fact." Mark Van Doren

+ Nation 126:296 Mr 14 '28 550w

"The poems contributed by Miss Riding, Mr Ransom and Mr. Donaldson are reprinted from their books. The standard of the other poets, as represented in this volume, is extremely high. I have found Mr. Robert Penn Warren and Mr. Allen Tate the most interesting. Mr. Warren seems one of the most promising young poets who has recently appeared: his characteristic style is stony, nodulous and tight." Edmund Wilson

+ New Repub 54:103 Mr 7 '28 880w

"This book should be of interest to all followers of contemporary poetry. The Fugitives were a strong group. They specialized in the peculiar. They evoked originality and developed an unusual amount of talent in a short space of time. They have been distinctly significant in the development of American poetry since the war, illustrating one definite trend."

+ Sat R of Lit 4:994 Je 23 '28 300w

FULANAIN, pseud. Marsh Arab. Haji Rikkan. 322p $3 Lippincott [10s 6d Chatto & W.]

915.67 Iraq—Social life and customs. Iraq—Description and travel. Arabs in Mesopotamia 28-10313

An English civil officer and his wife made friends with Haji Rikkan, an old Arab peddler who plied his trade among the marshes of the Tigris and Euphrates and the Persian Gulf and from him learned not only his own vivid life story, but also its background in the traditions and customs of the marsh Arabs.

Booklist 24:397 Jl '28

"It may be because 'The Marsh Arab' by Fulanian suffers from having been read immediately after a book as rich and weighty as Rihani's that it seems to me thin, tenuous and unconvincing. There is, however, I think, a peculiar, intrinsic vagueness about 'The Marsh Arab.'" W. B. Seabrook

— + Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p5 My 6 '28 220w

Boston Transcript p6 Jl 3 '28 230w

Cleveland Open Shelf p119 N '28

"Fulanain, whoever he may be, writes mercifully in the reasonable style of a practical man, without sentimentality and without romance, beyond that romance which is inherent in his subject." V. Sackville-West

+ Nation and Ath 42:491 D 24 '27 520w

"Plainly the author has got to know the people really well, and we learn without surprise that Gertrude Bell encouraged him to write this book, and would have contributed a foreword had she lived. It is a travel-book of distinction."

+ New Statesman 30:supxx D 3 '27 310w

Reviewed by P. W. Wilson

N Y Times p7 My 13 '28 620w

"'The Marsh Arab' is written in a distinguished style. Its fault is a blur upon the reader's feelings due to the author's too severe anonymity. One is annoyed by the lack of personality in the writer, whom one longs to see as a human being. And one is puzzled to know how a non-Moslem, a Westerner, penetrated the difficult barrier of Arab religion, race and culture. Most modern travel books are weakened by too much ego; this one is dim by the lack of it." F: O'Brien

+ — N Y World p9e O 28 '28 250w

"A document of Arab life full of fascinating material." Herschel Brickell

+ No Am 225:adv Je '28 120w

R of Rs 78:27 Jl '28 50w

Reviewed by F. A. Ali

Sat R of Lit 4:988 Je 23 '28 400w

FULCHER, PAUL MILTON, ed. Short narratives. 314p $1.50 Century

Short stories—Collections 28-16624

The assistant professor of English in the University of Wisconsin selected these fifty-five stories—English, American, and European, old and new—so that the students in his classes "should have ready access to stories which in length parallel his own endeavors." The stories are all from well-known authors, some are complete very short stories, others are episodes selected from a book.

"Some pretty wretched stuff is included. The first story in the book is an excellent model of how not to write, for it is wooden, artificial and very nearly silly. Mr. Fulcher's own contribution, 'Evanescence,' is so slight as to be almost invisible to the critical eye; and there are other short narratives in the book from which any class in composition would do well to avert its gaze. But there are some models as well—among the best of them Ambrose Bierce's 'George Thurston' and Galsworthy's 'The Dead Man.'" B. R. Redman

— + Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p8 Ag 19 '28 230w

Wis Lib Bul 24:250 O '28

FULLER, HALSEY OAKLEY. Halsey in the West Indies; with a foreword by Kennett Harris. 180p il $1.75 Putnam

917.297 Virgin islands—Description and travel 28-22301

Fourteen-year-old Halsey Fuller spent a winter in the West Indies with his Padré, Dr Whitehead, and his friend Newt. He writes a boyish chronicle of the things they saw and did together. This is illustrated from snapshots taken by the party and from pen and ink sketches by twelve-year-old Arthur Lindborg.

"The sole claim to attention of this book is not found, as is too frequently the case, in the extreme youth of the author, but rather in the engaging, clear, and amusing style in which the incidents that occurred during a winter's sojourn in the West Indies are related. Pure and well-rounded sentences in juxtaposition to equally pure American slang form a combination which invests the most trivial happenings with an undeniable interest."

+ Sat R of Lit 5:546 D 22 '28 170w

"Decidedly entertaining reading for boys of all ages."

+ Springf'd Republican p6 D 24 '28 130w

FULLER, ROBERT HIGGINSON. Jubilee Jim; the life of Colonel James Fisk, jr. 566p $3.50 Macmillan

B or 92 Fisk, James, Jr. 28-27606

"Mr. Fuller puts his narrative in the hands of a companion observer of Fisk—Rufus Phelps, Fisk's friend and publicity agent. He is able in this way not only to lend greater vitality to his story—which thus assumes the character of an historical novel—but can introduce stimulatingly new interpretations and opinions, where in a sober biography he would be compelled to quote chapter and verse and to wade through a bog of controversy to reach every debated fact." —Bookm

Reviewed by J: Carter

Bookm 68:340 N '28 100w

"Unfortunately, not enough of the drollery and recklessness of Jim Fisk escapes into the pages of Mr. Fuller's book The material is all there, and in places it is well told, especially the episode of the corner in gold, but Mr. Fuller chose to adopt a fictional form for his biography of Fisk, and the result is an absence of the sense of reality and a sentimentalization of the shades and colors of the occasions. There was a great deal of admirable research put into the work, and the material is all there somewhere, but it is hopelessly tangled at times in the presentation because Mr. Fuller did not choose to present it as a straight biography, instead of a romantic tale." M. R. Werner

— + Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p5 N 11 '28 1850w

"With some surplusage and circumlocution is the story told by Mr. Fuller. It is a well told if inconsequential story but with too much effort at inventive particularizing. As to its value, the wheat needs to be sifted from the chaff." S. L. Cook

— + Boston Transcript p2 O 27 '28 1950w

"Mr. Fuller was just growing up when the spectacular 'Jubilee Jim' was operating, but you have to keep dates in your mind all of the time or you will be sure that he was Jim Fisk's best and most intimate friend. It is a very amusing method indeed of writing biography." Fanny Butcher

+ Chicago Daily Tribune p16 D 22 '28 560w

"Fisk's animal spirits, his clownishness, his way of taking the world and himself as a huge joke, are well set forth; but the author treats him not as a calculating charlatan and thief, but as a rather good fellow of kind heart but weak impulses. The book is not invariably trustworthy in matters of fact. Names and dates are occasionally wrong. . . Nevertheless, the book will furnish a definite addition to the popular understanding not merely of several of the most striking of American rascals, but of one of the darkest and strangest periods of American life." Allan Nevins

+ — Nation 128:21 Ja 2 '29 650w

Reviewed by Courtenay Terrett

N Y Evening Post p8m N 17 '28 620w

Reviewed by C: W. Thompson

N Y Times p11 D 16 '28 1700w

"His life story is the thinnest of the thin, but Mr. Fuller has succeeded in padding it out to the dimensions of a long novel, which, while amusing in spots, is scarcely justified." Van Wyck Brooks

FULLER, R. H.—Continued
— + Outlook 151:75 Ja 9 '29 150w
Springf'd Republican p7e D 2 '28 950w

FULOP-MILLER, RENE. Lenin and Gandhi; tr. from the German by F. S. Flint and D. F. Tait. 343p $5 (21s) Putnam

B or 92 Lenin, Nikolai, pseud. (Vladimir Ilich Vlyanov). Gandhi, Mohandas Karamchand [28-2818]

The book describes the life and work of the two men whose personalities, in the author's opinion, "most forcibly embody the spirit of the present age," and whose ideas and acts will afford future generations the clearest evidence of the motives of our time. In spite of the apparent antagonism of their doctrines their ideals are akin and the same spirit animates their indictment of European culture.

Booklist 24:362 Je '28
Boston Transcript p4 Ap 18 '28 1300w
"A readable and arresting book."
+ Living Age 334:111 Jl '28 450w
Reviewed by Leonard Woolf
Nation and Ath 42:396 D 10 '27 110w
"Herr Fülöp-Miller's work in these twin biographical studies is, like his work in 'The Mind and Face of Bolshevism,' so good as to be almost indispensable to anybody interested in this century which is ours. It has his characteristic qualities of industry, sympathy, and comprehension, as well as his characteristic defect of philosophic individualism. We read him and we do not agree with him, but we could not very well do without him." Vincent Sheean
+ New Repub 54:sup402 My 16 '28 650w
N Y Evening Post p8 Jl 7 '28 100w
Outlook 149:30 My 2 '28 1600w
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:494 O '28
St Louis 26:12 Ja '28
"We may perhaps doubt whether Lenin and Mr. Gandhi are the two men 'whose personalities most forcibly embody the spirit of the present age,' but we can have no possible doubt that the two sketches contained in the present volume are extremely interesting and throw a flood of welcome light on two very enigmatic revolutionaries. Let us say, in passing, that the translation is admirably done and reads like a good original. The author is well informed and has drawn a perfectly verisimilar and very probably a true picture of his heroes, his admiration for whom does not blind him to their practical inadequacies."
+ Sat R 144:668 N 12 '27 750w
" 'Lenin and Gandhi' is evidently a pot-boiler. There is little that is new in Fülöp-Miller's interpretation of Lenin, and his analysis of Gandhi is sketchy. Fortunately he has appended a few interesting letters of both Lenin and Gandhi." P. B. MacDonald
Sat R of Lit 5:452 D 8 '28 220w
"Mr. Fülöp-Miller has made a remarkable book, not always strictly accurate, but with interest on every page." F. Y-B.
+ — Spec 139:776 N 5 '27 1350w
Reviewed by J: P. Gavit
Survey 60:187 My 1 '28 200w
Times [London] Lit Sup p799 N 10 '27 1550w

FULOP-MILLER, RENE. Rasputin, the holy devil; tr. from the German by F. S. Flint and D. F. Tait. 386p il $5 Viking press [21s Putnam]

B or 92 Rasputin, Grigorĭĭ Efimovich 28-24396

A sensational account of the life and character of Rasputin. Herr Fülöp-Miller tries to synthesize and explain the violent contradictions manifested in Rasputin's nature and has seemingly entered into a sympathetic understanding of the "holy devil." He describes in great detail the orgies of Rasputin and his women disciples, describes the family life of the Tsar and Tsaritsa and Rasputin's influence upon them, and closes his story with a bitter denunciation of Prince Yusupov, the slayer of Rasputin, who believed himself to be the liberator of Russia.

Reviewed by Rebecca West
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p1 O 28 '28 3050w
Boston Transcript p4 D 1 '28 320w
"The chief value of his book is that, out of available records, he has reconstructed the story of one of the most melodramatic characters of our time. There is confusion from the fact that he does not always manipulate his materials chronologically. But the materials are all here, and make fascinating reading. Of especial value are fragments from the diaries of the police spies detailed to watch Rasputin's every step and to record every word uttered by the 'holy satyr.' "
+ — Nation and Ath 44:56 O 13 '28 580w
"A good deal of this book is palpable fiction; nevertheless we should say that it contains more of the truth about this absurdly sinister figure than any other book yet published. The author presents Rasputin as a comparatively honest, simple peasant—a more favourable view than is commonly taken of him, but a view which on the whole is justified by the narrative. But we have surely heard enough of him now. May not his name be consigned to oblivion?"
+ New Statesman 31:supxiv O 6 '28 280w
"Fulop-Miller tells the whole story of the rise, power and tragic end of the uncouth, mystic mountebank in a crazy, half-childish, half-hysterical style which reconstructs what must have been the quality of the events themselves. The intimate connection between sexual and religious ecstacy has been often observed but never explained. Some one might make a parallel study of the great Don Juans and the great sexually starved mystics. Diabolism, cultism, Rosicrucianism, etc., may be removed from the penumbra of literature to the laboratory. The book is worth while, either as clinical marginalia for such a student or a contribution to nonsense literature." Percy Winner
N Y Evening Post p9m N 10 '28 420w
" 'Rasputin' is the work of an entirely competent and obviously unprejudiced investigator and of an excellent writer with the ability to dramatize into reality the most incredible of scenes."
+ Outlook 150:1170 N 14 '28 380w
St Louis 26:389 D '28
Sat R 146:395 S 29 '28 780w
Reviewed by Arthur Ruhl
Sat R of Lit 5:398 N 24 '28 780w
"More than thirty volumes have been written about Rasputin, and one hopes that this ambitious character sketch, which gives in greater (and rather unpleasant) detail what we already know, will be the last. . . If Herr Fülöp-Miller expected to correct this impression, [of Rasputin as a cunning charlatan] he has failed."
— Spec 141:373 S 22 '28 580w
"Without doubt the author has a very large knowledge of his subject, but either a desire for sensationalism (as shown by the subtitle), or an occasional impulse to indulge in fine or satirical writing, leaves the reader a little bewildered as to whether or not this is the true story of the hypnotic peasant who, by his influence over the Tsaritsa, was the most important individual cause of the Russian Revolution. Herr Fülöp-Miller himself does not seem wholly to have solved the riddle of Rasputin's personality; and he has not sufficiently indicated the respective reliability of his many witnesses to allow the reader to form his own judgment."
— + Times [London] Lit Sup p844 N 15 '28 940w

FUNDAMENTALS of dairy science; by the associates of Lore A. Rogers in the research laboratories of the Bureau of dairy industry, United States Department of agriculture. (Am. chemical soc. monograph ser.) 543p il $5.50 Chemical catalog co.

637.1 Milk. Dairy products. Rogers, Lore Alfred 28-7682

"Advanced work on the constituents of milk; physical chemistry, micro-biology, and nutritional values of milk and milk products; and the physiology of milk secretion. Chapter X, on the sources and distribution of bacteria found in milk, will prove enlightening to the average layman. References at all of the chapter endings."—N Y New Tech Bks

"This book, it can be safely stated, is the most notable contribution that has been made to the literature of dairy science. It is unique in purpose and plan. It represents the successful accomplishment of a very difficult task. It is eminently satisfactory in filling 'a need experienced by advanced students and research workers in the field of dairy science' and in presenting 'basic data, fundamental observations and unbiased discussions of researches that contribute to the present status of the dairy industry.' " L. L. Van Slyke

+ Am Chem Soc J 50:2585 S '28 520w

"The book is exceptionally well printed and arranged, for which the publishers and the editorial committee of the monograph series of the American Chemical Society deserve credit. The book can be recommended highly as well worthy of the great scientist and teacher to whom it is dedicated." J. A. Tobey

+ Am J Pub Health 18:958 Jl '28 220w

N Y New Tech Bks 13:21 Ap '28

FURNISS, RUTH PINE. Gay. 288p $2 Harcourt 28-20729

The story of a courageous and independent girl with a talent for sculpture, and the man of passionately sensitive nature who depends on her. Paul's dependence on Gay began in their childhood. Loving her deeply, he has always resented her friends, her studies, her modelling. Gay, however, does not realize the quality of her love for Paul until he is "missing" in the war. For three years she refuses Norman and continues to hope for Paul's return. And then at last, his need of her overcoming his determination to set her free, Paul comes back, broken, neurotic. Gay's love has just begun to exorcise his suicidal mania when their liaison is discovered.

"Here is a novel that makes one wish it might have been better. Unsentimental and sympathetic understanding of the young American artist is rare enough to merit the best prose writing, and while Miss Furniss writes well and competently her story of Gay Fairfield's development as a woman and an artist lacks the power and discrimination to make it of real moment."

— + Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p45 S 30 '28 200w

Boston Transcript p2 S 12 '28 300w

"Gay's picture alone is enough to justify the use of that cliché, 'a promising first novel,' so true here despite the threadbareness of the phrase."

+ — N Y Times p6 S 16 '28 420w

FURST, HERBERT ERNEST AUGUSTUS, (TIS, pseud.). Art of still-life painting. (Universal art ser.) 268p il $8 Scribner [21s Chapman & H.]

758 Still life painting 28-12207

" 'Still life' [the author] defines as 'life or nature subject to a selection of objects and to an order imposed upon it by the free will of the artist.' The first half of his book is a historical study of still life from its beginnings in pre-Renaissance painting, when artists introduced purely extraneous, inanimate objects into their religious paintings, to the present day, when still-life painting has become an abstruse art. The author shows he has the courage of his own convictions by devoting almost half his book to illustrations and brief comment upon still-life paintings of all periods which are 'good of their kind.' "—N Y Times

"At times he can be admirably clear, with a close knowledge of methods and processes and sensible æsthetic opinions; but more frequently he is dull and long winded, filling out his book with pointless quotations. It is unfortunate that Mr. Furst should have omitted contemporary Americans, for such painters as McFee, Demuth, O'Keeffe and Sheeler are dead shots at photographing eggplants and petunias."

— + Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p14 Mr 4 '28 210w

Boston Transcript p4 F 4 '28 530w

New Statesman 30:534 F 4 '28 50w

"The magnitude of his task has a little bewildered him and resulted in an awkward historical treatment of the subject, with too many individual artists treated at the beginning and too few at the end, and with long stretches (especially in dealing with the nineteenth century) where interest in other branches of art makes him forget he is writing about still life. But considering that the field is virgin territory the author should rather be admired for his courage than condemned for a few lapses." H. L. Matthews

+ — N Y Times p31 Mr 4 '28 280w

Pratt p23 spring '28

"We are not acquainted with any other book dealing exclusively with still-life. We cannot but admire the enthusiasm with which he seeks to crush the whole of ars longa into his vita brevis; but we are forced to admit also that it suffers a little in the crushing. His new book has every sign of hurry. The sentences are often confused, sometimes even ungrammatical. There is a lack of synthesis which can only be achieved by the slow pondering for which Mr. Furst leaves himself no time. His book, which is a further volume in the excellent Universal Art Series, is valuable for the wide range of its illustrations and as a starting point for more considered work."

+ — Sat R 144:670 N 12 '27 200w

"This is the best book on still life, which reveals so much of a painter's psychology, that we have had the fortune to read."

+ Spec 139:931 N 26 '27 100w

"As an historian he is both interesting and amusing, and also he is learned. His two chapters on the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries, in which he discusses the historical conditions which led still-life painters to choose the subjects which they painted, are extremely interesting and informative. The rest of his book, and especially that part which deals with nineteenth-century and modern still lives, is quite logical and clear, and follows from his premiss, as also does the praise or dispraise which he gives to particular artists."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p832 N 17 '27 820w

FYFE, HARRY HAMILTON. Archon; or, The future of government. (To-day and to-morrow ser.) 95p $1 Dutton [2s 6d K. Paul]

320 Political science 28-13098

The author of this little book holds no ideal view of the purpose of government. He believes that future generations will ask less and less of government in the sphere of the ideal but will demand much more of it in the way of making life natural and rational, comfortable and convenient. The idea that has held for 300 years, that government could regulate conduct, is passing. In the future as much freedom as possible will be allowed to individual propensities and tastes. Government will be run more as a business. The party system will disappear and a more competent type of man will replace the politician of today.

FYFE, H. H.—Continued
Booklist 24:384 Jl '28

Reviewed by Leonard Woolf
Nation and Ath 42:569 Ja 14 '28 1050w

"He displays an addiction to capitals which is rather trying; but we cannot feel that he has proved his case or sustained his forecasts with valid argument. Our own view is that more money power would cure our ills rather than increase them. At the same time Mr. Hamilton Fyfe, by virtue of his experience and his engaging, forcible style, has written a brochure that thinking people will discuss."

— + Spec 139:1052 D 10 '27 90w

Times [London] Lit Sup p15 Ja 5 '28 150w

FYLEMAN, ROSE. A princess comes to our town. 158p il $2 Doubleday, Doran
28-23338

There was once a fairy tale princess who got very tired of living in a fairy tale and begged to be allowed to live a little real life. Her fairy godmother urged the king and queen to consent and finally they did. So the Princess Finestra came to town incognito and enjoyed herself very much. Then she met the Prince and went home with him.

Booklist 25:127 D '28

"One expects grace and fantasy from Rose Fyleman if one knows her verses for children. This is a book that children, little girls particularly, will adore, and, what is more, the amiable parent who reads it aloud will adore it too. It is delicate and satiric without being either sentimental or over-sophisticated." Rebecca Lowrie

+ Sat R of Lit 5:355 N 10 '28 150w

G

GADE, JOHN ALLYNE. Christian IV, king of Denmark and Norway; a picture of the seventeenth century. 320p il $5 Houghton [18s Allen & U.]

B or 92 Christian IV, king of Denmark
28-5036

"The book is mostly about Christian himself—his upbringing, his battles, and his love affairs. Although Christian ruined his country, both politically and economically, in the Thirty Years' War, he succeeded in endearing himself to his subjects by an open-handed prodigality of purse and an unflinching bravery in battle. The author has reproduced certain passages from the king's diary, which indicate what an interest he took in the well-being of his subjects."—Sat R of Lit

"This entertaining and gossipy biography is written by an American diplomat and man of affairs. It is clearly a book for popular consumption, not for the serious student. Entertaining anecdotes are strung together without too nice a regard for their chronology, historicity, or importance. However, the work is not without value for its glimpses of seventeenth-century social life, its setting forth of popular superstitions and curious customs." Waldemar Westergaard

Am Hist R 33:907 Jl '28 320w

"More valuable as a social than as a biographic study. Mr. Gade has given a splendid rendition of his life and character, but one cannot help feeling that it was a great labor wasted upon an unworthy subject. His research has been gigantic, and has unearthed much matter of no conceivable historic moment."

+ — Bookm 67:xxiii Je '28 150w

"Mr. Gade's volume is less a history than a biography. It deals more with the man than with the King. Yet it does so in a fashion that gives us a vivid impression of life as generally lived in northern Europe in those days. It has faults. From an historical point of view it is somewhat confused, repetitious, and too loaded with minor details. From a psychological point of view it is too superficial, not analytical enough. Nevertheless its merits far outweigh these shortcomings." Edwin Bjorkman

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p9 Jl 29 '28 980w

Boston Transcript p2 Mr 17 '28 750w

"Mr. John A. Gade has drawn a lively and entertaining picture of the Danish King who remains his country's hero, in spite of having been the important agent in its catastrophic decline. . . Mr. Gade owes the color of his book to the pageantry and display in which his hero delighted and wasted his country's substance. Indeed, the book is distinctly less useful than it might be in European history, except as a picture of a picturesque personality."

+ Hist Outlook 19:349 N '28 180w

"Mr. Gade's style is lively, and his strokes are broad. He is accurate without being pedantic."

+ Living Age 334:562 Mr 15 '28 180w

"Mr. Gade's book is interesting, though it can hardly be taken very seriously. We must bear in mind, however, that the burlesque character of the volume owes its origin largely to the subject. In Denmark, until this day, the name of King Christian excites enthusiasm." Llewelyn Powys

+ New Repub 54:198 Mr 28 '28 850w

"It is easy to judge this biography superficially and unfairly, there is too little emphasis on important events. Coronation and wedding ceremonies are spectacular and devastating financially, but otherwise not significant. As a 'picture of the seventeenth century' the volume gains in importance." A. L. Olson

— + N Y Times p14 My 13 '28 680w

"Gives a richly detailed panorama of the Seventeenth Century as well as an excellent story of Denmark's hero-king, who has remained a hero despite the fact that the end of his reign saw his country no longer ruler of the Baltic and Oceanic seas."

+ No Am 225:adv Ap '28 80w

"Considerable amusement and interest may be derived from the book."

+ Sat R 146:428 O 6 '28 650w

"There is not too much history in the book to bore the ordinary reader, yet quite enough to put the king in his proper seventeenth century setting. The author succeeds in holding a happy balance between dull fact and unchecked imagination; he has written a romantic biography, rather than a biographical romance, and between these two there is a world of difference."

+ Sat R of Lit 4:935 Je 2 '28 280w

"It would be tempting to quote lengthily from the store of good things Mr. Gade has given us in this most human and entertaining biography."

+ Spec 141:367 S 22 '28 180w

GAER, JOSEPH. Legend called Meryom. 289p $2.50 Morrow [7s 6d Allen & U.]
28-1743

Meryon was the daughter of the tailor in a poverty-stricken little Jewish village in Russia, whose beauty and wisdom, flowering in the midst of squalor and ignorance, passed into legend.

Booklist 24:322 My '28

"The author has an intensely irritating trick—it is not without felicity when employed by Jane Austen—of letting all his action take place off-stage, conveying it to his reader through the conversation of persons who have, apparently, no other purpose in life that the spreading of glad news. The effect of this artifical perspective is not one of clarity, but gives rather the impression that he knows not what people do, but what they say—and that obscurely."

Bookm 67:xxxix Mr '28 180w

"From the pen of a young writer born and brought up until his seventeenth year in the Bessarabian prairies, of which he writes, comes a first novel of some beauty and more than ordinary distinction. Its compelling quality is simplicity. As in a 'Tess of the D'Urbervilles' or a 'Growth of the Soil' we are held in this book of Mr. Gaer's by the completeness with which life in its succeeding generations is absorbed into the scheme and continuity of nature. Whatever is common to our experience we accept on the terms of the author's rendering simply and naturally, as we accept the presence of a tree on a landscape. Lacking in many qualities of a great or enduring work, 'The Legend Called Meryom' thus still compels comparisons with a few masterpieces." Eugene Lohrke

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p15 F 12 '28 460w

"That, baldly, is the story—merely the cycle of a human life in a corner of the world where civilization is reduced to its simplest elements. But it is marked by an expert characterization and told with an understanding of these people that rises easily to a universal sympathy and lifts it into the realm of art."

+ Ind 120:365 Ap 14 '28 280w

"The tale he has to tell is a sad one, and there are aspects of it both more depressing and more exciting which he does not touch on—but at least he has succeeded in persuading us that his legend is universal." T. S. Matthews

New Repub 54:131 Mr 14 '28 150w

N Y Evening Post p9 Jl 7 '28 210w

N Y Times p8 Ja 15 '28 500w

"A fine sombre picture of a little known part of pastoral Russia."

+ N Y World p11m Ja 22 '28 200w

Reviewed by L: Golding

Sat R of Lit 4:986 Je 23 '28 720w

Reviewed by R. A. Taylor

Spec 140:577 Ap 14 '28 120w

Springf'd Republican p7f Mr 4 '28 280w

"This story is certainly planned with unaffected simplicity, but it is much too conscientiously drab to stir the reader's imagination."

— Times [London] Lit Sup p337 My 3 '28 150w

Wis Lib Bul 24:126 Ap '28

GAG, WANDA. Millions of cats. unp il $1.25 Coward-McCann

28-21571

In pictures and print designed for the very little child and the child who can read, the story tells of an old man who went out to adopt one cat for his wife and brought home "millions and billions and trillions of cats."

Booklist 25:74 N '28

"Not since J. G. Francis's 'Cheerful Cats' has there been a cat book in any way comparable to this one. It bears all the earmarks of becoming a perennial favorite among children and takes a place of its own, both for the originality and strength of its pictures and the living folk-tale quality of its text." A. C. Moore

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p9 S 9 '28 900w

"Her Millions of Cats, to artistic distinction adds that subtle something which catches the child heart and interest. Both the text and the literally thousands of cats she has drawn will fascinate the youngsters."

+ Cath World 128:378 D '28 100w

" 'Millions of Cats' is as important as the librarians say it is. Not only does it bring to book-making one of the most talented and original of American lithographers, an artist who has a following both here and abroad, but it is a marriage of picture and tale that is perfectly balanced. And the story pattern, so cunningly devised with such hearty and moral simplicity, is told in a prose as skilful as jingle." Ernestine Evans

+ Nation 127:548 N 21 '28 110w

"Thoroughly original in conception and entirely competent in treatment. Children and grownups alike will chuckle over both story and pictures in which homeliness and beauty are poignantly suggested." Herschel Brickell

+ No Am 226:adv D '28 80w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Outlook 150:1334 D 12 '28 80w

"It is a picture-book not to be forgotten and belongs to little children."

+ R of Rs 78:559 N '28 130w

St Louis 26:391 D '28

"Each page of Wanda Ga'g's 'Millions of Cats' should be considered as a whole, a whole made up of interwoven story and decoration. The pictures are quaint and bold, the cats thoroughly feline, and the kittens in their settings of luminous flowers enchanting." Elizabeth Coatsworth

+ Sat R of Lit 5:149 S 22 '28 220w

Springf'd Republican p7e D 16 '28 180w

GALANTIERE, LEWIS. france is full of frenchmen. 165p il $2 Payson & Clarke

817 28-10993

A delegation of well meaning Americans depart to set things right in France. The Hon. A. Peabody Wise is chairman and unofficial secretary of the group and makes this unintentionally humorous report of their progress in matters social, financial, and a hundred per cent patriotic.

Booklist 24:393 Jl '28

"Galantière is fair to both sides. Beneath the fun of this book one may learn much about the fundamental psychological differences between the American and the Frenchman. The revelation is by no means to the American's disadvantage. Galantière has lived long enough in France to know his Frenchmen and he has no romantic illusions about them. On the other hand he has not the rude American dislike for France because it is full of Frenchmen." Burton Rascoe

+ Bookm 67:307 My '28 220w

"A vivacious and witty satire of the American business man that provides one of the brightest spots among the season's new books." Lloyd Morris

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p5 Ap 29 '28 650w

Nation 126:594 My 23 '28 70w

"More fun, we suspect, would have been squeezed out of a more intelligent and less obvious Rotarian. The tiresome business of condemning Babbitt by putting silly words forcibly into his mouth has about run its course, and we shall have to begin dealing with a higher and more individualized sample or leave him alone altogether. We are also rather tired of the endless spoofing of Americans murdering a foreign language. There are many bits in 'France is Full of Frenchmen' which are extremely good and rise high above the rest of it." R. L.

— + New Repub 55:102 Je 13 '28 230w

Reviewed by Arthur Herman

N Y Evening Post p8 Je 30 '28 500w

"Starting under the handicap of seeming to be another Sinclair Lewis stencil, this book goes slowly through the routine description of Americans in the Paris sucker joints and then, suddenly, makes altitude and becomes a penetrating kindly satire." P. F. Sifton

+ — N Y World p7m My 27 '28 250w

Outlook 140:110 My 16 '28 20w

"The language is slightly reminiscent of Ring Lardner, but it has a particular flavor all its own. The book, although inconsequential, is amusing and entertaining, and the provincial

GALANTIERE, LEWIS—Continued
as well as the traveled American is likely to enjoy it."
+ Springf'd Republican p7f Ap 22 '28 170w

GALE, OLIVER MARBLE. Carnack, the life-bringer; the story of a dawn man told by himself; with a foreword by Alfred V. Kidder. 378p il $3 Wise

Man, Prehistoric 28-14415

"Mr. Gale has imagined a young man among the early paleolithic tribes as having a little better endowment of bodily and mental powers than his fellows so that, partly by accident and partly by the ability to follow and develop first openings, he tames a wolf and induces it to hunt for him, makes a friend of a wild horse and turns it into a burden bearer, discovers how to make and use fire. The author imagines this young man, whom he calls Carnack, to have been something of an artist and to have made on the wall of the Utah canyon a great number of drawings descriptive of happenings concerning these and other matters, weaving his story out of interpretations of these imaginary pictoliths."—N Y Times

---

"It was a pleasant concept to put into story form this old-time advance of the human race and it is well done. It might have been more dramatic and thrilling, as the original undoubtedly was. Nevertheless it is a good thing to personalize progress, to objectify the thinker and embody a movement in one man."
+ — Boston Transcript p2 Je 16 '28 230w

N Y Times p8 Je 3 '28 330w

"The incredible illustrations, the poorly sustained effort, tediously pursued by the author to give credibility to the pretense of archeological finds, that were in any case unnecessary to a work of fiction, and certain recurrent references to Hebrew folk lore in which Adam and Eve appeared to be taken factually, though their relation to the Dawn man is never explained, suggest that the author of 'Carnack' still has much to learn of the Dawn age, which by the way is usually placed much further back than twenty-five thousand years ago." Mary Austin
— Sat R of Lit 4:1001 Je 30 '28 480w

GALE, ZONA (MRS W. L. BREESE). Portage, Wisconsin, and other essays. 214p $2.50 (7s 6d) Knopf

814 28-27676

In the title essay Zona Gale reproduces the life of a Middle western town, her home town of Portage, Wisconsin—its settings, traditions and memories, with snatches of its conversation and bits of delicious native humor. This is followed by a sketch of the Katytown Chautauqua circle and of the author's father and mother. The remaining essays are devoted to literature, especially the novel.

"There are hundreds of people who will understand this book completely and for whom all the terms used will evoke what they are meant to evoke. But there are others who will be so stimulated by the seeds Miss Gale is handling in this volume that they will expect infinite things of her, and they will be reproachful and they will wish that she could evoke in her writing that great necessity to live deeply, facing every peril." Margery Latimer
+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p3 N 4 '28 1050w

"Herself an artist in 'the isolating and interpreting of the material between the lines.' Miss Gale supports her general theory with dazzling illustrations of literary method. Analogy in her hands becomes a well-nigh matchless weapon. She is irresistible in the use of specific instances. It is only when she mounts from concrete example to general esthetics that her literary philosophy thins to a transcendentalism." D. B. Woolsey
+ — New Repub 57:77 D 5 '28 220w

Reviewed by Horace Gregory
N Y Evening Post p9m N 3 '28 900w
N Y Times p46 D 2 '28 400w

GALSWORTHY, JOHN. Swan song. 360p $2.50 Scribner [7s 6d Heinemann]

28-17388

With "Swan song," which marks the passing of Soames Forsyte, the annals of the Forsyte family come to an end. The "man of property" has mellowed with the passage of the years till in old age he is patient and benignant. Soames guards with especial tenderness the welfare of his daughter Fleur, now married to Michael Mont, but all his watchfulness and devotion are powerless to avert the tragedy of her deliberate revival of her love affair with Jon Forsyte, when he returns to England with his American wife.

Booklist 25:29 O '28

Reviewed by E. H. Walton
Bookm 68:97 S '28 300w

Reviewed by Isabel Paterson
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p1 Jl 15 '28 1300w

"In the opinion of this reviewer, 'Swan Song,' is the best of the three post-war Forsyte novels. It does not measure up to the original volumes that go to make the Saga, but it outdistances 'The White Monkey' and 'The Silver Spoon.' It is a tribute to Mr. Galsworthy that one does not think of the Forsytes as characters in novels. They are people. His manner of characterization, his portraying of people's looks and inner feelings, is superb, and if in this day of Hemingways and now Callaghans, John Galsworthy may appear a trifle old-fashioned to some, the detriment is theirs and not his." K: Schriftgiesser
+ Boston Transcript p4 Jl 14 '28 1200w

Reviewed by E. F. Edgett
Boston Transcript p5 Jl 21 '28 200w

Dial 85:356 O '28 150w

" 'Swan Song' is not only a fitting and logical moment to draw the curtains upon the family; it is a tower of achievement for Mr. Galsworthy."
+ Ind 121:165 Ag 18 '28 450w

"Primarily 'Swan Song' seems written to effect an artistic and symbolic conclusion to the fortunes of the Forsyte clan, and in particular to round off the career of Soames, unquestionably his greatest character and equally undeniably one of the greatest characters in modern English fiction." C. P. Fadiman
Nation 127:204 Ag 29 '28 800w

"All the vices inherent in the Victorian novel are eminent in the Forsyte Saga. It is continually a comment, never a construction. Reading it is like reading a series of leading articles." Francis Birrell
— Nation and Ath 43:499 Jl 14 '28 450w

"In this charming but rather slight book, we are given the culmination of the interrupted affair of Fleur and Jon, and the death of Soames. The whole story moves toward, and is focused on, the eventual love-scene between Jon and Fleur: we look forward to it from the very beginning: but when it comes, it is quite lamentably inadequate." Conrad Aiken
+ — New Repub 56:sup221 O 10 '28 1350w

"Perhaps the most unsatisfactory aspect of Swan Song, apart from the mediocrity of comment and the woodenness of characters, is the author's attitude to the modern generation." Cyril Connolly
— New Statesman 31:591 Ag 18 '28 1150w

"Much of your pleasure from 'Swan Song' will depend upon how convincing you find Mr. Galsworthy's indications of what is going on within Fleur. I was not convinced. Incidental figures—June Forsyte, Old Gradman, a portrait painter, the elderly notables at Michael's committee meeting—are as attractively sketched in as ever, with the Galsworthy friendliness. There is a noticeable sprinkling of exclamation points, over passages that ought not to need them. It soon suggests an effort to make the passages look more significant, and the writing more vivacious, than they are." H. E. Dounce

+ — N Y Evening Post p5 Jl 21 '28 960w

Reviewed by Percy Hutchison
N Y Times p18 Jl 15 '28 350w

Reviewed by Harry Hansen
N Y World p7m Jl 15 '28 420w

Reviewed by Herschel Brickell
No Am 226:adv S '28 210w

Reviewed by F. L. Robbins
Outlook 149:552 Ag 1 '28 420w
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:428 O '28
Pratt p43 autumn '28

"'Swan Song' rounds off this particular achievement of Mr. Galsworthy's without adding to it. The characters could not be developed much further; all that remains is to see what happens to them. The freshest passages in the book are those which describe incidents outside its main purpose." L. P. Hartley
Sat R 146:54 Jl 14 '28 480w

"There may be too much of local politics and temporal happenings (such as the Great Strike in 'Swan Song') in 'The Forsyte Saga,' although it is hard to be sure in advance of time's perspective. But of Soames one can already be sure and of the saga quality of a book well named because it is a saga of commercial England, the first of the great industrial nations; saga, not merely story, because Galsworthy has succeeded, like the Icelanders, in making names and everyday incidents carry a life, a code, a spirit, and an age."
+ Sat R of Lit 4:1029 Jl 14 '28 800w

"Swan Song itself is both successful and disappointing. It is successful as the rounding up of the whole work; it is disappointing, I think, as a novel by itself. Mr. Galsworthy has been under the trouble here common to all the winders up of family histories of a compulsion to fasten all the many different strands into a final pattern. It is in the main a book of ghosts, of echoes and memories and ironic sighs. Of Soames especially this is true; he is throughout the book in reminiscent mood; not a step can he take without having suggested to him some fragment of the past." Hugh Walpole
— + Spec 141:56 Jl 14 '28 800w
Springf'd Republican p7f Jl 29 '28 1650w
Springf'd Republican p8 Ag 4 '28 1200w

Reviewed by Halle Schaffner
Survey 61:43 O 1 '28 420w

"When one compares this volume with the earlier ones of the Saga it is impossible not to observe a loss of artistic life, and to regret that a series that began and for long continued so spaciously should tend towards a mechanical commentary on events of the day. We miss so much that made 'The Man of Property' and 'The Country House' notable—the strong, well-differentiated characters of the elder Forsytes, the poetic if rather pale figure of Irene, and, above all, the feeling that Soames in his strength and for all his shortcomings was a very definite somebody, whose life was more than a reflection on other people's actions."
— Times [London] Lit Sup p534 Jl 19 '28 440w
Wis Lib Bul 24:253 O '28

GALSWORTHY, JOHN. Two Forsyte interludes. 60p 50c Scribner [2s 6d Heinemann]
28-3685

Two short stories which serve as connecting links in the "Forsyte saga" novel chain. A silent wooing tells of the courtship of Jon Forsyte and Anne Wilmot; Passers by chronicles the events of a few hectic hours in Washington when Soames Forsyte saw Irene and her son, but kept the knowledge from Fleur.

"The first of these two is sentimentally written; but then a wooing is apt to be sentimental. It is in its own peculiar Galsworthian way a moving little sketch. In action hardly original, it nevertheless ranks with almost any of the other interludes which interspersed the stories in the saga. The second is less so. It had to be written, to keep the family alive and to make a contact between the 'Silver Spoon' and the forthcoming book, the 'Swan Song.'"
+ — Boston Transcript p4 F 25 '28 300w

"The first is a designedly simple idyl, and very sincerely and finely done. The second interlude has more complexity and interest."
+ Living Age 334:374 F 15 '28 380w

"Neither [tale] has anything of the melancholy exquisiteness which distinguished The Indian Summer of a Forsyte. The latter interludes, like the larger works which they serve to connect, are labored and anti-climactic."
+ Nation 126:219 F 22 '28 120w

Reviewed by Percy Hutchison
N Y Times p1 Jl 15 '28 1500w

Reviewed by F. L. Robbins
Outlook 149:552 Ag 1 '28 430w
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:243 My '28

"The second of the stories is interesting only to proficient students of the Forsyte Saga; the first, and much the better of the two, is a fine short story, and though a link in a chain, is yet complete in itself. 'A Silent Wooing' is exquisite, and has the very essence of romance."
+ Sat R 145:171 F 11 '28 110w
Sat R of Lit 4:674 Mr 10 '28 60w

GAMBIER, KENYON, pseud. See Lathrop, L. A.

GANDHI, MOHANDAS KARAMCHAND. Young India, 1924-1926. new rev ed 984p $5 Viking press

954 India—Politics and government. India—Non-cooperation movement 28-26151

A second series of Gandhi's writings in his journal, Young India, from the years 1924 to 1926. The articles are concerned chiefly with national unity and the non-cooperation movement.

Booklist 24:277 Ap '28

Reviewed by Lyman Bryson
Bookm 67:312 My '28 80w

"In this book we see Gandhi as he sees himself in relation to God and to the world. Many of the selections are frankly introspective, a heart searching for his own motives, prayer for guidance to perceive his duty. Without equivocation he expresses his opinions on every sort of matter, and if he changes an opinion he says so without shame, giving his reasons. Perhaps no man in public life has ever written so much that is subjective. The book has something of the effect of a psychological novel, although lacking the artistic proportioning, but with the reader's interest heightened by the knowledge that he is dealing with fact, not fiction." W. N. Brown
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p4 Mr 4 '28 1350w

"If he is indeed a prophet, he may well be deemed a more loquacious one than any that has gone before him. And while loquacity is not a sin, much of the argumentative material here laid down is of such an intricate and national character, dealing with matters so far beyond the realm of the ordinary man's mental activities, he cannot find the time or the interest to enter into a careful understanding of these matters apparently held so dear by Gandhi. One hazards that Gandhi's sayings, however great they may be, run the risk of being smothered in their own volume."
+ — Boston Transcript p5 Ja 14 '28 230w

"He describes it all simply and clearly. His personality, even in the written word, is almost hypnotic. Quite unintentionally, Young India comes at this time as an answer to Katherine Mayo's Mother India, and the two volumes should be companion pieces for all who seek an unbiased point of view. Many readers may not agree with Gandhi's attitude toward England, and many may feel that weakness is inherent in his method; but whether we approve or disapprove, we must admit his importance and his success. To know Gandhi we must go to Young India, and no student of world affairs should be ignorant of him."

GANDHI, M. K.—Continued
+ Living Age 334:186 Ja 15 '28 200w

Reviewed by W. N. Brown
Nation 126:352 Mr 28 '28 600w

"'Young India' is interesting and valuable because it shows Gandhi's intellectual and moral growth." C: Johnston
+ N Y Times p14 Mr 4 '28 850w

Pratt p37 autumn '28

GANN, THOMAS WILLIAM FRANCIS. Maya cities; a record of exploration and adventure in middle America. 256p il $5 Scribner [21s Duckworth]

917.28 Mayas. Central America—Antiquities. British Honduras. Yucatan [28-11908]

Another record of travel and exploration among the ruins of the ancient Mayan civilization of Central America, in British Honduras and along the east coast of Yucatan.

Reviewed by Robert Redfield
Am J Soc 34:239 Jl '28 110w

Booklist 24:360 Je '28

Reviewed by Paul Radin
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p20 My 27 '28 850w

GANPAT, pseud. See Gompertz, M. L: A.

GANTILLON, SIMON. Maya; a play in a prologue, nine scenes and an epilogue; tr. by Ernest Boyd. 147p pa $1.50 Actor-Managers, Inc., 11 W. 42d st., N.Y.; for sale by Baker & Taylor

842

"Simon Gantillon's play is the story of a prostitute on the waterfront at Marseilles. Its action occurs in her room, where men of all sorts come to Bella with griefs and longings of all kinds, each seeking her out with a fresh sorrow and seeing her with the eyes of a different desire. Bella (or Bella-Maya) is all things to all men. Though she is confidante and confessor and lover, she is, as the play makes clear, nothing by herself, but everything through man's illusion and, perhaps, in different guises, the world's illusion."—Theatre Arts Mo

"It is, to be sure, a play about prostitutes, not the bejeweled, sentimentalized kind like Camille, but the unfortunate realities. There is nothing in the drama smirking or pornographic, but, instead, a mystic pity and an attempt to find in the relations of these poor men and women some hidden promptings of the spirit." W. P. Eaton
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p17 Ap 1 '28 150w

Cleveland Open Shelf p116 N '28

Reviewed by Stark Young
New Repub 54:123 Mr 14 '28 850w

"Having so loose a structure and without any inevitability of form or length, 'Maya' seems when the ninth scene is reached, to be, like any street procession, capable of being one block longer or two blocks shorter without anyone ever really caring. Often, however, it rises to moments of affecting and haunting beauty." J: M. Brown
+ — Sat R of Lit 4:699 Mr 24 '28 830w

"There is a reticence, a warm-hearted understanding, and a sensitiveness that lift it at times to a poignant beauty seldom experienced in the theatre." J: M. Brown
+ Theatre Arts Mo 12:241 Ap '28 650w

"Gantillon's method is as delicate a blending of the symbolic and the actual as this season's playwriting affords. Its candor and understatement might well be a lesson to our own playwrights who tend to use the symbol as a bludgeon rather than a spur. The text in English inevitably loses some of its pungency. It is as difficult to write French argot in English as to reproduce Broadway slang in French, but the salient features of M. Gantillon's characterization and the cyclic effect of his episodic structure are evident in the translation and prove his skill as a craftsman in the gentle art of playwriting."
+ Theatre Arts Mo 12:361 My '28 210w

GARDINER, GORDON. At the House of Dree. 308p $2 Houghton [7s 6d S. Low]

28-4881

Lonely, on the Scotch moor, stood the House of Dree, inhabited by Menteith of Dree, now over eighty, and his half-brother, an Hindu of nearly the same age. It was during the Great war and there was close watch being kept on Herr Brandt who, replete with American credentials, was engaged in scientific research about the herring industry. What connection was there between Menteith of Dree and Herr Brandt? Superintendent Catto of the Scotch police tells the story.

"No one can lay down the story without feeling that the author had gripped him with a cold and clammy hand and led him through strange and weird byways."
Boston Transcript p5 Mr 17 '28 280w

"Rare, as mystery stories go are such suspense and horror as this author produces. His narration is sufficiently skillful. If some of the Scotch talk is questionable, why, nowadays most Scotch is, and I was too absorbed to question anything." H. E. D.
+ N Y Evening Post p13 F 11 '28 100w

Times [London] Lit Sup p245 Mr 29 '28 110w

GARIS, ROY LAWRENCE. Immigration restriction; a study of the opposition to and regulation of immigration into the United States. 376p $4 Macmillan

325.73 Immigration 27-17003

For descriptive note see Annual for 1927.

"A conscientious historical account of immigration legislation from the Colonial Period to the Quota act of 1924, with chapters on Chinese and Japanese immigration added. As a convenient running record of investigations, congressional debates, and enactments, the book may well find a place on the shelves of immigration students." A. B. Wolfe
Am Econ R 18:339 Je '28 300w

"It is a dramatic story, well told, and worthy of careful attention by every one whose interest in the political and social affairs of this country penetrates even infinitesimally beneath the surface." H: P. Fairchild
+ Am Hist R 33:422 Ja '28 550w

Reviewed by R. E. Park
Am J Soc 34:379 S '28 180w

"An excellent outline of the various legislative enactments which have dealt with this problem and with their administration. The author does not offer any solution of his own, but there is no doubt that he favors restriction of some sort. The book, as the title says, is a study, not a piece of propaganda."
+ Am Pol Sci R 22:216 F '28 230w

"Throughout the study he gives the impression of taking the position that any sort of restriction legislation is better than none. It would seem that in a history the author should refrain from constantly praising any given policy unless sufficient evidence is included in support of such an attitude. In spite of this bias, Immigration Restriction is a most valuable study. The development of the restrictionist policy (as a restrictionist sees it) from Colonial times to the present is clearly presented though much is necessarily omitted. All important immigration legislation is admirably summarized." Donald Young

+ — Ann Am Acad 135:180 Ja '28 280w

Booklist 24:193 F '28

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p20 Je 3 '28 630w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:144 Mr '28

Pratt p10 spring '28

"The closing chapters on Chinese and Japanese immigration round out the volume, and make it an exceedingly useful compendium on the entire legislative aspect of this great problem which no serious student of the matter can afford to ignore." H: P. Fairchild

+ Sat R of Lit 4:504 Ja 7 '28 480w

Times [London] Lit Sup p87 F 9 '28 820w

Reviewed by LeR. E. Bowman

World Tomorrow 11:180 Ap '28 330w

GARLAND, H., and BANNISTER, C. O. Ancient Egyptian metallurgy. 225p il $5 Lippincott [12s 6d C. Griffin]

669.09 Metallurgy—History [27-25397]

"Account of the metals used and the methods of working, based on Major Garland's examinations of ancient specimens. Deals with the bronze industry, iron age, and tools of ancient Egypt; metallography of antique metals; and cleaning, preservation, and repair of relics."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

---

N Y New Tech Bks 12:21 Ap '27

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:159 Mr '28

GARLAND, HAMLIN. Back-trailers from the middle border. 379p il $2.50 Macmillan

B or 92 28-25969

Hamlin Garland completes with this book the chronicle of his pioneer ancestors and his own life to date. The other volumes, "A son of the middle border," "A daughter of the middle border," and "Trail makers of the middle border," followed the saga of Garlands and McClintocks from the East to the Middle West. "Back-trailers" brings their descendant once more to the East.

"The quartet [his four books on the Middle Border] constitute a singular and quite original record of the development of the northwest as bound up with the members of a single representative family. It is all a work of decided merit and significance. It is history in blood and life. But so far as the Middle Border is concerned, the work would be as good without the fourth volume." J. E. Chamberlain

Boston Transcript p4 N 24 '28 1500w

Reviewed by E. F. Edgett

Boston Transcript p8 D 15 '28 800w

"On the plain-spoken record of the Westerner's rediscovery of New York and his delight in making his home even in the restriction of an apartment is full of unaffected charm, while the family's joy in their beautiful camp in the Catskills is wholly delightful." Katherine Woods

+ N Y Times p2 Ja 13 '29 900w

"Like the first volume, this last book is essentially an intellectual and spiritual autobiography. If not as exciting as the record of the crusading years it has a mellow fulness, for it treats the period in which he reaped, in distinguished contacts and public recognition, the reward of his long devotion to high literary aims. The intimacy of this record, occasionally breaking into naivéte, is always appealing and sometimes touching." Allan Nevins

+ Sat R of Lit 5:453 D 8 '28 1800w

Springf'd Republican p7e N 25 '28 1150w

GARNER, JAMES WILFORD. American foreign policies. (N.Y. univ. James Stokes lectureship on politics.) 264p $6 N.Y. univ. press

327.73 United States—Foreign relations 28-9752

The Professor of political science in the University of Illinois makes "an examination and evaluation of certain traditional and recent international policies of the United States."

"However one may seek to palliate our conduct or to mitigate the author's verdict, these lectures can be unreservedly commended to all chauvinists within the body politic." L: M. Sears

+ Am Hist R 33:923 Jl '28 420w

"Though one must recognize the book as primarily the expression of an attitude, nevertheless it contains a great deal of solid food for thought. It usually states the position of the opposition fairly, and the tone is always restrained. In giving the grounds for a particular attitude on foreign policy in such a substantial manner, the distinguished author has done a useful service. Whatever opinions one may have, he will profit by reading this book." Quincy Wright

+ Am Pol Sci R 22:480 My '28 530w

Boston Transcript p2 F 25 '28 880w

Nation 126:463 Ap 18 '28 50w

St Louis 26:375 D '28

"This volume is an admirable survey of the history of America's relations with foreign countries. It is written in a lucid and readable style, with abundant references in footnotes to the sources of the author's material."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p226 Mr 22 '28 180w

"Once you lay hands on the book you will not let it go until you come to page 254. It is interesting. Extraordinarily so. It deals with supremely important issues. Matters of life and death. It is authoritative. Documentary evidence abounds. It is humiliating and depressing. Terribly so. Few Americans who read it will be able to boast for a week afterwards." K. P.

+ World Tomorrow 11:180 Ap '28 420w

GARNETT, ARTHUR CAMPBELL. Instinct and personality. 218p $3 Dodd [8s 6d Allen & U.]

126 Personality. Consciousness [28-18411]

"The theories of instinct and of the unconscious put forward by McDougall, Freud, Morton Prince, Coué and others are briefly and clearly expounded and their facts are critically examined and interpreted in an original way, bringing out the importance of expectation and meaning in the initiation of activity. It is thus argued that the conscious, not the unconscious, has primacy in mental process, and that the ultimate source of mental energy is not the instincts but the self."—Publisher's note

---

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p15 D 30 '28 140w

Boston Transcript p3 Ag 4 '28 500w

"Dr. Garnett's preface is so modest and his style so lucid and unpretentious that the far-reaching nature of his investigation into the theories of current psychology is not fully recognized until his closely knit argument nears its conclusion. He covers an immense field, and the comprehensiveness and rapidity of his advance are somewhat staggering. In big sweeping movements he envelops this theory or that, strips it of its impedimenta, absorbs what remains into his system, and passes on, leaving the ground behind him strewn with the wreckage of his passing."

+ Nation and Ath 42:978 Mr 31 '28 620w

New Statesman 30:732 Mr 17 '28 680w

"The volume is nowhere strikingly original, and it lacks the sharp contours of a well-followed plan. But it is a useful contribution to

GARNETT, A. C.—Continued
a theme of highest moment, the value largely in the close-range handling of the data." Joseph Jastrow
+ — Survey 61:386 D 15 '28 380w

"This book, which is a revision of an academic thesis, contains a clear and judicious discussion of recent theories affecting what may be called the dynamics of the mind."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p382 My 17 '28 220w

GARNETT, MRS LOUISE (AYERS). Joyous pretender. 232p $2 Macmillan
28-25176

A ten-year-old boy running away from home finds a young woman running away from something he does not understand. He would like to pretend she is his mother; she consents, and sets out with him, but in men's clothes, as his brother Christopher. They reach Fergus Fortune's place. The big kindly man takes them in and will not let them go. What happens after that the small boy tells in this simple, friendly story.

"An exceptional sort of novel, a bit too sweet, perhaps, but airy and swift and written with a good deal of verve and feeling for the material." Edwin Seaver
+ — N Y Evening Post p9m D 1 '28 90w

"The book is an interesting piece of arbitrarily simple narrative so far as style is concerned, with passages of whimsical beauty. But Luke's reactions to the social problems involved are not effective; his personality is not convincing. The author has defeated any serious purpose by an excess of sentimentality and has defeated her main character by an overloaded plot schedule."
— + N Y Times p7 N 25 '28 450w

GARRETT, GARET. American omen. 259p $2.50 Dutton
330.973 United States—Economic conditions. United States—Industries 28-22925

Mr Garrett looks for the reasons for America's present position of world supremacy, examines the American mind and American institutions, and in the later chapters forecasts the future of our industrial system. Certain of the material has appeared serially in the Saturday Evening Post under the title "The American book of wonder."

"If any one would understand the current American religion of business in all its strength and weakness, its faith, its dogmas and its fervor, he could not do better than read Mr. Garrett." J. T. Adams
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p3 N 11 '28 850w

Reviewed by J: Carter
N Y Times p12 D 16 '28 1000w

"Another excellent evaluation of present-day American civilization is The American Omen, written by a novelist and economist who knows his country very well and who has succeeded in depicting present-day conditions skilfully and interestingly and who also attempts to forecast the future development of our industrial system, which is the admiration of a large part of the civilized world." Herschel Brickell
+ No Am 226:adv D '28 70w

"The approach is fresh and stimulating without always being profound."
Springf'd Republican p7e D 30 '28 250w

GARRETT, PAT F. Authentic life of Billy the Kid; ed. by Maurice Garland Fulton. 233p il $2.50 (10s 6d) Macmillan

B or 92 Bonney, William H. (Billy the Kid). Crime and criminals—Southwest, New 27-23964

This authentic life of Billy the Kid, proclaimed in the original title page "a faithful and interesting narrative," was first published in Santa Fe in 1882. It is offered here with an introduction and supplementary notes by the editor, Maurice Garland Fulton. Illustrations and frontispiece in color.

"It is a piece of authentic and important frontier history." W. E. Garrison
+ Christian Century 45:284 Mr 1 '28 200w

"It is a straightforward, honest tale, told without prejudice or heroicals. Even if one has read last year's successful 'Saga of Billy the Kid' by Walter Noble Burns, Charlie Siringo's intimate account of the same man, R. B. Townshend's delightful chapter in his "Tenderfoot in New Mexico,' and Frederick Bechdolt's stirring Warriors of the Pecos in 'Tales of the Old Timers,' one will still find Mr. Fulton's refurbished 'Authentic Life' fresh and informing." J. F. Dobie
+ Nation 126:190 F 15 '28 350w

"The first half of the book is hearsay—bombastic and untrustworthy. Nearly every statement of fact in it is contradicted in the editor's notes. But the second part, describing events after Garrett's arrival, and obviously written by himself without help from anyone, is admirably restrained and convincing. That last scene in the darkened bedroom at Fort Sumner, when for once the Kid failed to get his shot in first, is at least as dramatic as anything we remember to have seen on the films."
+ — Sat R 145:234 F 25 '28 220w
Times [London] Lit Sup p266 Ap 12 '28 300w

GARRETT, WILLIAM A. Professional guest. 272p $2 Appleton [7s 6d Lane]
28-21422

The poor but socially impeccable Mr John Singleton Howard makes his living, and a good one, by advising the nouveaux riches on questions of etiquet. He has just met and fallen in love with Marjorie Phibsby when her parents, the newly knighted Sir Alfred and his lady, approach John Singleton for his professional aid in boosting them into society. Merry complications result from this mixing of love and business.

"The plot is full of quips and cranks and wreathed smiles, all of them on wires and pulled to the front of the stage at the right moment. The marionettes who represent the various characters, from the butler to the lion-hunting noblewoman, strut through their parts with adequate gestures and inhuman voices."
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p43 S 30 '28 220w

"An amusing and ridiculous farce." G. M. Y.
+ Boston Transcript p3 N 3 '28 580w
Cleveland Open Shelf p138 D '28

"A certain solidity in the characterisation redeems to some extent the absurdities of the plot. The merit of the story lies in the infectiousness of Mr. Garrett's high spirits."
— + New Statesman 31:572 Ag 11 '28 60w

"Very good fooling indeed is 'The Professional Guest.' Mr. Garrett has a light touch. He plays about with a farcical situation without becoming either boisterous or vulgar—a considerable achievement in that line."
+ N Y Times p7 D 9 '28 250w

"There is nothing original in this book."
— Times [London] Lit Sup p634 S 6 '28 200w

GARRICK, DAVID. Diary; being a record of his memorable trip to Paris in 1751, now first printed from the original ms. and ed. by Rylis Clair Alexander. 117p il $8.50 (42s) Oxford
B or 92 Paris—Description 28-13556

"Somewhere in the world of manuscripts there has existed for almost two centuries a little notebook in which David Garrick pencilled the record of his first trip to Paris in 1752. The notebook is at home today in the collection of Messmore Kendall and the printed copy of it comes charmingly from the Oxford University Press."—Theatre Arts Mo

"There are exactly thirty-eight pages of Garrick's record and of his own notes on this record. The rest of the book is made up of comments and elucidations by the editor, Ryllis Clair Alexander, on the places, the people, and the plays that Garrick saw and mentioned. But seldom has a three-volume novel had more of romance or a three-volume biography shed more light on character." F: Morton

+ Theatre Arts Mo 12:921 D '28 600w

Times [London] Lit Sup p533 Jl 19 '28 1200w

GARRISON, WINFRED ERNEST. Catholicism and the American mind. 267p $2.50 Willett

282 Roman Catholic church in the United States. Church and State in the United States 28-15512

Actuated by a sincere desire to find out what Catholics believe and how their beliefs affect their actions, the author has conducted his study of Catholicism thru travel in many Catholic countries and in a Catholic environment at home. His book, to the truth of which he hopes Catholics will attest whether or not they endorse its conclusions, is written to help non-Catholics understand Catholicism. The author is associate professor of church history in the Divinity school, University of Chicago, and literary editor of the Christian Century.

Booklist 25:7 O '28

Boston Transcript p6 Ag 11 '28 900w

"For the non-Catholic reader this is the best short book on Catholicism I know of." J: C. Petrie

+ Christian Century 45:796 Je 21 '28 1300w

"This book is well written. It is carefully documented. It is interesting. It is timely. It ought to help Protestants to understand their Catholic neighbors. We hope it will be matched in the near future by as careful and sympathetic a study of Protestantism by a Catholic." E. B. Chaffee

+ Outlook 149:596 Ag 8 '28 530w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:553 N '28

"Dr. Garrison clearly seems to me to have sincerely desired a perhaps impossible impartiality. And he writes in a pious Christian spirit and with admirable lucidity. But his book is not well proportioned. Far too much space is given over to the discussion of unimportant details, and far too little to the general theory of Catholicism. Along with Dr. Garrison's inability always to perceive the essence of his subject, there are several mistakes in matters of fact." Theodore Maynard

+ — Sat R of Lit 5:71 Ag 25 '28 550w

GARRY, GEORGINA, pseud. Pigsties with spires. 460p $2.50 Dutton [7s 6d J. Cape]

28-18814

"Josephine Demayne is a mercenary widow who persuaded a married man, an habitual hunter after women, to make her his mistress. He keeps her for some years, until her beauty begins to fade, and she does well out of him. Then he turns to her daughter Sonia. But Sonia is a modern young miss who knows her way about in the world a good deal better than Josephine, and having skilfully led him on to settle six thousand pounds on her mother she flatly refuses to fulfil her part of the bargain. His pride is hurt rather than his pocket, and he is quickly attracted to another woman. Josephine conveniently dies, and Sonia marries a 'clean-minded, sound-bodied young Englishman.' "—New Statesman

Boston Transcript p6 Ag 22 '28 950w

"The book is crudely written, with no graces of style, but it makes Josephine Demayne almost intolerably real. Miraculously, Miss Garry has avoided melodrama and done an honest piece of work." E. H. Walton

+ — New Repub 56:185 O 3 '28 160w

"Some occasional lapses and a somewhat conventional characterisation apart, Miss Garry writes conscientiously and with a solid grasp of her situations. But she vitiates the interest of her story by making all her characters social wasters; how can one care for men and women who from first to last think of nothing but their own physical comforts?"

+ — New Statesman 31:402 Je 30 '28 150w

"The book is daringly written, but without offense. It goes below the surface of human actions, uncovering the primitive animal desires of a need for love, food and covering for one's self and one's young as against the less tenacious, higher ones imposed by civilization and religion."

+ N Y Times p6 S 2 '28 820w

"A competent newcomer here makes her bow with a strong first novel. The author has overdone things a bit in her conclusion, but through most of the story she works with a sure, skilfully restrained hand."

+ — N Y World p7m Ag 12 '28 160w

"Miss Garry has done well with her Don Juan." Herschel Brickell

+ No Am 226:adv S '28 60w

"A somewhat baffling book to the reviewer, in that it shows an uncanny shrewdness in characterization and mature logic in development of the theme, with occasional lamentable crudities in style. Such lapses, while infrequent, are particularly striking in a book of so much power and insight as this first novel." Mary Shirley

+ — Outlook 150:1212 N 21 '28 220w

"The end is not convincing, but there is good and moving work in this study of a desperate woman living dangerously but not in any noble sense."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p397 My 24 '28 140w

GARTHWAITE, WYMOND B. Bread an' jam. [2] 88p il $2 Harper

811 Children's poetry 28-23145

Verses of childhood, in and out of the nursery, illustrated by the author.

"Frankly derivative of Milne, with a smattering of Robert Louis Stevenson." Rachel Field

— N Y Evening Post p10m N 10 '28 150w

" 'Bread an' Jam' consists of brevities presenting admirably the observations and speculations of the child of today, the eternal small child. The author is his own illustrator, and an excellent one." W: R. Benét

+ Sat R of Lit 5:415 N 24 '28 150w

Springf'd Republican p6 D 24 '28 80w

GARVIN, VIOLA GERARD. Dedication. 66p $2 Knopf [3s 6d Gollancz]

821

Poems, many of which have already been printed in the English magazines, gathered to make a first volume of verse.

"Simplicity of expression and sincerity of thought combine to give peculiar distinction to this little volume of verse, which is far more even in its workmanship than are most 'first' productions."

+ Boston Transcript p9 O 20 '28 220w

"As yet Miss Garvin has not been moved profoundly enough by experience to demand an absolute individuality of expression though the promise is there. Probably she will remain a poet for the epicures of style. Her merit is an occasional fine proportion of stanza or clear phrase."

— + Nation and Ath 43:304 Je 2 '28 60w

"Miss Viola Garvin's music is her own. In externals—in turns of rhythm and melodious irregularities of rhyme, perhaps—it may be possible to detect outside influences: 'It Is the Swallow,' for instance, is of the school of Mr. Humbert Wolfe. But such experimenting does not obscure the essential originality of the original voice, and the lyric note in Miss Garvin's book is so pure, so certain, so straightforward, that it cannot possibly be mistaken for anything but the real, right, essential matter."

+ Sat R 145:527 Ap 28 '28 200w

GARVIN, V. G.—Continued

"Much of her work is intimate and tender . . . but one feels that Miss Garvin could afford to be definitely bolder in her poetic approach to life. The technique is there and there is nothing to show that the imagination is not."

+ — Spec 140:622 Ap 21 '28 180w

"Since Miss Garvin's 'Dedication' is a first volume, much of the temporary ornament of her verses, which frequently overlies a promising clearness of line, is readily comprehended. One sees possibilities—in her best passages—of a fresh lyrical contribution, a chance of melodies in the free yet delicately finished manner of an Elizabethan or Caroline."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p352 My 10 '28 550w

GATES, MRS GEORGINA IDA (STICKLAND). Modern cat: her mind & manners; an introduction to comparative psychology. 196p il $2 Macmillan

599.7 Cats. Animal intelligence. Psychology, Comparative 28-11572

Dr Gates, who is assistant professor of psychology, Barnard College, approaching her subject from a scientific angle, discusses cat behavior and the cat mind and brings together, in illustration, many true cat stories.

Booklist 25:14 O '28

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p20 My 20 '28 260w

"Her narrative is very readable and is always interestingly written, with vivacity and charm and many touches of sprightly humor. Cat 'fans' are likely to be grieved by the conclusions to which the experiments, described and discussed in detail have led the psychological experimenters as to pussy's mental equipment and abilities. But Mrs. Gates shows that she compares very well with other animals below monkeys."

+ N Y Times p21 Je 17 '28 440w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:468 O '28

"Dr. Gates has written a very charming book and one that our readers will enjoy thoroughly."

+ Spec 141:304 S 8 '28 1400w

Times [London] Lit Sup p715 O 4 '28 180w

Wis Lib Bul 24:188 Je '28

GATES, HENRY LEYFORD. Here comes the bandwagon. 306p $2 Dodd

28-22663

La Belle is the star trapeze performer of the Mammoth circus; Tony is a partner in a similar act in the Baxter's rival show. How Tony knows and loves the great La Belle under another name, and how La Belle foils a treacherous plot and saves Tony's act, are a part of this story of love and rivalry under the big top.

"This narrative deals in fairly dramatic fashion with the hazards of circus life. It is crammed with big top atmosphere—but not much else."

— + Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 N 18 '28 120w

Boston Transcript p6 N 7 '28 500w

"The book is somewhat lacking in literary grace, and not a single cliche is omitted, but as a type of writing calculated to hold the reader's attention and keep him panting for the next instalment, it is a masterpiece."

+ — N Y Times p48 D 2 '28 300w

GAUTHIEZ, PIERRE. Florence. (Picture guides) 161p il $2.50 (7s 6d) Medici soc.

914.55 Florence—Description. Art—Florence 28-10420

Written as a guide for tourists this latest volume of the Medici guides gives a full description of the city of Florence, its art treasures and surroundings. Illustrated with many plates in sepia.

Booklist 25:24 O '28

"Its interesting comments on pictures, sculpture, architecture, and its illustrations make it an admirable guide book for the æsthetic tourist. To those who have already been to Florence, it will, like a diary, recall their visits in a vivid and pleasing manner. But it is not imaginative enough to make Florence real to those who have never seen it. It is a book to buy on starting for Italy or on the return journey to confirm delightful memories."

New Statesman 30:54 O 22 '27 100w

"The photographs are abundant and well chosen though many of them are unfortunately too small to give more than a general impression of their subjects; and the text is easy, conversational, colourful, whimsical, and refreshingly free from stilted praises and hackneyed enthusiasms."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p952 D 15 '27 50w

GAUTIER, MME JUDITH. Imperial dragon; tr. by M. H. Bourchier. 319p $2.50 (7s 6d) Brentano's

28-16046

"An inspired Chinese peasant, Ta-Kiang, whose shadow takes the form of an Imperial Dragon meekly following its master, goes to Peking attended by a pretty girl, who worships him, and a heroic poet, and there descends as the deus ex machina upon a group of conspirators who have arranged to overthrow the Manchu Dynasty if only they can find a suitable rival to put upon the throne. Ta-Kiang's shadow dissipates their doubts, and the girl, with the assistance of the Chief Eunuch, is given an opportunity for assassinating the Emperor while at dinner. She fails, and the poet, fearing that she may betray the plot under torture, allows himself to be seized as the assailant of the Emperor, while she lies in faint under the dinner table. Gloomy scenes of torture, slaughter, war, prison, and escape follow."—Times [London] Lit Sup

"The scenes of Judith Gautier's history glow like an enchanted tapestry woven with bright figures holding light from the sun; and indeed she cannot escape the charge of a monotonous splendor in the rich stuff of her prose. The eyes ache from blinding color and go dull from petalled words falling like lotus blossoms from an intolerable sky. All the studied magnificence of Oriental life blazes and shimmers under the opulence of a golden sun or turns to a luminous tenderness under a scented moon." Donald Douglas

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p11 My 6 '28 500w

"Judith Gautier is the daughter of Theophile Gautier. If inheritance and literary environment count for anything, we know before opening the covers that within will be found exquisite writing and vivid imaginings in perfect harmony with historic facts. The novel fulfills all this and more, for the author adds a subtle charm of her own. All this, too, has been skillfully brought over to the English reader through an excellent translation." F. M.

+ Boston Transcript p2 My 2 '28 1000w

"A vital and superb book."

+ N Y Times p14 Ap 15 '28 550w

Reviewed by Margery Latimer

N Y World p7m Ag 19 '28 50w

"The elaborate and the unreal, the passionate and the evanescent, glow, dim, and glow again through the tale lately translated for English readers by M. H. Bourchier. Those who remember Judith Gautier's Chinese lyrics will find 'The Imperial Dragon' reminiscent of their cadenced, patterned, almost stilted fantasy."

Sat R of Lit 5:439 D 1 '28 110w

Times [London] Lit Sup p224 Mr 22 '28 250w

GAVIT, JOHN PALMER. Opium. 308p $3.50 Brentano's

178.8 Opium. Opium trade [28-5403]

"The American edition of Mr. Gavit's book, published in England in 1925, is timely. It deals with the international side of the opium situation and strikingly illustrates the truth of the position taken by the Congress of the United States in 1924 in the preamble to the appropriation act for the American representatives at the Opium Convention of 1925."—Survey

---

Booklist 24:268 Ap '28

Reviewed by F. R. Dulles

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p16 F 5 '28 830w

Boston Transcript p5 Ja 21 '28 120w

"To be able to bring some sort of order out of this welter of confusion is no mean task; and to compress between the covers of an ordinary-sized volume an interesting and readable presentation of the entire problem, without partisanship or emotion, is a laudable accomplishment. Just this has been done by John Palmer Gavit in a volume entitled 'Opium'—with not too much argument or citation or history, with just enough example to make the matter clear, and with all the skill of the trained journalist who has the proper perspective of the subject as a whole." H. L. May

+ Nation 126:615 My 30 '28 1000w

Reviewed by Taraknath Das

New Repub 53:226 Ja 11 '28 1050w

"He discusses with admirable clarity and cogency the rise and progress of the campaign against the traffic in opium and its derivatives which culminated in the conferences of 1924-'25. He brings together in 250 pages all the essential facts necessary to an understanding of the vital importance of 'Opium' to every citizen."

+ Springf'd Republican p10 F 28 '28 700w

"Without an aroused public interest the issue may easily go by default. Mr. Gavit's book is to be welcomed as a potent means for arousing this interest." J. P. Chamberlain

+ Survey 59:530 Ja 15 '28 980w

GAY, HARRY NELSON. Strenuous Italy, solving a perilous problem. 217p $3 Houghton

945.09 Italy—Fascist movement. Italy—Economic conditions 27-24125

An American for twenty years a resident of Rome and a warm advocate of the Fascist régime writes this account of Italy's educational, industrial and agricultural development under the iron hand of Mussolini.

"By its candor, thoughtfulness, and vigor the book is well calculated to produce a more considerate and sympathetic view of Italy's problems," K. R. Greenfield

+ Am Hist R 33:693 Ap '28 500w

Reviewed by Thorsten Sellin

Ann Am Acad 139:217 S '28 650w

"Here is a man who really knows and understands Fascism and yet, like the author of 'Italy Today', is still its warm advocate. His book is a frank avowal of much that the enemies of Fascism have said of the future results of Mussolini's course. It is a vigorous exposition of Italy's need for expansion, her determination to expand, and her inherent right to expand. His conclusion is clear that unless Italy's aspirations are satisfied peacefully, then —war. This is plain speaking." F. R. Dulles

+ Bookm 66:571 Ja '28 220w

Nation 127:301 S 26 '28 230w

No Am 225:adv Ja '28 60w

R of Rs 77:10 Ja '28 50w

Reviewed by K. R. Greenfield

Yale R n s 18:412 winter '29 170w

GAY, ROBERT MALCOLM. Emerson; a study of the poet as seer. (Murray Hill biographies) 250p $2 Doubleday, Doran

B or 92 Emerson, Ralph Waldo 28-19459

This rather brief study of Emerson is addressed especially to young people and is therefore more given to narrative and interpretation than to criticism. Wherever possible, Emerson's own words are quoted in illustration of his thought.

Booklist 25:68 N '28

"Gay stresses the narrative of Emerson's life, his essential character and his work as a poet. Criticism, literary or philosophic, is avoided, nor is there an effort to unearth new biographical material upon the master. Some of his pages, especially those dealing with the man as a poet, should be of interest not only to the newcomer but to all students of Emerson."

+ — Bookm 68:xxvi N '28 150w

"The book is compact, clear and businesslike. It approaches its subject from a new angle and is an admirable manual for any one who is determined to read Emerson. But it is doubtful whether it will lure new leaders to the Concord sage. It lacks the excitement that should attract young people to explosive thinking." G: F. Whicher

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p9 Ag 12 '28 480w

"Here is as good a brief introduction to the study of Emerson as one could wish to have. . . There is no effort made to probe deeply into this or that corner of the deep well of Emerson's thought; but there is a serene mastery of every phase of the subject, resulting in a thoroughly competent introductory survey." S. C. C.

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 Ag 8 '28 500w

GEBHART, JOHN CHARLES. Funeral costs; what they average; are they too high? can they be reduced? with an introd. by Lee K. Frankel. 319p il $3.50 Putnam

393 Undertakers and undertaking. Funeral rites and ceremonies 28-15501

The volume gives the results of a study of funeral costs made at the request of the Metropolitan life insurance company, of which Mr. Gebhart was director. The study covers the origin of burial customs, and funeral costs and management in Europe and in the United States.

Booklist 25:54 N '28

Boston Transcript p4 S 1 '28 250w

"Mr. Gebhart's book is a painstaking revelation of the ways of 'morticians' and the methods of returning dust to its dust in general. Incidentally, 'Funeral Costs' presents an enlightening view into the account books of some of the less scrupulous undertakers, as well as into the gullibilities of the average citizen."

+ Ind 120:629 Je 30 '28 100w

St Louis 26:314 O '28

"The book is a carefully considered discussion, written without bias, and presenting the results of careful research in well-digested form. Surprisingly, perhaps, it holds much of interest to the lay reader as well as to the student of social conditions."

+ Sat R of Lit 4:1040 Jl 14 '28 100w

Survey 61:247 N 15 '28 50w

Times [London] Lit Sup p811 N 1 '28 370w

GEIJERSTAM, GUSTAF AF. Woman power; tr. from the Swedish by Esther Rapp. (Scandinavian classics) 193p $2.50 Am.-Scandinavian foundation

28-5981

First published in Sweden in 1901 and only recently translated into English, this novel describes the power exercised by three women in the life of a man—his wife, his daughter, and the woman whom he loves. Hugo Brenner's marriage proves a failure and for the sake of his daughter, Greta, he is obliged to leave his wife. He finds at length the happiness of his life in his love for Elise—a friendship sanctioned by her husband, but complicated by Greta's intense and jealous love for her father.

GEIJERSTAM, G. A.—Continued

Booklist 24:322 My '28

"This psychological study by an outstanding Swedish novelist of the latter nineteenth century is an interpretation of the interplay of the higher and lower passions in the life of a curiously sensitive and introspective man. There is a singular clarity in its description of intimate soul processes." F. H. M.

+ N Y Evening Post p12 Mr 24 '28 130w

"There are many moments when the author shows a deep understanding of human feeling, and of that inner conflict, that dual existence which most of us lead, at least, to some extent. There is a good deal of subtlety in this psychological study, and a certain fineness in the drawing of the inherent nobility in Karl, Hugo and Elise."

+ N Y Times p24 F 12 '28 550w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:243 My '28

"'Woman Power,' the second of Geijerstam's numerous novels to appear in English, is perhaps the best concrete example of his theories, and is eminently successful. It is introspective, analytical, psychological; but it is never morbid or indelicate."

+ Sat R of Lit 4:725 Mr 31 '28 250w

GELL, MRS EDITH MARY (BRODRICK). Under three reigns, 1860-1920. 307p il $5 Dutton [12s 6d K. Paul]

B or 92

Mrs Gell describes with appropriate anecdotes, a childhood in the propriety of the Victorian era, a young womanhood in the Oxford of Jowett and Stubbs, and after marriage to Mr Philip Lyttleton Gell, a period of political activities in association with him.

Boston Transcript p2 Ap 21 '28 950w

"The Hon. Mrs. Gell is a believer in the good old days, and no nonsense about it. Her Under Three Reigns is a priceless contribution to social history. To the chronicler of the next generation, reluctant to believe that the 'dear old lady' can ever have existed outside the fabulous pages of Punch, this book will be a revelation."

New Statesman 30:437 Ja 14 '28 350w

"This is a pleasant and quiet record of life in England during sixty years."

+ Sat R 144:372 S 17 '27 180w

Times [London] Lit Sup p670 S 29 '27 280w

GENEVA INSTITUTE OF INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS. Problems of peace; lectures delivered at the Geneva Institute of International relations, Aug., 1926. 366p $3.50 Oxford

341.1 League of nations. International labor organization. Arbitration, International. World politics [27-17800]

"A series of lectures intended to give a picture of the organization, growth and working of the League, together with a discussion of the main international factors and problems in the world today."—Introd

---

Am Pol Sci R 21:921 N '27 50w

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 Ap 1 '28 320w

Cleveland Open Shelf p59 My '28

Pratt p11 spring '28

"No book containing chapters by Professor James Brown Scott, Michael Farbman, Alfred Zimmern, H. J. Laski, Sir Arthur Salter, and M. Paul Mantoux, can possibly be without genuine interest and importance." J: Bakeless

+ Sat R of Lit 4:280 N 5 '27 550w

"The course, which was experimental, aimed at giving 'a picture of the organization, growth and working of the League of Nations together with a discussion of the main international factors and problems in the world to-day,' and is to be commended in so far as it strictly fulfils its aim. Unfortunately, however, the lecturers were sometimes allowed to wander far from the point. On the whole, the experiment is justified by its results. Only for such a course as this could Professor W. E. Rappard have prepared his brilliant historical analysis of the League."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p364 My 26 '27 880w

GEORGE III, king of Great Britain. Correspondence of King George the Third, from 1760 to December 1783; arr. and ed. by Sir John Fortescue. 6v v 3-6 ea $8 (25s) Macmillan

B or 92 Great Britain—History—1760-1789 (27-25147)

Volumes 3 to 6 carry the work to December, 1783, covering the last years of the American revolution, the peace negotiations, the rapid changes in home politics which followed on the fall of the North administration, and concluding with the dismissal of the coalition.

"As a piece of scholarship the editing has been competently done by Sir John Fortescue. His point of view, however, is not that of the dispassionate, impartial historiographer but of an avowed, unflinching Tory. To him the Americans are still rebels and the party of Charles James Fox a crowd of mean, self-seeking, disloyal Whigs." L: Sherwin

+ — Bookm 67:313 My '28 730w (Review of v 1-5)

Reviewed by A. L. Sachar

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p15 N 4 '28 960w (Review of v 3-6)

Boston Transcript p2 Je 30 '28 780w (Review of v 5 and 6)

Reviewed by R. L. Schuyler

Nation 127:90 Jl 25 '28 840w (Review of v 3-6)

Reviewed by L. B. Namier

Nation and Ath 43:19 Ap 7 '28 1050w (Review of v 3 and 4)

"The editorial work is, as in the previous volumes, careless and insufficient."

Nation and Ath 43:402 Je 23 '28 120w (Review of v 5 and 6)

"These two volumes are the most interesting of the collection of George the Third's papers that Sir John Fortescue has published."

+ New Statesman 31:229 My 26 '28 880w (Review of v 5 and 6)

"It is possible to over-edit a book like this. It is also possible to under-edit it. To be frank, it seems to us that Sir John Fortescue has drifted into the latter of these faults. His labor must have been great. But it has been mechanical, and scarcely a note is added to assist either the reader or the student. For the introductions, which, in a formal way, are useful, we may express a limited gratitude." P. W. Wilson

N Y Times p3 Je 24 '28 2050w (Review of v 5 and 6)

"The third volume is really a part of American history and cannot be left out of any collection on the Revolution." C. G. Bowers

+ N Y World p10m Mr 4 '28 950w (Review of v 3)

Sat R 145:326 Mr 17 '28 810w (Review of v 3 and 4)

"Sir John Fortescue has earned the thanks of all students of modern English history for the ability and despatch with which he has arranged and printed these materials, which have an interest which is not confined to the historical specialist. Time will be needed for the rich contents of these volumes to be properly studied and digested. Their first-rate importance needs no emphasis."

+ Sat R 145:632 My 19 '28 1050w (Review of v 5 and 6)

"Its chief value to the historian lies in the immense amount of new information with which other letters and papers of all kinds fill out the bare story contained in Donne's edition. The complete correspondence, as published by the new editor, forms a continuous and authentic story of public affairs during the fatal years when George himself made and directed English policy." F: Marcham
+ Sat R of Lit 5:51 Ag 18 '28 1000w (Review of v 3-6)

"The American Revolution is an historical event, whose bitterness is past, but whose inner workings are now well understood. Sir John Fortescue knows all there is to be known. We do not think King George did, or could know. For the rest, his correspondence shows him to have been an intelligent administrator of the minutiae of affairs, as his son, the Duke of York, was after him. And these volumes are a mine of information on such matters, military, naval, and domestic. The King is no tsar or tyrant, but an ordinary, hard-working gentleman face to face with a long-drawn and extraordinary crisis." W. K. Fleming
Spec 140:270 F 25 '28 880w (Review of v 3 and 4)

"A work which will be a capital value to the libraries of scholars, and which really lifts the reputation of George III clear of the stigmas of obstinacy and stupidity which have commonly been its portion."
+ Spec 140:733 My 12 '28 230w (Review of v 5 and 6)

"Except to historical students of the period the documents here printed make, for the most part, rather dull reading. There is more intellectual entertainment in twenty pages of the letters Horace Walpole was writing during these years than in all these two large volumes."
— Times [London] Lit Sup p139 Mr 1 '28 2150w (Review of v 3 and 4)

"These fifth and sixth volumes of Sir John Fortescue's laborious and very valuable publications are the most interesting, so far, of the series."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p401 My 31 '28 3450w (Review of v 5 and 6)

GEORGE, MARY DOROTHY (MRS ERIC GEORGE), ed. England in Johnson's day. (English life in English literature) 239p $2 Harcourt

914.2 England—Social life and customs. England—Intellectual life [28-31127]

Wholly by quotation from the literature of the times Mrs George presents a rounded picture of the England of Johnson's day. The life of fashion, social conditions, literature, religion, and politics are drawn for us by witnesses of the contemporary scene.

Nation and Ath 44:26 O 6 '28 120w

St Louis 26:388 D '28

"The book is a valuable addition to the 'English life and English Literature' series, and the compiler's introduction is a model of conciseness and critical insight."
+ Sat R 145:739 Je 9 '28 150w

"Read, as it well may be, without too insistent thought for the teachings of history, the collection is a storehouse of good things, many from the less worked veins of the mine."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p408 My 31 '28 880w

GEORGIAN stories, 1927; ed. by Arthur Waugh. 359p il $2.50 Putnam [7s 6d Chapman & H.]

Short stories—Collections (23-4899)

Contents: Sea view, by Martin Armstrong; Juxtapositions, by Stacy Aumonier; The hands of Serge David, by J. D. Beresford; The grasshopper, by Gerald Bullett; The later life of Theseus, King of Athens, by Mary Butts; Silver circus, by A. E. Coppard; The mistake, by E. M. Delafield; That "almost," by Jean Devanny; The vanity bag, by W: Gerhardi; The splendid days, by Storm Jameson; The praises of obscurity, by Sheila Kaye-Smith; Pym's party, by Denis Mackail; The lower road, by E. C. Mayne; The inquisition, by Liam O'Flaherty; Journey's end, by B. K. Seymour; A point of honour, by V. A. Simpson; Friendship's due, by Osbert Sitwell; Toes unmasked, by G. B. Stern

Booklist 24:283 Ap '28

" 'Georgian Stories' this year is a pleasant, entertaining volume, uneven, diversified, often more than a little ingenious, but in retrospect rather flat, and a little tired." Elizabeth Wyckoff
+ — Bookm 67:214 Ap '28 180w

"The few excellent tales in the collection, Martin Armstrong's 'Sea-View' and William Gerhardi's 'The Vanity Bag' among them, shine by contrast in the bleak firmament." Eugene Lohrke
— + Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p14 Je 24 '28 550w

"With one or two exceptions, the English writers represented here have recognized and happily fulfilled their obligation to draw real characters."
+ Dial 85:537 D '28 220w

"This is a delightful volume of modern short stories, sufficiently varied for the average reader to find several which he may wish to read a second time, and one or two over which he may grow genuinely enthusiastic."
+ Living Age 334:562 Mr 15 '28 130w

"This annual collection of English stories indicates a saddening fact: that in proportion to the growth of the contributors' reputations their products are likely to appear more and more enfeebled. Both A. E. Coppard and Liam O'Flaherty, probably the two finest English writers of tales, disappoint badly. Ethel Colburn Mayne and G. B. Stern are practically unreadable. The rest write superior magazine stuff."
— Nation 126:219 F 22 '28 100w

"This collection differs somewhat from the previous one. The stories are, on the whole, not as good, although the average is still very fair. Also the contributors include a higher proportion of comparatively new or unknown writers whose work shows sincerity and intelligence rather than any measure of achievement. Thanks, however, are due to Mr. Arthur Waugh, the editor, for including them."
— + Nation and Ath 42:162 O 29 '27 250w

"If I were awarding a prize, it would go, not to the earnestly psychological O'Flaherty, or to the poetic Bullett, or to the delicately sympathetic Armstrong, or the airily intellectual Miss Butts, or even the almost ineffably intellectual Sitwell. No, sir. It would go to G. B. Stern on the merits of her 'Toes Unmasked,' which is some more of her delightful 'The Dark Gentleman,' and, though merely foolery with talking dogs, is, unless I am several Dutchmen, by far the best thing of its kind in this sizeable book." H. E. Dounce
N Y Evening Post p11 F 18 '28 350w

"While the book cannot be described as containing any masterpieces, yet some parts tower above others as conspicuously as the Alps would tower above the New Jersey Palisades, whereas the selections on the whole do not rise above the level of a flat and featureless plain. One is surprised, in fact, by the tame and undistinguished character of a majority of the stories; several of the tales are poorly told, confused and insipid; and more than half of the remainder, while passably good, do not rise far enough above the average magazine level to explain their inclusion in an anthology."
— + N Y Times p8 F 12 '28 530w

"This collection contains some of the finest work of the English short story writers in our time."
+ No Am 225:adv Ap '28 100w
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:137 Mr '28

GEORGIAN stories, 1927—Continued

"The editor of 'Georgian Stories, 1927,' has collected a list of distinguished names, but the authors, with one or two exceptions, are not quite at their best. Miss Ethel Colburn Mayne's story, one need hardly say, is exceedingly good. She treats a disagreeable situation delicately, but quite realistically." L. P. Hartley
Sat R 144:592 O 29 '27 180w

"Among the most original tales is Miss G. B. Stern's, which will delight all dog-lovers; and among the worst is Mr. Osbert Sitwell's clumsy caricature of a contemporary man of letters. Georgian Stories is thoroughly representative, and there is something in it for every taste."
+ Spec 139:611 O 15 '27 150w
Springf'd Republican p10 Mr 2 '28 250w

GERHARDI, WILLIAM ALEXANDER. Eva's apples; a story of jazz and jasper. 393p $2.50 Duffield [7s 6d Duckworth]
28-14828

"As in his earlier novel, 'Futility,' Gerhardi depends on Russian characters, of a maddening naïveté and slyness, as the keys to this wild yarn. The hero, who tells the story, falls in with a family of Russian refugees on the Continent, makes love to the daughters, through one of them meets Baron Ottercove, the newspaper king of England, and is then caught into a frenzied whirl of increasingly crazy events, culminating in the destruction of the world by a fanatical scientist who has succeeded in disintegrating the atom. The scientist has the forethought, however, to inoculate a mountain in the Tyrol against the general nirvana, and there the survivors prepare to start their little world anew."—New Repub

---

"I began 'Eva's Apples' with a disposition to slay, but I was speedily disarmed and soon reduced to a willingly enslaved reader." G. B. Munson
+ Bookm 68:85 S '28 580w

"One gathers that he [Gerhardi] believes that a society that could create Ottercove, that could present the asinine and painfully ludicrous spectacles that he as an observant man sees about him, is not worth preserving. Against this black background of despair Gerhardi projects his clever satire and his painful comedy. His book is discordant, scatter-brained, and he has neglected to give it the care that he should; it bears every sign of being hastily written and hastily put into print. But it should be read for its occasionally brilliant passages and its extreme originality. The world is not blown up every day so plausibly and with so much delicacy and charm." Harrison Smith
+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p7 Je 10 '28 800w

Reviewed by D. L. Mann
Boston Transcript p4 Je 16 '28 1200w

"Mr. Gerhardi has a brilliance, almost a recklessness, of presentment which is consistently amusing, and although [this book] has disappointed those who believe him to be a real novelist it contains enough entertainment to stand until he gives us something more fundamentally true." Frank Swinnerton
+ — Chicago Daily Tribune p14 Je 9 '28 200w

"At times one leaves his book feeling that one has looked too long at a cubist picture. At others, one sees through the flickering of his Lewis Carroll nonsense the sudden flash of a design. Many a modern will finish reading stabbed with a sense of something ridiculous in ourselves."
Ind 121:45 Jl 14 '28 230w

"He seems to throw on paper every thought or fantasy that wanders into his consciousness. Sometimes the result is amusing. But I found it impossible to follow this paper-chase with invisible paper." Raymond Mortimer
— + Nation and Ath 43:144 My 5 '28 110w

" 'Eva's Apples' is overdone; it spreads out into farcical melodrama what might better have been confined to ironic burlesque; it goes on too long, and it is perhaps too heavily seasoned with barnyard love. The most interesting thing about it is its manner—a manner here hopelessly over-playful, too often kittenish, but saturated with irony—giving direct promise of what Hemingway, in his different way, promises: an authentic voice for a hitherto incoherent generation." T. S. Matthews
+ — New Repub 55:153 Je 27 '28 420w

"The fantastic and satirical ending of the book is, on the whole, rather tedious. If Mr. Gerhardi had never written Futility it might have been possible to read [it] without annoyance or disappointment; as it is, one can only be astonished at his early performance, and his failure, as yet to achieve its equal." G. W. K.
— New Statesman 31:85 Ap 28 '28 430w

"If Mr. Gerhardi is uttering an adolescent protest, it is hard to tell what in particular is its object. His wit is the only island in a sea of madness." Tess Slesinger
— + N Y Evening Post p8 Je 30 '28 600w

" 'Eva's Apples' is that literary potpourri of wit and manners, satire and fantasy and humor and even at moments poetry, which is so easy to do but so difficult to do right. Like Max Beerbohm, Huxley at his best and Jean Giraudoux, Mr. Gerhardi does it right. 'Eva's Apples'—even aside from its elements of pure fantasy—has those touches of gayety and madness and unreasonableness which are meant solely to brighten and refresh one's life and not at all to convince or to stimulate thought. They are caprices inspired by the author's sense of humor, and the reader's sense of humor is quite properly expected to react to them." L: Kronenberger
+ N Y Times p9 Je 10 '28 830w

"Mildly insane and very amusing." Herschel Brickell
+ No Am 226:adv Ag '28 130w

" 'Eva's Apples' has disappointed us. It is written brilliantly and carelessly, it contains pages that we wouldn't have missed for anything, and chapters that bored us heavily." W. R. Brooks
— + Outlook 149:438 Jl 11 '28 160w

"His characters come to life the first moment they speak—indeed, they are never so much alive again. For their dialogue (nine-tenths of the book is dialogue) is so brilliantly adapted to the moment when it is spoken that it creates a series of moments, all of equal importance. And though they make an imposing row of figures, they do not add up to anything. . . His irresponsibility, which in small doses is delightful, in the end grows fatiguing. The enfant terrible is very well in his sphere, but when he tells us about the end of the world he can scarcely be taken seriously." L. P. Hartley
Sat R 145:738 Je 9 '28 300w

"Ingenious, witty, unusual, well-bred, effervescent—yes, 'Eva's Apples' is all of these. But it is too talky to be interesting, too confusing to be effective, and too arrogant to be generally persuasive." Robert MacDougall
— + Sat R of Lit 4:1033 Jl 14 '28 520w

"Brilliant and farcical fantasia which leaves the reader with a titillated brain and a sinking heart."
Spec 140:625 Ap 21 '28 280w

"The whole thing has an air of being an extravaganza more extravagant than any previous work of Mr. Gerhardi's, whose talent for this particular kind of humor we have sincerely praised; but this time, though the humor is still there, we miss that stabilizing element of actual experience which gave a certain solidity to 'Futility' and 'The Polyglots'. . . The only thing to do is to pluck out the plums of entertainment as they come, rejecting those which are overripe, and not spend too much time in the effort to digest the whole pudding."
Times [London] Lit Sup p310 Ap 26 '28 880w

GERLACH, WALTHER. Matter, electricity, energy; the principles of modern atomistics and experimental results of atomic investigation; tr. from the 2d German ed. by Francis J. Fuchs. 427p il $6 Van Nostrand [30s Chapman & H.]

541.2 Atoms. Matter. Electricity. Chemistry, Physical and theoretical 28-9310

"Atomistic fundamentals presented for the benefit of 'that great group of scientists, whose activities overlap the field of physics'; somewhat difficult reading for the lay reader though the author and translator have attempted to avoid 'technical mathematics and phraseology.' "—J Home Econ

Booklist 25:14 O '28
J Home Econ 20:446 Je '28 40w
N Y New Tech Bks 13:32 Jl '28
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:457 O '28
St Louis 26:184 Je '28
Times [London] Lit Sup p839 N 8 '28 40w

GESELL, ARNOLD LUCIUS. Infancy and human growth. 418p il $3.50 Macmillan

136.7 Psychology, Physiological. Child study 28-13860

"This book deals with the development of intelligence as a factor of human growth. Although other characteristics of the child's behavior are discussed, the main topic of the book is the progressive unfolding of intelligence, with the discussion of factors influencing such development."—J Home Econ

"The book is valuable for its facts, its hypotheses, its technique, and its suggestions for further research. Its style and method are adapted to the needs of the technical student of infant development. There is a certain clarity in the presentation because the author deals with concrete cases and materials, and yet, with his medical vocabulary, he never uses a word of five syllables if he can find one that contains six." Franklin Bobbitt
+ — El School J 29:227 N '28 550w

"The book is, on the whole, very readable and extremely informative." Mandel Sherman
+ — J Home Econ 20:675 S '28 500w

"For the author's fellow-workers in psychology and its allied sciences it will be one of the most important contributions of the year to scientific literature, since it records the results of many and long-continued observations and experiments."
+ N Y Times p14 Ag 12 '28 420w

GESSLER, CLIFFORD FRANKLIN. Kanaka moon. 154p il $2 Dodd

811 27-24862

Reprinted from many sources these are love songs and nature poems of the Hawaiian Isles. They are illustrated with line drawings by A. S. Macleod.

"His poems are well-rounded impressions, surcharged with beauty and the languorous spell of tropic days and nights. What he sings of with love is so well sung that the lines make a telling, haunting effect. Hawaii is defined, Hawaii where one's only needs, according to this poet, are 'indolence and the blue procession of the sea.' " C: Divine
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p14 F 5 '28 70w

"Mr. Gessler has given us the long-awaited Hawaiian poetry with full flavor. Nobody else has written Hawaiian verse to compare with the poems in 'Kanaka Moon'—full as they are of the sun, the sea and the south, of the allurement of the unseen Hesperides." J. R. S.
+ Boston Transcript p4 D 7 '27 620w

"He is fairly accomplished. He familiarizes us through his verse with many aspects of Honolulu and its outposts. But beyond this there is little to comment upon in the book. Its descriptions are well enough, but no more."
— + Sat R of Lit 4:599 F 11 '28 60w

GETTELL, RAYMOND GARFIELD. History of American political thought. (Century political science ser.) 633p $4 Century

320.973 United States—Politics and government. Political science—History—United States 28-21358

The author, professor of political science in the University of California, outlines the evolution of American political thought. Beginning with the controversies of the colonial period and the Revolutionary war he follows the development of American theories of government and the issues that have arisen in American politics, stating both sides of the controversial questions as impartially as possible.

Booklist 25:105 D '28
Boston Transcript p1 O 6 '28 520w
Hist Outlook 18:234 My '27 160w

"A clear and impartial account of the evolution of American ideas in their application to the problems of government from the Revolution to the present day. The author is at his best in summarizing noteworthy controversies—for example, the Lincoln-Douglas debates of 1858."
+ R of Rs 78:34 N '28 40w
Wis Lib Bul 24:300 N '28

GIBBON, JOHN. Personal recollections of the Civil war. 426p $5 Putnam

973.7 United States—History. Civil war—Personal narratives 28-14787

"General Gibbon died in 1896, but apparently he had finished the writing of these reminiscences a decade before his death. Newly edited and with footnotes by his daughter, they bring to a generation for whom the Civil War takes on a perspective that seems almost as distant as the Revolution an account of such intimacy and graphic nearness as set it vitally before their vision. He had an important part in the work of the Union Army, commanding the Second Division, Second Army Corps, at Gettysburg, where it was a large factor in the repulse of Pickett's attack. He led his division through the Battles of the Wilderness, Spottsylvania, Cold Harbor and other scenes of conflict."—N Y Times

"A volume of reminiscence which is one of the most readable and lifelike of any Civil War memoirs that have lately appeared."
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 D 9 '28 550w

"The story a man of such consequence has to tell of the great events of which he was a part is well worth having, and his reminiscences make a valuable addition to our knowledge of the Civil War. Historians especially will welcome them as a fresh source of information."
+ N Y Times p8 Jl 8 '28 530w

"His book is a valuable contribution to the subject." Herschel Brickell
+ No Am 226:adv Ag '28 40w

"General Gibbon is temperate and just in his judgments; he tells his story with zest, but always with an eye to the facts. One wishes that less attention had been given to military detail and more to the human side of the war, for it is in this that the book is most interesting and valuable."
+ — Sat R of Lit 5:151 S 22 '28 280w

GIBBONS, DANIEL. God in us; the world faith of Quakerism. 100p $1 (4s 6d) Macmillan

289.6 Friends, Society of 28-3454

A brief statement of the principle which is the essence of Quakerism, the doctrine of the inner light. This principle of God in us, is offered as a common ground on which all Christians may meet.

GIBBONS, DANIEL—Continued

"In small compass the writer presents the main truths of the followers of George Fox in a lucid and persuasive way."

+ Boston Transcript p3 Ap 25 '28 160w

Crozer Quarterly 5:252 Ap '28 500w

GIBBONS, FLOYD PHILLIPS. Red knight of Germany; the story of Baron von Richthofen, Germany's great war bird. 383p il $2.50 Doubleday, Doran

940.44 Richthofen, Manfred Albrecht, freiherr von. European war, 1914-1918—Aerial operations 28-710

This account of the German ace is really a catalog of his victories in the air. The German archives have been searched for the official records of von Richthofen's engagements, and these have been confirmed and amplified in interviews with victims who still survive.

"Mr. Gibbons might have told his story better. There seems at times a scant portion of romance in it and a style that is too literal. We get no vistas either in character, picture or event. Background and foreground alike are too much just good journalism. Yet the book, if lacking depth and atmosphere, is thoroughly, honestly and excitingly written. Those who want the essentials of the story will find them here. The rest probably waits on poetry or fiction." F. E. Hill

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p5 F 12 '28 720w

Boston Transcript p2 Ja 7 '28 580w

Cleveland Open Shelf p23 F '28

N Y Evening Post p13 F 11 '28 120w

"What human qualities Richthofen must have possessed are lamentably neglected by Mr. Gibbons in his book. His picture is of but one side of the character of the great German ace. He reveals Richthofen chiefly as a killer to whom war was a 'hunting license.'" S. T. Williamson

N Y Times p7 D 25 '27 180w

GIBBS, ANTHONY. Enter the Greek. 289p $2 Harper

28-20338

Tony Sutherland, né Constantine Euxenophilos of Smyrna, enters London society by way of a successful play, and light-heartedly woos an English maid of fairly high degree. His suit meets the venomous disapproval of Millicent's mother and of Tubby, her faithful swain. When, after vicissitudes, Tony might have had his lady, he remembers that he is Constantine Euxenophilos, and hurries back to Smyrna. The light tale is mannered and self-consciously waggish.

"Anthony Gibbs writes lightly and pointedly, with a clear-cut, sharpened humor and a fitness of phrase that touches directly and surely."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 O 7 '28 300w

Boston Transcript p5 S 15 '28 420w

"The Tony of the earlier chapters is an ingenious caricature, not without malice, and is amusing; the Tony of the later chapters is treated seriously, gets out of hand, and is not so amusing."

+ — New Statesman 31:650 S 1 '28 120w

" 'Enter the Greek' is full of dramatically unconventional characterization, and whimsical incursions into lay philosophy. Paradoxical and sometimes witty meditations are interpolated, after the manner of Huxley, in the less likely spots. Although, in justice to Mr. Huxley it must be confessed that their brilliance, in this case, does not so nearly excuse their impertinence. . . If Mr. Gibbs lacks the brilliance of Huxley, his postures are less strained, and he has a more genuine lightness of heart."

+ — N Y Times p6 S 2 '28 500w

"The theme gives Mr. Gibbs every opportunity for satiric treatment and he misses none of them. The book is fantastic and immensely amusing. It is romantic to the skies and as realistic as a footprint in the mud. In other words, it is the work of a brilliant young writer with his tongue in his cheek."

Sat R of Lit 5:493 D 8 '28 180w

"The author writes with enjoyment of his theme, and the satire, though obvious and drawn out, is amusing."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p633 S 6 '28 300w

Wis Lib Bul 24:304 N '28

GIBBS, ARTHUR HAMILTON. Harness. 320p $2.50 Little [7s 6d Hutchinson]

28-23111

Michael and Patricia find the perfect cottage in the country and settle down to blissful seclusion. But after a few months each feels the need of work. Michael begins his novel and Pat goes back to the stage. Wholly satisfied with Michael and her work—she becomes a star over night—Pat does not realize where her casual relations with her leading man are taking her. Her young sister Sylvia, whose own affair has gone on the rocks and who is therefore doubly apprehensive for Pat and Michael, sounds the alarm and Michael goes into action.

Booklist 25:121 D '28

"Propaganda is all very well, and so is the problem novel; 'Harness' is an attempt at both without the fire of the one or the fundamental interest of the other." E. P. Watts

— Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p25 O 7 '28 630w

"In some respects Mr. Gibbs is an able novelist. But he injures his ability as a good teller of stories by dragging in moods and emotions which are no longer pertinent. In this new story he has all the material for a remarkable novel. It suffers, however, from two defects. There is far too much pacifist propaganda in the story, and there is an over-abundance of slang in the conversation of the characters." D. F. G.

— + Boston Transcript p2 O 17 '28 1100w

"Mr. Gibbs redeems the naivety of his plot by some good character drawing."

+ — New Statesman 32:100 O 27 '28 100w

"Major Gibbs's 'Harness' carried us through eighteen of its nineteen chapters with a steadily mounting enthusiasm and betrayed us and its author in the final few pages. We think Major Gibbs owed as fine a piece of work as 'Harness' a worthier conclusion than the 'big scene' he tacked on. The only stereotyped scene in the book is its climatic chapter of violent action." F: F. Van de Water

+ — N Y Evening Post p9m N 10 '28 620w

"It has the qualities that make for popularity: a well-told love story of likable people, a convincing theme, truth, vitality, sincerity and unforced humor."

+ N Y Times p26 O 14 '28 750w

"The situation is handled with a wellbred respect for sentiment, coupled with intelligence, that will be remembered as one of the charming qualities of Soundings. Harness has much in it to give the popular appeal, and one writes this without any thought of disparagement." Herschel Brickell

+ No Am 226:adv N '28 90w

"Harness is a conventional English novel—only more so. When one opens a book to find a retired British army officer 'carrying on' patiently in spite of everything, one knows what to expect. And in 'Harness' one's expectations are not disappointed. The fault, in the end, seems to be that Major Gibbs takes his whole theme and his characters a bit too seriously." Milton Byron

— + Outlook 150:1080 O 31 '28 400w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:546 N '28

" 'Harness' is a perfectly respectable, wellbred, fairly well-written novel, but I do not think it has the originality of 'Soundings,' Mr. Gibbs's earlier and highly popular book, nor are any of the characters in it so interesting to me as the young girl of that novel and her father. On the other hand, it has a good many features that will give it a wide popular appeal. It is clean, both in word and situation; it is agreeably staged with that lovely old English cottage playing the most important part in the settings; and virtue is rewarded and vice punished in the most approved fashion." Herschel Brickell

+ — Sat R of Lit 5:215 O 13 '28 800w

"It is readable, but lacks the ostensible seriousness of its predecessor. Those who read 'Soundings' have not forgotten Nancy Hawthorne and her splendid father, but will they remember Michael and Pat? It is to be doubted."

— + Springf'd Republican p7e N 25 '28 360w

Times [London] Lit Sup p836 N 8 '28 140w

Wis Lib Bul 24:304 N '28

GIBBS, GEORGE FORT. Shores of romance. 293p $2 Appleton

28-9056

A romance of New Orleans in the war of 1812. Barry O'Shaughnessy is an American naval officer in love with Babet de Jarnac. In the fields of love and war, Barry's chief opponent is Jean Lafitte for whose abilities Barry has a hearty respect. Indeed, the two are worthy rivals. Their encounters furnish the narrative with many lively scenes in which Babet too, plays a spirited part.

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p18 Je 17 '28 250w

"This latest romance stands high on the author's list." G. B.

+ Boston Transcript p2 My 2 '28 700w

"The author concentrates upon his characters and their adventures, and has apparently made little effort to paint an authentic picture of the people and places of which he writes. But the reader's interest is not in the historical aspects of the novel but in the romantic duel between the principals, descriptions of which are retailed in full measure."

+ N Y Times p19 Ap 29 '28 400w

"Though adorned by picturesque descriptive color and not ill-written, the book can scarcely be ranked among the author's best in historical vein."

— + Sat R of Lit 4:807 Ap 21 '28 100w

Times [London] Lit Sup p381 My 17 '28 140w

Wis Lib Bul 24:191 Je '28

GIBBS, SIR PHILIP HAMILTON. Age of reason. 320p $2.50 Doubleday, Doran [7s 6d Hutchinson]

28-18124

The daughter of a canon, herself possessed of a strong religious faith, Margaret Allgate marries a scientist many years her senior. The professor's God is reason. He has brought up his children, a son Cyril, and daughter Viola, without religion, and without inhibitions. Margaret's life in this ultra scientific household, is, despite her husband's genuine kindness and sympathy, one of painful adjustments, and when her loved Guy is affected by Viola's hedonistic ideas it is almost more than she can bear. The author's thesis is science vs. religion, but it does not override the story.

Booklist 25:29 O '28

"This is the quarrel one has with Mr. Gibbs for his novel. He pretends throughout to be unprejudiced and fair, to weigh fairly religion and science on his scales. And then at the end he betrays the reader's intellectual interest by a trick that any charlatan would be ashamed of. The fact that not for one moment have his characters been real and clad in flesh and blood is somehow of less importance. It is impossible to make human beings out of abstract symbols, or at least it would need more genius than this particular writer can gather for the task." Harrison Smith

— Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p7 Jl 1 '28 1000w

Cath World 128:377 D '28 420w

Christian Century 45:955 Ag 2 '28 110w

Cleveland Open Shelf p121 N '28

"The disasters which befell the Jerningham family and some of those closely connected with them do not seem to the reader, as they do to Margaret, the result, solely and inevitably, of Hesketh's teaching. Nor does his belief in the coming of the 'Age of Reason' seem especially startling. . . But the novel is interesting and stimulating, and it is moreover something of a relief to find the majority of the youth of today described as 'rather ignorant, fairly moral, quite intelligent young people, with a sense of humor and normal interest.' "

N Y Times p6 Jl 1 '28 800w

"We wonder—is this really a new novel or was it written twenty years ago? Lay figures addressing frightful platitudes to one another. The diction is of the 'nineties. The persiflage is of lead, unless you know of something heavier. The theme—well, the fate of all authors who load the dice in their own favor has overtaken Mr. Gibbs. He convinces us of the opposite of what he intends to show." W. R. Brooks

— Outlook 149:517 Jl 25 '28 220w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:546 N '28

"Sir Philip has assembled a winsome lot of young people and a charming biologist in his book. 'The Age of Reason' is a galloping good story, with racy dialogue, the company of gentlefolk, and some genuine pathos, even tragedy, to carry one along." E. A. Aldrich

+ Sat R of Lit 4:1033 Jl 14 '28 560w

"The plot is exciting, and the closing scenes are as natural as they are unexpected. Well secreted, too, until the end is the key to the author's implicit moral. This is Sir Philip Gibbs at his best."

+ Spec 140:741 My 12 '28 200w

" 'The Age of Reason,' judged solely as a novel, is the best novel Sir Philip Gibbs has written. In most of his other books, and to a certain extent in this one too, he has always been ready to sacrifice individuality to type, and to use his characters as little more than flags to be moved backwards and forwards to illustrate the theory in which he is interested; but here, although they are drawn up in two distinct enough groups under the banners 'Religion' and 'Science,' they again and again become alive enough to tear up their own labels."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p288 Ap 19 '28 450w

GIBBS, SIR PHILIP HAMILTON. Day after tomorrow; what is going to happen to the world? 240p $2.50 Doubleday, Doran [7s 6d Hutchinson]

901 Civilization. Progress 28-12173

Scientists experimenting with the old laws of life are busy with problems of enormous importance to the welfare of the race and the happiness of the individual. Philip Gibbs touches upon some of the things that are likely to happen in the world the day after tomorrow, picturing the future as it appears to scientific minds looking ahead of their present knowledge and assuming a rapid advance upon their present lines of research.

Booklist 24:395 Jl '28

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p17 Ag 5 '28 130w

Living Age 334:561 Mr 15 '28 400w

"Sir Philip gives a bright, popular, wide, and rather superficial survey of the problem."

Nation and Ath 42:791 F 25 '28 150w

"The book is certainly a means of stimulating thought and possibly of adding to one's knowledge."

+ New Statesman 30:636 F 25 '28 300w

"His book is perhaps less murkily brilliant than some of the volumes predicting the imminent collapse of civilization, but the average, normal-minded, steady-headed reader will find it more interesting and more worth while, more appealing to the intelligence and more provocative of thought."

GIBBS, P. H.—Continued
+ N Y Times p14 Jl 1 '28 480w
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 33:497 O '28
Pratt p36 autumn '28

"He writes, as always, lightly and readably, but he appears, now and then, to be conscious of being almost out of his depth, and he does not always conceal his struggles with the help of the skittish humour which is here a trifle out of place. The best chapters in his book are the last two on 'the conflict of the spirit' and 'the nations of the world.'"
+ — Sat R 145:239 F 4 '28 100w

"The first part of Sir Philip Gibbs's survey of science and human society to-day is positively brilliant—the best popular conspectus that has yet been written. The Day After To-Morrow bears marks of having been written the day before yesterday only, in the greatest haste to be up-to-date."
+ — Spec 140:162 F 4 '28 380w

Reviewed by Leon Whipple
Survey 60:301 Je 1 '28 150w
Times [London] Lit Sup p99 F 9 '28 110w

GIBBS, SIR PHILIP HAMILTON. Out of the ruins, and other little novels. 350p $2.50 Doubleday, Doran [7s 6d Hutchinson]
28-5873

A collection of short stories by the well known English journalist and author, each of which deals with a dramatic incident of life and love on the continent.

"Allowing for all tastes, Sir Philip has alternated happy and unhappy endings, which while often plausible are never convincing. Perhaps it is the present popularity of the plotless episode, with its emphasis on internal events which has blunted our taste for this type of stock story. Perhaps it is because the author still insists on writing of the war and its aftermath 'of wrecked lives' which makes these stories seem so flat. Perhaps it is the curious style. But more probably it is because the author makes so great a sacrifice on the altar of explicitness that his characters fail to come alive." Virginia Nirdlinger
— Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p18 Ja 29 '28 620w

Reviewed by I. W. Lawrence
+ Boston Transcript p4 F 4 '28 2400w

"These longer short stories or 'little novels,' as the publisher calls them, are more satisfactory than some of Sir Philip Gibbs's long novels." F. H. M.
+ N Y Evening Post p13 Ja 14 '28 60w

"There is an entertaining variety in this new collection of stories by Philip Gibbs. But the chief value of the book is historical. Imbedded in these stories of modern Europe one constantly comes across large and small chunks of rather authentic current history."
+ N Y Times p8 Ja 15 '28 700w

"As a whole, 'Out of the Ruins' is mediocre work, long-winded and slightly pretentious."
— Sat R of Lit 4:635 F 25 '28 150w
Springf'd Republican p7f Mr 4 '28 200w

"This collection of short stories bears further witness to the author's preoccupations with post-war problems on the Continent, and to the journalist's trained eye for local colour and significant detail. This last-named quality is undoubtedly Sir Philip Gibbs's great technical asset as a story-teller for, on the whole, his character-drawing lacks incisiveness, and in several of these tales the plot is too obviously engineered with a view to the conventional happy ending."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p425 Je 16 '27 220w

GIBRAN, KAHLIL. Jesus the Son of man; His words and His deeds as told and recorded by those who knew Him. 216p il $3.50 Knopf [8s 6d Hutchinson]
232 Jesus Christ 28-23822

One by one, the men and women who knew Jesus or whose lives were touched by Him, come forward in these pages to tell in simple, brief, and reverent narrative, the story of His coming to them. Some of them break into poetry as they speak of Him. Kahlil Gibran, the author, who is a Syrian by birth, has also made the drawings and decorations which illustrate the book.

"Readers of Mr. Gibran's earlier work, 'The Prophet,' published in many editions in this country and translated into more than twenty languages, will know what to expect in this book. Here is the same poet, with the same austere purity of thought, the same amplitude and beauty of phrase, the same wisdom, serenity and lofty vision. . . His writing is not unworthy of the theme which the poet has chosen for his work." J: H. Holmes
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p6 D 2 '28 700w
Boston Transcript p1 D 22 '28 380w

"Poetic feeling and devout mysticism are precious. But they can develop equally well on a basis of sound historical inquiry. In 'Jesus the Son of Man' the basis is not history but religious emotion kindled by traditional gospel story." B. W. Bacon
New Repub 57:169 D 26 '28 140w

"Kahlil Gibran is the true Oriental—all color and exaltation. He is the poet, not the critic. Long ago, when his 'Madman' appeared, he already showed himself a master of rhythm, an inventor of fable and aphorism. These qualities are evident in great abundance here. If Jesus were merely a man it would not be sacrilege to state that many of the parables which Gibran attributes to Him would do Him no dishonor had He actually uttered them." Paul Eldridge
+ N Y Evening Post p8m N 24 '28 400w

Reviewed by P. W. Wilson
N Y Times p18 D 23 '28 250w

Reviewed by Herschel Brickell
No Am 226:adv D '28 180w

GIBSON, CHARLES ROBERT. Chemical amusements & experiments; a description & explanation of many wonderful chemical changes & effects with directions for carrying out numerous experiments & conjuring tricks. (Scientific amusement ser.) 204p il $2.50 Lippincott [5s Seeley]
793.8 Chemistry—Experiments. Scientific recreations 28-13655

A book full of simple chemical experiments designed to interest young people in chemistry and to furnish them with knowledge as well as entertainment. By the author of many books on science for young readers.

Booklist 25:32 O '28

"Here are combined in attractive proportions for the boy, pleasure and profit. He will probably 'smell up' the house and spoil some clothes in the enjoyment of the experiments here suggested, but he will get employment and happiness that will make the street corner seem insipid."
+ Boston Transcript p3 My 12 '28 120w
Spec 139:1056 D 10 '27 50w

GIBSON, CHARLES ROBERT. Modern conceptions of electricity. 284p il $5 Lippincott [12s 6d Seeley, S.]
537 Electricity. Electrons

Present knowledge concerning electricity and electrons, radium and radio-activity, the ether, etc., is intelligibly summarized for the reader with some basis of scientific knowledge. Illustrations show electrical apparatus, and experiments in progress.

Nation and Ath 44:154 O 27 '28 700w

"Dr. Gibson's is the kind of book whose study definitely enlarges the mind as to the plan of the universe. A study such as this of the nuclear structure of atoms, of the orbits of electrons, of thermionic valves, spectroscopes, and modern ideas about matter will reveal how sadly deficient is the knowledge of the average middle-aged person who considers himself educated. . . If our descendants are to use these powers aright, we should at least come to nodding terms with them ourselves. Dr. Gibson acts the part of introducer with charming courtesy."

+ Spec 141:558 O 20 '28 250w

Times [London] Lit Sup p839 N 8 '28 100w

GIBSON, WILFRID WILSON. Golden room, and other poems. 173p $2.50 (6s) Macmillan 821

Contains poems written since 1925 when his "Collected poems" appeared.

Nation and Ath 44:216 N 10 '28 80w

"Mr. Wilfrid Gibson has his niche, though it is a minor niche, in the history of contemporary English verse."

+ — New Statesman 32:16 O 13 '28 100w

Reviewed by Austin Clarke

Spec 141:sup535 O 20 '28 200w

"Every one of these little poems is bare and simple, yet delicately fashioned; and if now and then the language halts, the flaw does not so much suggest artificiality as a too secure assumption that the theme has made good."

Times [London] Lit Sup p987 D 13 '28 550w

GIELGUD, VAL HENRY. Old swords. 296p $2 Houghton [7s 6d Constable] 28-7325

Arrogant family pride, fierce loyalty to Poland, and his unstained sword are old Stanislas Konski's legacy to his children's children. In the war generation the two representatives of the family are Ladislas of the English secret service and his cousin Michael, half-Russian and half-Pole. The latter is a major in the White army, and to investigate his possibly treacherous activities Ladislas is sent to the old Konski home, now his cousin's stronghold. There he is forced into a desperate alliance with Michael's young wife. When it is all over, Ladislas carries the story of the fight back to his grandmother, the daughter of old Stanislas, and receives her blessing.

"It is the author's first novel, and it behooves the writers of historical romances to look to their laurels, for here is one who can draw a vivid picture of one of the most terrible periods of the world's history." G. B.

+ Boston Transcript p9 Mr 31 '28 520w

"The story is vividly backgrounded, especially in those scenes that take place at the castle and in St. Petersburg during the Red revolution. It is a dark, wild tale of unusual adventure that grips the reader at the start and holds him to the end."

+ N Y Times p18 Jl 1 '28 270w

"The story is not unskilfully written, though too much description is given to the rounds of furious conflict."

— + Sat R of Lit 4:807 Ap 21 '28 130w

"Though the plot of this first novel suffers at times from not very skilfully inserted interpolations, yet the writing is strong and vivid, and the book gives excellent promise of others to come."

+ — Spec 140:330 Mr 3 '28 150w

Springf'd Republican p7f My 20 '28 100w

"The author evidently knows at first-hand many of the historical facts of his story. He writes easily and with animation, and sometimes with thoughtful distinction—but less love of violence would have resulted in a solider and more balanced novel."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p132 F 23 '28 170w

GILBERT, ANTHONY. Murder of Mrs Davenport. 309p $2 Dial press [7s 6d Collins] 28-20344

A very short time after the murder of Mrs Helen Davenport was discovered the case against Denis Brinsley, eminent British scientist, was fairly complete. The motive was there—his natural desire to destroy evidence of an old infatuation for her, in the face of his recent engagement to a young woman of social prominence, and the clues were there, unmistakably. Too unmistakably, Anthony Gilbert decided, and following his suspicions of those too perfect clues, saved an innocent man.

"Anthony Gilbert is a safe bet pour passer le temps." Will Cuppy

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 S 2 '28 120w

"The plot is well conceived, and for the greater part of the tale, the characters are well sustained."

+ Boston Transcript p4 O 17 '28 150w

"Readers who like to puzzle out mysteries for themselves, pitting their wits against those of the detective in the story, will have just cause of complaint against Mr. Gilbert, for he has deliberately withheld from them information which is in the possession of his detective. Readers of such stories do expect to be given a sporting chance to compete with the author's detective."

N Y Times p26 O 7 '28 200w

"Not too exciting but plausible and fairly ingenious tale." W. R. Brooks

Outlook 149:753 S 5 '28 100w

Springf'd Republican p7e S 30 '28 170w

"An absorbing story. The interest lies wholly in the ingenuity with which the murderer throws suspicion on the wrong people."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p489 Je 28 '28 120w

GILBERT, GEORGE HOLLEY. Greek thought in the New Testament. 216p $1.75 Macmillan

225.6 Bible. New Testament—Criticism, interpretation, etc. Philosophy, Ancient. Civilization, Greek 28-9085

The author's aim is to disentangle the teachings of Jesus from the speculations and beliefs carried over into Christianity by early Greek converts. He accomplishes his aim by a critical examination of the books of the New Testament.

"This is a fine and useful piece of work, and we rejoice that it has been done, and so well done." J: H. Holmes

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p13 Ag 5 '28 230w

Boston Transcript p2 My 12 '28 300w

Reviewed by S. J. Case

Christian Century 45:733 Je 7 '28 480w

J Religion 8:497 Jl '28 30w

"A learned and eminently clear and readable work. But whether the author's thesis can be substantiated is another matter." J. M.

+ Springf'd Republican p10 S 25 '28 500w

GILBERT, WARREN. Joy ride, and other poems. 94p $2 Boni & Liveright 811 28-9783

Robust, ironic, and witty poems, some of which have appeared in Palms.

"He writes of human tawdry episodes and gives them a depth and feeling to be found only too rarely in to-day's verse. His phraseology is strong, his sense of humor and irony pungent; his form is irregular and distinctive, save in a few lyrics that do not measure up to the standard of the book as a whole. It is impossible to compare him with any of our better known poets, for he stands decidedly by himself."

GILBERT, WARREN—Continued

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p14 Je 10 '28 130w

"Once or twice we think he is going to approach something great, something fine, but he disappoints us every time. 'Joy Ride,' the poem that gives the collection its title, has elements of a truly poetic imagery, but that, too, is spoiled by the sordid touch. Scattered in among a bristling forest of unamiable little vignettes one may now and then find a line or two of real poetry."

— Boston Transcript p4 Ap 14 '28 140w

"Mr. Gilbert at his best condenses what he has to say into a few sharp, ironic phrases, which surprise, not by a 'fine excess,' but by a sudden, and amusing, jab at the reader's mind. Such poetry has its limitations, and if Mr. Gilbert tries to go beyond them, as he does in the title poem, he is not very successful. But he is nearly always clever." Theodore Spencer

+ — New Repub 55:25 My 23 '28 200w

"In doing exactly what he sets out to do Mr. Gilbert has contributed something quite fresh and valuable to the pages of modern verse." Ruth Lechlitner

+ N Y Evening Post p5 Jl 21 '28 500w

— N Y World p7m Jl 8 '28 100w

GILBRETH, MRS LILLIAN EVELYN (MOLLER). Living with our children. 321p $2.50 Norton

173 Family. Children—Management 28-18749

"Mrs. Gilbreth sets before the young married couple just starting on the great enterprise of making a home together the fundamental proposition that they should work out at the very beginning a plan that will envisage what they want to make of their mutual life, what goal they want to reach, what kind of a home they want to have, what share each one should take in their combined work and play, their general attitude toward children. . . The making of such a plan, the author shows, involves organization of the mutual life and of the family in accordance with the principles that have been evolved from study of methods in industry."—N Y Times

---

Booklist 25:8 O '28

Reviewed by R. O. Kallen
Bookm 67:xx Ag '28 80w

Reviewed by Margery Mansfield
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p13 Je 24 '28 830w

" 'Living With Our Children' gives a parent a remarkable insight into essentials of both basic truths and psychological development of the child."

+ Boston Transcript p2 Je 30 '28 200w

"The book is full of stimulating suggestions for any family, and it is a contribution to our very meager literature on the home as a place to educate children." A. E. Richardson

+ J Home Econ 20:825 N '28 300w

